Others, like Robert, put down the work in midlife, feeling they could only be spared from the home or office or field for a day, but ah! they are to be spared forever. All these earthly associations must break up. The loving ties by nature will soon be forever severed. We clasp hands and walk together, and talk and laugh and weep together, but we must after a while separate. Oh, mother, the long agony of earthly separation. To the mother, who loved her boy so dearly, fondly, and other members of the family, I would say, Weep not, as those who have no hope, but look up, and be ready to depart this life when the death angel calls you. We know it is awful to stand in your home fighting death back from your loved ones, and you make an earnest cry to God to help, and to the doctor to save them, and yet they grow weaker and weaker, for they must soon go. These separations are wine-presses, into which our hearts are thrown, and the trouble turns the windlass round and round until we are utterly crushed, and our hearts are lacerated, and we go down, helpless, in agony. But Jesus, our Savior, said: "In the world ye shall have tribulation; be of good cheer, for I have overcome the world." May the Lord sustain the bereaved and sorely grieved ones, and bless this act of His righteous providence to the good of all. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. C. A. Cecil at eleven o'clock on Saturday, in the presence of a large audience.

H. F. Lowe.

In for it.

First small boy: "We'd better be good."

Second small boy: "Why?"

First small boy: "I heard doctor tell mother to take plenty of exercise."—Woman's Home Companion.

Curiosity Punished.

"This large bump running across the back of your head means that you are inclined to be curious to the point of recklessness."

"I know it. I got that by sticking my head into an elevator shaft to see if the elevator was coming up, and it was coming down."—Houston Post.

CLOUDS AND SUN.

Life is sweet, oh! see the beauty!
Everywhere your eyes can rest!
Finds exquisite beauty lingering,
Everything seems sweetly blessed.

Oh, how dear those fleeting moments
When the clouds have passed away;
Don't you wish, dear heart, they would linger?
Don't you wish they would come and stay?

Yes, indeed, we want the sunshine
In our pathway all the way,
And we wish so very truly
That the clouds would go and stay.

But, my heart, we, like the roses,
Must have both the clouds and sun;
God will always give the sunshine
When the clouds their work have done.

So, now, we must learn this lesson
From the lovely little flowers;
Too much sun will surely wither;
We, like them, must have the showers.

By R. B. L.

THE AMUSEMENT QUESTION.

Which Amusements Are Right?

For plain average Christians—young folks especially—there is ten times more puzzle and annoyance here than in any problem of theology.

Theological debaters have at least the satisfaction of hurling proof texts at one another. But on the amusement question there are no proof texts. It is a modern problem.

The lack of Bible commandments on the subject many good people have undertaken to supply by inventing artificial commandments of their own—commandments like "Thou shalt not dance," "Thou shalt not play cards." But these manufactured injunctions somehow lack the grip that makes God's Commandments bite into the conscience.

Mere "Danger!" labels don't answer. Young folks—and other folks too—are always bothering round to know why these dangerous things are dangerous—if they really are.

It serves nothing to get impatient with such demands. They are in the essence justified. The arbitrary marking off of certain kinds of entertainment as inconsistent for a church member will not hold in the long run without a tangible reason behind it. Custom and tradition are not enough.

If certain amusements are to be cut out of the habit of Christians, there must be a definite, understood relation between the law of such exclusion and the upkeep of the moral life, and that relation must be neither fictitious nor conventional.

* *

What is necessary, then, is to get down to the bottom vein principle of connection between life's enjoyments and life's obligations.

Two quite different kinds of folks agree in the entirely superficial idea that there is no connection at all between joy and duty—on the one hand those so solemn that they see in life no place for pleasure, an on the other hand those so frivolous that they can conceive in life nothing serious.

If a young man must accept either of these blunders, by all means let him take the first; it is incomparably less harmful. But he need take neither. If only he will work down patiently to the foundations of wholesome Christian living, he will discover a philosophy big enough for all the fun he needs and still able to take in every duty that life thrusts at him.

What are we here for? This is the place for the Christian's philosophy to start building. The least things of daily wisdom depend on what final object one is or ought to be living for.

The only way that a man can make himself worth the room that he takes up in the world is by furnishing to the Lord's use a man's weight behind the purposes that the Lord has set out to accomplish.

What those purposes are is a subject too big to handle comprehensively in a page of reading. It is enough to say here for a quick definition that God's purpose is to establish righteousness among men and in them—to make the world good.

Human duty, then, is the obligation to help get that thing done. The measure of any man's debt in that line is the measure of himself. He is summoned to put in the whole of himself.

It follows that it is a man's absolutely first item of obligation to be the whole of himself—to fill out the fullness of his own potential power—to develop himself to his top-notch of efficiency. It is sin for a man to be less capable of good in the world than he has in himself the possibility of being.

Vitally important it is, then, that the conscientious man shall take care of himself—not in a petty, selfish way as if he were flimsy bric a brac in everlasting danger of being broken, but in an eager, ambitious way, as the expert takes care of an engine in order to hold it up to its maximum of power.

When one takes that kind of care of the human engine, he realizes that he is handling a tremendously complex machine. It gets its power, not from one kind of fuel simply, but from almost innumerable sources of physical, mental and spiritual energy. The engine may keep on running, but it runs with less force whenever any one of those sources of power is disconnected. So the secret of life is to keep up all available connection that actually contributes to life.

Divine connection, God's fellowship—that is most imperative to the Christian, of course. But he needs human fellowship, also. Contacts with men's writings, men's doings, and, above all, with men's selves—intellectual life, practical life, social life—all these have their contributions to make to the complete Christian—to the maximum man in God's service.

Here pleasures, entertainments, recreations, come in—along the line of human fellowships. The criterion of their rightness is here:

Do one's pleasures add to the wholeness of life? Do they make for understanding of men and of self and of the world? Do one's recreations and entertainments restore elements of effective personality which the grind of other things has been wearing away?

* *

No doubt this seems a long way to go round to get in range of answering the old questions like, "Shall I go to the theatre?" But there is no shorter way that is grounded the whole distance on bedrock principle. For this is the question which one must answer in regard to every amusement that he craves:

"Is this amusement one that leaves me better able to serve God—one that adds to my force in favor of cleanness, purity, truth and loving worship of God in the world? Am I more a man, whole and wholesome, for having had this passing joy?"

One cannot borrow from others the answer to this question in his own life, any more than he can answer it for others out of his own experience. But a man ought to answer for himself guardedly, in solemn fear of himself lest his appetites unconsciously slip in and disguise themselves in the garments of his judgment and conscience.

If, however, he is able to give honest and accurate answers touching the effects of his amusements, he may safely measure the meaning of his answers by these fundamental propositions:

Whatever amusement adds to him—to the sum of him as the sum of his physical, mental and spiritual parts—is a good amusement.

Whatever subtracts from him anywhere is not worthy to be called amusement at all; the subtraction alone betrays it as a dissipation.

No, the question is no nearer answered than when we began: it is simply up to you to answer it yourself.—The Continent.

—Judge J. M. Guyer has returned from the White Sulphur Springs, where he spent several days, for his health, and to rest up. Judge is looking much improved since his return. He reports a gain of one pound per day while there.—Forsyth News.

WHEN THE DOOR SQUEAKED.

Karleen sat in the big rocking-chair beside the window, and rocked and rocked. Bang! thump! bang! thump! Back and forth the chair flew, and then came to a sudden halt.

"I've half a mind to do it!" Karleen said, springing to her feet. "Mother told me to 'stay' till she called me. She didn't say 'stay' here. I don't s'pose she cares if I only 'stay.' "

Karleen giggled as her thoughts ran on. It would be such fun to fool every one—mother, Aunt Caroline, and Big Sister Rachel—by slying out the back door and down to the beach. She would be alone there just the same as in that old thumping rocking-chair—that is, there would not be any folks with her, and folks were what she was to be kept from just now.

"I want you to stay alone awhile with only your thoughts for company," her mother had said, as she closed the door and left her. Karleen was quite positive that nothing had been said about where she stayed, and certainly the beach was just as "alone" a place as this horrid old guest chamber, with not even a ticking clock for company.

"Yes, I'm going!" Karleen ejaculated, springing from the chair with an energy that sent it flying back and forth so furiously that she put out a hand to stop it. Chairs were such noisy things, particularly rocking-chairs; and now that she had decided to take her solitude down to the beach, Karleen did not want the rocking-chair to tell any tales. After she had taken this little vacation she intended to come back and spend the rest of the time where her mother had left her.

"This is so much nicer, and just 'zactly as 'alone' as it was in the house," Karleen decided, ten minutes later, as she flung herself down upon the hot sand and watched the incoming tide. "The waves don't make any more noise than that thumping old chair, and—why, I do believe that's Flossy Vanderwood coming up the beach!" she cried, scrambling to her feet. "Yes, it is! and she has got Rose Marion with her!"

By this time Karleen had entirely forgotten the fact that she was doing penance for naughtiness, and only waited for her friend to come within calling distance to sing out: "I'll go and get Rosamond. I'll be back in five minutes."

Then up the beach she sped, light-hearted and happy, as if there were no such words as obedience or repentance in the dictionary. Carefully opening the screen door, she crept softly upstairs. She had remembered that she was in disgrace in season to avoid making any unnecessary noise; and she tiptoed across the floor of her room, grabbed Rosamond by an arm, and sped down the stairs again.

With her doll in her arms and the door in sight, she grew more courageous. She had escaped thus far undetected, and after a short visit with her friend Flossy she was going back to the thumping rocking chair and her own thoughts again.

But doors have a way of talking, sometimes even when carefully closed; and as Karleen pushed the last one slowly open it gave such a prolonged wail that her heart began to thump furiously. Her mother must be somewhere about the house, and if within hearing distance surely that sound like a crazy fiddle would summon her to the spot—or so Karleen thought; but she was in for it now, and without a look backward the little girl clasped her doll tightly to her wildly-beating heart and raced towards the beach.

When about half-way she suddenly stopped short and turned around. Wasn't this what her teacher called deceiving? Perhaps the door had squeaked to warn her that she was doing wrong. What if her mother should go to the guest chamber before she got back and find that the little girl she had always trusted had played her false!

"I guess we won't go to the beach today, after all, Rosamond," she murmured. "We'll go right back and sit in the rocking-chair in the guest chamber with our own 'thoughts for comp'ny.' "

Half an hour later Karleen's mother found her sitting in the chair where she had left her, with her doll clasped in her arms. The chair was motionless and so was its little occupant. Wearied with her hurried trips to and from the beach, Karleen had fallen asleep in the cool, quiet room.

"Did you hear it, mama? the little girl exclaimed with a start, as her mother touched her arm.

"Hear what, dear?" asked her mother.

"The door! It squeaked. And wasn't it funny, mama, it seemed to say, just as plain, 'Go back!' when I started down to the beach to play with Flossy."

After Karleen's mother had heard the whole of her confession, she answered gently: "The door was not speaking, it was your own conscience, daughter, and you were wise to heed it. The door simply reminded you that you were doing wrong."

"I guess the beach wouldn't have been a good place to me'tate, after all," she confided to Rosamond, as together they lay in bed that night. "I guess the thumping rocking-chair was where mama meant me to stay, and I'm glad I went back to it."—Helen M. Richardson, in Zion's Herald.

—Work on the Panama-California Exposition, 1915, to be held in San Diego, has actually begun. President Taft, by proxy, turned the first spadeful of earth, by special invitation of Director-General D. C. Collier. Now there will quickly arise in Balboa Park, within sight of the great ocean which the canal will link with the Atlantic, a city such as the Mission Fathers a century and a half ago may have seen in their pious visions foretelling the destiny of the goodly land they were invading with the cross and the arts of peace. Here all the nations of the new world expect to unite in one of the greatest exponents of the victory of civilization that the world has yet seen.

A man who had been brought up in a country village, but who had moved to the city, was visiting the scenes of his childhood. He happened to meet a boy who was considered to be a little "off," and thought that there was a good chance to find out from his about the people he used to know. Among others, he chanced to mention the name of an old school mate. "Why," said the boy, "he has been married seven years and has twelve children."

'Twelve children!" exclaimed the man. "How does that come?"

"Oh," said the boy, "they had three to onet, two to twict, and one a good many times."

A TYPICAL AMERICAN HUMORIST.

America is the land of humor and humorists, but she has never produced a purer specimen of the genuine humorist than Artemus Ward. His life was short, and the last years of it were years full of pain and the dejection that was the result of the consciousness that he was slowly dying of an incurable disease; but he was, first and last, a humorist. Ward's writings were successful, but his greatest success was on the lecture platform. His very appearance and manner gave humor to his remarks. He would stroll upon the platform in an embarrassed way, and make the first remark as if it had just occurred to him for the first time. This gave him a start and set the audience to laughing, and he never permitted it to stop again until he was gone from the platform.

Perhaps Ward's most representative piece of humor was his description of the time when he was in Utah and seventeen young widows, all made widows by the death of one man, proposed to him.

"They hove a sigh," he said, "seventen sighs of different size. They said: 'O, soon thou wilt be gonested away.'

"I told them that when I got ready to leave a place I usually wentested. They said: 'Doth not like us?'

"I said: 'I doth, I doth!'

"They said: 'Wilt not marry us?'

"I said: 'O, no, it cannot was.'

"Again they asked me to marry them, and again I declined. They cried: 'O, cruel man, this is too much! O, too much!'

"I told them it was on account of the muchness that I declined."

—Mrs. R. M. Andrews at Mt. Vernon Springs gave us this fine puzzle. Can you solve it? It is a man's full name and post office, and a letter thus directed is said to have reached him:

WOOD.

MASS.

—A little son of a Baptist minister was one morning in church when he saw for the first time the rite of baptism by immersion. He was greatly interested in it, and the next morning proceeded to baptize his three cats—in the bathtub.

The kitten bore it very well, and so did the young cat, but the old family cat rebelled. It struggled with him, clawed and tore him, and got away.

With considerable effort he caught it again, and proceeded with the ceremony. But she acted worse than ever, clawed at him, spit, and scratched his face and hands. Finally he threw her on the floor in disgust, and said:

"Well, you, be a Methodist if you want to!"—Lippincott's.

A PACKAGE OF MIXED SEED.

"Have you any seeds of kindness for sale?" a little boy asked at a seed store.

"Seeds of kindness, what are those?" said the seedsman.

"Why, in our Bible school we sing:

" 'Then scatter seeds of kindness,
For our reaping by and by.'

"I have a little garden and I want to plant some kindness seeds."

"Oh, those come in a mixed package," said the seedsman, as he took a big book from a shelf.

"That looks like a Bible," the little boy thought, and sure enough it was.

"Let me see; I think I will find that package of seeds in II. Peter, chapter one," said the man. "Yes, there it is; see if you can read it for me, beginning with the fifth verse."

So the boy read: "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity."

"Eight kinds of seeds in this package, you see," said the man.

"But aren't there any real seeds?" said the boy. "Does it just mean that you are to be kind to folks?"

"Yes, that is what it means," said the man, "but kindness and charity and faith are real things, and if you plant them in your heart they live and grow, just as seeds grow in the garden."

"What is the reaping by and by?" said the boy.

"It means that if you are kind, people will be kind to you," said the seedsman, "and, better than all, it means that God, who is kind to the unthankful and evil, will be pleased with you."

"I shall find that package of mixed seeds in my Bible when I get home," said the boy, "and it may help me to remember to be kind all the time."—The Classmate.

BE GREATER THAN YOUR POSITION.

A distinguished theological professor once said: "If I had a son, I should tell him many times a day to make himself as big a man on the inside as possible."

Young men too often want to be big men on the outside; to occupy positions which fit them as a turtle's shell fits a clam.

Never mind your position, young man. Whatever it may be, try to fill it. The duties you have to perform may seem trivial, but because it is a small position is no reason why you should be a small man. You may be big inside, you know, if you are small outside.

The young man who applies himself in internal growth, as it were, is bound in time to find a place where he will be able to use every power he possesss. At any rate, better be a big man in a small place than the opposite. A pinch of powder in a small cartridge can make a good deal of noise and drive a bullet a long way. What can it do in a Krupp gun?—Success.

—In this country about 10 to 15 people per 1,000 are afflicted with tuberculosis. The remedy urged is wholesome food, cleanliness of person and surrounding, and abundance of fresh air by day and by night.

—August 1st sixty-five Chinese students were to leave Shanghai, China, for the United States, to be educated here by the Chinese Government, the money for their education coming from the indemnity paid by China to America, and then given back for this purpose by our governmena, on account of the Boxer uprising.

—Dispensaries for the treatment of hookworm disease were established in July in the counties of Sampson, Columbus, Robeson and Halifax, N. C., and at these dispensaries 1,479 cases were treated during the month. In Columbus County 412 people were treated for hookworm disease in one day. Rickefeller's philanthropy came none too soon.

We call attention of our readers to the Vacation Number of the Elon College Bulletin, which can be had free upon request directed to President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., mentioning this paper. This bulletin, bound in Maroon and stamped on the cover sheets with Old Gold, the college colors, contains 32 pages of matters of vital importance to young people, intending to go off to College. Some of the topics discussed are: Reasons for Education, What is Education? How best to get it, the Life and Spirit of Elon College, the Special Advantages and Departments of the College, A Succinct Statement of Expenses and Terms of Admission. We call the attention of our readers also to the advertisement of Elon College, which appears in this paper.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL

DENTON, N. C.,
Opens August 28th, 1911.

This school is most beautifully located at the terminus of the Piedmont Railway. Healing Springs, one of the best mineral springs in the South, can be reached from Denton in fifty minutes.

This is a Methodist Protestant schoo , and we solicit patronage from Methodist Protestant homes.

Good board in private homes, including furnished rooms, light and fuel, cost only 30 cents per day. Tuition from $1.00 to $4.00 per month.

The rooms are being painted, 40 single patent desks added, and everything will be in first class condition.

Our students enter State University without eaxmination.

For further information, write fully and freely to

GEO. L. REYNOLDS, Principal.

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON, AUG. 13.

By Charles A. Hines.

Topic: Small Beginnings of Intemperance.—Prov. 23:29-35. (Temperance Meeting.)

The Bible writers bring a terrible indictment against the glowing cup. And the evidence of the centuries sustains the charge. It wolud seem useless to talk upon a subject that has ben so discussed, but "line upon line, and precept upon precept," is the law of moral progress. And then it is not alone that repetition is necessary, but there are those who need to learn the truth for the first time. Young people growing up in homes where there is no definite teaching, children who will profit by hearing the truth from the lips of them who lead and teach them, and older ones who need to be aroused from their indifference and be enlisted actively in this great work.

The text of the lesson is a vivid delineation of the suffering of an intemperate person. Six undesirable sensations and experiences are enumerated. Woe, sorrow, contentions, complainings, wounds, inflamed eyes—all these are catalogued together and cited as the results of tarrying long at the wine cup. A solemn warning is spoken. The time to avoid these penalties is when still sober and in possesion of all the faculties. "Look not upon the wine" may sound puritanical, but is the safe course.

* * *

In our day the beginnings of intemperance are to be found in the open saloon. As long as saloons exist somebody's boys are sure to enter and be destroyed. Therefore the way to cut at the root of such beginnings is to hew down the saloon. It is a poison tree that ruins the community.

Look at the size of it. Jacob Riis says that he counted them, and found that while there were 111 Protestant churches, chapels, and places of worship below Fourteenth Street in New York, there were 4,065 saloons. They had a beginning. One saloon, like one drink, inevitably leads to another. It will do little good to lop off the odd sixty-five or the odd three thousand. The whole tree must go, root and branch.

In saloon-poisoned communities the individual must fight the beginnings of intemperace in young people. The saloon appears cozy, inviting. It seems manly to lounge behind the bar and smoke. What are we doing to provide still more cozy places, and far more manly tasks, for young men than lounging at evil-smelling counters?

* * *

Rev. C. N. Howard tells the following story: In a certain town the temperance people and the liquor people planned to have street-parades upon the same day, the parades to start from opposite ends of the town. At the head of the liquor procession a man carried a banner marked, "Men, Vote for Your Liberty." At the head of the temperance procession a little boy carried a banner, "Fathers, Vote to Save Your Sons." As the processions met, the man threw down his banner, ran to the boy, and, raising him upon his shoulder, faced about, and himself headed the temperance parade. The boy was his own son.

* * *

A little boy went with his mother to dine at a friend's house. On their return home he said to his mother: "The pudding sauce wasn't as good as ours. What made it taste so different?" His mother gazed at the boy, speechless, but in her heart she said, "If my boy has begun to like the taste of wine in the sauce, it is time I stopped using it."

* * *

The beauty of a clean body and a clean mind must be made attractive. "They are beautiful," sir," said a tipsy man to a clergyman, pointing to some flowers. "Yes, and do you know why they are beautiful?" said the clergyman. "No." "They drink nothing but water," was the reply.

* * *

From Various Pens.

There is not a thought in a hogshead of beer.—Theodore Rooeveslt.

No user of tobacco has ever taken first place at Harvard.—Henry W. Longfellow.

Ten minutes spent in Christ's society every day, aye, two minutes, if it be face to face and heart to heart, will make the day different.—Drummond.

"All the good that temperance brings
From pure self-denial springs."

"Sometimes intemperance begins with eating brandied food, like mince-pies or preserves. Alas, when the home is made an annex to the saloon."

"Satan never concocted a shrewder device than when he began to put liquor in candy for children. Every such confection is a devil's bait."

"There are more patent medicines that are used by drunkards in prohibition states as substitutes for whiskey, and there are physicians whose prescriptions of alcohol have set many upon the downward road."

"Drug stores are responsible for cocaine and opium habits, which are mainly fostered by apparently innocent 'medicines' sold freely without prescription."

* * *

For Daily Reading.

Aug. 7.—Small cause, big effect Gen. 3:6
Aug. 8.—Beware self-confidence Prov. 28:26
Aug. 9.—Wine's allurement Prov. 23:31, 32
Aug. 10.—The drunkard's inefficiency 1 Kings 20: 13-21
Aug. 11.—Power of habit Jer. 13:23; 22:21
Aug. 12.—Touch not Col. 2:21; Rom. 14:21

MOMENT BY MOMENT.

Now is the only time for which we need to seek supplies, or strength, or deliverance, or any other blessing. If we accept from God in Christ all that he offers us now, for this present moment, and continue to do that moment by moment, the future will be well taken care of. This is an old, old truth; but we shall need to be reminded of it anew until the heavens and the earth are done away. We long and chafe to look ahead, and to have some assurance that we shall have an undiminished deliverance from sin—from our besetting sin—in such continued power that the rest of our life will be a path of glory. That assurance is, indeed, given to us, but it is in terms of now. Christ is able to guard that which is committed unto him, now and hereafter; but he asks us to trust him for both present and future, while we concern ourselves not at all with the future, but see to it that we are yielded utterly to him in faith and obedience today. It simplifies life so to let it become simply a matter of my present, immediate relationship to Jesus Christ! Am I yielded wholly to his will now? If I am, he will do all the rest.

"Moment by moment I'm kept in his love;
Moment by moment I've life from above;
Looking to Jesus till glory doth shine;
Moment by moment, O Lord, I am thine."

—S. S. Times.

Thompson-Peacock.

Mr. G. L. Thompson and Miss Vertie Peacock were happily united in matrimony at the residence of the writer last Sunday at 11 A. M. Bro. Thompson is a young man of excellent qualities, and one of our best members at Mt. Ebal, Davidson Circuit. He has won the heart and hand of a most splendid young lady, and we hope that on life's great sea they may have smooth sailing.

G. L. Reynolds.

Denton, N. C., July 30.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

LARGEST PRAYER MEETING IN THE WORLD.

"I have just attended," writes an American traveler, "a prayer meeting in Yua Mot Kal Church in Korea. It was a dark and stormy night. A Korean had led me thither, and the people did not know that a traveler from the West was to be there, but I found about a thousand Christians gathered together No well-known personality would succeed in the United States in gathering together a thousand church members for a prayer meeting, but eventually there were 1,200 gathered on that evening. These Christians reckoned it worth a long journey to assemble for prayer. The spirit of prayer runs through their daily life."

IS A UNION OF THE METHODIST CHURCHES FEASIBLE?

I wish to answer this question in regard to our own church only, and to answer it in the negative very emphatically. I think it could be answered in one word of two letters, which should be written in capitals and underscored, NO.

1. Because there is no general demand for such a union on the part of the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church. It is true that a few men, holding prominent places in the church, favor such a union, but these men are out of harmony with the general sentiment of the church.

2. The causes that brought the Methodist Protestant Church into existence are in full force today. If there were adequate cause for the origin of this church, the same cause exists today for its continuance. The principles upon which the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are founded, so far as church government is concerned,. are radically different from those of the Methodist Protestant Church, and there is no middle ground upon which they can meet in harmony. The principles that could not be harmonized during the fifty years' struggle between 1773 and 1828 can not be harmonized now. Nor do I believe that they expect to harmonize them. They will simply open the door and invite the prodigal to return.

There has been no essential change in the Methodist Episcopal Church so far as lay representation is concerned. Even the little lay delegate system they have adopted is not lay representation in any true sense of the word.

The spirit of the episcopate is manifested in the very meager mention of the proceedings of the joint commission which met at Chattanooga, Tenn., May 10, 1911, no information given out to the churches who pay the bills. In fact they express a doubt as to their authority to give their proceedings to the churches, or in other words, our right to receive them; but they will have no doubts as to their authority to receive our hard-earned money to pay the bills. And while I believe that we should pay the expenses of our delegates to that gathering, we should let it be understood that we will pay for no more star chamber proceedings.

I believe that there are insurmountable difficulties in the way of a union of the two Methodist Episcopal churches, and until such a time as they can effect a union, it is worse, very much worse, than useless for us to entertain the proposition at all. We are wasting precious time and energy in discussing union with any other church at the present time.

The Methodist Protestant Church has still a mission to perform; and it is up to you and me to see that her work is done, and well done. Shall it be said that the founders of this church lived and suffered and wrought in vain? Will we prove to be unworthy sons of such noble sires? We have received, from our fathers, a church of noble principles and high purposes and we are bound by the most sacred obligations to transmit it, not only unimpaired, but better than we received it, to the generations to come after us. Brethren, let us quit this shilly-shallying and push our own to the front, if it is worth pushing, or if it is not, then let us abandon it and seek homes in one that is worth pushing.—Rev. M. R. Saigeon, of Michigan, in The Methodist Recorder.

—The Persian Cabinet is reported to have resigned, while the country is said to be in a state of anarchy. The roads are unsafe, and rebellious movements are on foot at Shiraz, the capital of the province of Fars, at Kermanshaw, and at Sehna, the capital of Kurdistan. In the Ardabil district forty villages have been sacked by the rebels. A strict censorship on outgoing news has been established.

NOTES.

The first of the month is here, and it is time for the bills to swarm.

—Grady Coble has been removed to a room in the Benbow Arcade to be treated more conveniently than he could be at home. Electrical appliances and massage are employed.

—The meeting of the Farmers' Union at Salisbury last week, it is said, brought together the largest number of farmers ever present in one gathering in the history of the State. There was able speaking, and much business attended to in the interest of the union.

—The Greensboro Telegram has been changed to an evening paper. If it were merely a local paper, this would seem to be a bad move, as the Daily Record occupies the field, but if the editor has the ambition to make it a state paper, such as the News and Observer or the Charlotte Observer, it would seem to be in the line of good policy. The train schedule from Greensboro lends itself fairly well to such a purpose. Why not a State paper in Greensboro? It is an important central point.

—We met on the train Mr. N. T. Andrews, of Fairmont, N. C. He is a large man, full of good nature, and fond of a joke. Reaching the town of Liberty, N. C., an old colored man came to the train to sell grapes. Mr. Andrews said to him:

"Uncle, who lives here?"

The old colored man straightened himself up, closed his eyes, and put on a most impressive look as he answered:

"Many, Boss, many!"

—The editor was permitted to spend a few days at Mt. Vernon Springs, beginning with last Friday. It is a restful place. It is not a resort for the fashionable, but for sensible people, seeking rest and the benefit of the mineral water. This was our first trial of the water. We had thought of it as probably little more than hydric monoxide (pure water), but found it to be strongly impregnated with minerals. We do not know from personal experience the virtues of the combination, but others believe themselves to have been greatly benefited by its use, and we think enough of it to continue to use it, buying it by the five-gallon bottleful. Our stay was made pleasant by the good treatment of Mr. Foust, the proprieter, and by the association with people there as guests, among them Rev. R. M. Andrews and wife, and Revs. Messrs. Edwards and Thomas, of the Baptist church. There were several Greensboro people there, others from Fayetteville, Sanford, High Point, Durham, and other points, and quite a number from Rowland, N. C., and vicinity. Mr. Foust has installed electric lights and water plant, has built cement walks, enclosed the springs in a cement casing, from which the water issues through two iron pipes. These pipes are only about three inches apart, yet the waters differ in taste and in analysis. Mr. Foust has also provided swinging seats, games, etc., for the diversion of the guests. We brought away pleasant recollections of the place and its present inhabitants, and shall gladly go again should opportunity offer.

—Rev. G. W. Luck, local preacher at St. Paul's church, Greensboro, would like to help in special meetings if opportunity offers. Would like to confer with any one needing help. Address, Denim's Station, Greensboro.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting design that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is th first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dep't.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

When choosing a school in which to place their children, parents wish to consider the following special points:

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL INFLUENCES. The moral atmosphere of Elon College is of the highest type. The Spiritual influences surrounding the young man or the young woman will not allow them to go far astray.

HEALTHFULNESS. Good water from a deep well, buildings well cared for, good heat and lights, plenty of fresh air, and a situation in the best part of North Carolina insure the healthfulness of the students here.

STRONG COURSES OF STUDY. Entrance requirements equal to those of the best colleges in the country, a strong faculty of university men, and courses requiring sixty-nine hours for the Bachelor's degree, make Elon a college whose graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of the leading Universities of the country. Courses in Business, Elocution, Art, Music, and Pedagogy are offered leading to certificates and degrees.

EQUIPMENT. Splendid Library and Reading Room, ample grounds, laboratories, large dormitories, buildings equa to the best, with every equipment and appliance makes Elon stand among the from rank of colleges in the South. All buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and have water and bath rooms on every floor.

ECONOMY. All expenses can be paid for the college courses for from $125.00 to $200.00 a year according to the student's power of economy and his place selected for board and room.

COEDUCATIONAL. Parents who read The Methodist Protestant Herald can send both their sons and daughters to Elon College with the assurance that they will have the best that the educational world has to offer.

FOR CATALOGUE, ILLUSTRATED BULLETINS, etc., address,

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1911. NUMBER 37.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE ORPHANAGE.

Washington has his birthday on the 22nd of February, and six months later, August 22, comes the anniversary of Denton Orphanage. It is yet in its first year, but we feel that it has made a good beginning, both in the work done and in the impression it has made on the heart of the Church.

What can appeal more strongly than the condition of a parentless child! Seventeen children of the dependent class have been brought together by our orphanage in its first year, and their physical needs have been provided for, and instruction has been given them and influence brought to bear upon them for good. Some of them would have had very different influences about them had they not been rescued. The home is a rescue mission as well as an asylum for the fatherless and motherless children.

Through the liberality of Denton people, supplemented by what others will do, better and larger quarters are to be provided for the home.

Read Mrs. Hammer's statement and appeal on another column, and let it affect you as you would wish others to be affected if it were your children to be provided for. And it may be that the children of some who read this will find homes there. Life is full of changes, and none can tell what a day will bring forth.

Let us have due regard for those dependent ones whom God has given over to our care.

TWO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

One is always late, the other always on time. One wears a kind of scowl, the other a kindly smile. One never studies the lesson of the day, the other always does. One pays no attention to the classification of the school, the other tries to see that each pupil is in the right class, and that each class has the right teacher. One shows no interest in the scholars when he meets them on Monday, the other recognizes them every day in the week. One has a dull and almost fruitless school, the other has a school of life and progress. One ought not to be superintendent, the other is the "right man in the right place."

THE AMAZING NUMBER OF HUMAN WANTS.

We sometimes hear it said than man's wants are few and simple; but when you go through a great department store or go along the streets of a city and see the great variety of goods displayed in the shop-windows, you feel that man's wants are many and some of them far from simple.

However, many of the individual things demanded by human needs are called for by some one need of man's nature. Take the need of food, for instance. There are the many farm utensils, the wagons and cars for transportation, the mills for grinding, the vessels for containing, the houses and packages for storing, etc., etc. To clothe men, an immense variety of industries and establishments are required. And what a vast array does the healing art bring in and place on the shelves of the druggist! Many of them of doubtful value, but all supposetd to be of use to man at certain times.

Labor and leisure both call for multiplied devices of man's skill. For man's enlightenment, books and periodicals and the means of providing them are required.

When one sees a little way into the world's provision for man, he is impressed with the diversity of human need. Surely man is a creature of many wants.

Dr. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant, is somewhat reduced in health, and is warned by his physician that he must not work hard. He has our sympathy. We wish for him a speedy restoration to his ordinary good health.

—A report from Chatham says that Rev. J. H. Bowman has pneumonia. Let him be remembered prayerfully.

—Note Bro. Powell's request in behalf of Bro. Bowman.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway is helping Bro. Kennett in a meeting at Bethel this week. We hope to hear of good results.

—Rev. H. L. Powell returned home today. He reports that Bro. Bowman was taken suddenly with a severe pain in his left side. which he thought at first was a neuralgic pain, but which was found to be the result of pneumonia in the left lung. The other lung did not seem to be involved.

—St. Paul's Sunday school is to go to Guilford Battle Ground for its picnic next Saturday afternoon.

A story comes from Alaska of a discovery of a lake back in the mountains, the waters of which are always warm. Fish in countless numbers can be caught in the coldest weather without trouble, for the waters of the lake are never so cold but one can bathe in them. While this wonderful body of water is hundreds of miles from the ocean, and there is no apparent connection between the two, the lake is affected by the tide, which is evidence of some subterranean channel connecting it with the sea. Like this warm lake in the midst of almost Arctic cold, Christianity, which is our national heritage, should be as an upspringing fountain of warmth and good cheer, evidence of its Divine origin.—The Methodist Protestant.

A REQUEST.

We come with a request that some friend and reader of the Herald will send to the editor a full copy of a poem that we read many years ago, that he may reproduce it for the benefit of those who are going on in the way of sin and death.

When we read the poem it impressed us at the time as being superlatively awful as regarded the destiny of the individual thus imploring divine aid after having lived a life of unbridled licentiousness and when friend and reader of the Herald will send nearing the end he saw himself in the light of eternity and this was the language of his overcharged heart when perhaps it was forever too late to obtain pardon and peace. We can only recall the first verse. It ran thus:

"Father of light, great God of heaven,
Hearest thou the accents of despair?
Can sins like mine e'er be forgiven?
Can guilt atone for crime by prayer?"

We are under the impression that it was one of Byron's last literary efforts, and when we think of his towering intellect, and how successfully he perverted its use to unholy purposes; how with a covert sneer he wrote his finest dramas quoting scripture so flippantly whenever by so doing he might round his graceful periods, we can only mourn that so much genius and grandeur could not have been used in the service of the only living and true God. We read very recently a sermon from some great man in which he deplored "Byron's profligacy". He said, "Though he raved so much in his own great way about the woods, and the sea, and the mountains, who spoke of mingling with the universe and trusting the billows, who called the mountains friends, and the ocean a home and said he found companionship in the desert, forest, cavern, breakers' foam;—he came back from nature with ever the same sense of insufficiency gnawing at his heart. He came back to his fellowmen with his poor weak fretting and his passion unstilled. To the end a bitterness unsoftened by his wild proud life clung round his heart", and it was possibly about this time that he wrote the following verses so well known and so often quoted with reference to the melancholy end of one of the greatest poets that ever lived. His keen despair, remorse, and desolation are briefly expressed in these words:

"My days are in the sere and yellow leaf,
The flowers and fruits of love are gone,
The worm, the canker, and the grief
The fires that on my bosom burn
Are lone as some volcanic isle;
No torch is lighted at its shrine,
A funeral pile."

Lord Byron is not alone in his agony of mind, and the aching remorse of his desolate soul has been felt and endured by all who deliberately and persistently drive away all the softening, refining and elevating influences of God's Holy Spirit as He comes to us all in our youth and offers life, eternal life. O mortal, whoever and wherever you be, look well to this important matter and with all the advantages given you in this gospel land, "Seek Him who made the Seven Stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into morning."

E. A. N.

DIFFERENT VERSIONS OF SCRIPTURE

Of all the versions of Scripture that I have seen, upon the whole, I prefer the King James, the Authorized. We do not speak from the standpoint of "scholarship," to which we make no pretensions, but as a conscientious student of God's word—to know what God has spoken. When the English revision of the New Testament came out in 1881 we procured a copy of it, and was delighted with it, in many respects. In 1885, when the Old Testament revision came out, we procured a copy of the entire Bible as revised. And when the American revision came out in 1901 we procured a copy of it. We have found these two revisions quite helpful during all these years since they appeared; but to discard the Authorized for one of these revisions, we could not entertain the thought for a moment. We have, and do use, these revisions as "helps," "comments," etc., and to be deprived of their use in this way to us would be quite a loss; but to let either supplement the Authorized, this we could not do. The Authorized is interwoven in all English literature. Especially religious literature. For three hundred years it has been working its way into the warp and woof of our thought and conversation—our English, both spoken and written, and it seems to be there to stay. Why should we want to get it out? I do not think that we do. And if we were to attempt to do so, it would require three hundred years, perhaps, to accomplish it. And the English of the revisions does not at all compare with that of the Authorized. Many reasons could be given why we prefer the Authorized, but that is not our purpose now.

Some things in the American Revision we like; some we do not like. Its leaving Hades, Sheol, and Jehovah untranslated, we like. But its leaning to the immersion theory we do not like. It seems to be a compromise between "immersion" and "with," to satisfy the clamor of the "much water" brethren. A compromise between Rotherham's immersion version, and the reasonable rendering of the Authorized and the English Revision. To baptize "in" the Holy Spirit, when God says he "pours out" the Spirit, is a contradiction and an absurdity. So much for "scholarship."

Rotherham's "Critically Emphasized" Testament from the Greek of Trezelles we have found of some help; but its substituting "immerse" and "immersion" for "baptise" and "baptism," is strained, far-fetched and absurd, making many passages ridiculous. This is published by the Baptist Publication Society.

Wakefield's New Testament has some merit, but we have never seen reason to use it much.

The Twentieth Century New Testament is the faultiest, to our mind, of the versions that we have seen. It is more of a paraphrase than a translation, reflecting the theological views of the translators more than being a critical and faithful rendering of the exact sense of the original. It makes much of Higher Criticism, changing the order of the books, and making quite a number of dogmatic, iconoclastic statements in the prefaces to the books, for which no proof whatever is given, save the mere ipse dixit of the translators (paraphrasers). We can see no gain in putting Mark first, before Matthew, and James after the Acts, followed by I. and II. Thessalonians, and these by Gal., and then I. and II. Cor., then Rom., then Col., Philemon, Eph., Phil., in the order named; then I. and II. Tim., Titus and Hebrews. These changes are not vital, but we can see no gain by them, and they are somewhat confusing, as we have always been used to a different order.

The statement in the Preface to the Epistle to the Hebrews, that they do not know who wrote this epistle, but that they are certain that Paul did not, we do not " take on to" much. There is too much cocksureness about this statement to suit us, in the light of the evidence that we have seen from the best sources, to say nothing of the internal evidence, that Paul did write this epistle. And the substituting the phrase "God's people" for saints, and "in union with Christ," for "in Christ," are serious faults to our mind. They are not real translations, but paraphrases. They lack force, being weak, and somewhat equivocal in meaning. To our mind, the attempts at improving the King James Version are much like the many attempts at improving upon Webster's Spelling Book. There may be some minor improvements, but upon the whole they seem to be failures; so it is with the attempts of improvement upon the version of 1611.

Hinds' Interlinear New Testament we have found very helpful. Being the Greek, with a word for word, or literal, rendering into English. This is very helpful to those who are not fair Greek scholars. This, with Young's Analytical Concordance, and a good Greek Lexicon, puts one who has a limited knowledge of Greek where he can study a passage in the original. And I wonder how many get on without these. But as they have never had them, they do not know their value. But it shows the superior value of the King James Version. So give me the grand old King James Version, if it does contain some obsolete words and phrases and archaisms. The most of us have learned the meaning of these. Helps that explain these archaisms and obsolete words and phrases are cheap and not difficult to procure, and far more would be lost than gained if we were to discard the time-honored Authorized Version, which for 300 years has been the precious Book of the English speaking world. J. F. Dosier.

THE RESPONSIBLE MAN.

We all have our calling according to talent—and too, there is such a thing as having talent according to calling. I once asked one of the able physicians to tell me about his impressions leading to his work. He said that he did not remember anything in connection; but after he got through college his father asked him what he proposed to do. He did not give his father, who was a physician, a definite answer.

His father asked him at once if he was willing to be a doctor, and he answered yes; and he made an able doctor. After he becamea physician, at a certain time, the people got him to look at a certain spring that was poisoned by a grave yard. He said that as soon as he looked down on the water he saw the "green skim."

I have heard "talk" only recently about the poisons in the earth, that the people are too careless about the cause of such, and thinking about the case of the above doctor, etc.

I have also heard the facts talked of late that while we "the people" are looking to our leaders to lead and governors to govern, those who lead, and seem to lead, are very much biased by the sentiments of the people. The physician we count as being strictly the leader in his work, but some of us often forget this.

Many, in some parts of the world, are cremated, but we, in this part of the world, look upon such a thing as being horrible. We want to bury our dead, and think we are right about it.

However, there are some customs that ought to be changed, and, as I suppose, hundreds of people would subscribe to this assertaion. The carelessness of burying the dead in reach of wells and springs ought to be regulated—and could be. The good doctor is "able and willing" to tell us this, but some of us have not been schooled up enough in the way of common sense to act out the facts, and the doctor can hardly help us much until we are better schooled. It might be supposed that there are so many who are being so well schooled in the way of justice and common sense, that they would be willing to be buried down in the clean dirt without being put in a coffin, and if so the clean dirt would not hurt the "unclean thing," but the natural clean chemicals would soon digest and destroy the dangerous and deadly gases.

If there are any so well schooled as suggested above, and have the "nerve," let them advance.

These who are able to see the need of a thing clearly are the ones to advance, and then we who are called to be led will follow.

By past history, as we read in the Bible, men had to lead out, or venture on, before the people were able to see things as the leader saw them—and the result was some great risks, as it seemed, and some wonderful adventures. There are now, even in this 1911, many things that should be done where the venturing ought to be a pleasure, no risks, by those who should lead out. If a man wants to be buried down in the ground on a board after he is dead, so doing for the sake of the living, attend to him that way—and the clean dirt will soon serve its part.

However the above, there are things for the living to do that some are able, and well able to do, all for the sake of the living, and things that will be sure not to conflict with "public sentiment."

However, again, the literal act of self-denial will have to come in, and charity. Look, all you people who read this, is there a church over on some hill that needs some additional work, a bell on top, and painting may be, and all told to cost a hundred dollars in money, more or less; as a rule there is a man in reach able to call out and say, "People, this house is here for the benefit of the living and must be set up in first-class style; how much will you do? Do what you want to, do as you think best, but the work shall be done." These are facts; and such as this can be done easier than not, and public sentiment will not come in the way of the man who is able to do the work—to foot the bill. Men who are able to do the work are called; some obey, but some refuse to obey, in many cases, for self comes in the way ,and not "public sentiment."

Dr. Tagg don't want bells on the churches in the city, if I remember correctly, but we think that we need them here in North Carolina, and in nearly every case there is a man well able, who lives in obligatory reach of a church, to just turn over the cash and install the bell, and foot up the whole amount.

There is a responsible man for all such cases as above hinted at, but there are many, as might be supposed, who are, as the able doctor who at once listened to advice and went to work.

Since two days ago, a man at King, one who is not trying to be one of the responsible class, surprised this scribe by remarking, "There is the tabernacle over there, it needs painting," and used virtually the same language as if to say, "The tabernacle must be painted." My thought, at once, was that the tabernacle needs "good company," and possibly there is a man, just out of college, or in the way of saying that the old (new painted) tabernacle shall have good company by the erection of a fine house of prayer, where the hundreds can assemble to sing and preach and hear and worship God. Lions in this land of liberty are not much in the way of a self-denying people—but there is a beast, or the dangerous parts of one, very much in the way. See 1 Tim. 6:10. Those who read the above are able, or can be able, to do better than the suggestions made. Let us pray to God to especially rule and overrule for that which should be done.

W. F. Grabs.

AMBITION.

Ambition will lead us to sorrows
Far greater than poverty's pain;
For when we have much of earth's riches
Still more we are striving to gain.

From hunger man never has robbed you
Of hundreds and thousands of gold,
But ambition has led, and will lead men
To sell you their life, yes, their souls.

When high they stand in their circles,
Still higher they wish to ascend,
When thousands are spent for earth's luxuries,
Other thousands they are longing to spend.

Their life is a pitiful vacuum,
Of which there is nothing can fill.
If they had all the wealth of a kingdom,
Other kingdoms they would be wanting still.

We all must strive for improvement,
And earnestly try to ascend,
But don't let ambition's charms lead you,
When started there's never an end.

We are happier far in humility;
When the Spirit of Jesus is near,
Don't sacrifice Christ's love and Heaven
For the grandeur of earth, that seems dear.

R. B. L.

CAPTAIN HOBSON IN MAINE.

I see by this morning's Birmingham paper that Capt. R. P. Hobson is to take the stump in Maine for prohibition, and that the Democratic Congressmen in Washington are accusing him of party heresy.

I was in the prohibition battles in Massachusetts from 1858 to 1870 inclusive, and smelt the battle from afar. Most of the time for the past forty years I have fought with the beasts at Chicago, and my interest in the cause of prohibition has increased. We know that the higher the license paid the greater the violation of law. When I went to Chicago the saloons paid a fee of $50 each. In 1882 it was raised to $500, and in 1906 to $1,000. The 7,000 saloons in Chicago pay $7,000,000 into the city treasury annually, but nobody in that city will say in public that they have improved as law-abiding places, but far to the contrary.

Following the birds to this Southland

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *
* The Saloon as an Assassin. *
* Hon. Richmond P. Hobson, Member * * of Congress from Alabama. *
* [From a speech on "The Great *
* Destroyer," delivered in the National *
* House of Representatives.] *
* Last year, on an average, each sa- *
* loon in the United was the cause of * * the death of three men. This year *
* each saloon, on the average, will kill *
* three men. Each saloon in the Unit- * * ed States, on an average, now has *
* twenty men made heavy drinkers or *
* drunkards, who are mortally wound- * * ed. Each saloon, on an average, has *
* one hundred men made regular drink- *
* ers, who are seriously wounded. The * * first duty assumed by any govern- * * ment is the protection of the lives * * of its citizens. To any civilized gov- *
* ernment the life of its citizens is * * sacred. In the premises the State *
* has not only the right but the bound- *
* en duty to put an end to this whole- * * sale assassination. *
* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

for several winters, I have escaped the severe weather of Lake Michigan. Last October I rented the old mansion house known as the "Hobson House," in which Capt. R. P. Hobson was born. I think the people here in Greensboro would all stand by me in saying that "Dick" is the most respected and loved resident of Hale County. Through Zion's Herald I want to say to the old friends of long ago that Captain Hobson is one of the truest and most faithful men to his convictions I have ever met. From chilhood he has carried a load of care and sorrow big enough to kill most men, because of the curse of strong drink, that crushed his natural protector, who was one of the most loved and honored men this State has ever placed upon the bench. This is too delicate a subject for further statement. I had known Captain Hobson for ten years, but never knew what he had done and suffered until I came to his native town. He has felt the iron in his own heart, and can be trusted to speak from a true Christian soul to the Christian men of Maine.

The apparent defeat of prohibition in Alabama is not because of its failure, but because of the most corrupt and mercenary methods used by the vilest people of the State, working in the interest of the breweres and distillers of the whole country. It is an open secret that the press of Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham has been bought or subsidized by the liquor traffic. A great storm was raised by these papers over the search and seizure of liquor in the home of a citizen of Mobile, but these papers refused to publish the fact that the said "Englishman's castle" was a house of ill fame.—Rev. W. M. Parkhurst, D. D., of Greensboro, Ala., in Zion's Herald.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

At the last meeting of the N. C. Branch of the W. F. M. S. it was decided that we could not do our duty and pay into the treasury less than $1500 during the year. The Finance Committee appointed by this meeting met on August 8th, and beg to submit the following apportionment of that amount:

Miss Mallett's salary	$ 600.00
Miss Mallett's hospital expense	200.00
Dues and Contingent	250.00
China Work	50.00
Building Fund	150.00
Thank Offering	150.00
Trav. Exp. of Pres. and Cor. Sec. to Bd. Meeting	50.00
Kindergarten Work	50.00
	$1500.00

A payment of $150 must be made on Miss Mallett's salary Sept. 1st. Last fall Miss Mallett was called upon to undergo a very serious operation in Japan, and out of her small salary it is impossible for her to pay the hospital bill, and the obligation is upon us to see that it is paid.

Heretofore we have done very little to assist in the China work, but since that is now a reality and promises to be very successful, we think we should invest at least $50.00 there.

Will not every Methodist Protestant woman in N. C. give something, even if the amount must be small?

Cannot every pastor hold a thank offering service whether you have an auxiliary in your church or not?

And now, you Sunday school superintendents, we want to get every child in North Carolina who is a member of a Methodist Protestant Sunday school interested in the Kindergarten work. This should appeal to the children, and the method of raising this money is an easy and delightful one. On the Sunday nearest the child's birth day get him to bring a penny for every year of his life. This will do good in two ways. The money given will do good, and there is no knowing what may be the result of enlisting the interest of the children in missions and giving.

The Golden Shower Bags may be had for the asking, and we request that at least two or three women in each church take one of these bags and endeavor to get at least one dollar in it. Please write to Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C., for as many bags as you can get filled.

Dr. Joy Harris-Glascock,
Mrs. H. A. Garrett,
Velna McCulloch,
Finance Committee.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

67. How does Hanun reveal his unfitness to be king?

Answer.—By dishonoring David's messengers (2Sam. 10:4).

Mrs. R. R. Ross.

75. David's consciousness of sin made him believe that God moved the man to curse him.

76. 2 Sam. 17. I understand that Absalom's reason for taking Hushai's counsel instead of Ahithophel's was, they thought that the Lord had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel; they had fear that the Lord would bring evil upon Absalom.

Clyde Auman.

77. Unaided by commentaries, the only solution we can suggest is that as "the battle was scattered over the face of all the country" and the wood(forest)concealed a great number of them from the enemy, hence, the expression, "The wood devoured more people that day than the sword devoured." Mrs. B. F. N.

Lesson for Next Week.

2 Samuel, chapters 23, 24.

Questions.

78. Why did Joab slay Amasa?

79. Why was the famine sent in tee days of David? Do you believe there is any connection now between the rainfall and the moral life of man?

80. Why did Joab protest against numbering Israel?

81. What was the sin in numbering [illegible]?

Question 78 is assigned to Mrs. G. S. Kernodle, 79 to Mrs. Lucy F. Watkins, 80 to J. A. Turner, 81 to Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk.

MURPHY'S LEGS WERE GUILTY.

Because of his unruly legs, Frank Murphy, 27 years old, was convicted of burglary in the third degree yesterday for attempting to rob the saloon of Michael La Brocker, at 181 Vernon Ave., Long Island City, on the morning of March 30th last, by a jury before Judge Humphrey in the Queens County Court, Long Island City.

The case hinged on the question whether Murphy's legs were coming or going when Policeman Thomas F. Powers of the Hunters Point Station, first saw them at three o'clock in the morning. Powers testified that he heard a noise of crashing glass, and when he arrived in front of the saloon a pair of legs were going in through the transom. He caught hold of them and pulled them out, and found that they were attached to Murphy.

In his defense Murphy testified that Policeman Powers was mistaken. Instead of going in, he said, his legs were coming out. He explained this by saying that he had fallen asleep in the saloon unnoticed by the proprietor, who had locked up the place for the night. He then endeavored to get out by way of the transom.

"But the officer testifies," said Assistant District Attorney Collins, "that your legs were not coming; they were going."

"Sure an' they're me own legs an' I ought to know if they were going or coming," answered Murphy.

It took the jury about five minutes to decide that Murphy's legs were "going"—into the saloon.

"It's an unlucky pair of legs I have, to be gettin' me in all this trouble," ejaculated Murphy on hearing the verdict.

When the sinners goings are in the ways of sin, we are sure which way he is going. Some professors say they are walking in the ways of truth, when they are walking in the ways of error and evil. If our ways belie our words, our words are useless to our ways. As long as the prodigal's legs were carrying him away from home, he was not going home to his father.—The Christian and Missionary Alliance.

WHAT IF SHE WERE YOUR HELENA?

There came to our door one morning a young immigrant girl who looked thirteen years of age. She said she was fifteen, and that her name was Helena. She was straight as an arrow, her eyes as bright and restful as if she had lived her young life in the country, where impressions come single and definite. Her color was fresh, and her gaze direct and frank. She was altogether a charming picture as she stood in our doorway, talking Polish to the interpreter.

She was telling how she had left her family, and had come with another family to a relative in the stockyards district.

Through the interpreter I inquired: "Why did you leave home—your father and mother, your sisters and brothers—to come so far to this new country?"

Without a moment's hesitation, and with a touch of impatience at my stupidity, she responded to my "Why did you come?" with "Why, to work in the factory!"

She came as thousands are coming. The word has gone back to the Carpathian mountains, to Lithuania and Galicia: "Come over! Girls can get jobs when men cannot."

The Immigrant Protective League in Chicago has reported to it the girls and young women coming from seaport landings to Chicago. Representatives then visit the addresses given, to find out whether these girls are safe, or are in need of work or friends.

Of the 4,762 reported last year, 1,203 could not be found. Allowing for mistakes in addresses, there were over 1,000 girls astray in a great city, among a people whose language they did not know.

The most serious phase of this girl immigration is that many of the arrivals find lodging in small quarters where overcrowding and indiscriminate living is the rule. Unmarried men, and men whose families are awiting to be sent for when the husband saves enough money, are sleeping in the same four room flats. It is the helpless, and often innocent and ignorant, primitive girl who suffers from this abnormal condition.

Almost all of these girls owe for their passage over. After that debt is paid, saving begins in order that another member of the family may be brought over.

Helena, the young girl who came to "work in the factory," has found her way into the packing house in spite of all our efforts to place her in a family. She was untrained, could not speak or understand English, and no mistress could be found who wanted patiently to train and school this charming girl. And no mistress could be found who would pay what Helena could earn at once in the stockyards, where neither skill nor language is needed, but where charm is a dangerous asset indeed for a girl of fifteen.

Another young girl, when asked why her parents allowed her to come so far alone, answered with truly feminine resignation: "Why, I had to; there were too many of us, and not enough work."

There is something splendid in the courage, the simple, primitive, almost unconscious giving of themselves for the fundamental needs of the family—food, shelter, clothes. These are the pressing needs that urge these girls to make their venture into this new world.

The first job is secured by the girl while the kerchief is still tied over her head. She goes into the trimming room, which is often 38 degrees Fahrenheit, and here she cuts ice-cold fat from lean and earns from $3.50 to $5 a week. If she lives through the first few years and does not marry, she will discard the picturesque kerchief and don the ugly American hat. This means that the tradition of generations has been cast aside and democracy begins germinating in that peasant mind beneath its ugly and crude symbol—the American hat. The beautiful old country weavings and embroideries are hidden away and the cheap, gaudy and tawdry things found in the department store take their place.

Instead of the wholesome old country food, easily prepared store stuff is hurriedly eaten, because the new life is one of haste and pressure. It is invariably the woman who suffers most from this process of adjustment to a new condition.

What can we do about it? We can first of all understand the immigration problem from the side of old country needs and new country demands. We can insist on protection of the unprotected girl. We can, by legislation, improve working conditions and help to keep the American standard of life that the trades unions are constantly struggling to maintain.

We can try to do to the immigrant what we should like the immigrant to do to us.

What if Helena were of ourselves?—Mary E. McDowell, in The Continent.

The founder of Christianity urged his people to pray for a particular object. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Oh, is it not strange that the only special subject of prayer that he named, as far as I can recollect, at least, is so seldom heard in our pulpit?—J. A. Broadus.

PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Asheville, Aug. 6.
Buncombe, Aug. 8-13.
Ivy, Aug. 15-17.
Yarboro and Anderson, Aug. 19-22.

When it can be done I shall be glad for pastors to have a circuit rally and have all the churches on the charge largely represented.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

From personal observation and reports it is evident that there is unusual interest being taken in church work in the N. C. District. These notes have failed to appear for two reasons: first, the rush of work has been so strong, and second, there were some things I was very anxious to be able to say that the delay was greatly prolonged. All the charges recently visited show signs of growth and increased benevolence. Perhaps to Graham and Haw River belongs the palm. On July the last cent of every Conference claim was paid. It was my privilege to be with Rev. Geo. L. Curry and his people at Haw River and Graham July 30. Everybody is pleased with the pastor and his good wife, and the pastor is pleased with his people and working hard. Such intelligent service as he renders almost always bears fruit, but immediate results are not always visible. It must be very encouraging to brother Curry to see the pleasure of the Lord prospering in his hands.

Rev. H. W. Braswell on the Caroleen work is forging ahead. He has built two new churches this year in towns where we had but few members, and, as I understand it, no organization in either town before he began this year's work. The two churches built have cost something over $2400, and yet they are pushing on. Over one hundred members have been taken in on the work this year. Winston has been doing some of its best work, and from almost every field encouraging reports are coming in.

Most of the pastors are now in the midst of their revival meetings. From many points come reports of precious seasons of grace. The great end for which the church was instituted is becoming more and more evident to men, and the salvation of a lost race is becoming the chief end of the pastor. Polemic wars are almost a thing of the past, and the church in doing some good honest work in saving men. Let the good work go on, till all shall fall in line for the uplift of the people. W. E. Swain.

Harmony.

Our special meeting commenced the fourth Sunday and closed the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. D. Williams came and stayed a week with us. He did all of the preaching during that time except one sermon, when he was unable to preach. Bro. Williams did some splendid preaching, and I am sure I voice the sentiment of the church and community when I say his sermons and his presence in our homes has been a great blessing to us. We trust it will be our privilege to hear him preach again before a great while. Bro. Lamar preached three of his best sermons during the meeting, and did a great deal of earnest personal work. There were several conversions and reclamations, I do not know the exact number. Perhaps the visible results of this meeting were not what some expected, but we are expecting to see the fruits of this meeting for years to come. Much of it may not be revealed to us until the great judgment day.

The third quarterly conference convened at this church in fifth Sunday at 4 o'clock P. M. The usual business was transacted. Yarbrough's Chapel was represented by Messrs. Charley and Lewis Yarbrough, and Mr. Eugene Knox and wife. We were glad to have them with us. N. M. B.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Circuit.

On Thursday afternoon, August 3d, closed a glorious revival here. The success was great, all benefited. The results were about fifteen conversions and reclamations. Five joined the church, others to join.

We were glad to have with us one of our former Sunday school teachers, Mr. C. G. Stokes. He reminded us of a beautiful thought, that was, he said this made the eighth meeting that he had attended here and there were some converted this time that had been plead with the eight years; it was a beautiful thought.

Great it would be if all Sunday school teachers were like the teacher of Class No. 3, Miss Mary Finch. This class made an exceptionally good record anyway and in the beginning of the meeting there were in this class four young ladies that were unsaved. Miss Mary determined to convert these. She succeeded in getting three of the four. Wasn't this encouraging?

Others did great work. Rev. and Mrs. Bethea have gone to Northfield, Mass., to attend General Conference of Christian Workers. We are wishing for them a pleasurable and advantageous trip. The next visit to us by Bro. Bethea is to be second Sunday in September.

Our last Sunday-school report was as follows: total enrollment, 93; total present, 51; total collections, 44; one new scholar and three visitors. Not asleep, are we?

The writer visited the Gillburg S. S. picnic Friday last, and had an enjoyable time.

At this time two of our members are seriously ill: Mrs. Arthur Harpe and Mrs. Thomas Coghill. The latter has been confined to the bed of affliction since April.

Polk Garrett.

August 7, 1911.

HAWKINS' CHAPEL, LITTLETON CT.

Bro. Taylor filled his regular appointment here the second Sunday in July. We have gotten some new song books since my last report. Had an ice cream supper at Hawkins' Chapel the 28th of July for the benefit of the church. Made up about twelve dollars. We hope to have the altar railing before the meeting.

We will have children's day next Sunday if nothing prevents. Hope to have a good success. Our special meeting will begin in the afternoon. We are hoping to have a good meting. We ask the prayers of all Christian people. We don't know whether Bro. Taylor will have any pulpit help or not. Some of the people say that Bro. Taylor doesn't need any help. He is so full of the Master's work.

The young men have their prayer meeting very Wednesday night.

Vannah Shearin, Reporter.

August 7, 1911.

St. Paul's.

Dear Bro. Swain:—

The third quarterly meeting convened Saturday night of the 15th of July, and the usual business was gone through with. The reports from the different officers of the church were fair. Stewards' report meager. A committee was appointed to count and see who was elected to represent this church in the Annual Conference at Henderson, and Bro. Weldon Misenhimer was declared elected, Bro. John Honeycut as alternate.

I think upon the whole St. Paul's is slowly looking up. We have a right lively Sunday school, an average of about 60. Congregation somewhat improved. Would be very glad to have you call around when you have a leisure time. Pray for us that we may continue to grow.

E. A. Plyler.

Haw River Circuit.

We held our third quarterly conference at Mizpah on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in July. Bro. Swain was there and preached at 11 P. M. After a good dinner, which, to say the least, was enjoyed by all, we held the quarterly conference. Every church represented. Rev. Geo. S. Kernodle was declared elected delegate to the next Annual Conference, and Bro. J. M. Jones alternate. It was a pleasant, we hope, profitable meeting. On Sunday our special meeting began at Midway. Bro. Swain preached in the morning and then at Bethany in the evening. I remained at Midway. On Monday Bro. Swain came back and preached twice, and Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk came Monday and preached once and Tuesday once, and was taking a cold at noon. He went to the hospitable home of Bro. and Sister R. A. Hopkins at noon Tuesday. He left for home Wednesday, some better, but he thought not well enough to preach. Bro. S. W. Taylor and wife were up on a visit, and Bro. Taylor came to our help and preached four times. We had good preaching, good attention, and a revival in the church; several things righted, five conversions, one to join. I think some of the others will join. We made several tests, and while we had good congregations, we found but few who were not members of some church. Our congregations on this work are much mixed-up with other denominations. We can not tell any difference till we open the doors of the church. There have been several new churches built in our borders since I left the work 12 years ago. We were at Bethany on last Sunday, and owing to change here from the fourth to the 5th to accommodate Midway, who has the morning appointment on the fourth Sundays, Bro. Suits, our engaged help, could not come. We were so sorry, but Bro. Geo. S. Kernodle was with us until Tuesday and preached three times. Bro. Arch. Shelton, who professed and joined at Midway last year, and who has gone right into the work, was with us, and made two talks, sang, prayed, and did what he could. I did the rest. These two meetings moved along very much alike. On Wednesday they warmed up, and the revival began. Here we had nine converts and four joined the church. I think I can safely say these churches are now in the best condition they have been since I came on the work. I exhorted and begged them to go forward and not slip a single step backward. If we all would only hold our own and move onward and upward. These brethren that helped us all have our heartfelt thinks, and our prayers shall ascend in their behalf.

Bro. Swain preached at Fair Grove on Tuesday at 11 P. M., and Brown Summit at night. We go to Mizpah and begin our special meeting there. We are expecting Bro. Davis, of High Point. On the second Sunday, at Friendship, Bro. Millaway to help. The third Sunday Fair Grove, Bro. Ledbetter to help. Some people do not know the strain and hard work there is on the pastor, and especially taking a course right through the middle of summer. Now I want to say we had to close both of our meetings right when we ought to have gone on. I can not hold longer than Thursday, for I am not able to do it. I am bound to have a day or two for rest and preparation. I preached three times at Midway, seven at Bethany. While we had three other preachers at Midway, there were three services I was alone as to ministers. I want to ask this circuit, let your pastor be who he may next year, have a week between. I insisted on it this year, and now I think in the midst of our meetings is a good time to impress the necessity.

C. E. M. Raper.

Reidsville, N. C., August 4, 1911.

Ivy Circuit.

Rev. D. R. Williams, on his last round to Pensacola, had the pleasure of taking his family around through Madison Co. to Laurel, where they visited a Baptist minister, Rev. L. A. Hensley, and after preaching for the people of that vicinity a few times, decided to go up on the Bald Mountain. After a considerable climb the reached the summit, but at first the view was not very for good, for the fog covered the valleys as a veil with silvery mists, but the golden sun shining out with such power and brightness soon caused the fog to take refuge in the canopy of the sky lifting the veil and revealing sleeping nature in all her matchless proportions of symmetry and beauty.

After looking for some time the party could say as the Psalmist, "Day unto day uttereth speech," for the firmament had shown forth his handiwork.

Also a large party of our friends from Democrat and Pleasant Gap on their way to the quarterly conference at our place, started on Friday so as to be able to spend the night on Ogle Meadows, where they had an excellent view also.

The business of our third quarterly conference was transacted. Dr. McLean was elected delegate to Conference. Bro. Williams expects to start his revival work next Sunday. We sincerely hope that great success may crown his efforts.

Reginold R. Ray.

Lebanon.

Dear Herald: The fifth Sunday was a good day for the children of Lebanon. It was Children's Day. There was a large number of bright-eyed boys and girls who recited their pieces to the delight of a large congregation that had assembled to hear them. Some of the smallest children had a part. They all did well.

We were expecting to have Dr. Zollicoffer, of Weldon, to make an address, but for some reason he could not be present. Bro. W. N. Allen made a splendid talk on foreign missions. The exercise was grand, but what spoiled it? Why, it was that poor, miserable little collection of $3.81. The exercise would have been a credit to any community, and should have merited a freewill offering of ten dollars to say the least.

Sorry to say our pastor could not be with us. In the afternoon Bros. W. H. Allen and G. F. Robinson made interesting talks on the subject of Sunday schools.

Our special meeting begins here the fourth Sunday in September. We plead for the prayers and co-operation of all, that God may make this meeting a great spiritual uplift to the community.

Yours in His name,

M. Goal Jordan.

Garyburg, N. C., Aug. 7, 1911.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Second Sunday in July we had two soul-stirring sermons by Bro. Lowdermilk. It seems that he gets better all the time. Fourth Sunday we had a splendid temperance meeting; we had Rev. J. R. Miller of High Point with us, who gave us a fine lecture on Temperance. On Saturday night before the fifth Sunday, we had an ice cream supper for the purpose of getting some books. Bro. Lowdermilk and family were present to enjoy the occasion. The writer not present, but reports a very enjoyable time. The proceeds were about six dollars net.

First Sunday in August was the best of all occasions. It was children's day. Flowers being scarce, we were not able to decorate much, but the children seemed to enjoy themselves finely. They rendered their pieces so well that it was a real pleasure to hear them. The congregation was not as large as usual. Miss May Roella Pegg and Cammie Davis did credit to themselves in training the children and helping to make the children's day a grand success. We had the pleasure of having Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of High Point, with us, which added materially to the success of the exercise. Sister Dixon made a splendid talk at the close of the program on why we should give to foreign missions. Her talk was short, but to the point, which resulted in a collection of nearly $6.00. After an hour's intermission we reassembled to hear one of Sister Dixon's most helpful and up-to-date lectures on her experience as a missionary in Japan. As a general thing it is very difficult to interest a congregation in the afternoon after a morning service. I never saw a more attentive congregation than she had as she spoke of the awful condition of these people that are in darkness, and how they are struggling for the gospel light, and after they had received the light, the difference it made in their lives. It seemed to hold the people spell bound. At the close of the evening service the second collection was taken, amount received $1.75, making a total of $7.53. Mrs. Dixon is doing a noble work.

Our special meeting begins next Sunday. Dear readers, pray for the success of our meeting.

J. H. Gordon.

Mocksville Circuit.

Children's Day services were held at Elbaville third Sunday in July. Collection $3.12. And at Bethel 4th Sunday. Collection $3.85. The children did well at both churches, reflecting credit upon those who trained them. Nothing wrong with anything but the collections, which were too small.

My special meeting began at Dulins the 5th Sunday in July and continued until Thursday night following, with Rev. S. W. Taylor as my pulpit help, resulting in seven professions and two to join, with two or three others to join later. Bro. Taylor did excellent preaching, and labored faithfully in congregation. The church was somewhat revived, but not what we desired. Bro. Wellman, a young M. E. preacher, preached twice very acceptably. This church, we think, will soon be painted.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Haw River Circuit.

We had a large congregation at Mizpah yesterday. Bro. Davis was with us and preached two good sermons. We had a visit from Bro. Sam Walker and wife, of Bethany. It was a pleasant visit, and they left us a sack of flour. Bro. Thomas Humphreys and wife gave us a sack of snap beans and seven pounds of nice sourwood honey. It was made in the patent gums. He is in the bee culture. It is almost as clear as glass and nice. Thanks. It was so good and kind of you all.

C. E. M. Raper.

Aug. 7.

Union Chapel.

The ladies at Union Chapel met at the parsonage Saturday evening, August 5, and organized a Ladies' Aid Society. We also talked and planned for an ice cream supper Saturday evening, August 19th.

The ladies here think that what has proved a success elsewhere surely will here, and are going to try and see.

We want to furnish the parsonage with heavy furniture, such as will be too heavy and expensive to move. Sometimes I think we are too thoughtless about the comforts of our preacher and family, and expect too much from him for such a small salary in return. If they were not good economizers there would not be a living in it for them, only an existence.

Girls, we need your help in this work. Don't think you can't do anything. Come to our meetings and show an interest in this noble work. Don't stay away and depend on mother to do your part.

Our Sunday school at Union seems to have taken on new life from the attendance last Sunday. It surely was encouraging to see so many bright children and young people in our Sunday school. We are hoping and praying that the interest may be greater, and that some of these older people may be awakened to a sense of their duty, and come out from under the shade trees at home and get to work in the church and Sunday school.

Our pastor and wife are away on a much-needed vacation. We hope he will be as faithful in his rest as he is in his work. If so, I am sure he will be quite rested when he returns. But he never goes at things in a half-hearted way.

We have been enjoying a season of spiritual blessings. The meetings at all of the churches on this charge were good beyond expression. It was great to see the old servants of sin brought into the Master's fold, and the little children, with their face beaming with light and love for the dear Savior, get up and testify to his goodness and love for them. We do feel thankful to Bros. Moton and Gerringer for preaching the truth to us in such a plain, practical manner. Bro. Bethea had no pulpit help at Mt. Carmel, but nevertheless he was equal to the work and the results were great. May we as a people be ever faithful and ready to stand by our pastor.

A Methodist Protestant Girl.

Ivy Circuit.

Our third quarterly conference was held at Pensacola church Saturday before the fourth Sunday with small attendance of official members. Dr. I. N. McLean was elected delegate to Annual Conference, Sam Angel alternate.

D. R. Williams.

Asheville.

President Swain was with us last Sunday and gave us two quite helpful sermons. We were glad to have Capt. W. J. Ellis and wife from Winston-Salem; Brother Mack Efland and wife from Efland; Master John Swain, son of President Swain; also Miss Hawley, of Rockford, Ill. Mrs. Eckert and daughter have returned from a visit to Michigan.

Brother and Mrs. J. L. Carpenter, of Fairmont, West Va., were received by letter.

There were 108 in main school, 21 at Woodfin Hill, 20 at Woolsey Hall. A fine check for ten dollars came last week from Bethesda church, Halifax circuit; also from Bro. J. W. Doub on Forsyth Circuit.

J. S. W.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.

The meeting at Cid closed Thursday night. There were nine conversions and three accessions to the church. The church was greatly revived. I was real sorry it had to close so early, as it seemed that the people were becoming aroused. There were right large congregations attended. Everybody loved to hear Bro. Trogdon and Bro. Hatley. Bro. Hulin and wife, of Denton, were with us one night, and the people like to hear him. There were some of the most impressive sermons delivered at Cid during the meeting that ever fell from a minister's lips, and we certainly did enjoy their company in our homes, and they did not fail to tell the people how well they enjoyed their hospitality.

There were many good prayers sent up for the sinners, and I do truly hope they will find lodgment with some poor, hard-hearted sinner and cause him to turn and seek salvation. There was some faithful work done at Cid. Bro. Trogdon began a revival at Mount Zion yesterday; hope he will have a good meeting up there.

Bro. Carl Wright had the misfortune to cut his leg last Thursday. We are very sorry. But the wound seems to be getting along very well at present.

There will be prayer meeting at Cid next Sunday at 3 P. M. Mr. J. Riley Beck lost a good horse last Friday. We have had good showers of rain recently.

The special meeting will begin at Jerusalem the first Sunday in September instead of the second Sunday in August; also at Canaan the third Sunday in Aug. Bro. Hulin will be the pulpit help at Jerusalem.

Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.

Our Sunday school was unusually small last Sunday. Was it because we knew our pastor would not be with us? Some of us should take more interest in these things. Our faithful superintendent, Richard Harris, is a young man. Now, it would be but like young men to want to go other ways some times, but he does not. And our organist, Miss Hattie, very seldom runs away from her post of duty. Should not we older ones make some sacrifice too?

In the absence of our pastor, who is away for a much-deserved vacation of three weeks, Mr. T. T. Hicks, of Henderson, conducted the 11 o'clock service. The subject of his remarks was The Deity, our God; His attributes and actions; His influence upon our minds and hearts. The songs and prayers, and indeed the whole service, inclined our thoughts toward our Heavenly Father and His goodness to us. His children. Of course we missed Bro. Bethea. There seemed to be a great lack throughout the service. We hope he will enjoy his vacation to the fullest, and that he may come back much strengthened and renewed in every way.

Our Aid Society will meet at Miss Nannie Cheatham's next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Main object of this meeting is to get in shape a quilt which the members and other kind ladies have pieced.

Sunday school next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Right after S. S. we hold our monthly prayer meeting. George Davis will open the meeting.

Mrs. J. W. Davis.

THE POSTAL CARD.
W. F. Kennett, Editor.

The third quarterly conference, Flat Rock Circuit, is to be held in Palestine Church on Saturday before the third Sunday in this month, August 19. A full attendance of the officials is desired—class leaders, stewards, S. S. Superintendents, and trustees. If you stay away you will discourage the pastor and the faithful few who do go. If you go, carry up the best report you can. All will be encouraged. What are you going to do about it?

W. F. Kennett, Pastor.

Stokesdale, N. C., August 7, 1911.

Granville.

One of the greatest meetings of recent years for Mt. Carmel church closed last Thursday. That is what the people there tell me. There was great interest from the beginning, and on Monday there was old-time rejoicing. It was such a pleasure to have one of our former members and friends of the church, Bro. Horace Finch, of Rock Hill, S. C., to be with us. His earnest appeal on Monday before leaving us to his relatives and neighbors to meet him in heaven brought tears to every eye.

There was not much material in point of numbers, but some of the hardest to win for Jesus. Some were brought in that had been worked after for years, while some others of the same class stayed out of church, and some at home to get out from under the influence of the personal workers. On Wednesday of the meeting the house and yard was full, and the efforts of the faithful were not confined to the church, but a great many hunted up their friends outside. There were twelve or fifteen conversions and six joined the church, and we are expecting others to join second Sunday in September. Truly Granville Circuit is upon higher ground. They are undertaking more than ever before, and God bless those that try. I think at the present rate of interest the parsonage will be thoroughly furnished in two years. Then they are paying as much to the pastor as when Gillburg was on the charge. This should be an encouragement to them to raise another hundred dollars on salary for next year. "There now," some stingy brother will say, "he's spoiled it all." No, no, brother, that is the reason your great blessing came, because somebody was willing to undertake more. "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

I want to thank all the brethren of all the churches for their hearty co-operation in this work. There was company at each meeting, but they made themselves useful in almost every case by working, praying and singing. Such work as this draws the churches closer together, and I am hoping that this good fellowship may continue to increase. It was not confined to the charge, but some of the Henderson and Vance members came and worked with us for the upbuilding of the Kingdom. We appreciate their efforts, as well as those of other denominations who came in and made themselves at home. Such singing all around as I have never heard outside of some great convention gatherings. We used the same book all around and the people sang with delight.

I am now on my vacation, and hope to give you some interesting jots on my journey. Mrs. Bethea and I have just begun to look over historic Boston. Will leave for Northfield tomorrow. More later.

Bro. T. T. Hicks preached for me at Rehoboth yesterday, and Bro. S. R. Harris will do his best for me at Mt. Carmel next Sunday. I thank these brethren for their kindness.

Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Hotel Hollis, 247 Tremont St., Boston, Mass., Aug. 7, 1911.

Halifax Circuit.

Children's Day service was held at Eden church yesterday. A large congregation was present. In fact, there were enough present for two good sized congregations. The most of the service as prepared by Dr. Klein was well rendered. Credit is due Miss Blanche Hardee for training the children, and Miss Lossie Hardee and Bro. James Hardee for the music. We appreciated the presence of Misses Clara and Cassie Finch, of Henderson, and Miss Anna Belle Dickens, of Halifax. All three rendered valuable service in our choir; the Misses Finch singing, to the pleasure of all present, a duet, while Miss Dickens' strong soprano voice added much to our music. I heard a number remark that the service was the best they had ever seen at Eden. The only thing I didn't like about the service was the small collection—only $12.00.

Our special meeting began in the afternoon. We decided not to let the devil have the Sunday service, as sometimes seems the case. So we were made glad when five young ladies gave their lives to the Savior. Thank God for these precious souls. We are praying that we may have a good revival. One brother said we had made the best beginning that he had seen at Eden in ten years. God be praised! And may his saving power continue to be manifested.

The amount of the collection at the children's day service previously reported at Bethesda was $15.00.

Prayers and good wishes to all the brethren engaged in revival work.

Linley W. Gerringer.

Aug. 6, 1911.

Giles, Richland Circuit.

By this time I suppose all the readers of the Herald that enjoy reading reports from all over the field think I am dead or gone off somewhere. I am glad that I am now in my 81st year. Like the birds that survive the winter, though feeble in health, able to report one time more how we get on at this circuit and at Giles, too. All seem to take the Word of God at par, and think the great, extensive dry spell a judgment sent on us as a great nation for not doing what God says do as a God-loving and God-serving nation of 90,000,000.

Our school is smaller in the part of the year that special meetings are being held all over the field. Well, 1845 was a very dry year, and the people that fall at the meetings had great revivals, almost all got happy, although scarcely any corn was made throughout the nation. But we survived, came uot.

Our pastor, Bro. L. H. Hatley, is doing a great work on the Circuit, and takes well with both saint and sinner; for all have sinned, like the old Prophet. But we think here at Giles, as Ex-Pres. Martyr said, "It is God's way" of humbling the masses to send on us in N. C., also the middle west, the granary of the Union, a drouth, extensive, terrible in the extreme, so that cattle men and sheep men are found with no grass to feed their vast herds of 5,000 head of cattle, and also 10,000 of sheep. We read that Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed on account of wickedness, and God sees now in 1911 the wickedness of this great union of States, and it is high places; no doubt of it. We have no Paul now to stay the Omnipotent hand, as Paul did; said to the waves, Be still.

But the famine was sore in Egypt in the days of Joseph, so thousands upon thousands of fields of corn will not make anything in 1911. So it was in 1845; also in 1870, 1879, 1881; but not so extensive then; water famine too with us in 1911; grass famine. Hay goes up in 30 days from $22 a ton to $33 a ton. We eat Irish potatoes in the United States three times a day.

God set the sun, moon and stars out in the immensity of space, so if the Editor has not space in The Herald he must boil down to suit. Dr. Ben Franklin set up in print the Lord's prayer in the space of an old English six-pence when he applied for work in Philadelphia to become a printer. This old veteran of 1861 to 1865 can't put up a report of much note without space, and some of the pieces in The Herald are much in line with mine—long. It was a long time, 40 years, for the Children to wander in the wilderness after crossing the Red Sea. But millions on millions are still wandering in sin, in 1911, with the light of the Word handed down each Sabbath by able and efficient pastors 52 times a year, and thousands of special meetings thrown in for good measure.

We are told to pray without ceasing. And Christ said the pure in heart should see God. So it is not so much that people do not know, but that they don't want to yield to God's promises and turn and live. They know better, but won't yield.

I close with best wishes to all readers of The Herald and also to the Editor.

Wm. M. Stephenson, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Circuit.

On July 27 the greatest meeting we have had in years closed. Bro. Moton was pulpit help, and indeed faithfully discharged his duties. The church was greatly revived. There were about 70 conversions and reclamations, twenty-nine of which have joined our church, with others to follow. Personal work was done by many who were never known to do this before. Bro. Moton certainly won our hearts, and a warm welcome will be always waiting for him in the many homes around Union Chapel. We hope he will come among us again soon. We thank God for the many blessings he has bestowed on us in our meeting.

A Ladies' Aid Society was organized Saturday with the following officers: Mrs. O. L. Stewart, President; Mrs. J. C. Stone vice president, Miss Mabel Gill secretary, and Miss Irene Watkins treasurer. The Ladies' Aid will give an ice cream supper at Bearpond School House on the night of the 19th of this month, the proceeds to go to furniture for the parsonage. Everybody is invited to this!

Our S. S. is still improving. New pupils every Sunday, and we are glad to say that the older people are beginning to come more now. Reporter.

New Hope, Vance Circuit.

Our meeting began at New Hope the fifth Sunday in July and closed Thursday, August 3. We had a glorious revival. There were twelve conversions. Seven or eight gave their names for membership. They will be received into the church the next first Sunday. Bro. Stubbins did all the preaching himself; he certainly worked faithfully and gave us soul-stirring sermons. Bro. Stubbins filled his regular appointment Sunday. He also preached a fine sermon. We thank God for the many blessings which he has bestowed upon us, especially in the meeting. We expected Mr. Pender, a noted singer from Mebane, to be with us during the meeting, but something prevented his coming. Am glad to say that our S. S. is still moving along nicely. We were very glad to have Mrs. Stubbins and little daughter with us during the meeting.

I am glad to report that my uncle's little boy, who has been sick, is improving. We were glad to have Misses Mamie and Belle Capps, of Aberdeen, attend our meeting. May God's richest blessings be upon The Herald and its many readers.

Ethel S. Paschall, Rep.

Yadkin College Circuit.

A good day on Wednesday after third Sunday in July. I spent the day at Bro. Henry Brinkley's and baptized four babies.

I have just closed a good meeting at Friendship; six conversions and seven joined the church. Rev. W. D. Fogleman was my help, and did all the preaching, and did it to the satisfaction and edification of all. Thanks for his efficient help.

Quarterly conference convened and business transacted in love. It was found that Bro. J. A. Hartley was elected delegate and C. B. Yates alternate.

A good children's day service held at Yadkin College on 5th Sunday night. Collection good. Thanks for good training of children.

I am this week with Bro. J. H. Bowman at Zion, Chatham Circuit. A good meeting in progress. One conversion on Sunday, and a revival in the church. Good interest today. Bro. Bowman was taken violently ill last night. Doctor has been to see him twice today. His wife sent for and is with him. Brethren, will all join in prayer for his recovery.

H. L. Powell.

PLEASANT HILL, FORSYTH CT.

Dear Herald:—

Our Sunday school is improving somewhat and I hope it will continue.

Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, closed his special meeting at Harmony Grove a few days ago, with good success, we are glad to hear.

Bro. and Miss Mary Lloyd, of Hillsboro, N. C., are visiting Bro. T. A. Williams this week.

The Pleasant Hill people have painted their church, which adds very much to its beauty.

The old Richmond Township Sunday school Convention was held last Saturday, Aug. 5, 1911, at Elm Grove M. E. Church, with a large attendance. Schools represented were Elm Grove, Pleasant Hill, New Bethel, Mt. Pleasant, and Mizpah Chapel. Schools not represented were Tabernacle and Macedonia. The officers elected for the next convention were as follows: Mr. J. D. Anderson, of Pleasant Hill, president; Mr. Clayton Hauser, of Mt. Pleasant, vice president; Mr. S. G. Doub, of Elm Grove, secretary. The next convention will be held at Pleasant Hill on Saturday before the first Sunday in next August, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Shore, from near Rural Hall, worshipped with us in Sunday school last Sunday.

Mrs. M. L. Sprinkle, our main organist, was with us last Sunday for the first time in a good while. We were glad to see her back with us again.

Superintendent.

MAPLE SPRINGS, WINSTON CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting began the fifth Sunday and closed on Wednesday night. Bro. Millaway helped our pastor. We certainly had some soul-stirring sermons from both; we always like to hear them preach, but it seems that they did better than usual. We feel that our meeting ought to have continued all the week, as we had the largest congregation the last night that we had at all, and our meeting seemed to grow in interest each service that we had. We had three conversions and three joined the church.

We are sorry that our pastor cannot preach for us any more. He only came to preach for us during vacation, and now he has to stop to do some preparatory work before school opens, and so he cannot be with us at his next appointment.

Our third quarterly conference was held at this place last Saturday at 2 P. M. Mr. Patterson was elected delegate to our next Annual Conference, Mr. L. C. Hine alternate. Our Sunday school is the best we have had in several years; organized classes have certainly helped our school wonderfully. Our Young People's Bible Class reorganized the first Sunday in July, when the following officers were elected: Miss Myrtie Kiger, president; Mr. Ira Baity, vice president; Mr. Ira Hine, teacher; Miss Ida Long, assistant teacher; Miss Lucile Hemming, secretary; Miss Beulah Hine, treasurer.

Our Sunday school picnics with Oldtown Tuesday, Aug. 15. We are expecting a nice time.

I. M. L.

ORPHAN'S HOME.

August 22nd, First Anniversary. Tract of Land in Denton Given for Home. Progress of Work.

On the 22nd of August the Orphan's Home will celebrate its first anniversary. A great many of the people throughout the State have helped in various ways, some have not, perhaps thinking it is only a temporary establishment. It may be of interest to some to know that during the year seventeen bright boys and girls have come into the Home. They have not suffered for want of care, food or clothing. There is no way by which calculation may be made as to the good these young people will do. Are we as a Home Missionary Society and as a Methodist Protestant Church generally willing to push the work forward?

Some time ago the Denton people took option on several pieces of land, offering a site for the Orphan's Home. A committee was appointed with power to act. This committee accepted 30 acres of land adjoining the school property in Denton. The next thing to do is to build quarters for the children. Is there not some one in North Carolina who wants to contribute money on the first birthday of the Home, for a building in which the family may be more comfortable? Think about and pray over it. It will bring joy to you. There are men in the Methodist Protestant Church who can if they will. This is the time; the work is in its infancy, but it will prosper: it has in other denominations and it will with ours. A prominent Baptist recently told me he attributed the growth of their church to the founding of the orphanage at Thomasville; he also said that there had never been any trouble about getting money for buildings, food or clothing, it just came; if it comes to others will it not come to us? Sunday's News and Observer has the following to say:

"Give money to care for orphans if you wish it to pay better than in any other way. The announcement is made that a Presbyterian in the cotton belt has sent one thousand dollars to endow a scholarship in Barium Springs Orphanage.' Go and do likewise for the orphanage of your church, or some other institution."

Several of the Sunday schools in the State are setting aside the collections one Sunday in the month for the Home: this is a great help: may we not all do this? It is a systematic way to contribute to the work. Some of the children are being cared for by Home Mission Societies. It has been the wish of those in charge that individuals, churches or societies assume the support of one child, which is estimated at $50.00 per year, thereby guaranteeing not only financial support, but personal interest. We are not interested unless we do something. As has been stated before, this is the only Methodist Protestant Orphanage in the United States. Our church is more than 80 years old and should certainly be interested in this phase of Christian work. In closing, I feel that something should be said of the faithfulness and energy which both Misses Williams and Auman have shown. The entire year has been full for them and too much credit cannot be given them. Uphold them and the children in your prayers; provide a home for them with your means; they will be benefited and you will get a blessing.

One of the children has had typhoid fever, but under the care of Dr. Austin, the physician, and Miss Virla Coble as nurse, he is almost well. This is really the only thing that has happened that looked serious. A splendid record for the year and we realize that it is through His kindness who loves and cares for us all

Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer,
Pres. N. C. Branch W. H. M. S.
Asheboro, N. C., Aug. 6, 1911.

Roberts.

Mrs. Dahlia Roberts, wife of E. A. Roberts and daughter of R. H. and Theresa Pickens, was born Jan. 11, 1870. She professed religion at the age of 12 and joined Mt. Zion M. P. Church on Buncombe Circuit.

On the 11th of March, 1888, she was married to E. A. Roberts, with whom she lived until her death, Feb. 7, 1911. She lived a consistent Christian life, and will be greatly missed in her church and Sunday school. In her death the community has lost a good neighbor, the husband an affectionate wife, and the children a kind and loving mother. In case of sickness she was usurpassed as to her willingness to help in any way she was able. She was kind to her pastor, and he always found a welcome in her home. But it was not the Master's wish for her to remain longer on earth, but wished her to exchange for a brighter one above. She was confined to her bed a long time, but bore it with great patience. In talking to her friends she often expressed a desire to go and live with her Savior, although she wanted to live for the sake of her mother and family. But it could not be so, and she leaves behind a husband, two children, an aged mother, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss, but their loss is her eternal gain. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. S. Williams of Asheville, after which her body was laid to rest in Mt. Zion cemetery.

Mrs. Doak Roberts.

JESUS OUR REFUGE.

Are you one of those who are so busy with the trifles of this world as to pay no attention to the eternal realities of the next? Listen to the startling question of Jesus. Ponder it. "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Suppose you saw a crowd walking along a meadow, at the end of which was a terrible precipice. They pass on merrily, plucking flowers, till, as they reach the edge, one after another falls over, and is dashed to pieces. Would you not call to them, "Stop, stop! as you value your lives, turn back"?

You are strollong onward to a far more terrible fate. Yawning beneath you is the lake of fire—and do you still go forward? Jesus calls to you, "Turn ye, turn ye; why will ye die?" But you see not the danger. You feel happy, and hope it will be all right with you hereafter. Have you never seen how smooth the stream is just before it dashes down the cataract? Before it is too late shake off this lethargy. Your house is on fire; the roof will soon fall in and crush you. But you sit at ease, amused with trifles, and neglecting every warning. Many cry, "Fire!fire! fly for your life"; but you pay no attention to the alarm. Jesus offers himself as a refuge—Come to Jesus.—Selected.

BOTTLE THE SUNSHINE.

Bottle the sunshine up, my dears,
And lay it safe away;
Hammer the cork in good and tight,
Keep for a rainy day.
For clouds will come and showers will fall,
And earth and sky look sad;
Then fling the cheery rays about,
And make the old world glad.

Bottle the sunshine up, my dears,
Sweet temper lay away;
Carry through life a smiling face,
And let your heart be gay.
There's sorrow plenty in the world,
And strife and bitter pain;
So line the clouds with golden beams,
And sing a glad refrain.

—Lizzie de Armond.

GREAT BECAUSE FIRST GOOD.

A story told of Gerhardt, a German shepherd boy, illustrates the fact that he who is faithful over a few things will become the ruler over many.

One day he was watching his flock, which was feeding in a valley on the border of a forest, when a hunter came out of the woods, and asked: "How far is it to the nearest village?"

"Six miles, sir," answered the boy. But the road is only a sheep track and very easily missed."

The hunter looked at the crooked track, and said: "My lad, I am very hungry and thirsty. I have lost my companion and missed my way. Leave your sheep and show me the road. I will pay you well."

"I cannot leave my sheep, sir," rejoined Gerhardt. "They will stray into the woods and may be eaten by the wolves or stolen by the robbers."

"Well, what of that?" queried the hunter. "They are not your sheep. The loss of one or two wouldn't be much to your master, and I'll give you more than you have earned in a whole year."

"I cannot go, sir," rejoined Gerhardt very firmly. "My master pays me for my time and he trusts me with his sheep. If I were to sell my time, which does not belong to me, and the sheep should get lost, it would be the same as if I had stolen them."

"Well," said the hunter, "will you trust your sheep with me while you go to the village and get me some food, drink, and a guide? I will take care of them for you."

The boy shook his head. "The sheep," said he, "do not know your voice, and"—

"And what? Can't you trust me? Do I look like a dishonest man?" asked the hunter angrily.

"Sir," said the boy, "you tried to make me false to my trust, to make me break my word to my master. How do I know that you would keep your word?"

The hunter laughed, for he felt that the lad had fairly cornered him. He said: "I see, my lad, that you are a good, faithful boy. I will not forget you. Show me the road, and I will try to make it out for myself."

Gerhardt then offered the contents of his scrip to the hungry man, who, coarse as it was, ate it gladly. Presently his attendant came up; and then Gerhardt, to his surprise, found that the hunter was the Grand Duke, who owned all the country around.

The Duke was so pleased with the boy's honesty that he sent for him shortly after that and had him educated. In after years Gerhardt became a great and powerful man, but he remained honest and true to his dying day.—Selected.

THE STORY OF A LEAD PENCIL.

The other day I was talking, in imagination, with some lead pencils that were lying on my desk. Taking one in my fingers, I asked it several questions: "Where did you come from? What are you made of?"

Then the pencil in my hand said: "I have the wood that you see, and the lead that makes the marks, and a rubber at this end, you see."

"O," I said, "that reminds me of our boys and girls. They, too, have an outside and inside. They have body and soul."

The body needs food and exercise. The soul lives in the body, is that which lives and loves.

Then I said to the pencil: "But why are you called a lead pencil? What is your business here?"

"Why, I am here to help doctors and lawyers and preachers and business men and everybody—to help folks write down their thoughts. In other words, to put themselves down in marks."

"O," I said, "that is just why the boys and girls are here. They are here for some good purpose to make good works, good deeds, in beautiful living."

"But how do you do your work?"

"O, some one took me and sharpened me—put a point on me," said the pencil.

"O," I said, "that is just what home training and the school and the Church and the Sabbath school are trying to do for our boys and girls—trying to give them point, ability, to be used so that they can form character, and in life self-restraint and righteousness."

The other pencil, which was lying on the table, spoke to me in this manner: "Am I not just as good as that brown pencil you have been talking to? Of course I have a different shape. I have another color; I am yellow. But may I not be useful also?"

"Yes," I said; "for you have wood, lead, and rubber as well as this brown pencil."

And here, boys and girls, let us learn the missionary lesson. Indians and the people of heathen lands have bodies and souls, though their color and dress may not be like ours.

Then I said to the pencil: "That rubber on the end—why is that there?"

"O," said the pencil, "that is to rub out my errors and mistakes."

And O how many mistakes we make in life! But remember, boys and girls, that there is a Friend who is willing to attach himself to your life, who is able to rub out all your mistakes. His name is Jesus. He is the Savior. We need him all the time, that we may be able to get self-mastery and grow more loving, lovable, and useful. We need him, not only to save us from our bad marks, but to enable us to make better marks every day. —Selected.

EMMA SUE AND THE GOBLIN.

It was eight o'clock, high time for Emma Sue to be in bed; but she was trying to work her arithmetic examples. Not that Emma Sue was fond of arithmetic. O no! She hated it. But she knew that if she failed again in her lesson, she would have to stay in at recess to-morrow.

Every time a sum went wrong (which happened pretty often) the little girl would bang her arithmetic down on the table to punish it for causing her so much trouble. The poor book had suffered so many spiteful blows during its hard existence that it was nearly worn out.

"O dear!" cried Emma Sue at last, while a big tear rolled down on her slate, full of ineffectual figures. "I've tried adding and subtracting and multiplying and dividing, and still it won't come right. I do wish this old arithmetic was burned up!"

Just then the book dropped out of her hand upon the blazing hearth. She tried to catch it, but she was too late. The flames caught the flying leaves. The hated multiplication table shriveled to blackness in an instant, and common fractions went soaring up the chimney. Her wish had come true

"I didn't do it on purpose," she panted, glad and sorry both at once. "Really I couldn't help it."

"Certainly not," said a strange voice behind her. "You were not at all to blame."

She looked around quickly, and there stood a queer little dark man, no taller than a good-sized cat. He was grinning at her in a way that somehow made her afraid.

"Don't be scared, little girl," said the goblin. "I am a good friend of yours. You have a pretty tough time, don't you?"

"O yes, indeed!" she answered, glad to have sympathy. "My lessons are very hard, and my teacher treats me badly, and my schoolmates call me 'Spitfire' because I get angry sometimes."

"So I thought, and I have come to help you. It was I who tossed your troublesome book into the fire. Whenever anything else gets to acting badly, all you have to do is to wish for it to be punished, and I will punish it for you."

"Thank you, sir. But I'm afraid that burning the book won't do much good, after all. Miss Jones, my teacher, won't take for an excuse anything but sickness or very bad weather. I wish it would rain tomorrow so I couldn't go to school at all."

"All right; it shall just pour from daylight until dark."

Emma Sue looked dubious. "I was about to forget. To-morrow is a half holiday, and some of us girls are planning to go down to Mr. Burton's meadow after dinner to gather walnuts. I'd like for it to clear off about noon."

The goblin shook his head regretfully. "You ought to have said that before. When once you have wished anything, you can't unwish it. Besides, fair weather is not in my line. I can't make good wishes come true; it's just the bad ones. I must go now; but whenever you get angry and need my services, I'll come back." Instantly he disappeared, though the door was still shut.

When Emma Sue waked up the next morning, it was raining dismally. The thought of the spoiled half holiday and of the walnuts in Mr. Burton's meadow made her peevish. She came in late to the breakfast table; and when papa teased her, she did not smile.

"I do wish we didn't always have to have muffins and steak for breakfast," she complained fretfully. Then her eyes opened wide, for her well-filled plate was suddenly empty and clean. Glancing around, she caught sight of the goblin grinning from a dark corner of the dining-room. Somehow she didn't have any appetite after that.

She played with her dolls a long time that morning. Though there was no arithmetic to spoil her pleasure, she grew lonesome after a while. So when her little brother Harold came along and wanted to play with her, she did not send him away as usual, but allowed him to hold her ugliest doll, sit in her oldest chair, and admire her pretty things to his heart's content.

But, alas! Harold became too interested in the anatomy of the ugliest doll; and while he was experimenting with one of its arms, an accident happened, and the poor thing began to bleed sawdust profusely.

Emma Sue pounced on her little brother and shook him till his teeth chattered. "O, look what you've done, you bad, bad boy! I wish—I wish you were in Halifax!" She gave a great gasp of amazement. The little chair was empty and Harold was gone!

Now, Emma Sue had wished Harold in Halifax many a time before, but she had never dreamed of the wish coming true. She broke into wild sobbing.

"What are you crying about?" asked a voice at her elbow. "Your little brother is too far away to bother you now."

"O hush, you wicked goblin! I wish you would go away and never come back!"

The goblin smiled a terible smile. "That would be a good wish, so I can't grant it. I fulfill only evil wishes, you remember."

"But I'm never going to wish evil any more. I don't want to be spiteful to anybody, not even to Miss Jones."

"Is that the way you treat me, after all I've done for you? O, you're a cheat, a cheat!" roared the goblin. His face was black with anger, and his eyes were gleaming like balls of fire.

Emma Sue screamed and covered her face with her hands to shut out the sight. When she looked up, the little old man was gone, and her mother stood beside her. "You've been asleep, haven't you, and crying over your lessons?"

The litttle girl rubbed her eyes. There on the table was her slate, covred with figures; and there—there was her battered old arithmtic! The goblin had been only a dream.

"Crying over my lessons?" she answered, smiling through her tears. "O mama, lessons are just nothing to cry about!"—Effie Smith, in Christian Advocate.

GOOD HEALTH IN DEEP BREATHING.

Sickness would indeed probably "become a curiosity," as one enthusiast puts it, if people would only take the trouble to learn how to breath deeply and would perform three times each day. But it appears to be true that anything so simple as this would not appeal to the multitude. It seems so absurd to suppose that mere deep breathing can have any effect on the general health, that there is only now and then a "crank" who will give the system a trial. The doctors would gladly show their patients how to take care of their health before it was all gone, but they know from experience that very few people will take even the easiest precautions in the way of the ounce of prevention and that they prefer to wait and take the pound of cure—and pay for it.

To take the "complete breath," you sit or stand erect, with shoulders will back, and then slowly expel the breath as full as possible from the lungs, puckering up the lips and leaving but a very small opening for the breath to emerge. When the lungs are thoroughly emptied, shut the mouth and draw in a full, deep breath through the nostrils. Begin by filling the lower part of the lungs, as this causes the diaphragm to descend, thus exercising the whole abdominal region. Then fill the middle part of the lungs, and lastly the top; it is not difficult to do this consciously, and in a short time the exercise will become very pleasant. The full breath is retained for a few moments—you do not want to strain or see how long you can hold your breath—and then the air is slowly expelled again. Try this simple thing several times a day for a month or so conscientiously and you will then need no urging to continue it.

Deep breathing is nothing new. The Hindus have practised it from time immemorial, and have actually founded a philosophy upon it. Anyone who will make use of it need have very little fear of colds, consumption, or pulmonary affections of any kind. Civilized human beings breath lazily, leaving portions of their lungs unused, and it is these unused and degenerate parts which become so easily the prey of consumption and other germs. If you feel a cold coming on, breathe deeply once or twice at intervals of an hour or so, and in most cases the increased oxygenation of the blood will drive off the trouble. If you are weak and anemic, practice the exercise regularly and it will do wonders in restoring the bloom of health.

TREES AND MEN.

It has been calculated that a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men, perhaps a dozen or even more.

The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is put at about 1.6 gallons; but by Bous ingault's estimate, a single square yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and the under sides of the leaves, can, under favorable circumstances, decompose at least a gallon of carbonic acid in a day. One hundred square yards of leaf-surface then would suffice to keep the air pure for one man, but the leaves of a tree of moderate size present a surface of many hundred square yards.—Scientific American.

—Leon McCuloch ends a two weeks' stay with home people this week, and returns to his work for the Westinghouse Electric Company, Pitsburg, Pa. He has not forgotten how to work in a printing-office.

—Answer to puzzle of last week: Mark Underwood, Andover, Massachusetts.

Answered by R. R. Ross.

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON, AUG. 20.

By Charles A. Hines.

Topic: Mountain Scenes in the Bible.

Deut. 34:1-16; Matt. 17:1-8.

Have you ever stood upon a lofty mountain top and "viewed the landscape o'er"? Those to whom this privilege has been given can enter into this lesson with an enthusiasm and interest that will hardly be experienced by others. It has been the privilege of the writer to stand upon the tallest peaks of the Old North State and look out over the undulating and hilly earth until vision is lost in the haze that covers the world. When viewing such a scene one understands why Christ led the apostles up into the mountain for the transfiguration and the season God called his prophets away from the world and nearer Himself when he desired the closest communion between them.

It is no idle fancy that gives charm and real worth to the mountains in the elevation of man. No man can stand in the presence of God's greatness without having some of his own smallness removed. People living in the hill and mountainous parts of the world have always been noted for their love of liberty, their generosity, and their largeness of mind and soul.

In the lesson are set out some of the more important mountain scenes of the Bible, but the daily readings must be studied for others, while a look at your concordance will open up other Bible scenes in both testaments. Find the poem "By Nebo's Lonely Mountain" and have some one recite it at the meeting.

Ararat, the patriarch of mountains, smoked with the first sacrifice in the restored world; Moriah reminds us of the victory of faith, and Nebo of the Christian's vision of the celestial Canaan. Sinai still towers as the symbol of divine law, and Olivet is redolent with Christ's loving interviews with his disciples. Carmel quickens our faith in the power of prayer; and Zion is the type of Christ's everlasting reign, and the saint's everlasting rest.—Mountain-tops Experiences.

"Yet we must not expect to reach heaven before our time. Jesus Christ did not spend all his time on Hermon, wearing a raiment as glittering as the sun-light. The impulsive suggested that they should build their tabernacles up there, and stay on that mountain summit. But the Master was needed down at the foot of Hermon, where a poor distressed youth possesed with evil spirits was awaiting to be healed."

"There is another kind of mountain-top experience to which every faithful Christian may aspire. John Bunyan, in his immortal allegory, brings his children to certain 'delectable mountains,' which are clad with orchards and fountains of water. From these sunny heights they caught some glimpses of the Celestial City, and we regale with pleasant fruits."

ON BIBLE SUMMITS.

Mount Sinai is the great mountain of the Old Testament. It is the Mount of the Law, the awful mount of flame and thunder. But it no longer has terrors for the world, for now we know that Jesus was there.

The hill called Calvary is the great mountain of the New Testament. To be sure, it is hardly to be called a mountain, or even much of a hill; and yet it overtops Sinai and the Alps and the Himalayas. Its summit reaches beyond the clouds and touches the very throne of God.

Mount Hermon, the Mount of the Transfiguration, is the mount of the Old Testament and the New Testament together, for upon it Christ talked with Moses and Elijah, and the subject was Christ's death, foretold in all the Old Testament and gloriously accomplished in the New.

The Horns of Hattin, the scene, perhaps, of the Sermon on the Mount, is the Sinai of the New Testament, where the laws of the new Kingdom were promulgated. They were not diverse from the old laws of the same Kingdom, but carried a long step further.

The Mount of Olives is the mount of the ascension. Its message to us is, "Live no longer in the material but in the spiritual. Cease to think of Christ in a perishable body, and begin to live for His immortal body, the church."

Mount Carmel is the mount of testing. All of the Bible mountains, in a sense, are mountains of evidence, but Carmel particularly so. God is always proving Himself, upon His foes by fire, upon His friends by rain.

Mounts Ebal and Gerizim are mountains of the covenant. It is well to speak our good resolutions in the presence of the mountains, that their stanch and abiding fidelity may serve as our examples. An Ebal and a Gerizim should be set up in every heart.

Mount Pisgah is the mount of hope. To be sure, to Moses it was the mount of defeat, for the lands he saw from the summit he was never to tread; but he was not living for himself, but for his people, and in their sucess he recognized his own.

Mount Hor is the mount of succession. There Aaron was stripped of his sacred vestments, and his son was made high priest in his stead; and there Aaron died. Every life must come to Mount Hor, and must provide, in some fashion, for its work to go on in other hands.—Daily Companion.

Daily Readings.

M. Carmel I. Kings 18:19—22, 25—39.
T. The mount of vision Deut. 32:48—52
W. The mountain sermon Matt. 5:1—12
T. The mountain temptation Matt. 4:8
F. The mount of the law Ex. 19:9—13
S. The unknown mount Matt. 28:16—20
S. The topic.

Are You Making Progress?

Not if you are doing the same thing in every prayer meeting.

Not if your committee is making no new plans.

Not if you are not studying the Bible for new light.

Not if you are not praying for new orders.

Not if you are not willing to make failures.

Not if you are not willing to do more than your share.

Not if you are not dissatisfied with your attainments and accomplishments.

Not if you are not sure that God has some great deed for you to do.

WHAT FORGIVENESS IS.

Forgiveness that depends upon the penitence of the one who has done wrong is not forgiveness at all. Yet how often we hear people say that they would gladly forgive an offender if only he would show some desire for forgiveness. If they cannot forgive him while he is still bitter against them or utterly indifferent to their forgiveness, they cannot do so after he repents and seeks their forgiveness. For true forgiveness is not a matter of feeling, nor of purchase, nor of bargaining, nor of return for something received. It never waits until it is asked for. It is not a temporary thing. It is strictly defined by Mr. Johnston Ross when he says, of God's attitude: "Forgiveness is not a sudden throb of mercy in the propitiated heart of God, it is the perpetual state of the divine heart, a divine hospitality open to all." Have we made our own that selfless, incessantly outgoing love which God shows toward us even while we are hostile or indifferent to him, and which he would have us always show toward all who need to see him in us? Let us secure the repentance of those who have wronged us by forgiving them before they want to be forgiven.—S. S. Times.

HOME HAPPINESS.

Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over and the feeling that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace and with his family, is something real.

It does not make much difference whether you own your house or have one little

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

---

room in that house. You can make that one room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with fancies that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and it will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you shall ever transgress.

You should always treat each other with courtesy. It is often not so difficult to love a person as it is to be courteous to him. Courtesy is of more value and is a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will be but courteous to each other, you will soon learn to love more wisely, profoundly, not to say lastingly, than you ever did before.—Ram's Horn.

THE GIFT OF SINCERITY.

Take from a man every gift but sincerity; let him be blind and deaf and lame—let him stammer in his speech, lack education and good manners. Handicap him as you please, so you leave him sincerity, and he will command respect and attention. His work will endure. The world, which is always looking for the real things, will gladly overlook all his infirmities.

In every relation of life, sincerity is the secret of power. The salesman who does not himself sincerely believe in the merits of his goods will generally be a failure. The man who sets about to fool other people must end—as he has, in fact, begun—by making a fool of himself. The clergyman who preaches anything that his own soul does not approve need look no further to explain empty pews.

There is no virtue that more men believe in and fewer men practice. Many of us, it may be fair to say, are busily engaged in the utterly futile attempt to run a bluff on the rest of the world. From pillow shams and false fronts to imitation marble buildings and watered stocks things are quite largely not what they seem.

The chief anxiety of too many people is to keep up appearances. If they are poor, they must at any rate appear to be rich. When Jones, the wealthy brewer across the street, sets up a motor car, the Brown family puts a mortgage on the house and lets the butcher go unpaid to the end that they, too, may boast an automobile.

If they are ignorant, they at least affect culture. "We are going to spend the winter in Washington on account of its wonderful educational advantages," says Mrs. Jenkins. "We expect to put dear Alyce in the Smithsonian Institute."

Be a real man—not a shoddy sport or a sham aristocrat. Be sincere with yourself, your friends and your work. With sincerity, a few talents and a little strength may go far. Without it, genius itself must fail!—Henry M. Hyde, in Chicago Tribune.

ANNUAL LOW RATE EXCURSION TO ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., TUESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1911.

Via Southern Railway and Pennsylvania Railroad.

Special train will leave Greensboro, N. C., at 10:45 P. M., August 22nd, and arrive at Atlantic City about noon August 23rd. Train will consist of Pullman cars as well as day coaches, and anyone desiring Pullman accommodations can secure same by making reservation in advance. Tickets will be sold good going only on special train, and returning on any regular train within the limit of the ticket, which will be fifteen days from date of sale. Stop-overs will be permitted at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington on the return trip, within final limit of the ticket.

Passengers from Branch line points can use regular trains into Greensoro connecting with the special train from that point.

Following round trip rates will apply from stations named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$11.00
Kernersville, N. C.	12.00
Liberty, N. C.	11.50
Mount Airy, N. C.	12.50
Madison, N. C.	12.00
North Wilkesboro, N. C.	13.00
Pilot Mountain, N. C.	12.50
Reidsville, N. C.	10.50
Sanford, N. C.	11.50
Siler City, N. C.	11.50
Walnut Cove, N. C.	12.00

For Pullman reservations or any other information, apply to any Ticket Agent, Southern Railway, or write

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

W. H. McGLAMERY,
Greensboro, N. C.

Siler City.

Protracted meeting begins next Sunday (second Sunday) at Hope Church. Though Bro. Bowman will not be able to be present, Bro. Pritchard will be there and conduct services. We earnestly hope Bro. Bowman will not be sick long. He has endeared himself to our people on this circuit, and we all hope for a speedy recovery.

The third quarterly conference convened with the church at Zion Tuesday, Aug. 8. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell presided. Business was transacted. G. E. Matthews was elected delegate to annual conference, W. H. Andrews alternate. The fourth quarterly conference will be held with the church at Siler City.

WASTE WOULD LIGHT HOUSE WITH ELECTRICITY.

The average householder throws away each day enough garbage to light his house with electricity. From figures given by an English authority, it can be shown that if the garbage were destroyed in a refuse destructor and used to raise steam, there would be enough electricity generated to light six sixteen-candle-power carbon-filament lamps continuously for three hours a day. If the more efficient tungsten lamps were employed, the equivalent of six forty-candle-power lamps could be used for three hours a day.

England has seriously taken up this question of generating electricity from household refuse. Already there are in that country about eighty electric plants using this form of fuel, and they are increasing at the rate of twenty a year. The ashes from these plants are being used in the manufacture of concrete, paving bricks, and so forth, the profits from which go a long way toward paying for the cost of making the electricity.—Popular Mechanics.

Read, But Don't Smile.—An Asheboro man stretched a wire across the door to keep baby in. His wife started out and, forgetting the wire, fell over it and broke her arm. His mother, hearing of the painful accident, came hurrying over to afford what relief she could, and, forgetting the wire, tumbled over it and hurt herself so badly that she had to take her bed for two or three days. We presume the wire was taken down then, and baby given the freedom of the city.

The New York Times of July 14 publishes the following significant announcement from San Antonio, Texas:

"Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in effect read Gov. O. E. Colquitt, of Texas, out of that body today. Governor Colquitt has been campaigning throughout the State against the Prohibition Amendment which will be voted on July 22, and spoke here tonight. In addressing an audience today Bishop Mouzon said: 'I am one of the executive officers of the Methodist Church. I deem it appropriate to say this much, because a man who is to speak in this city tonight is going about over the State claiming to be a Methodist, professing it with his mouth while denying it with his deeds. There is a rule of the Methodist Church, a rule as old as John Wesley, which forbids in toto the use of intoxicants by members of the Methodist Church except on the prescription of a physician, and then only as one would use any other drug. The Methodist Church is a prohibition church.'"

—Miss Velna McCulloch, head bookkeeper in an insurance office here, has just returned from her vacation, refreshed and strengthened.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting design that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is th first and most important thin g to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200, 000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders 'iability of $200,000, making in a'l $470, 000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dep't.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

When choosing a school in which to place their children, parents wish to consider the following special points:

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL INFLUENCES. The moral atmosphere of Elon College is of the highest type. The Spiritual influences surrounding the young man or the young woman will not allow them to go far astray.

HEALTHFULNESS. Good water from a deep well, buildings well cared for, good heat and lights, plenty of fresh air, and a situation in the best part of North Carolina insure the healthfulness of the students here.

STRONG COURSES OF STUDY. Entrance requirements equal to those of the best colleges in the country, a strong faculty of university men, and courses requiring sixty-nine hours for the Bachelor's degree, make Elon a college whose graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of the leading Universities of the country. Courses in Business, Elocution, Art, Music, and Pedagogy are offered leading to certificates and degrees.

EQUIPMENT. Splendid Library and Reading Room, ample grounds, laboratories, large dormitories, buildings equa to the best, with every equipment and appliance makes Elon stand among the from rank of colleges in the South. All buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and have water and bath rooms on every floor.

ECONOMY. All expenses can be paid for the college courses for from $125.00 to $200.00 a year according to the student's power of economy and his place selected for board and room.

COEDUCATIONAL. Parents who read The Methodist Protestant Herald can send both their sons and daughters to Elon College with the assurance that they will have the best that the educational world has to offer.

FOR CATALOGUE, ILLUSTRATED BULLETINS, etc., address,

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1911. NUMBER 38.

GOOD AND BAD HIGHER CRITICS.

To some people "higher critics" are all bad. But theirs in an undiscriminating view. A higher critic may be a good man, engaged in a good work, or he may be a dishonest man whose work is intended to overthrow the truth. There are some fields of human endeavor into which only bad men enter. But this is not true of the field of higher criticism.

Higher criticism concerns itself with the authorship and authenticity of the books of the Bible. Since it is claimed for the Bible that it is a book of God and by some a book from God, it is legitimate to enquire into the history of its making, its preservation, translations, etc. It is legitimate to try to go back to the original sources in the interest of truth. So there may be good higher critics. But if a man traces the Bible history back with a view to destroying confidence in the truth and taking from men all revelation from God, he is engaged in a bad business, he is dishonest, he is a bad man.

Among the good higher critics is Dean Farrar, of England. He is a reverent believer in the truth of revelation, yet he thinks it no crime but a service to mankind to investigate the beginnings of the sacred books. Light is thrown upon the meaning, and a new value given to many passages. Here are a few words from Mr. Farrar as to the value of higher criticism:—

"It is probable that no age since that of the Apostles has added so much to our knowledge of the true meaning and history of the Bible as has been added by our own. The mode of regarding Scripture has been almost revolutionised, and in consequence many books of Scripture previously misunderstood have acquired a reality and intensity of interest and instructiveness which has rendered them trebly precious. A deeper and holier reverence for all eternal truth which the Bible contains has taken the place of a meaningless letter worship. The fatal and wooden Rabbinic dogma of verbal dictation—a dogma which either destroys intelligent faith altogether, or introduces into Christian conduct some of the worst delusions of false religion—is dead and buried in every capable and well-taught mind. Truths which had long been seen through the distorting mirage of false exegesis have now been set forth in their true aspect. We have been enabled, for the first time, to grasp the real character of events which, by being set in a wrong perspective, hed been made so fantastic as to have no relation to ordinary lives. Figures which had become dim spectres moving through an unnatural atmosphere now stand out, full of grace, instructivenss and warning, in the clear light of day. The science of Biblical criticism has solved scores of enigmas which were once disastrously obscure, and has brought out the original beauty of some passages, which, even in our Authorised Version, conveyed no intelligible meaning to earnest readers. The Revised Version alone has corrected hundreds of inaccuracies which in some instances defaced the beauty of the sacred page, and in many others misrepresented and mistranslated it. Intolerance has been robbed of favorite shibboleths, used as the basis of cruel beliefs, which souls unhardened by system could only repudiate with a "God forbid!" Familiar error has ever been dearer to most men than unfamiliar truths; but truth, however slow may seem to be the beat of her pinions, always wins her way at last.

"'Thro' the heather an' howe gaed the creepin' thing,
But abune was the waft of an angel's wing.'

"Can there be any doubt that mankind has everything to gain and nothing to lose from the ascertainment of genuine truth? Are we so wholly devoid of even an elementary faith as to think that men can profit by consciously cherished illusions? Does it not show a nobler confidence in facts to correct traditional prejudices, than to rest blindly content with conventional assertions? If we do not believe that God is a God of truth, that all falsity is hateful to him,—and religious falsity most hateful of all, because it adds the sin of hypocrisy to the love of lies,—we believe in nothing. If our religion is to consist in a rejection of knowldeg, lest it should disturb the convictions of times of ignorance, the dicta of "the Fathers," or dogmas which arrogate to themselves the sham claim of Catholicity—if we are to give only to the Dark Ages the title of the Ages of Faith, then indeed

"'The pillared firmament is rottenness,
And earth's base built on stubble.'"

"'There is and will be much discussion,' says Goethe, 'as to the advantage or disadvantage of the popular dissemination of the Bible. To me it is clear that it will be mischievous, as it always has been, if used dogmatically and capriciously; beneficial, as it always has been, if accepted didactically (for our instruction) and with feeling.' There is abundance in the Bible for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness;—we shall weaken its moral and spiritual force, and gain nothing in its place, if we turn it into an idol adorned with impossible claims which it never makes for itself, and if we support its golden image upon the brittle clay of an exegesis which is morally, critically, and historically false.

"I do not see how there can be any loss in the positive results of what is called the Higher Criticism. Certainly its suggestions must never be hastily adopted. Nor is it likely that they will be. They have to fight their way through crowds of opposing prejudices. They are first held up to ridicule as absurd; then exposed to anathema as irreligious; at last they are accepted as obviously true. The very theologians who once denounced them silently ignore or readjust what they previously preached, and hasten, first to minimise the importance, then to extol the value of the new discoveries. It is quite right that they should be keenly scrutinised. All new sciences are liable to rush into extremes. Their first discoveries are misled into error by premature generalisations born of a genunie enthusiasm. They are tempted to build elaborate superstructures on inadequate foundations. But when they have established certain irrefragable principles, can the obvious deductions from those principles be other than a pure gain? Can we be the better for traditional delusions? Can mistakes and ignorance—can anything but the ascertained fact—be desirable for man, or acceptable to God?"

THE POWER OF STRONG DRINK.

A True Story.

The strong and the weak we see fall
By the powerful influence of strong drink;
Yes, wherever the evil is known,
Noble lives by its power daily sink.
The young man we see here beginning,
Just taking his first social glass,
Is strong now and brave, an, he dares it
To lead him to shame, but alas!

Follow him on: at first slowly,
He goes on the dangerous way,
A drink now and then, with a boast
Of his strength and power to stay
Free from the dangerous habit
That brings sorrow, shame, and disgrace;
"Of course it will never rule me," he says,
And a triumphant smile lights his face.

He really laughs at all warnings,
And thinks there is no danger near;
But oh, if his future was shown him,
How his poor heart would tremble with fear.
If he only could know the anguish,
Hear the piteous prayers and sighs,
That would follow the social glasses.
A cry from his heart would arise.

To banish the dreadful evil
From off this beautiful land,
A call to the men of the nation
To enforce the warning command.
But alas, he can't see the danger,
And onward he now descends,
Unheeding the gentle warning
Of the danger in the glass he defends.

We see him now, in his home,
Surrounded by the sunlight of love;
To his wife and children he seems
As a sacred gift from above.
So bravely he stands and so kind
To each one in his own thoughtful way,
And with tireless efforts he strives
To bring joys to the home day by day.

But soon, the fair picture has vanished,
Another we now shall behold;
'Tis the picture of struggles beginning,
Of fights with the tempter untold.
The cheeks of the wife have grown pale;
She, too, now is sharing the pain;
She sadly watches the conflict,
And prays that honor may gain.

With tenderest words she is pleading,
Yes, imploring him to give up drink;
To remember their hopes of the future,
Of the doom of a drunkard to think.
He patiently hears and assures her
With tears shining bright in her eyes,
That he will overcome the temptations.
"Yes, I'll give up drink now, dear," he cries.

Their bright little son soon learns
Of the gloom that o'ershadows the door;
He goes to his father and pleads
For him never to touch drink any more.
With the brave little arms round his neck
And sweet tender words in his ears,
He says, "Son, don't ever touch drink,
And for me, you must have no more fears."

"For now I've considered the cost, child.
Never again will I be led to drink;
Oh, no! I will shun the dark evil,
And now, son, of that never think.
You be a man strong and brave, dear,
And never, no never be led
To taste of the dangerous poison
From which my own heart has bled.

We will follow him on, he is striving
To crush out the craving for drink;
And, friends, if you knew the fierce struggles,
From offering the glass you would shrink,
For the sight now to him is so tempting,
Yes, it's painfully hard to abstain;
But his soul cries out that he must not
Ever touch the vile liquor again.

Fast the holiday season approaches,
The Christmas bells soon will be rung,
Many beautiful gifts will be given,
And sweet songs of praise will be sung.
Now, why does the sweet sound bring fears
To the heart of the wife, once so glad?
Oh, why do her eyes fill with tears,
Why do Christmas cheers make her so sad?

She is thinking of him, friends, of him,
She knows that temptations are rife,
And she sees that he bravely is striving
To drive the drink crave from his life.
With eyes raised to Heaven she pleads
That Jesus may strengthen and save:
May rescue the husband so dear
From the doom of a poor drunkard's grave.

The sad story soon will be ended,
The fate of that life will be known:
You will see how the drink habit conquered,
And crushed out the joys of that home.
We see him once more, oh, so manly,
So noble and strong he appears.
He can't see the danger before him,
No, he seems quite bereft now of fears.

'Tis morning, he stands in the door;
From home he will soon be away.
"Good-bye, dear," he says to his wife,
"I will not stay away late today."
"Now, please be real good and strong,"
She says as he's turning to go;
"And to each one who offers you whiskey,
Just earnestly say to them, no."

He stopped then, looked back and smiled,
And replied in a low, tender tone:
"Don't worry about that one moment;
Rest assured I will leave drink alone."
With eyes that are wistful and sad
She sees him walk proudly away.
Oh, heavens! if she could but have seen
The yawning abyss before him that day!

In the town he found his friends gathered;
Quite hilarious were their cheers for the day,
And ere he replied to their greeting,
The voice of one he heard say,
"Here, pal, come take a glass with us,
Now don't you dare say to me nay."
"Decline, friend, I must, as I fear it,
And must from its influence stay."

Temptations were everywhere present,
And a voice within him soon spoke,
"Just one little drink will not harm you."
Lo, see, now his promise is broke!
One drink fast followed another,
And soon the poor fellow was drunk;
The voice of the tempter had conquered;
In shame and disgrace he was sunk.

As the shame of it all rushes o'er him,
He cries out, "I cannot go home.
Disgraced I stand, now, and ruined;
In strange lands I'll evermore roam."
So away from his loved ones he wandered
While crazed by the influence of drink.
His life from that day is unknown, friends,
And I'll finish by saying, please think.

Think, men of the picture before you;
Think long of the anguish and pain
Resulting from the social glasses.
Oh, I pray you to think and abstain.
Think of the bright hopes daily blasted,
Of the grief that we can't understand;
Oh, think of it all, and strive, men,
To banish strong drink from the land.

By R. B. L.

THE MODERATION MONTHLY MAGAZINE—ITS ORIGIN AND PURPOSE.

By R. L. Davis, Superintendent North Carolina Anti-Saloon League.

There has just fallen into my hands a letter advertising the Moderation Monthly Magazine, which is to begin its publication at Cincinnati, Ohio, on September 1, 1911, by the Moderation Monthly Magazine Company, a corporation having $50,000 assets. This information, as well as what follows, is secured from their own literature, which has been sent out this month, and some of which is now in the hands of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League. The editor's name is not given, but Mr. J. Harry Fatthauser is President, Mr. L. A. Myers Treasurer, and Mr. A. O. Ostendarp Secretary. Their place of business is head of Hammond Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The purpose of this paper is given in the following advertisement, but a study of their literature and letters shows that it is an ingenious scheme to secure names of men throughout the State to whom they may send liquor advertisements with the hope of securing orders:

"A Sporting Paper.—A good healthy paper on all Popular Sports, such as Base Ball, Racing, Boxing, Airships, etc.

A Farmer's Paper.—Good articles of interest to the Farmer about Stocks and Crops. Some New Ideas and Useful Suggestions.

Personal Liberty.—This paper tells about a Man's Right of Personal Liberty —to Smoke a Cigar when he wishes, or take a Drink if he needs it.

Moderation.—All things should be done in Moderation, nothing Overdone or Underdone—Moderation in Working, Playing or Drinking.

Things Men Want.—The advertising in a paper is often the most interesting part. This paper will advertise things that men want—such as Cigars, Whiskey, etc. Each Subscriber can buy these at less than regular prices, and this Paper will guarantee the responsibility of every advertiser, or see that any loss is made good.

Subscription Costs Nothing.—Because you make a saving on every thing you buy from our advertisers, the Magazine does not really cost you anything—you save much more than the subscription price."

We quote from their "Instructions to Agents": "The Moderation Monthly Magazine is for men only—no subscriptions taken from boys, girls, or women. The subscription rate is 25 cents a year, a trial subscription of four months for ten cents is accepted. You are paid eleven cents for every four months trial subscription as follows: You collect 10 cents and keep the money. We pay one cent when subscription is sent to us. The extra one cent will not be paid for less than ten subscribers, but you can keep the ten cents, even if you only secure one or two subscriptions."

From their letter sent out to agents, we copy the following: "We offer the biggest inducement you ever heard of to get a large list of subscribers to our paper right here in your county. We actually pay more for every subscription we get than the subscriber pays us for the paper. We pay 11 cents for every subscriber, and the subscriber has to pay only ten cents for the paper—an agent could give away subscriptions an make one cent on every name. We want some one to collect names of subscribers, we don't care whether they give the subscriptions away or charge for them—we pay an extra one cent for every name when the subscription blank is properly signed."

In addition to paying the one cent for every name, they have a list of free premiums, among these are found the fountain pen, gold watch, one gallon of whiskey (any brand desired) and $50 in cash, which goes to the party who sends in the most names by September 1st.

From a blank subscription card sent out, we read this guarantee: "It is guaranteed that I can buy whiskey from the advertisers in your magazine at a discount of not less than 15 cents a gallon when I use the coupon printed in the magazine, and you are responsible for the honesty of all your advertisements."

This is the most ingenious scheme that we have seen for securing names to flood our State with liquor advertisements and literature; and then to flood our State with liquor to blind tigers and everybody else to break down the good results of state-wide prohibition. We are making our protests to the Postal Department of our Government against such a magazine as this being sent through the mails as second-class matter, and we believe that citizens and newspapers everywhere ought to cry out against it.

This turn of the liquor interests gives us further proof of the absolute necessity of some legislation from Congress that will allow each State to control the liquor traffic by its own police regulations, and there is no doubt of the fact that the citizens who believe in temperance, prohibition and law enforcement in North Carolina, must concentrate their efforts before the next Congress and co-operate with the Anti-Saloon of America, the National W. C. T. U., and other National temperance organizations to secure this legislation, which is needed above all other things for our State right now. I beg the preachers to speak out on this proposition. I beg the press of this State, both secular and religious, which has been such a power for prohibition in North Carolina and deserves so much credit for our victories so far, to emphasize the need of this legislation and to continue with us in this fight until success shall perch upon our banners.

In conclusion, let me say if the temperance forces of this State become inactive, the activity of the liquor corporations will very soon carry our State back to the old license policy. Our only safety lies in eternal vigilance.

A Correction.—In the Herald of Aug. 10, 1911, in our article, "Different Versions of Scripture," the following typographical errors occur: In the first column, in "to let either supplement the Authorized," should read, "to let either supplant the Authorized." And in the second column of said article, in, "It makes much of Higher Criticism, should read, "It smacks much of Higher Criticism." We hope the reader will make these corrections, as they are necessary to obtain the sense. J. F. Dosier.

SAY IT NOW.

Speak the kind word, do the kind act,
Ere the years have onward sped.
Give me all the love and sunshine
While I'm living, not when dead.
Tell me I have made life brighter,
By the loving words I've said,
Tell me I have cheered and helped you
While I'm living, not when dead.
Oft the way is rough and lonely,
And my wounded heart has bled;
Cheer me when the way is dreary.
Love me now, not when I'm dead.
In the grave there is no heartache,
We'll forget where sorrows led.
Speak some words of hope and comfort
While I'm living, not when dead.
Tell me I've been true and faithful,
Tell me now ere life is fled;
In the grave I cannot hear you,
Say it now, not when I'm dead.

—Everywhere.

"ALL READY."

We are getting orders for our new Rally Day programs. It is a beauty entitled "The Heart of the Church," and is by far the handsomest and most practical program that has yet been issued. You will be more than delighted with it. The programs are ready for distribution now. Send today for a sample copy.

Remember the programs are sent entirely free of charge and prepaid to every school that orders them. The only condition is that the offering taken on Rally Day be taken for the work of the Board.

Please send all orders for programs to C. H. Hubbell, D. D., Adrian, Mich.

—It is believed that Congress will adjourn next week. It has been a busy extraordinary session.

—New York City, without the aid of outside capital, has begun the digging of a $300,000,000 subway.

—In the counties of Sampson, Robeson, Columbus, and Halifax, North Carolina, 7260 victims of hookworm disease have been treated recently at the State and County dispensaries.

—Harry N. Atwood, the famous Boston bird-man, flew from St. Louis to Chicago, a distance of 286 miles in actual flying time of 5 hours, 43 minutes, on Aug. 14, stopping only twice en route.

—The courts, following their decisions in the cases of the oil and tobacco trusts, have ordered the Powder Trust dissolved.

REVIVAL PRINCIPLES AND METHODS.

BY A PASTOR.

The following-up campaign after the revival is of great importance, but this is the point where the Church makes her worst failures. The new converts are in need of special aid. They must be led to form new social relationships. They should enter social circles that are predominantly religious, for religious growth is possible only in social contact. Hence the necessity for churches and other religious organizations. So it is needful that every Christian join some church; for if he fails to become a vital factor in some religious group, his spiritual death is assured. Not all of his old ties are to be broken, but only those that lead wholly toward evil. All his ties of kinship and many of his friendships should remain intact; but saloons, gambling dens, and all other evil places should see his face no more. The good results of many revivals are often terribly reduced through the failure of the church to provide for the new social needs of its converts.

Revival work among children is fundamentally the same as among adults in that it seeks to move the child's will to self-decision. But the method of procedure should perhaps be somewhat different, for two reasons: (1) The child's imperfectly developed will is more susceptible to hypnotic suggestion than the matured will of the adult. The child is far more easily influenced, hence we should be careful to see to it that every religious step the child takes is really a moral act. I mean by "moral" here "self-decisive." The act of some young children in joining the church is unmoral in that they do it impulsively, without the deliberate action of the will in response to strong moral motives. (2) The child's mental powers are in a rudimentary stage of growth. It is therefore in need of education in ethical ideals and in the exercise of its will power. But this fact is one of tremendous significance; for a child is naturally teachable, its voluntary sins are few, and self-decision is far easier than when the adult is enchained with the evil habits of years.

Statistice show that fully nine-tenths of all Christians are converted before they are twenty-one. Some conversions take place between four and twelve years of age, but by far the greater number occur between twelve and sixteen. Adolescence is a most critical time in the spiritual development of every human life. This does not mean that no religious training should be given until adolescence. In fact, the religious education of the child should begin in infancy, and its culmination in conversion should be the logical outcome at or before adolescence. Proper training so culminate in nearly every instance, and that without any violence to the youthful will. The four principal factors affecting the religious growth of the child are the home, the Sabbath school, the public school, and the street. The school and the street include the play life of the child; and play has a far greater place in character development than most of us dream. If the home and the Sabbath school were always in perfect harmony, each working to its full efficiency with each child, then practically every one would be converted and take his proper place in Christian society. If such ideal conditions actually prevailed, perhaps the periodic revival would be unnecessary. But, as a matter of fact, most children are brought into the Christian life through these revivals. However, it is only so because of the defective home or Sunday school training or both. Only three out of every five Sunday school scholars ever join the Church. This loss is traceable not so much to the Sunday school as to the home.

The child who is rightly instructed and properly environed will need only to publicly confirm his decision by joining the Church. But our conditions are so far from being ideal that our modern revival is needed, even in reaching the children. Still our homes and Sunady schools ought to be winning children to Christ all the year round, as is illustrated in a story told by one of the leading Sunday school workers in England: It was in a little village in Northumberland. The teacher had talked most earnestly to his class of boys that Sabbath afternoon about becoming Christians. All of them listened respectfuly and intently. One of the boys was Charlie. A fortnight later Charlie's little brother was being put to bed by his mother. He looked up at his mother and said: "Mama, what's come o'er our Charlie?" "I don't know, son. What makes you ask?" was the reply. "Why, mama, he doesn't fuss and fight me any more, and now he always gives me the biggest half of the apple and the largest piece of pie." That evening the mother asked her husband about it, telling him what Charlie's little brother had said. Both had noticed a change in Charlie. They could not account for it. So Charlie was summoned to answer for himself. When told of his little brother's question and their own observations, Charlie confessed Christ with his lips in the sacred environment of his own home to those who should be the first to know it. He said: "The other Sunday the teacher talked to us about being Christians. I didn't say anything, but I said to myself that I was going to be a Christian. I didn't tell anybody about it for fear I couldn't hold out. And I thought if I succeeded, others would find it out soon enough." Sure enough, they had found it out.

Surely God's call is to every Christian for intelligent and faithful effort in winning souls for Christ. Let the beautiful language of the hymn writer be our daily prayer:

Give me a faithful heart,
Likeness to thee,
That each departing day
Henceforth may see
Some work of love begun,
Some deed of kindness done,
Some wanderer sought and won,
Something for thee.

THE SNARE AND DELUSION OF THE DAY.

The doctrine of the Fatherhood of God, revealed by Jesus Christ at a cost which the finite mind cannot estimate, has received in these latter days an emphasis which perhaps has never before been paralleled since apostolic days. With what result? Sin has lost its blackness through the application of whitewash, and penalty has lost its meaning for the popular mind. It would seem that the revelation of God as a Father through a crucified Christ has emboldened men and women to revel more unreservedly in the sin from which Christ died to save them. The flippant assertions on the part of so many, especially the young, that sin is not so bad, after all, and that hell is a fiction, are invariably connected with a reference to the fact that God, if there really is one, is a Father, and is too good to punish. The universal law of cause and effect is recognized in every place save where a sinning soul stands in the presence of an offended God.

Wise and forcible are the following words taken from The Advance: "One difference between the old and the new views about hell is that the new view is more benevolent to the bad, and the old was more benevolent to the good. The new view makes it safer to sin; the old view made it safer to do right. The old doctrine threw its fuel into the flame before sin; the new complaisance adds fuel to the fires of passion."

Nearer the beginning of the editorial from which the foregoing extract was taken are these words, which are eternally true: "We may scoff at the doctrine of a hell, but at the same time we know that it will not do to put out the fire against sin. Yea, more. We know that we cannot put it out. We may call it old or we may call it new; it will still be here. If it is not on one side of us, it will be on the other. Persuade men that there is no hell in another world, and they will immediately proceed to make a hell of this world."

Yes, the "white lily" of God's love blooms as never before in the gardens of doctrine; while the rank, noxious flowers of passion nod on every highway and every byway of practical human experience. The thunders of Sinai are hushed into the lull which falls on hearts which defy God and then smother him, if possible, with praise of his meek, forgetful, passive, loving spirit; and all this where the sword still hangs suspended, as ready and as sure to fall on all disobedience as is Divine Love to smile on all obedience. We can appropriately close these remarks by quoting again from the Advance: "The snare and delusion of our day is that the man who preaches down penalty is the merciful man [with many the progressive man]. The only merciful preacher is the man who preaches up salvation."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

HOW TO LIVE.

"How to die" is not half so religious a question as "How to live." The man who lives with a clear conscience will die happily and without fear. The problem of life is living, not dying. Life is the most natural gift of the Creator, for He gave man life by breathing into him the breath of life. He wants us to live long and live well. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

Life is strengthened and prolonged by normal, natural means. Artificiality weakens and destroys life. A few months ago the earth was dead to all appearance, frozen to death by a long winter, numbed by the cold frosts. Every leaf was gone, the skeleton trees were ice-clad and brittle. The hills and fields were buried beneath the snow. But suddenly they lived again. Spring, with her glory and fragrance, was with us. The crocus and jonquil, the hepatica and arbutus, the violet and tulip were here. The trees budded and blossomed. The robins began to sing in the morning. All this is natural.

Why not learn "how to live" from God's good world around us? In other words, get out into the air, even if we have to be out before breakfast in order to do it. Fill your lungs with oxygen. Take vigorous exercise in the open air. Take time to walk home instead of lazily hanging on a strap all the way up the hill, or breathing the condensed second-hand air of sixty passengers, mixed with tobacco smoke from the rear platform. Swing your arms when you walk and get up motion. Don't move slowly along as if you had locomotor ataxia, and then try to tell yourself that you are tired and have spring fever. Raise up the shades and let the sun into your office. If it hurts your eyes turn your back on it and have the sunlight for a background. Buy a bunch of violets or arbutus for your wife on your way home. The man who spends more money for cigars than he does for confectionary for his wife and flowers for his home doesn't deserve either. Instead of thinking how other men ought to live, demonstrate your theories by personal experiment. Let sunshine, sleep, fresh air, exercise and a happy frame of mind transform your pale, sleepy, round-shouldered, tired, worried existence into a life worth living, and the summer and fall of 1911 will go down in your life's history as the best one on record.—John Timothy Stone, in New York Observer.

STRENGTH IN WEAKNESS.

To little strength there is always an open door. Opportunity is not reserved for the mighty. Those who realize that they are weak gain power by the consecration of the little strength which they have. "The lame take the prey." "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." If we keep Christ's word, our conscious weakness will result in great fruitfulness. In union with his will our weakness becomes unmeasurable power. The most fruitful financial endowment that philanthropy has ever received is the poor widow's two mites. All her living was an insignificant amount to the offerings of those who gave of their abundance; but never did the largest offering of those who gave only a part, though it were millions, bear so much fruit. The open door before little strength is that of unlimited influence. —Northwestern Christian Advocate.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

79. David enquired of the Lord about the faimne, and He answered: "It is for Saul and his bloody house, because he slew the Gibeonites." We are plainly taught in the Scriptures that many old methods of bringing the wicked to a knowledge of their transgressions have been discontinued since the new dispensation. In Christ's Sermon on the Mount He enjoins his followers to love their enemies, because God makes his sun to shine on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust. In the old dispensation mankind was ruled by the law of justice—in the new, by the law of love.

In this reckless, lawless, well nigh Godless age, if we received only what we merit, it would never rain again.

In the parable of the tares the servants were commanded to "let both grow together till the harvest, lest while ye gather up the tares ye root up the wheat also." The promise that while the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, summer and winter, cold and heat, shall be given, was not conditional.

Every sinner will be sure to reap what he sows somewhere, but Divine Wisdom and Love will not fail to dispense his blessings because of sin, in individuals, for "the goodness of God leadeth men to repentance." Hence scientists will have to seek elsewhere for a reason for our prolonged drouth. L. F. W.

Lesson for Next Week.

1 Kings, first three chapters.

Questions.

82. A what age did Daniel die?

83. Are David's injunctions to Solomon regarding Joab and Shimei (1 Kings, 2nd chapter) to be regarded as an expression of a vengeful spirit? If not, how are they to be regarded?

84. What unselfish choice did Solomon make early in his reign?

Question 82 is assigned to Mrs. Swaringen, 83 to Mrs. Martin, 84 to Mrs. Mason.

Burlington.

The reporter has been waiting for the pastor, and the pastor has been waiting for the reporter, until it is now impossible to give all the news of our church since the last notes appeared from here. However, it has been a vacation for the reporter, and although he is very busy now, will try to find time to note:

1. An excellent Sunday school attendance since last we wrote, and the best average, for the year, in the history of the church.

2. The visit of President Swain on July 30, and an excellent sermon from him at that time.

3. An excellent Children's Day service on the night of August 6th, which showed that the children had been well trained, and a collection of nearly $30.

4. A good sermon by Prof. T. C. Amick of Elon College on last Sunday morning, in the absence of the pastor.

5. Our annual S. S. picnic will be next Friday, Aug. 18th, at Glenwood Farm, and that all who are going will meet at the church at 8:30 A. M.

6. Many visitors are in evidence every Sunday at the services. Among the number lately we note Rev. R. M. Andrews of Henderson, and Rev. G. V. Tilley of Cuthbert, Ga.

7. We will not wait so long again to report, but hope our pastor will see fit to write something at an early date.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Aug. 16.

(Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake.—Matt. 5:11. Golden Text for Sunday, Aug. 20.)

PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Asheville, Aug. 6.
Buncombe, Aug. 8-13.
Ivy, Aug. 15-17.
Yarboro and Anderson, Aug. 19-22.

When it can be done I shall be glad for pastors to have a circuit rally and have all the churches on the charge largely represented.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

Have been to Asheville and find the situation there somewhat peculiar. The people there are loyal and true. Bro. Williams, the pastor, is keeping up his watchful care over the work. It would be a great encouragement to these good people if those who have subscribed for the church building here could pay their subscriptions in advance of the time named in the pledge. Bro. Williams nor his people have authorized this, but I am making statement because of the light in which I see the situation. Today, Aug. 10, is the reunion of the Pickens family. They met today at Mr. Robt. Greenwood's in the northern part of Asheville. The crowd is large, and the beautiful lawn is alive with those who rejoice. The very old and the prattling infant met and smile. All seem glad.

W. E. Swain.

Richland Circuit.

The third quarterly meeting for this work will be held at Cedar Falls on Saturday before the third Sunday in Aug. at 1:30 P. M.

The business to be transacted is of interest to all. Come.

L. H. Hatley.

Aug. 12, 1911.

Mt. Pleasant, Liberty Circuit.

On the fifth Sunday in July one of the most profitable and most interesting S. S. Conventions ever held in Greene township convened here. A crowded audience listened attentively to able addresses given by Hon. C. C. Barnhardt, Hon. E. S. W. Dameron, Prof. W. A. Harper, and Mr. W. G. Cobb. The township banner was presented to Mt. Pleasant S. S. by Prof. T. C. Amick.

Mr. S. A. Alexander, of our church, was elected president for the ensuing year.

Rev. W. C. Kennett filled Bro. Fogleman's appointment here on the first Sunday in August. Bro. Kennett preached an able sermon.

There were 64 present in S. S. on last Sunday. The offering amounted to twenty-seven cents.

Mr. Grover Shoffner has gone to St. Leo's Hospital this week to be operated on for the removal of a tumor.

Mr. C. R. Ephland and family, who have been at Rockingham for some time, have returned to this community.

As previously stated in our report, the special meeting will begin here next Sunday. Here's hoping that showers of blessing will refresh many drooping souls.

Will H. Neese.

Hartshorn, N. C., Aug. 15.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Because of much sickness and other reasons our S. S. yesterday was the smallest in two months, only thirty-nine present. Hope it will be better next Sunday.

Bro. Bethea being away, Bro. S. R. Harris was supposed to make us a talk yesterday, but really he preached. And I almost believe he thought he was a preacher, because of his holding Bro. C. W. Finch responsible for his dinner. Will be glad to have Bro. Harris again.

The two sick persons mentioned in last report are much improved.

A brother of the writer, Mr. Thomas J. Garrett, and Miss Allie Pendley of North Wilkesboro were married at this place (North Wilkesboro) last Wednesday. Will reside in Henderson.

Our organist, Miss Maggie Finch, is attending a house party at the home of Mr. D. H. Gill.

Though the picnics and special meetings are passed, let's not become discouraged.

Polk Garrett.

Friendship, Stanley Circuit.

Our protracted meeting began at Friendship the 6th and closed the 11th. Rev. J. A. Burgess was our pulpit help. He did some of his earnest preaching, and it had its effect. There were twelve conversions, ten accessions, and several reclamations. Bro. Burgess was with us just long enough for us to learn to love him. We were much pleased with his deep sermons. The church was greatly revived. Pray for us that we may do more for our Master this year than ever before.

We were glad to have Bro. Reynolds and family with us one day in our meeting, but were sorry we didn't get to hear him preach. Mr. M. F. Furr and wife, from Matthews, visited us during the meeting.

H. B. Furr, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Circuit.

Our special meeting closed last Friday evening with communion service, and was perhaps the best meeting that we have had here in many years. There were a dozen or more conversions, seven additions to the church, some of them heads of families. The church seemed very much revived. Bros. J. D. Williams and D. A. Braswell did most of the preaching. The other preachers who were here during the meeting were Revs. T. J. Ogburn, who preached Sunday at 11 o'clock, C. H. Whitaker, J. R. Hutton, and R. A. Brown, of Way Cross, Ga. Bros. Williams and Braswell made a good impression on the people. Bro. Braswell's deep piety, his zeal for the Master's cause, and love to God and love for humanity, and his earnest desire for the salvation of souls, were eminent; while in Bro. Williams all these characteristics were manifest, and coupled with these, his great knowledge of and wonderful power to preach the word of God made it a force hard to resist, while our pastor, Bro. Cecil's, faithful service as pastor and his plain, practical, and earnest preaching since he has been among us has been a great factor in bringing about these blessed results. Bro. Cecil has been faithful in the discharge of every duty associated with his work.

May the blessings of God rest richly upon the results of the meeting, upon our pastor, and upon the brethren who did the preaching, and may each and all be faithful to the work whereunto we are called.

I. L. T.

Climax, Aug. 14.

Glorious Meeting on Halifax.

Our special meeting at Eden closed last Thursday afternoon. It was indeed a good meeting. Some said it was the best they had ever seen at Eden. As near as I could tell about forty professed faith in Christ. About thirty of these, of whom most were young people, were new converts. Thirty joined church at Eden, and one name was given for Union.

It was a beautiful sight to see these young people gathered around the altar pledging their allegiance to Christ. Among the number were three grown young sisters and two of their grown brothers. Oh! what is nobler, what is grander, what is more beautiful than such a scene!

We were glad to have with us during a part of the meeting Bro. Holden, pastor of Enfield M. E. Church, and Brother Whitaker, pastor of our church at Enfield. Each of these brethren did a part of the preaching. Their preaching was good and effective. I thank these brethren for their help, for my health, I fear, would not have permitted me to have done all the preaching. I am not afraid of "down East," but there is quite a difference between the hills of Maryland and the low lands of North Carolina.

Bro. Woodbury Hardee and wife, Mrs. Fox and children, Misses Cassie and Clara Finch, are visiting Bros. Junius and James Hardee. We were glad to have them in the meeting. The Misses Finch aided in the music, and Bro. Woodberry Hardee's strong appeals and exhortations to the unsaved were appreciated.

God be praised for all the good that was accomplished!

Do you want to know how to have a good meeting? I can tell you how we had it here in Eden. The people prayed and worked. And they didn't wait until the week of the meeting to begin either. We thank the members of other denominations who worked faithfully with us. We had the kind of church union that I am in favor of, namely, union of purpose and of efforts for the salvation of the lost.

Pray for our other four meetings.

Linley W. Gerringer, Pastor.

August 11, 1911.

Concord.

A meeting of considerable interest was held at Fair View Church, about six miles from Concord, beginning Aug. 5, and closed Aug. 11. About twenty-two souls were saved. Fifteen hav already united with the church; and we are expecting others to join us at our next appointment. Bros. N. C. Williams and Manda Ridenhour did faithful work as pulpit help. The church was greatly revived. We think much good was done during these series of meetings. The house would not hold the congregation a part of the time.

We are glad to state that Brother Jake Blackwelder is improving, and we hope he will soon be able to come home to stay.

Brother John F. Alexander, of Harrisburg, has our sympathy in his sorrow: as we learn one of his daughters is at the point of death: and the physician has no hopes of her recovery.

Aug. 12. A. Oscar Lindley.

Thomasville.

On last Sunday and Sunday night our pastor, Rev. E. Suits, preached two powerful sermons. He left no stone unturned. His preaching is so plain that one and all can understand.

Our Sunday school is in fine shape. We have 215 on roll, average attendance 89. Our Superintendent has the school at heart, a good man in the right place. We hope to have our church dedicated some time this fall.

A Teacher.

Winston Station.

Somet weeks have passed since a report from this place, but with the exception of those away on their vacation and several who are sick, we are all here pressing on. Our pastor has been granted a three weeks' vacation; therefore we have had no preaching the past two Sundays and will not have any the next. He is spending his vacation helping in revivals.

The attendance at the Sunday schools and mid-week prayer meeting is not quite so good, yet it is splendid considering the weather is so warm and oppressive, and so many people are out of the city.

On last Tuesday evening the Baracas entertained the members of the Sunday school in a most delightful manner. The most pleasing feature of the evening was the illustrated song, "Just Me." After several pleasing addresses, songs, and some time spent in pleasant conversation, delicious cake and cream was served by the young men. Every one, from the youngest child to the oldest gray-haired person, seemed to enjoy themselves, and some of our older people have declared it the nicest and most pleasant of any of the social functions held in the church for several years.

An intersting ceremonial occurred last Tuesday evening in East Winston, when the first brick of the new M. P. Church was laid; those taking most part were the members of the Young Ladies' Club, Misses May Speer, May Brewer, Lois Timmons, Martha Messiah, Mamie Brewer, Maud Jordan, Ester Brewer, and little Miss Hester Speer; these young ladies had wrought so zealously in its cause it was deemed fitting that the initial movement of the work of the building should be performed by them.

Aug. 14. Reporter.

A Surprise Birthday Dinner.

On last Tuesday, Aug. 8th, Rev. L. H. Hatley of Richland Circuit drove to Asheboro to make some little purchases. On returning home he found a host of people on the lawn at his home near Giles Chapel, and in imagination we can hear him ask, What does it mean? Now listen: women can hold their tongues some times. Mrs. Hatley had invited his friends more than a month ago to come there in honor of his birthday. Pardon me, but I have forgotten the exact age; judging from appearance I would say thirty, but I think he has passed some forty summers, so when the day arrived something like one hundred and thirty people arrived there with baskets full of good things to eat and hearts full of glee to do honor to the occasion. Some one says there's a time to all things, and I want to tell that was a time to enjoy ourselves, and the writer did to the fullest extent. The day was spent in laughing, talking, playing and singing. We also had some very fine instrumental music rendered by Rev. Mr. Hatley, his brother Daniel, of Spencer, and Mr. Will Hamlin.

And now let me make special mention of the table and what there was on it; talk about famine in this land, to be sure I have not seen so many good things to eat in years. A kind of house circle table was made upon the lawn and loaded down from the baskets, then the people gathered round and stood with impatience while the photographer made a picture of the scene, after which Mr. E. O. York made a short talk and asked God's blessings, and after every body had eaten to their fill many baskets were taken up of the fragments.

I will stop now by saying that Bro. Hatley was not only surprised but pleased, and felt not a little honored when taken in the house and shown the nice and costly presents given him. Of two I will make mention: one beautiful three-piece silver set and a sofa pillow with the J. O. U. A. M. emblem hand embroidered.

May Bro. Hatley live to see many more birthdays like this.

Mrs. J. V. Free.

Orphan's Home.

You are cordially invited to be present at the celebration of our first birthday on August twenty-second, nineteen hundred and eleven, eight o'clock P. M., in the High School Chapel, Denton, N. C.

We are going to have a little exercise that we hope will be enjoyed by all. We would be glad if all who come would bring us a little birthday present, something to eat or wear for the children, but if you do not care to do this, come anyway. We are just a year old. We have grown considerably in this year, more than we had hoped. With your help we will grow more in the next year, and be able to celebrate in our new homes. In the past month we have had a call from twenty-two little ones who needed our protection, but we have been compelled to say no. Let's build our houses at once and gather them in.

Yours in the work,

Mabel W.

A good meeting just closed at Bear Creek, near 35 conversions and eleven accessions. Pulpit help, Rev. E. H. Mullis. Pray for our success in other meetings.

We have held a good meeting at New Hope. Church much revived, many penitents, backsliders reclaimed, and sinners saved. Only one joined the church, but we think great good was done. Rev. E. H. Mullis and Haywood was our pulpit help. Each did well.

W. P. Martin.

A PLEASANT DAY SPENT AT HAW RIVER.

On last Sunday, August 13, Mr. Stone and I spent the day at Haw River, Mr. Stone having accepted an invitation from Rev. Mr. Curry to make an address on that day at our church, as he was to be absent from the service himself.

We were met at the train by our friend, Mr. Thomas Coble, a young man of sterling Christian character, and whose loyalty and work for the church has had much to do toward the growth and success of the M. P. Church with which he has been closely allied since childhood.

On arriving there, we were amazed to see such a wonderful change in the old church, which we loved so well while living at Haw River several years ago. Indeed it was a pleasure to see such an attractive building twice the size of the former, very neatly furnished and papered; they can justly be proud of it as they have it all paid for—which fact speaks well for both pastor and people. We learn that Bro. Curry is doing splendid worker among this people. Their Sunday school has an enrolment of over one hundred and it was noticed that nearly all were present. We were very sorry that the superintendent, Bro. J. C. Morris, was kept away owing to the illness of his wife. Bro. and Sister Morris are both doing untold good for their Sunday school and church. We trust that Mrs. Morris will soon be able to take up her splendid work, for she is so greatly missed.

In the absence of Bro. Morris, the assistant superintendent, Bro. Stout, a very devout Christian man, presided. We found a thoroughly alive Sunday school with both Baraca and Philathea classes, all doing splendid work.

After the Sunday school we were glad to meet with many old friends and we noticed that almost all the little folks remained for church services—which we wish they did in every place. The house was well filled to hear the address on foreign missions, many having come from the other churches after their Sunday school. Although some do not approve of foreign missions, as is the case in every church, the entire audience listened with rapt attention and heard many facts that we trust will result in good for the Master's cause. After the service some of the ladies met together and organized a woman's foreign missionary society with twelve members, which was a splendid beginning. We know how faithfully these ladies do anything they undertake, and we feel sure that their society will do much good, that they will steadily increase in number and interest in the missionary cause as they take up the work. With Bro. Curry's aid, who is well beloved by his people there, and having chosen Mrs. Will Crutchfield, a very enthusiastic and persevering worker in anything she undertakes for her church, as their president, we expect to hear of good results from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. P. Church at Haw River.

Mrs. J. M. Stone.

HENDERSON TO NORTHFIELD.

Leaving home Friday, Aug. 4 at noon, we started on our trip to Northfield, the train running nearly an hour late; and we had only an hour and ten minutes margin in Norfolk when it was on time. This caused some moving about to be done from Portsmouth to the Merchant and Miner's Wharf in Norfolk. After securing our tickets and rushing through the warehouse, we met our steward, who said, "Don't hurry, don't hurry," but we trotted all the same, for it was time for the boat to leave. But there were other rail passengers, who, like ourselves, had wired to hold the boat. So we were really ahead. By the time the Juniata set sail we were in the dining room feasting, little dreaming that would be the last meal till we were docked in Boston Harbor. I tried to believe I was not going to be sick. Mrs. Bethea was sick before going to bed Friday night.

Saturday morning I arose early to see the sun rise. As I sat upon the deck on the east side I thought how wonderful is the power of God. It was a glorious sight to behold. I was glad to see his face. It was familiar while everything else was strange. I was lonesome, and yet there was the bright shining face of the sun. How many times on life's journey, when everything else seems strange, how Jesus comes to comfort and brighten the way, if we know Him.

Before the breakfast hour, I was in my berth, too sick to eat. But the sleep was good for us. We needed the rest, and perhaps after eating away from home so many good things for four weeks, our stomachs needed a vacation too. Many times I tried it outside that day, but soon to be driven in by that peculiar sea-sick feeling. "Misery loves company," so we had it. Many were unable to get out of their state rooms. They were a jolly good-natured set of passengers, but I have always found it so on the boat. The day was uneventful. We passed in sight of land late Saturday afternoon, near New York. Saturday night we got into a fog, got headed toward Norfolk, and missed a large boat just thirteen inches. They told us afterward, when it was too late to get scared, that they missed having a collision just that much, and that if these two large steamers had collided we would have gone to the bottom.

We were disappointed in not getting to Boston in time for services Sunday morning, but found out afterward that most churches were closed for the summer or August at least. On account of our delay we did not reach Boston till 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Finding a pleasant place at Hotel Hollison, Fremont Street, we decided to walk down to the Common. We were attracted to a crowd of people where a business man of Boston was telling the plain simple story of Jesus. It was effective, too. There were many requests for prayer and one soldier boy from Texas gave his heart to the Lord and told the crowd of his determination to live for Christ. On the Common was music, preaching, almost anything to see and hear. Early Monday morning we began sight-seing in earnest. We found so many points of interest of a historic nature: Old South Church, Bunker Hill Monument, the route taken by Paul Revere on his famous ride, Cambridge, homes of Lowell and Longfellow, and the Washington Elm, where he first received the command of the American Army. There are so many things about which I read when I was a boy and want to read all over again.

We saw the large temple built by the devotees of Mrs. Eddy, the Christian Science leader, costing two million dollars. What an amount paid to a delusion! Yet people are paying out money and giving their lives to many things just as dangerous.

Monday night at Tremont Temple we were permitted to see the first exhibit of colored moving pictures, showing the Coronation of King George, the greatest thing of its kind that has ever taken place in the world. The troops were drawn up in all their gorgeous array. I was surprised at the smallness of the crowd. Just across the street at a play of a lower class—a vaudeville—the people were clamoring for entrance. The best things have the smallest crowds in life.

Tuesday morning early at 7:10 found us boarding the train at the great South Station of the Boston and Albany R. R. for Northfield. A two hours' wait at Palmer in the Berkshire hills was pleasantly spent. The beautiful homes and farms along the line made the run from Boston to Northfield exceedingly pleasant. N. G. Bethea.

Northfield, Mass., Aug. 11.

P. S. A striking thing on Boston Common Monday night was a blind man with a banjo. He was an expert player, and had attracted a large crowd. His money cup was on his instrument; but no money came in till the song, "You'll Miss Your Dear Old Mother When She's Gone." Men from different sections, as you could tell, were touched by that word mother. Remember, mothers, your power of influence for good, and use it while you may. No song attracted like that.

Asheville.

On the tenth the Pickens reunion was held at the home of our Mrs. Robt. Greenwood. Bro. William Carter married a daughter of the late Rev. Andrew Pickens.

That reunion was a happy occasion. There was a large attendance. The venerable Rev. Robt. W. Pickens and the venerable "Uncle" William H. Carter were the two oldest present. And about the youngest was Col. S. V. Pickens of Hendersonville. He did not play base ball, but his wife did and made a base hit every time she went to the bat. President Swain, Rev. J. H. Moton, Rev. R. S. Troxler were present.

Lindsey Blackwelder and bride are back from their honey moon.

The Sunday school attendance was 102. 36 at Woodfin Hall, 21 at Woosley Hall. Our Third Quarterly Conference will be held this Tuesday night. J. S. W.

MIZPAH, HAW RIVER CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting began here the first Sunday in August and closed the following Thursday. We had a very good meeting. There were two conversions and they will join the church later. Rev. Davis of High Point was our help. He and our pastor did excellent preaching.

We were glad to have Mrs. Raper and Treva with us during our meeting.

Mr. Hugh Jones of Wake Forest is visiting his parents here now.

Miss Minnie Jones, who has been visiting relatives in Virginia has returned home.

Mrs. Ida Hopkins and daughter, of Port Norfolk, Va., visited relatives here during the meeting Lala Stallings.

Forshee, N. C., Aug. 15, 1911.

ORANGE.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the above circuit will convene at Union Grove Church on Saturday next, Aug. 19.

Preaching at 11 o'clock, followed by business session. All members are requested to be present. Pastor.

FAIRFIELD, GUILFORD CIRCUIT.

Dear Herald:

Our Third Quarterly Conference convened at Spring Hill last Saturday. The attendance was better than it has been for some time; let us increase the attendance from time to time, making the last one the best one. The business was transacted in harmony, and the interest was good. The reports from the different churches showed that the circuit was improving; the financial report was somewhat better than usual at this time of the year. Among the incidental business transacted, on account of the pastor's heavy expenses caused by the sickness of his wife, the stewards were instructed to collect the pastor's salary in full as soon as possible. The Conference voted unanimously to give Bro. Plyler a vacation for an indefinite period so that he might give his wife his entire time and attention, which she so much needs at this time. It was also decided to have a circuit rally at the next quarterly conference, which will convene at Spring Hill Church some time this fall. The president will be invited and perhaps other dignitaries; let every member on the Guilford Circuit that possibly can make arrangements to be there, and let us show the world that the Old Rip Van Winkle Circuit has waked up.

Every one who can conveniently will be expected to bring a well-filled basket of dinner. Back to the pastor and family; we have given them our sympathy and our prayers. Now let us come to the last quarterly conference not only with the pastor's salary paid in full, but a nice overplus and prove our sincerity by our works.

Sincerely,

J. M. Davis.

MT. ZION'S CHURCH, UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Brother Frogden of the Uwharrie Circuit has just closed a successful meeting at Mt. Zion Church. Meeting closed Friday night with a large attendance to witness the closing exercises. There were several conversions during the meeting and some accessions to the church. While Bro. Trogdon is a young and new preacher, this being his first year's work, we find that he has come to us well equipped. We enjoy his sermons; he seems to be filled with the Spirit and preaches with power. His pleadings with the unconverted ones were full of sympathy and love, begging them to give their whole hearts to God, imploring them to repent and become children of God. The short while that Bro. Trogdon has been with us we have learned to love him and we are made to feel that he is a bright and shining light to the dear old Uwharrie Circuit and we feel that he is going to do a good work. And we all say, "God bless him," and our prayers are that he may be successful in winning many souls to Christ. Bro. Trogdon brought his family with him to attend the meeting. We were glad to have the pleasure of their acquaintance. We learned to love them and find that he has a pleasant family and we felt sorry when they told us good-bye to return to their home. I must not forget to say that Bro. Hulin of Denton assisted Bro. Trogdon in his meeting. We were all glad to have Bro. Hulin with us; we learned one year ago to love him and he has many friends at Mt. Zion. We people love to hear him preach, for we know that he is a great preacher, that he preaches with great power and our prayers are that the good Lord will bless all of his efforts and that he may be successful wherever he goes and that he may deliver the message of God. Many of the church people testified alike to the faithful fulfilment of their vows that they would never go back to the world. And many a kind word was spoken by the Christian people. Many a token of affection was pressed into the hands of the unconverted ones. J. C. Hoover.

FRIENDSHIP, YADKIN COLLEGE CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting commenced the 5th Sunday in July and closed the following Thursday evening. Bro. W. D. Fogleman, of Liberty was the pulpit help, and indeed discharged his duties faithfully. He preached some soul-stirring sermons during the week. He was with us on Sunday morning and gave us a missionary sermon which was much enjoyed, after which a collection was taken for foreign misisons, amounting to $5.00. Bro. Fogleman won the hearts of many and we hope he will come again. On Tuesday evening at the close of the service the Third Quarterly Conference was held, business transacted as usual. Finances a little behind, but stewards say they are much encouraged; hope all claims will be met. The meeting resulted in 6 conversions, 5 united with the church, and the church was much revived. Our pastor was with us also on the 4th Sunday in July and filled his regular appointment. We are always glad to have him with us. The S. S. is moving on nicely; last Sunday, 72 attendance, 89 on roll. The Sunday School Convention and picnic will be held at Shiloh on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in August. Hope every S. S. scholar will be present fro all churches on this circuit. Reporter.

Owing to the fact that our little girl has developed a case of scarlet fever and that we are under a forty-five day quarantine my special services for next week at Hebron have been postponed for the present.

Fraternally,

Chas. J. Edwards.

—In the absence of Rev. E. A. Plyler, the editor was called to do service at St. Paul's last Sunday morning. The congregation has improved a little since our last visit there. With this service came the privilege of going to the Sunday school picnic with the St. Paul's people on Saturday afternoon. We went in wagons to the battle ground, and had a good time. The children filled the air with the regular picnic yells going. After rambling over the grounds for an hour or two, all were ready and some eager for the repast that was spread upon the tables. About seventy-five people were in the company. Bro. Routh, assistant superintendent, was master of ceremonies in the absence of Superintendent Nance. The church at St. Paul's is moving upward, we believe. They appreciate Bro. Plyler's preaching. Bro. J. W. Causey is doing good service as teacher of the Baraca Class.

THE PRINTER'S PRAYER DESK.

The foreman of the Recorder office has served in that important position for thirty-nine consecutive years. He is a master of his art; there is not a more skilled or reliable foreman in a newspaper office in the city of Pittsburgh. The young man who presides at our linotype machine has continued in that same position since the linotype has been installed in The Recorder office. He has acquired both speed and skill in the manipulation of the machine. He is an indispensable man. Now both of these gentlemen are of an even temper, mild-mannered and considerate about their work, but we have never regarded either of them as markedly religious or even more than ordinarily devout. What was our surprise then a few days ago, on going into the composing-room, to find these gentlemen had converted the dictionary shelf in their office into what they were pleased to call "The Printer's Prayer-Desk!" Both surprised and mystified, we inquired the meaning of it all. The reply was that it was just what it said, "The Printer's Prayer Desk." "But what is a printer's prayer-desk?" we inquired. "Well, we are reviving an ancient custom of the printing-office in which the prayer-desk was erected so that when an unusually bad piece of copy was received the printer could offer up prayers for the author, and also ask the divine assistance to read it." With this explanation a great light dawned upon us. And now we want it generally known by all our correspondents that we have a finely carved and skillfully executed prayer-desk installed in the composing-room of The Recorder office, all in their behalf.

And no one but those who have suffered know what an agent of torture is "bad copy." Thumb-screws and the torturing instruments of the Inquisition are in it. And what adds to the torture is that it is so needless and so out of place in this intelligent age. Bad copy might have been tolerated a century or more ago in an age of illiteracy, but not now in this enlightened age. Bad copy may arise from ignorance or carelessness, and may take the form of illegible writing, mis-shapen letters, poor spelling, closing a word or sentence with a scrawl or wavering line for all the world like the wiggletails in the rain barrel, a profusion of curlicues in the writing, running the lines of the manuscript together, no punctuation or incorrect punctuation, and much more of the same kind, some of which is ignorance, but most of it sheer carelessness.

Suppose a corespondent having a message for The Recorder proceeds to write it on hard glazed paper with a hard pencil. When he has finished his writing is almost invisible and when received at this office is almost impossible to decipher with the eye, and but littel more legible with the aid of a strong reading glass. That correspondent is at once made a subject of prayer at our printer's prayer-desk. Or suppose a manuscript shows unmistakably the carmarks of bad copy, such as we have above enumerated, the author of that manuscript at once becomes a candidate for the printer's prayers at the prayer-desk.

Can there be conceived the amount of trouble caused the editor, the compositor, the proof-reader when the "L" of the manuscript can not be distinguished from an "S," "W" from an "N" or "M," "i" from a "j," "t" from an "f," and so on. All these manuscripts in which the author has neither dotted his "i's" nor crossed his "t's," and there are many of them, immediately become the subject of the printer's prayers. And then there are so many who make an "o" like an "a," "c" like an "e," and "f" like "p" a "b" like an "l" until the linotype man is tortured into a confusion until it becomes worse confounded. Is it any wonder that our correspondents often complain of the mistakes that have crept in to their communications? Is it any wonder that the initials of a writer's name often appears in print as M. S. when he wrote W. L.? A "bulb" becomes a "bull" in the paper because the writer's "l" and "b" looked precisely alike in the copy. An "irenical preacher" became an "ironical preacher" because the "e" in the copy could not be distinguished from an "o."

And then the punctuation! Following the writer's punctuation and he is made to say some very queer things. For example, the reporter of a church banquet in which there were toasts, attempted to quote the principal one, which was, "Woman, without her, man would be a ravening wolf"; but not being careful of the punctuation, the compositor following copy, set it up thus, "Woman, without her man, is a ravening wolf." Now, who was to blame for the mistake, the reporter or the compositor?

Bad copy, besides being an agent of torture and a source of mistakes, is also unfair. The linotype man must strike the keys with rapid precision in order to make speed and do his work. Because a writer has been careless in writing a single word he must stop and waste enough time in deciphering it to set a whole paragraph, while the writer, if he had exercised two seconds of care, would have saved him all that time and trouble. Of course the author of an article will say that it is all very plain, and so it is, but to nobody else. They are much like the boy, who, upon being asked if there was anything he could do better than anyone else, replied, "Yes, I kin read my own 'ritin'."

Now this editorial is not meant to particularize any one of our correspondents, only those who are flagrantly guilty; nor do we mean to insinuate or offend. We are merely setting a little of the historical fact of our office. We want your messages, dear correspondent; write them as carefully as you can—it is carelessness we have been complaining about. Pick the lint out of the type of your type-writing machine so that "e's" and "o's" and "m's" and "n's" will not look alike. Fashion your letters full and round with the pen and write on good clean paper, and our word for it our foreman and compositor will need to spend less time at their prayer-desk, and they will work with a serener mind.—The Methodist Recorder.

UNDERSTANDING.

It was a dreary morning. Skies were heavy with unfallen rain, and there was a menace in the bite of the wind. Nature seemed to hold no solace for that which had been withdrawn.

A mother faced the duty of closing a home from which a manly and promising youth had gone forever. She stood benumbed above a heap of precious belongings; she was trying to pack them for orderly distribution.

The woman's only companion was the wife of the gardener. She had walked five miles to earn the dollar and a half she was to receive. She had come in breathless and spent from battling with the wind, but she went about her duties, and even sang softly as she worked.

For a long time the mother seemed hardly conscious of the woman's presence, but at last, in an outburst of emotion, she said, "Oh, if you understood this terrible world as I do you could never sing that way! But no one understands such a grief as mine!"

"No," said the woman, gently, "no one but God can tell what is in the heart," and she worked on quietly and let sorrow have its expression until the mother's nerves relaxed. Then after a little she spoke almost as if she were talking to herself:

"No one can understand just how much a human heart is bearing. Grief is sometimes for the living and sometimes for the dead. Your son has left almost as much happiness with you as he has grief. You can't see it now, but by and by the little memories will come and then you will know.

Didn't you ever see the little vines that grow over a grave? They keep spreading out until you can't seem to see the mound. Now these little tender memories will come and spread all out over the grief, and then you'll see more sweetness than grief.

"With me it's different. You said I couldn't understand, and I can't. That is because there will never be any happy memories for me. It will all be just a bare place, but I'm thankful that God can send a little shadow over it sometimes, so I can't always see the spot, and that is the time I know that there is sunshine somewhere.

"You see, when my baby was born—something was wrong, and he never laughed up into my face the way other babies do. All his baby time was sullen and troublesome! Then we used to hope for the time when he would be older and we could show him the way. But when that time came there was more trouble than ever. All through his school-days we had nothing but anxiety and worry and struggle. We were always excusing him and asking pardon for him and some one was always coming to tell us something he had done, until we come to know he wasn't right.

"After that we had to stand between him and punishments he didn't deserve. After a long while we begun to see the light go out within him, and then—how I used to torture the nights with prayers that he would go safe to God before he could do any terrible deed! In those days it seemed to me to be the only way out of harm.

"My prayers were never heard,—anyway, they were never answered,—and he grew bigger and stronger—oh, how I dreaded to see that strength! One awful day—a blank day—he did the deed!"

For a time there was silence in the room. The mother had dried her eyes, but the eyes of the speaker were wide and lustrous and seemed incapable of tears.

In a little while she went on: "The state took care of him after that. For years I had to see my boy with bars between us, and I saw him grow into a bearded man whom I did not know, and who never knew me. The real light all just went out and left that other thing that men watched. That was how my baby grew up."

The mother had stopped the packing of garments, and she came to the woman and laid her hand on the broad shoulders. "Oh," she said, "forget what I have said—you poor soul!"

"Well, you see how it is," the woman said, with just the same sweetness in her voice, "I can't understand gfief like yours—I haven't any experience to understand it with. Death to me is a sweet, comforting mother, that takes back its own and remakes it—I believe."

When the mother went back to her work there was peace in her heart, and the other woman was again singing softly as she worked.—Youth's Companion.

—England is having trouble with strikes and riots. When will men become reasonable enough to do business justly and harmoniously?

HELPFULNESS OF THE HELPLESS.

Everyone may be helpful. One does not need to be rich or learned in order that he may be helpful to his neighbors. A story is told of a young woman who had a trying experience in a hospital. During all the months of her affliction she was greatly comforted and encouraged by a friend who was herself an invalid. She could not visit her friend in the hospital; but she could send messages of comfort and assurances of sympathy and prayer. When at last the young woman was able to leave the hospital she called on her friend and said: 'I do not know how I can ever pay you for all you have done for me. "The obligation was too great for her to discharge. The help she had received was greater than she could measure, and she had no means of compensating her benefactor. Yet that benefactor was a helpless invalid.

If the story of the helpfulness of invalids could be written and printed in a book it would be one of the most interesting and helpful books in the world. A few days ago a good woman died in one of our cities at an advanced age. For more than seventy years she had been an invalid. Forty years ago she could not walk or sit in a chair, but lying in bed with the blinds drawn to soften the light, she was busy working for her Master. She was one of the most helpful persons in the city. There were rich people in that city, and educated people, for it was a college town. There were fine preachers there, but no one of them was more useful than this invalid who had not known a well day since she was a young girl. By her faith, by her cheerfulness, by her courage, by her wise counsels, by her earnest prayers she encouraged and inspired hundreds of weary travelers through this vale of tears.

She was a Methodist, but men and women of different denominations were partakers of the benefits of her good deeds and helpful counsels. One day a Presbyterian minister with one of the elders of his church, called upon her, and was so inspired by her words of courage and hope that he prepared a sermon on the text, "When I am weak, then am I strong," and preached it to his congregation the next Sabbath, and used the beautiful character and life of this Christian woman as an illustration. Thus she preached the gospel of faith and hope and courage and peace to a large congregation of another denomination. Her faith was known afar. Her messages were scattered broadcast over the country. She could not go about doing good as her Master did, but lying in bed and enduring with patience and cheerfulness the affliction which had fallen upon her, and sending out her messages of comfort and peace to many, she did what she could. She was one of the most helpful Christians, and yet she was one of the most helpless creatures.

What a rebuke is such a life as this to others who are always well and strong, but never have time nor strength nor heart to help other people. Surely we think too much of ourselves and too little of others. Not only invalids, but obscure people whose names do not carry much weight in a political or ecclesiastical convention, have been greatly useful. We look to the millionaires and the statesmen as the men who are the makers of the world. But more helpfulness has arisen from the ranks of the lowly than from among the great. Men and women whose names were never printed in a daily paper and whose deeds have not been paraded and trumpeted have done more to help people than the mighty.

One writer tells of a village carpenter who was one of the most useful men in the comunity. He was not a scholar. He could not speak well in public. He was not worth two thousand dollars, and could not write down a large subscription to any good cause, but he was helpful! A new family never came into the village that he did not search out and extend to them a neighborly welcome. He was always ready to watch with the sick. He was always on the lookout to give a stranger a seat in his pew. He found time to speak a kind word to the children in the street. Boys and girls might be seen climbing into his one-horse wagon when he had no other load. "He had a genius for helping folks, and it was a joy to meet him in the street." We hear of a genius for making money, a genius for invention, a genius for music, a genius for poetry, a military genius, but above them all shines the genius for helping folks.

We may all have this talent. It is not like the talent for poetry, which must be born with one. This genius may be bestowed in a second birth. One who is truly born agin, born from above, and lives close to the throbbing heart of the Master, who "went about doing good," will have this genius for helping folks. By a kind word, by a kind look, by extending a helping hand, by letting the light of a true Christian character shine, we may lift up a fallen brother and open a rift in the dark cloud of sorrow through which the sunshine of glory shall fall on many a broken and fainting heart.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

—An old gray-haired negro was sentenced to six months' work on the city streets here for selling beer in violation of law. He is an old offender, but never convicted before.

—Rev. J. O. Atkinson, editor of the Christian Sun, will teach Political Economy in Elon College this year. It will be a busy year for him, but he is accustomed to being busy.

CASABIANCA.

Mama was going out calling. Theo had watched her while she puffed her pretty hair and pinned on her best collar and got out her white gloves. It must be very interesting, making calls. Much nicer than being left at home with Peggy, who was ironing and almost sure to be cross. A little crease had been folding itself in and out between Theo's eyes ever since he knew Mama was going, till a sudden thought smoothed it out in a flash.

"Mama, couldn't I go calling, too?" he asked. "I'm most sure I'd bother Peggy if I stay at home and—and—"

"Where would you like to go?" inquired mama.

Theo considered. Don wasn't at home, Marjorie had company, and Marie was taking her nap. Anyway, those wouldn't be calls—they'd be just everyday play visits. Calls were for grown-ups. "I'd like to call on old Mrs. Phillips," he said slowly. "She's about the grown-upest lady I'm acquainted with."

Mama smiled, but she only said: "Why yes, I should think you might go there, if you can be very polite. Callers are, you know, and always try not to make their hostess any trouble, or stay too long."

Theo thought it over. Yes, he'd try it, especially if he could have on his best suit and the kid gloves Aunt Emilie had sent for his birthday. Mama helped him get ready, even waiting till she had pushed every chubby finger into those gloves, and buttoned the fat wrists out of sight.

Mrs. Phillips came to the door herself when Theo rang the bell. She was a tall, stately old lady with white hair, and a manner that never had made Theo feel quite at home with her. It was because he never would have dreamed of making her a "play visit" that he thought of coming to call.

"What do you want, little boy?" asked Mrs. Phillips.

"I've come to call on you," explained the visitor. "Mama's gone calling, and I—have, too." Theo was a little uncomfortable. He hadn't expected to have to account for his coming.

"Well, did you ever? Come in and have a seat. But I'll have to get you to excuse me while I take a short nap. I've been so drowsy all afternoon I can't keep awake any longer. I'll only be a very few minutes."

Theo said "Certainly," because he thought that was the polite thing to say, but he didn't believe Mrs. Phillips heard him. She had dropped into her big chair, untied her cap-strings, and closed her eyes. Just then the clock struck three. When it struck four Theo felt for his clean handkerchief, and wiped a wet spot off his sleeve and another off his cheek. But he didn't make a sound. He remembered what mama had said, and he was trying to obey—only about staying long, and that he felt he couldn't control.

It was almost half past four when Mrs. Phillips woke up. Her caller still sat where she had put him, his eyes were heavy, and the corners of his mouth were drooping down instead of curving up as they usually did, but his shoulders were straight and his kid gloves were folded patiently together, with the chubby fingers still inside them.

Mrs. Phillips stared for an instant, then suddenly remembered. Then she looked at the clock, rubbed her eyes, and looked again. After that she did the most surprising thing. Just gathered her caller up in her lap and kissed him.

"You dear little gentleman. You're a boy in a thousand—a real Casabianca. Please, please forgive me."

Theo didn't know why she called him such a queer, long name, but he understood what followed very well indeed, for Mrs. Phillips could make the most beautiful cookies in the shortest time. And she assured him that it was time for the call to end and the "play visit" to begin, and it didn't matter how long that lasted.

It was tea-time when he left, with a rosy apple in each jacket pocket, a bag of cookies in one hand, and a slice of cake in the other.

"Come again soon, Casabianca," Mrs. Phillips called after him.

"I will, thank you," he smiled back; and he kept his word, for they were the best of friends after that. Mama told him the story of Casabianca. Ask your mama to tell it to you.—Elizabeth Price in S. S. Times.

STUMPS AND FLOWERS.

I remember once moving to a new place, and I was hoping I should have a nice garden; but when I looked out to see what I had, I saw an ugly stump in the very center of it. What should we do with it? It could not be removed. At last a happy thought came: it could be covered. And so we made a mound, planted and trailed the lovely flowers over it, and no one suspected the ugly stump. There are ugly stumps in families, in social life, and even in churches, and the best thing we can do is to have the "love that covereth"—trail the flowers of faith, hope and love so that no one shall know the ugly stumps.—Margaret Bottome.

THE BOY'S SACRIFICE.

He was a good little boy and very thoughtful. He had heard about the great scarcity of water throughout the country. He came to his mother and slipped his hand into her's.

"Mamma," he said, "is it true that in some places the little boys and girls have scarcely enough water to drink?"

"That is what the papers say, my dear."

"Mamma," he presently said, "I'd like to give up something for those poor little boys and girls."

His mother gave him a fond look. "Yes, dear. And what would you like to give up?"

"Mamma," he said in his earnest way, "as long as the water is so very scarce, I think I ought to give up bein' washed."—Ladies' Home Journal.

OUR LIFE WORK.

We would take care so to manage ourselves all day, especially when it draws toward night, that we may not be unfitted and put out of frame for our evening devotions; that our hearts may not be overcharged, either on the one hand with surfeiting and drunkenness, as theirs often are who are men of pleasure, or, on the other hand, with the cares of this life, as theirs often are who are men of business, but that we may have a command both of our thoughts and of our time, that we may finish our work, which will be an earnest of our finishing our life's work well.—Matthew Henry.

We call attention of our readers to the Opening Number of the Elon College Bulletin, advertisement of which will be found in another column. This is a thirty-two page bulletin and contains matters of great import to any who may be considering the matter of going away to school this fall. It has a leading article on the Outlook for Co-education and other articles on the True Greatness of a College, Elon and Her Service, Specialization Gone to Seed, the Time Element in Education, Education and Training, Colleges and Universities, besides instructions as to what to bring, when and how to come, cost, etc. Any reader of this paper may have a copy of this publication free by addressing President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

—Bro. R. H. Brooks and family returned last week from Hiddenite, where they spent a vacation of several days to their delight and profit.

—Bro. W. F. Clarida, one of the teachers of Moriah Sunday school, informs us that that school voted to give the second Sunday collection each month to the Denton Orphnagae. Their offering will be appreciated and no doubt will be large enough to aid materially.

—"The hand that wrecks the cradle wrecks the nation."—Rentoul.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

AWARDING THE JAPANESE BANNERS.

Many schools have not sent in their Children's Day offering. The committee cannot properly determine to which schools the banners are to go. The matter should be settled speedily, and the schools' names published. Moreover, the Board greatly needs the money which has not been forwarded to me. Delay causes financial embarrassment, because large monthly remittances must go to Japan a month in advance to meet regular obligations. Please send all money intended for the Board of Foreign Missions to me at once. A receipt will be sufficient to present to your conference.

IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARY YEAR.

Next year will mark the 20th anniversary of the organization of the Japan Mission Conference, and of the ordination of the first Japanese preacher, Rev. Gen Maruyama. The conference was composed of three missionaries, one Japanese minister, four probationers and two delegates, and there were two mission stations—Yokohama and Nagoya—four missions, and three mission circuits.

Today the Conference has three missionaries, 13 ordained Japanese, 10 preachers, and one employed minister and seven evangelists, total 34. There are 15 organized churches, 5 provisional ones, and 21 other preaching places with 2004 adherents, and 45 Sunday schools with 2694 scholars, and 5 C. E. Societies. The territory covered is as far as from New York City to beyond Washington, D. C., and is traversed by a great trunk railway and the famous national road.

A COMMENDABLE COMMEMORATION.

This dual anniversary ought to be commemorated in some practical and worthy way. To supply that which is most needed to insure the further success of the work would gladden and inspire all our workers in Japan, and would evince the appreciation and interest of the home church. The Board hitherto has been absolutely unable to do this, although it has been the overshadowing need for the last two or three years, and it must look to the church at large.

The Maryland Conference gave last year to the Board $9,687.02, and it has gone on record as "pledging itself in every reasonable endeavor to raise for Foreign Missions this year the sum of $5,000 in addition to the assessment and the Children's Day offering."

Other Conferences will, doubtless, take somewhat similar action looking to decided advance in contributions the ensuing Conference year for this special emergency.

Printed matter will be sent out, and plans for concerted action, and other features of a vigorous campaign will be presented later. The church will be called upon for one supreme effort to do its full share of work this year in adequately providing the necessities for the Japan work, and for enlarging activities beyond.

THE OBJECTS.

The work at one point in Tokyo, the capital, has been crippled from lack of a church building. The Japanese membership, giving generously, lacks financial ability, and must have a grant from our Board such as churches in America receive from our Board of Home Missions. This will help them materially to become self supporting. They only wish a neat, attractive structure, and the request is for $3,000.

Nagoya's need is pathetic, because with a new church organization at the College, where two teachers and a number of students were recently baptized, the rented building cannot hold even the college, not to mention the people of the neighborhood. If any where on earth a church is needed, it is in Nagoya. It is a serious reflection on our denomination that our Nagoya College with 320 young men now enrolled has only a rented Japanese house for all religious services, and that only about two thirds of the students can get into it. They must have a church, and $2500 is required.

Yokkaichi is a rapidly growing sea-port, 18 miles from Nagoya, of 35,000 inhabitants. Our church there held services in a good Japanese house, but it was sold, and now small and unsuitable quarters are occupied. The field is most promising, it is a new work, and a church is the most urgent need, and $1,000 will build it.

Then the College at Nagoya cannot enlarge unless it has the plot of ground now available, and a Science Hall, and both should be provided at once. Several students have the ministry in view, the religious work is progressing favorably, the influence of the College is extending, and it is one of the "biggest things" our denomination has today, and ought to be equipped for the largest possible service. $6,500 is needed for land and Hall.

Another missoniary must be sent out, a Missionary Home be built, and a few other essentials secured, and if the church will contribute in 12 months through the assessment, the Sunday schools' Christmas offering, the special campaign and the next Children's Day offering the sum of $50,000 all this can be done. It only means that $23,332.34 must be secured above what was given last fiscal year. It can be done. Will you help to do it?

Fred C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.

Our meeting will commence the fourth Sunday in August. We are hoping to have a good meeting. We request all Christian people to pray for us a good revival, and for the unsaved souls in our community.

Our help is Rev. H. W. Braswell. We think that we will get our new church so we can hold our revival meeting in it. We have been having a good Sunday school.

We had a singing school a few weeks ago. Mr. Joe Hicks was our teacher. We all liked him, and we hope that it will be so he can teach us another school in the future.

Janie Sisk.

—Dr. J. H. Jowett says that the most pleasing memory of the coronation which he carried away with him is that of the King and Queen taking off their crowns before their approach to the sacramental table. It was weak, uncrowned humanity paying homage to the King of kings.

LEAVING THE NEST.

Two thrushes came to my garden,
In the bloom of the early spring,
And built their nest in the holly,
With many a flutter of wing;
And four little heads looked over
The rim of the will-lined nest,
And I thought of the songs of the future
From my birds of the spotted breast.

I went again to the garden,
And my little birds had flown;
The nest was there in the holly,
But all forsaken and lone;
For it needs the ampler spaces,
The higher and larger things,
And the nest is all too narrow
For the bird which has bound its wings.

We made our nest in a garden,
Where the flowers of God are grown—
In a street of the crowded city,
But the nest was all our own;
And the children's voices filled it
With a music passing sweet,
And the home was a bit of Eden,
Though it looked on the narrow street.

But the years passed by, and the children
Into fair maidens grew,
And with blossoms of the orange
Out of the nest they flew;
For Love had sent them soaring,
And given them golden wings,
And the home-nest was too narrow
For the bird that had found its wings.

And as we sit in the gloaming,
And think of the long age,
Though the house is strangely silent,
It is best it should be so;
For still we can hear the music,
As our little birdie sings
By its own sweet nest in the garden,
Now it has found its wings.

—Dr. Henry Burton in N. Y. Christian Advocate.

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON.

By Charles A. Hines.

Get down your geography or atlas and locate Turkey and Persia on the map. Note that the two countries are adjoining and that Persia connects Turkey and India. These countries lie in the center of the world's mission field. Take your history and find out something about these countries and their people.

In both countries Mohammedanism is the dominant religion. If you are not familiar with tenets of this faith you should learn something about it. See how much like and yet how wholly unlike the Christian religion it is.

The rulers of both countries have recently been forced to abdicate, and more liberal governments have been instituted without war or bloodshed. The younger men in the two countries are responsible for the political changes; they have demanded and have obtained constitutional governments, more liberal rule, and more progressive administrations. This has opened up for the missionaries fields that are ripe unto the harvest, and the work, already begun, can be carried forward without fear or restraint from the political authorities.

Both nations are rich in history and in legend. The charm of the Orient is shared by them. The social life is not as bad as it has been pictured. Under the new regime conditions will continue to improve. If the United States and England will send missionaries enough to preach the gospel great things will be accomplished in the two countries in the present generation. The younger generation is convinced of the faults in their social, political and religious thought and life and are open to conviction and salvation.

The area of Turkey is 1,579,982 square miles; its population is 40,440,957. The area of Persia is 628,000 square miles; its population, 7,653,000. Compared with the United States, the two countries are considerably more than half as large and have more than half as many people.

For centuries the governments have been despotic, the taxes have been burdensome, and public education almost unknown. The mission schools are doing a great work, and under the new governments more educational advantages will be offered.

Newspapers are springing up. The freedom of the press is a recent thing, but as said in our constitution, "it is one of the great bulwarks of freedom," and a free press will work wonders among the people.

Polygamy exists to some extent, but this has been exaggerated. There are some who have more than one wife, but the number is comparatively few. The poor cannot afford it and those in better circumstances will not undertake it, for the reason that what is purchased for one wife must be bought for all.

The Christian religion has played a large part in bringing about recent reforms and will continue to do so. What has been accomplished in a political way must be repeated in a social and religious way. Several more revolutions, without fight or loss of blood, must be brought to pass—and will be. Not all the political questions are solved. The matters of adjusting themselves to the new forms of government is not the work of a day, as the history of America so clearly shows.

The missionaries have paved the way for progress in both these lands of oppression. They were not in the political field, either, only educating these people by quietly bringing to them the new light, the Gospel of Christ. The transformation of governments into constitutional monarchies is working its way into the very being of benighted people. The spirit of justice is growing, and Christianity now has a golden opportunity in both Persia and Turkey.

"Before the revolution Christian Endeavor was under the ban." Societies were not allowed the pledge, nor could members wear the badge. C. E. Unions and conventions were not permitted; in Turkey, however, Christian Endeavor was more favorably received. The Endeavorers were a brave class of young people. We are told that the Armenian Endeavorers remained true to their faith during the terrible massacres. Indeed these young people teach us beautiful lessons in heroism.

When the shah of Persia proclaimed the constitution, forty newspapers sprang into life. When the constitution was refused, the newspapers were suppressed; then after the old shah was deposed newspapers began to appear again. Despotism and popular education will not thrive in the same land at the same time. Increased attendance in the mission schools comes with the new regime; even the Moslems are being reached, and some of high rank.

Discussion Topics.

Tell of the democratic movement in these lands.

What part have schools in natural regeneration?

Religion in Persia; in Turkey.

Daily Readings.

M. Growth of false religion
2 Kings 17:24-34
T. Blight of error ..... Isa. 9: 16-21
W. The fruit test ..... Matt. 7: 15-20
T. The coming of light ... Acts 26: 16-20
F. A prayer for the east .. Eph. 1: 17-23
S. The victory ..... Phil. 2: 9-11
S. The topic.

—Angus Campbell, inventor of a cotton picker, died in Hamilton, Ontario, yesterday, aged 59.

—Mamie Fulp, of Winston, aged 13 months, was drowned by falling head first into a pail of water.

TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

The Lord my shepherd is,
My wants He will supply;
For He is mine, and I am His,
My shepherd ever nigh.
In pastures green He leadeth me,
Beside those waters still;
In paths of peace He still will be
My guide through every ill.

The Lord my shepherd is,
My soul He will restore;
And in the paths of righteousness
I'll walk forever more.
Yea, though I walk through valley drear,
No evil will I fear,
His rod and staff they comfort me,
My shepherd still is near.

The Lord my shepherd is,
A feast He will prepare
In midst of all my enemies
For me with tenderest care;
My cup o'erflows with happiness,
His goodness I can see;
His love and mercy will provide
All coming days for me.

The Lord my shepherd is,
Oh, sweet these words to me,
That thou, dear Lord, will be my guide,
E'en through eternity;
That in Thy courts I may abide,
With Thee, my Lord, I'll be,
Through endless ages I may dwell
With those I love, and Thee.

—Elizaann Estes Kendrie.

THE EVANGELIZATION OF THE WORLD.

For the evangelization of the world, the church must return to the apostolic faith and doctrine as revealed in the Bible; and ministers of the gospel must cease to quote doctors of divinity with more familiarity than the Scriptures. We must return to the simplicity of the early church, with its entire lack of facilities for carnally minded men to seize on its revenues; so that the money spent in steeples or communion sets can be spent in sending the gospel. We must teach Bible truth with so much emphasis that sinners recognize the message as from God, and not from a sonorous orator, depending for his effect on his wit, his white vest and his rhetoric. Christendom must be christianized before China will be converted. The denominations at home must learn to depend less on organization, on machinery, on conventions, on "societies" for this and that, and more on the gospel.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ANNUAL LOW RATE EXCURSION TO ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., TUESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1911.

Via Southern Railway and Pennsylvania Railroad.

Special train will leave Greensboro, N. C., at 10:45 P. M., August 22nd, and arrive at Atlantic City about noon August 23rd. Train will consist of Pullman cars as well as day coaches, and anyone desiring Pullman accommodations can secure same by making reservation in advance. Tickets will be sold good going only on special train, and returning on any regular train within the limit of the ticket, which will be fifteen days from date of sale. Stop-overs will be permitted at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington on the return trip, within final limit of the ticket.

Passengers from Branch line points can use regular trains into Greensoro connecting with the special train from that point.

Following round trip rates will apply from stations named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$11.00
Kernersville, N. C.	12.00
Liberty, N. C.	11.50
Mount Airy, N. C.	12.50
Madison, N. C.	12.00
North Wilkesboro, N. C.	13.00
Pilot Mountain, N. C.	12.50
Reidsville, N. C.	10.50
Sanford, N. C.	11.50
Siler City, N. C.	11.50
Walnut Cove, N. C.	12.00

For Pullman reservations or any other information, apply to any Ticket Agent, Southern Railway, or write

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

W. H. McGLAMERY,
Greensboro, N. C.

—Our commission government is not having smooth sailing. The law requiring cattle to be brought to the city alive for inspection does not please the farmers, and the merchants are not pleased with the summary order requiring all awnings to be seven feet high. It takes a great deal of wisdom to rule a city.

ORPHANS' HOME—TREAS.' REPORT.

Welsh Memorial S. S.	$ 2.25
Hebron S. S.	3.25
Fair Grove Birthday Fund	.26
Denton Aux., entertainment	11.55
Rev. Joel Trogdon	1.00
West Lexington	2.33
Mt. Carmel	1.11
Rev. J. E. Pritchard	1.00
Mrs. Silas Powell	.50
Asheville Church	14.95
H. A. Garrett	1.00
Shiloh S. S.	2.08
Chestnut Ridge S. S.	5.00
Fair View S. S.	2.16
Dulin S. S.	1.00
Mrs. B. C. Lambeth	1.00
High Point Aux.	7.90
Mebane S. S.	2.30
Bethel S. S.	1.15
Salem Church	6.00
Pleasant Grove Church	5.50
Fair Grove S. S.	1.00
Total	$74.29

In my last report Bethesda S. S. was credited with only 60c. when it should have been $1.60. I will always be glad to correct any mistakes which any one may see in my reports.

We are glad to say that the little boy who has been sick in the Home is rapidly improving, and the other children are well. Yours in the work,

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Mrs. J. J. Welch	$ 6.00
Mrs. Joel Trogdon	1.00
Mt. Pleasant S. S.	.90
Friendship S. S.	1.20
Asheville church	4.95
Total	$14.05

Etta Auman.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address

PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

—"The hand that wrecks the cradle wrecks the nation."—Rentoul.

"Billy" Sunday's six weeks' revival campaign in Erie, Pa., resulted in 5,312 conversions.

—The pope of Rome is very ill.

—Raleigh has another murder case—L. J. Norris charged with shooting J. B. Bissett.

—In Africa there are 2,470 Protestant missionaries, 13,089 native assistants, 221,156 communicants, and 527,800 adherents. In 4,000 schools 203,400 pupils receive instruction.—Exchange.

—Twenty-five per cent. of this generation is producing fifty per cent. of the next: imbeciles, paupers, criminals, and defectives are reproducing faster than manufacturers, merchants, lawyers, physicians and all the professions.—Pearson.

—It is strange and wonderful in a country where land is abundant and labor is in demand and conditions are favorable that so many people crowd into New York. That city last year gained in population 233,524, and the Health Department of that city estimates the population now to be 5,000,407.

—There is no more excuse for a frenzied mob burning a negro at the stake in Pennsylvania than there is in South Carolina or Georgia, and such an act of inhumanity is deplorable anywhere. It was at Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 14, and the victim was a wounded colored man who had killed a policeman. The mob dragged the poor fellow from the hosptial out of town to a tree and there burned all that was mortal of the man. Great is the pity indeed that men will so forget themselves either in the North or in the South. Lynching is murder of the worst sort, and it is not to be condoned anywhere.

GOD'S CAUSE NEVER FAILS.

You cannot find any place in Scripture where a man was ever sent by God to do a work in which he failed. God sent Moses to Egypt to bring three millions of bondmen out of the house of bondage into the promised land. Did he fail? It looked at first as if he were going to. If we had been in the court when Pharaoh said to Moses, "Who is God, that I should obey him?" and ordered him out of his presence, we might have thought it meant failure. But did it? God sent Elijah to stand before Ahab, and it was a bold thing when he told him that there should be neither dew nor rain. But did he not look up the heavens for three years and six months? Now, here is God sending his beloved Son from his bosom, from the throne down into this world. Do you think he is going to fail? Thanks be to God, He can save to the uttermost, and there is not a man who may not find it so if he is willing to be saved.—Ram's Horn.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Rev. T. A. Plyler brought his wife to St. Leo's Hospital last Sunday. The first operation was not sufficient. Another is necessary, and there are grave doubts as to this saving her life. Guilford Circuit quarterly conference realized Bro. Plyler's situation and gave him a vacation of indefinite extent and resolved to urge payment of salary in full as soon as possible. Mrs. Plyler's disease was pronounced tuberculosis of the bowels. A portion of the intestines was removed in the former operation.

—England, France, and this nation have joined in an arbitration treaty. It will have to be ratified before it is binding, but it probably will be. This comes as a result of President Taft's almost casual remark in a speech some time ago, that questions of honor also might be arbitrated. Thus the cause of peace moves onward, and our country and our president are in the lead.

—A little girl, three years old, living near Guilford Battle Ground, wandered away from home one day last week. She was out all night. The next day she went to a neighbor's house, her feet and legs covered with blood from briar scratches, and her face covered with blood and dirt. She said: "I can't find my muver." She was not recognized, but was taken in, washed and fed, and taken to her home, where a band had been gathered for a general search.

—It is sad to read of one boy stabbing another, but such a thing occurred in this city night before last. Will Busick cut Frank Hudson and is in jail, while Hudson is in the hospital and may die.

Richmond has an ugly murder case on hand—young Beattie charged with shooting his wife. He took her out in an automobile and brought her home dead, claiming than an unknown man had shot her. Another woman figures in the case. He is a cigarette smoker and the son of a banker.

—We insert the advertisement of Adrian College this week. Eight persons have gone to Adrian College from this county, and we would be glad to hear of others' going. Adrian is one of the prettiest little cities we have seen, and the College is at just the right place—not too near in nor too far out. Earnest students have there a splendid opportunity to think and grow. Dr. Anthony, the president, believes in the Methodist Protestant Church, and is trying to make the College serve her interests.

—See Dr. Hubbell's announcement of "All ready." We have seen the program. It is an inspiring one.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting design that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is th first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dep't.

ELONCOLLEGE (Co-educational).

When choosing a school in which to place their children, parents wish to consider the following special points:

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL INFLUENCES. The moral atmosphere of Elon College is of the highest type. The Spiritual influences surrounding the young man or the young woman will not allow them to go far astray.

HEALTHFULNESS. Good water from a deep well, buildings well cared for, good heat and lights, plenty of fresh air, and a situation in the best part of North Carolina insure the healthfulness of the students here.

STRONG COURSES OF STUDY. Entrance requirements equal to those of the best colleges in the country, a strong faculty of university men, and courses requiring sixty-nine hours for the Bachelor's degree, make Elon a college whose graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of the leading Universities of the country. Courses in Business, Elocution, Art, Music, and Pedagogy are offered leading to certificates and degrees.

EQUIPMENT. Splendid Library and Reading Room, ample grounds, laboratories, large dormitories, buildings equa to the best, with every equipment and appliance makes Elon stand among the from rank of colleges in the South. All buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and have water and bath rooms on every floor.

ECONOMY. All expenses can be paid for the college courses for from $125.00 to $200.00 a yean according to the student's power of economy and his place selected for board and room.

COEDUCATIONAL. Parents who read The Methodist Protestant Herald can send both their sons and daughters to Elon College with the assurance that they will have the best that the educational world has to offer.

FOR CATALOGUE, ILLUSTRATED BULLETINS, etc., address,
PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER, EVEN CHRIST, AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1911. NUMBER 39.

MY DENOMINATION.

My denomination awakens my love and commands my loyalty because of what it is doctrinally. Having the modifying word "Protestant," not so well understood, attached to the well-known word "Methodist" in our denominational name, "Methodist Protestant," it often, among strangers, becomes necessary to explain for what our church stands. We wish it distinctly understood that we are not protesting against anything that is distinctively Methodistic in doctrine. Methodism was born in an effort to emphasize the importance of the life of God in the soul, as opposed to a surrender to ritualism and dependence upon the outward forms of religion. It says, "Religion is not form, but it is life—the life of God in the soul, through the Holy Spirit dwelling within." In the beautiful parable of the vine and the branches in the gospel of John, it is made to appear that, as the life of the vine flows in the branches, making them fruitful, so the life of God should pulse in man, making him productive of the fruits of righteousness. To this great fact the Methodist Protestant Church has steadily held, and she has tried to make it practical in the life of her members.

* * *

My denomination awakens and holds my love and loyalty, because of what it is in church government, in ecclesiastical polity. Here is where our protest is entered, not against Methodism, as already indicated, but against the Episcopacy that has been associated with Methodism, though not being an essential part of it. We are Methodists in the truest sense of the word, protesting against Episcopacy. Here again we are often asked to explain just what our ecclesiastical principle is, as distinguished from the Episcopal Methodism. We can do it best in a concrete way, by saying that our Methodism is a pyramid resting upon its base—the solid foundation of the people. It is is both democratic and republican in its form of government. It is democratic in the local church, where each member has a voice and vote in local affairs, and it is republican or representative in the relation of the governing bodies of the church to each other. On the other hand, the Episcopal Methodists are a pyramid resting upon its peak or apex. The authority or power is not derived from the people, but from the ministry; and this is no less true in the local church than it is in the larger governing bodies—the people may have some influence, but they have comparatively little statutory power. Hence the Methodist Protestant Church is distinctively the church of the people, among Methodists.

* * *

My denomination awakens and holds my love and loyalty, because of its intense evangelistic spirit. It fully recognizes the importance and the increasing importance of purely educational methods of soul-winning and soul-culture; and from the very first it was forward in the introduction of Christian Endeavor methods among its children and young people. The mission and importance of the Sunday school as a great agency for soul-winning and Christian culture has been fully recognized. But still it has never lost sight of the great fact that men must be called to repentance through the preached word and its application to the heart through the power and work of the Holy Spirit. The necessity of the new heart for admission to the kingdom of God and to the church is kept to the front. Our ministry has not lost its passion for souls; and as a result our altars are filled with penitents, and, in many places, are filled with those crying out with the Philippian jailer, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" This has been increasingly true during the last two years, as there appears to be a revival of evangelism among us, of no mean proportions. True, we have not been able to retain for our membership all that have been converted at our altars, because there is a liberal spirit among our people that encourages penitents to find Christ first and then to find a church home that shall be congenial. We rejoice to know that we have spiritual sons and daughters in many communions. These, no doubt, when credit is being given for the service rendered to the "little ones" whom Jesus commended to Christian love, will "rise up and call her (our church) blessed."

* * *

Finally, we have love and admiration for our church because she has largely, in her ministry, retained the apostolic spirit that so distinctively characterized her founders. As in the beginning of the Christian church, the apostles and Christians went out, mostly at their own charges, preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ; and as our fathers preached the gospel of mutual rights in the same spirit, so our people now are ready, when occasion arises, to show their devotion to their distinctive principles and to make sacrifices for them; and they still think their principles have a place and a work to do among the ecclesiasticisms.—Rev. C. E. Wilbur, D. D., in The Methodist Recorder.

—Dr. J. Sala Leland, the president of the Pittsburg Conference, has been granted a three weeks' vacation by his church, the First Church, North Side. Dr. Leland, instead of spending his vacation at some seaside or mountain resort, is visiting some of the outlying and weaker charges of the Pittsburg District, in order to become better acquainted with their true condition, so as to be better able to advise them and provide for them in the future.—Recorder.

BEFORE THEY START.

In a few weeks seventeen million of our boys and girls will be in school. Most of them will have the great pleasure of boarding at home. Thousands will have to go to boarding schools. Some will get safely home at the end of the term. Some will return in their coffins. Some will find empty chairs at home, father, mother, sister or brother having passed away.

Let pastors visit the homes and pray with parents and children "before they start." A. D. Betts.

—The pulpit is not a rostrum, not a stage. It is the high vantage-ground from which the preacher, obtaining sight of spiritual wonders, describes them to his people.—The Continent.

—Edison, the great inventor, has taken his first vacation in twenty years, and gone to Europe with his family for two months.

SUNDAY RELIGION.

Mr. Reader, if this doesn't concern you, don't read it.

Did it ever occur to you how many are guilty of this religion? It's a serious question.

Have you Sunday religion? Is your entire mind and body sold to worldly things and desires six days and spiritual conditions one? This is Sunday religion.

Consider the unfortunate man that arises Monday with seventeen wrinkles in his forehead, everything wrong; his dear wife speaks to him kindly and he "snaps" her up. He is squalling up the boys. He gets out to work fretting all the day; nothing pleases him. It doesnt' rain sufficiently, that gets him wrong. He continues this from day to day until Sunday morning comes. Those wrinkles vanish; going to church now. He gets to church, shaking hands with everybody. He is as pleasant as a spring morning. He goes into the church, doesn't stop at the rear, doesn't stop at the center, but continues to the "amen corner." He sits there with his face outshining the sun almost. Every time the preacher strikes down on some backward brother, this man smiles behind his ears. Of course he is not the brother: everything pleasant now. He looks so happy, the preacher asks him to lead the prayer, and listen and consider!

What is that son of his thinking that he threatened to "knock in the head" with an axe the preceding day, and the wife that he gave a good "setting out" for not getting breakfast soon enough?

This is not all talk; it's truth: it's Sunday religion.

Take then the next man. He gets up town Saturday afternoon; there he meets many friends. Now what? They converse until this becomes tiresome. Some one suggests they have "something to drink." Well, this man can't be selfish, so he takes some too. This bottle is emptied, so this man thinks it to be his time to "set up." Where is it to be obtained? From the "blind tiger." See, associating with and encouraging a very degraded person. He continues this until disabled to go. Some one gets him home helpless. Well, by Sunday morning he's all right except the eyes are a little swollen. He keeps out of the way of the family until church time. He gets to church as the other man, as pleasant as moonshine. He gets a book and sings louder than the organ. Ready to do anything that's "good." And while this is going on what is the man thinking that helped get him home the night before unconscious? You can't prevent these thoughts, and sometimes you can't prevent people expressing them. Sunday religion! Sunday religion!

Now consider the merchant. He gets to church in the same good manner, almost holy. If he ever got a penny wrong he wants to sink it in the sea. When the preacher strikes some touching point, you see the tears flowing down this man's cheeks. Yes, I reckon he can't stop them. This man prays the "biggest" prayer of the day. Now while this is being done, what is the man thinking that purchased a pair of shoes from this merchant that were undoubtedly worthless, and he would not exchange them? Sunday religion! Sunday religion!

You may say that these people have "nothing to do with it." True they may not have, but suppose you can deceive ninety per cent. of the people on Sunday, you don't deceive God. And so, what if a man gain the whole world and lose his own soul? And what if a man fool the world and then be lost? This subject needs much consideration. Doesn't it?

Let us be what we are. You may think you are fooling all, but you are not; no, that you are not.

We that have Sunday religion, let's consider our spiritual condition. If we were to pass away while making our Sunday school talk, we might be all right; but think, six chances to one. Sunday religion; deception.

Remember, this religion will not save you, and remember my conscientious advice, if you can't have any but Sunday religion, don't have that; don't have that!

Polk Garrett.

Henderson, N. C., Aug. 19, 1911.

FROM NORTHFIELD TO NEW YORK CITY.

The General Conference of Christian workers at Northfield is an inspiration to any Christian that will go and listen. Of course you can't take it all in, but you can be kept busy hearing such things as are interesting to you.

Dr. Hutton, of Glasgow, Scotland, in his addresses to ministers was very helpful. Dr. Strong, of Rochester Seminary, is a man of evangelistic spirit and plainly showed his interest in such work by his addresses and the way he said young preachers were instructed in that institution where he teaches. But even at Northfield there were some who by their action showed that they didn't believe in salvation by faith.

Mr. Stebbins, the leader of the music, after singing a hymn one day on that subject, "Saved by Grace," asked all who believed in that doctrine to stand, and the vast majority arose.

There was a heated discussion one day on the "New Evangelism." Some desired old methods. Dr. Torrey said, "I laugh sometimes and I believe God laughs when men talk about new methods. What we need to save souls and have revivals of the old time power as Wesley, Finney and Moody, is for the Church to get on her knees in prayer, and it will come." I am sure that a great majority were with him. Mr. Fred Smith said, "Wesley is in his grave"—and before he finished the sentence Dr. Torrey said, "No, he's marching on."

I wish I could tell the readers of the Herald all the good things I heard, but cannot. Space forbids even what I remember. If you want the principal addresses, you can get them in The Record of Christian Work, published at Northfield.

We left South Vernon, Vermont, Monday afternoon and spent last night in Troy, N. Y. We saw much to delight the eye yesterday. We passed through the famous Hoosac Tunnel, a ten minutes ride. We often see the hog spirit on the cars. Seems to me worse up here than in the South. A nicely dressed man(?) sat in front of us. He would not even put down the window at the request of his wife, much less for the comfort of the other passengers. But he sneezed and coughed before we got through. Of course Mrs. Bethea laughed—in sympathy with his wife, I guess. The hog gets his feed and gets fat, but he gets butchered in the end.

We had a pleasant night in Troy and took the trolley car for Albany early in time for breakfast. We are now aboard the biggest boat of the Hudson Bay Line, carrying 5,500 passengers, and they way they come aboard at every landing, I think the full limit will be reached before we reach New York. We are now passing in full view of the Catskill Mountains. This is indeed a delightful ride. We expect to reach New York at 5:30 P. M., and should the crooks not get the cranks we hope to give you some more jots by the way. We are now nearing Kingston Point.

More later.

N. G. Bethea.

On Board Steamer Hendrick Hudson, August 16, 1911.

ASHEBORO'S PROGRESS.

In one short twelve months there have been added to the conveniences and necessities, waterworks, sewerage, a public park, a day current of electric power to supply factories, better hotel facilities, and now two new railroads "loom up" as future prospects for this good town which never stands still, but is always on the go.—The Courier.

WEBSTER'S REPLY TO HAYNE.

There is little doubt, we opine, that Mr. Webster in his "Reply to Hayne," touched the high water mark of American political oratory. By common consent it is accepted almost as a truism that that speech is beyond all rivalry the greatest ever delivered in the United States Senate, and in all respects the most extraordinary parliamentary utterance on record in our history as a nation. Those who listened to the speech unite with those who, later, have studied it and its influence, and with critics and historians, in reaching this definite conclusion, that while the orator in question delivered many noble orations of different sorts, and, while other noted speakers have done magnificent service on various critical occasions, this speech stands alone in the annals of America.

All the conditions for a supreme parliamentary victory were met on that great day, Tuesday, Jan. 26, 1830. Great questions were to be discussed, dealing with the very foundation, facts and laws of the Government. An overflowing audience had assembled, including nearly all the members of the upper and lower branches of Congress, foreign diplomats, editors, and distinguished strangers from all parts of the land, keyed up to the limit of interest and excitement; controversial, political, and patriotic motives and feelings agitating every breast. Bitter foes were ready to exult should the champion who was to speak fail in his effort, and devoted friends were there to support him by their sympathy and their cheers. An expectant nation had almost ceased from its ordinary occupation to catch, if possible, the distant eachoes of the address, which, it was known far and wide, would be delivered on that day, while it required little effort of imagination to see future generations assembled in the corridors of time, waiting in breathless silence to study the utterances on which the political destinies of nations yet unborn were to hang for ages throughout the Anglo-Saxon world.

Add to these elements of the situation the presence of the one man who was reckoned as facile princeps among the orators of his time, in the fullness of his manhood, equipped completely for the work of the day, and eager to speak forth the arguments, the pleadings, the aims, the hopes, the visions, which throbbed in his great intellect, which glowed in his patriotic soul, which kindled his imperial imagination, and which, fused into incandescence, lit up with enduring splendor the Senate chamber that day, and sent out streams of light into the political sky of the nation which since that critical hour have never been for a moment dimmed, except for a dreadful while by the smoke of battle.

All this was the outward setting, the framework of the scene. Turning to the speech itself, we can easily determine some of the elements of its peerless greatness. In literary form it was lucid, massive, crystalline. It has served as a model to be studied and to be committed to memory and rehearsed, almost ever since it was first published. Its logic was merciless, relentless, masterful; its course moved like the operations of a resistless machine, built of steel, staying not for any obstacle in its pathway. It fitted into the occasion as though the ordinations of the universe were culminating in the words and work of the man of the hour. In delivery it was well-poised, stately, majestic, Titanesque—to borrow an adjective from one who heard the speech, and who adds:

"The variety of incident during the speech, and the rapid fluctuations of passions, kept the audience in continual expectation and ceaseless agitation. There was no chord of the heart the orator did not strike as with a master hand. . . . His thoughts in their statuesque beauty merely would have gained all critical judgment, but he realized the antique fable, and warmed the marble into life."

Edward Everett at this time was serving in Congress as a Representative from Massachusetts. Along with nearly all other members of the House he found a place in the Senate chamber to hear Mr. Webster's speech. A keen judge of public speaking, a scholarly critic, and a notable orator himself, surely he knew how to estimate at its proper rank the work of Webster on that occasion. He wrote:

"It has been my fortune to hear some of the ablest speeches of the greatest living orators on both sides of the water, but I must confess I never heard anything which so completely realized my conception of what Demosthenes was when he delivered the Oration for the Crown."

The circumstances which led to the debate of which this speech was the culmination were unique. The "Foote resolution" introduced in December, 1829, furnished no apparent ground for any such discussion as that which occupied the following weeks. It was a seemingly harmless proposal for an inquiry as to the expediency of limiting for a period the sales of public lands, and asking whether the office of surveyor general might not be without public harm abolished. The explosion which followed no human being could have foreseen. The resolution was taken as an assault on the West, made by New England, for the purpose of selfishly arresting the tides of migration which even thus early had set in toward the prairies. Benton of Missouri accused the East of trying to prevent the settlement of the West, and summoned the South and the infant West to rally against such an assault. Hayne of South Carolina, a man of fine abilities, in close touch with Calhoun, who occupied the chair as Vice President, and representing Calhoun's views, now came into the debate, declaring that the general Government had taken the frontiersman's money, held him down in poverty, and used the cash to "organize the whole labor and capital of the Country" in the great manufacturing establishments of the East. The attack upon New England and on the general Government made by Hayne, started the drift of the debate so as to open up the whole question of the South vs. New England, the State vs. the Nation, Federal Power vs. State Rights. That turn of the tide brought Webster into the stream.

Two speeches were made by him in "Reply to Hayne," both of them being of a high grade, the second one, however, taking its rightful place at the very top, as we have already indicated, in our annals of parliamentary disputation. The situation was too complicated, the debate in its various ramifications covered too much ground, the topics were too many, to permit us even to sum them up here. New England, which had been bitterly assaulted, was defended by Webster; the policy of arraying section against section —the East against the West, the South against New England—was deplored and deprecated; the charge that the North and the general Government had tried to interfere with the "domestic policy" of the Southern States was refuted as "wholly unfounded and unjust"; the administration of internal improvements for the benefit of the whole country was stanchly advocated; and then at last, in the second speech, the vital question concerning the character of the bonds which unite the States into a general government was tackled. That was, after all, the question of the hour, and the problem whose solution allied that occasion with the history of the union for all time. The orator alluded to South Carolina thus:

"I claim part of the honor, I partake in the pride, of her great names. I claim them for countrymen, one and all, the Laurenses, the Rutledges, the Pinckneys, the Sumters, the Marions,—Americans all, whose fame is no more to be hemmed in by State lines than their talents and patriotism were capable of being circumscribed within the same narrow limits. In their day and generation they served and honored the country, and their renown is one of the treasures of the whole country. . . . In early times no States cherished greater harmony, both of principle and feeling, than Massachusetts and South Carolina. Would to God that harmony might return! Shoulder to shoulder they went through the Revolution, hand in hand they stood around the administration of Washington, and felt his own great arm lean on them for support."

The right of a State, at its own discretion, to interfere with the operation of Federal law, or by its legislation to nullify acts of Congress, or, by itself, to judge that an Act of Congress is unconstitutional, and then to interpose to annul the law in question—against this tissue of doctrines the full strength of the orator was directed with invincible logic. He showed that the doctrine held by Calhoun, and by Hayne, and other Southern leaders, involved the absurdity that the general Government was the creature of the twenty-four States which then composed the union, and at the same time the creature of every individual State, "so that each may assert the power for itself of determining whether it acts within the limits of its authority. It is the servant of four-and-twenty masters, of different wills and different purposes, and yet bound to obey all." Over against that absurdity Webster argued:

"This, sir, is the people's Constitution, the people's Government, made for the people, made by the people, and answerable to the people, . . . and the people have wisely provided in the Constitution itself a proper, suitable mode and tribunal for settling questions of constitutional law."

By a series of vivid suppositions Mr. Webster showed that it would be impossible for South Carolina to "interpose" of her own accord and at her option to prevent the execution of Federal law, without committing acts of "violence, bloodshed, and rebellion," and that there could be no State resistance to Acts of Congress under any sanction of constitutional rights; such resistance must lead to revolution, or to civil war.

"The union of the States is of most vital and essential importance to the public happiness and the national life." This, in brief, was the great message of the oration. The peroration, beginning with the words, "I have not allowed myself, sir, to look beyond the Union, to see what might lie hidden in the dark recess behind; I have not allowed myself to hang over the precipice of disunion, to see whether, with my short sight, I can fathom the depth of the abyss below," and closing with the vision of the "gorgeous ensign of the Republic" floating over sea and land, inscribed with "the sentiment, dear to every true American heart, 'Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable,'" was spoken by Webster, so an eye-witness testifies, "with a glow over his countenance like inspiration. Eye and brow, each feature, every line of the face, seemed touched as with a celestial fire." This same witness says that "the speaker's voice reached every recess and corner of the Senate chamber—penetrated even the anterooms and the stairways." Verily, that voice was not limited that day by the walls of the Capital; it resounded speedily through the whole North; it reverberated among the Alleghany Mountains; it reached the plains of the great West; it gathered fresh force year after year, and when the Pacific slope became a part of our country, that voice, pleading, for the Union, was heard among the slopes of the Sierras; as one Territory after another was admitted into statehood that glorious peroration was heard in all the new regions added to the patrimony of freedom; it was prattled along by infant lips, rehearsed in every log schoolhouse, repeated by every stump speaker, studied by every learner, pondered by every student of oratory, printed in every reader, and, moreover, was written deep in the patriotic hearts of those who in the decade of the fifties were being unconsciously trained to defend the institutions and the flag of liberty, with their blood and their life.

Thus, apart from the services rendered by the soldiers of the Federal armies, in preservation of the franchises now dear to the world—the franchises bound up in the word Union—no other man, or set of men (leaving Lincoln, of course, because of his unique opportunity, out of the argument), since the Republic was organized, ever did such effective, wide-ranging, enduring service for our institutions and our form of government, and the flag which we love, as was rendered on that great day, nearly eighty years ago, when Daniel Webster, in his reply to Hayne, uncovered, resurveyed, and added new increments of strength to the constitutional buttresses on which our nation now stands secure.—Zion's Herald.

"I WILL LOOK UP."

Samuel H. Hadley, late superintendent of Water Street Mission in New York City, used to tell the story of his conversion. Before he became a Christian he descended to the lowest degree of depravity and shame. One night, vibrating between despair and hope, he found his way into the mission while Jerry McAuley was still living, went forward and knelt down at the place of prayer. He cried to God for mercy in his wretchedness and surrendered himself to the Lord. Peace came into his soul, and he went out into the night, and looking up, "saw the stars for the first time in many years." Then Mr. Hadley added, "A drunkard never looks up." That may be a revelation to many. He declared he had not looked up for many years. In the sordid soul sin reigns, which is as relentless as the law of gravity. It draws his mind and heart and eye downward. Not until the light of heaven returns can he look up.

Children look up. They look up with wonder, expectation and confidence. They look up to their parents, to their older brothers and sisters, and to all grown people whom they consider their superiors. They look up to the sky and the stars, to the clouds and the birds flying through the air, to the tree-tops which seem to nod a friendly recognition. It is difficult to persuade a child to look down. In this world we must both look down and up, for while our eyes may be on the sky our feet are on the ground; while we draw our life from above, we draw our means of subsistence from the earth. But children are slow to look down. How often does the mother say to her child, "Look where you are going. Mind your steps." He does not mind his steps. He stumbles over every stick and stone because his eye is on the moon, the stars, the sky.

They learn to look down, however, as they grow up. They look down in their effort to make a living, to make money, to make a name in the world. They look down when they become entangled in temptation. Vice and sin soon hold their eyes to the ground.

When one is converted he looks up. He becomes a little child again. The old sense of wonder, expectation, confidence and reverence returns. He realizes that there is somewhat higher than this world. He learns not to set his affections on things on the earth, but on things above where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. He lifts up his soul to things above. His soul feels that it has wings and he soars and sings:

"My soul mounted higher
In the chariot of fire,
And the moon it was under my feet."

—N. Y. Advocate.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

First Kings, chapters 4, 5, 6, and 7.

—The Presbyterians excel in some particulars. They succeed better than others in inducing Sunday-school attendance and in offerings of money for church purposes. They have a membership of 1,354,453 and a Sunday-school enrollment of 1,205,130. Their average money offering is over $19 a year per member.

NOTES.

Monday Mrs. T. M. Johnson and two children went to Greensboro for the week. —Courier.

—Nathaniel Coble, father of Mrs. Geo. Garrett, of Julian, died recently, after a prolonged illness.

—It is said that Concord and Salibury will be connected by a trolley line by Feb. 22nd next.

—Bro. W. D. Fogleman returned on Friday from Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Ct., where he had been assisting Rev. T. A. Williams. He reports a splendid meeting.

—Rev. J. H. Bowman is reported to be convalescent. It is thought that he can be taken to his home this week. He is at the home of Bro. York near Staley.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lewis have gone to Denton where they will take charge of the new hotel. They have been in the hotel business for a number of years in Asheboro.

—Mr. R. R. Ross went to Greensboro Wednesday for a visit to his daughter, Miss Esther, who is at St. Leo's Hospital. The many friends of Miss Ross will be glad to know that she is improving.—Asheboro Courier.

—D. P. Tate, formerly a minister of the Western N. C. Conference, M. E. Church, has been arrested in Tenn. and brought to Danville under charge of swindling. He is said to have imposed on people by the fact that he was a minister. Such rascality merits severe punishment.

—Rev. A. O. Lindley returned to his work on Saturday after a week spent with Bro. Pike at Center Church. This is his home church, and his neighbors showed their regard by coming out in house-filling numbers. They had a good meeting, with several professions.

—Rev. Jesse Pritchard who took charge of the meeting at Hope Church for Rev. J. H. Bowman had the pleasure of seeing the work prosper in his hands. All denominations labored together, and the results were splendid. There were twenty-five converted, some of whom went earnestly to work for others.

—James West Weatherly was coming to Greensboro last Thursday leading a horse behind, the rein being wrapped round his thumb. The horse gave a sudden jerk, pulling the thumb off and tearing the tendon loose at the elbow and drawing it out. Dr. Reeves attended the case, amputating more of the themb to make it heal smooth. He thinks that the loss of the thumb's tendon will not interfere with the action of the fingers. It was a painful accident.

Great Political Change in England.—A prolonged effort to curb the power of the House of Lords in England has at last succeeded. A bill to limit the veto power of the House of Lords originating in the House of Commons has been passed by the House of Lords because the threat hung over them that if they failed to pass it enough new peers from the "lower classes" would be created to make a majority in favor of it. England's is beoming more and more a representative government.

—Congress adjourned Aug. 22, after a rather strenuous extraordinary session.

—Governor Dix of New York made the remarkable record of vetoing 126 bills in ten days.

—A well-known University president is reported as declaring that no man can be considered truly educated who is ignorant of the Bible. Wherefore we much fear that many who go from college with a diploma in their trunks are not truly educated. Ignorance of the Bible on the part of college students is amazing.

—Dr. P. H. Fleming holds his final service with Burlington church Sunday, 27th inst., and leaves for Greenville, Ohio, on 29th.

—Myrtle Reed, author of "Lavender and Old Lace" and several other compelling romances of sweet and noble sentiment, committed suicide in Chicago.

—W. B. Beatty, in a Wright biplane, remained in the air, with a passenger aboard, from 3:30 to7:08 p. m. at Chicago Aug. 19, a total of 3 hours and 38 minutes, a world's record for duration with a passenger.

—President Taft, forgetting that most of the churches of Washington close up for the summer, in August especially, went to the third one last Sunday, after being turned away from two by closed doors.

—It comes out that a West Virginia congressman wrote "applause" fourteen times, and "great applause" one time into a speech which he never delivered, but which appeared only in the Congressional Record.

—A gentleman went into the public library at Great Barrington, a few days ago, and asked the librarian if he might see a Bible. She responded "Certainly,' and went to the shelves for it and laid it down before the gentleman, who was a stranger. He turned to the flyleaf and then said: "I only wanted to see if it was here yet." The flyleaf bears the following inscription:

"I have visited many libraries which lacked many books, but only one library which lacked The Book, and to that one I send this.

"William J. Gaynor."

The inscription is dated Sept. 7, 1897. The caller was Mayor Gaynor.

—The battleship Maine, in Havana harbor, is too badly wrecked amidships to ever be raised, except by means of pontoons, which would be too expensive, according to Captain John O'Brian, who doubts if the Maine will never be floated.

—South Carolina has a railroad which enjoys a unique distinction in two directions. It is the Due West, and from the day of its building until now it has never carried a shipment of liquor, its policy being, without a single exception, to refuse absolutely all shipments of whiskey, whenever and however offered. The second degree of distinction is that in the charter of the road it is stipulated that no train shall ever, on any account, run on that road on Sunday, and one never has, to the present time.

A chautauqua lecturer had concluded a long and careful address, and said to his attentive audience: "If there is any question which any one of you would like to ask, I shall be pleased to answer it."

For a moment there was silence, then an earnest-looking man rose and said: "I should like to know, professor, whether anybody has ever discovered a reliable cure for warts."

"What distinguished foreigner helped us in the revolutionary war?" asked the teacher.

"God," said a little girl, as she timidly held up her hand.

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL

DENTON, N. C.,

Opens August 28th, 1911.

This school is most beautifully located at the terminus of the Piedmont Railway. Healing Springs, one of the best mineral springs in the South, can be reached from Denton in fifty minutes.

This is a Methodist Protestant schoo, and we solicit patronage from Methodist Protestant homes.

Good board in private homes, including furnished rooms, light and fuel, cost only 30 cents per day. Tuition from $1.00 to $4.00 per month.

The rooms are being painted, and everything will be in first class condition.

Our students enter State Universitywithout eaxmination.

For further information, write fully and freely to

GEO. L. REYNOLDS, Principal.

PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Asheville, Aug. 6.
Buncombe, Aug. 8-13.
Ivy, Aug. 15-17.
Yarboro and Anderson, Aug. 19-22.

When it can be done I shall be glad for pastors to have a circuit rally and have all the churches on the charge largely represented.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

NOTES.

Buncombe and Ivy are in good shape. Bros. Troxler and Williams are doing good work. I am inclined to think that Bro. Williams has been subjected to some hardships that might have been avoided if all had done what might have been easily done. Just here a desire to bear testimony to the loyalty and liberality of Dr. McLean. All the churches on the above named charges were visited, and fairly good congregations were met at each. The claim is made that all Conference claims will be met in full. "So mote it be." W. E. Swain.

Uwharrie Circuit.

Our special meeting at Cid embraced the fifth Sunday in July: a very good meeting, resulting in nine conversions, three accessions to church, and the church greatly revived. Of course we are never satisfied with the results, but there are many around Cid yet who have not bowed the knee to Baal. Pray for this dear people who are so kind and make it so pleasant for their pastor in their homes, and any friend who may accompany him.

Bro. Hatley was our pulpit help at this place, and did some very effective preaching and made many friends at this place.

Our special meeting at Mt. Zion began the first Sunday in August.. Bro. J. W. Hulin came to us Monday as pulpit help; he did some wonderful preaching, and everybody seemed to appreciate it very much. The result of the meeting was 12 conversions, two joined the church, and more will join. The church was greatly revived, and it looks like the spirit of love was in every heart who professed to know Christ..

I certainly appreciate the hearty co-operation of all denominations. I feel that God was directing when I was sent to this charge, because he knew my weakness and my needs, and he knew this people was a people that would meet my needs in sympathy, in hospitality, and with their prayers, and they have done it, and I only trust their heavenly Father to pay them for their kindness to me, for I can never meet the debt that I owe them.

Praying God's blessings upon all people, I am your humble pastor,

Joel Trogdon.

NOTICE.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Piney Grove on Tuesday after the second Sunday in September, at 2:30 o'clock, this being the week of our special meeting at this place. Everybody come and be with us. Joel Trogdon.

Love's Grove, Stanley Circuit.

Closed our meeting at Love's Grove August 18. A great interest was manifested. We had 16 conversions and 10 accessions. Rev. Edward Suits of Thomasville was our help. He did some faithful preaching. He just stayed with us long enough to learn to love him. We were glad to have Bro. Mack Reid and family with us most of the meeting.

Prof. Frank Osborn closed a ten days' singing at our church the tenth of August. He was with us part of the meeting, and we had fine singing.

The writer had the pleasure of attending the special meeting at Mill Grove Sunday and hearing Rev. W. D. Reid of Cleveland. He preached two powerful sermons. He is a fine preacher and one of "our boys." We feel proud of him.

We are going to have a class meeting at our church the first Sunday in Sept.

Fannie E. Drye, Rep.

Mt. Moriah Church.

Our protracted meeting closed last Wednesday with the following results: four accessions and some reclaimed, and the church revived. The meeting was conducted by Rev. J. E. McSwain and E. H. Mullis. McSwain did most of the preaching, as brother Mullis was worked down.

Bro. McSwain's first text was in Genesis; his leading thought was to be a real man as God would have him to be—not to be a pair of pants stuffed full, but a real man.

His next text was: "He made me keeper of the vineyard, but my own have I not kept." He made as good a sermon of this text as the writer ever heard, and it was enjoyed by all who heard him.

The church was nearly full each day. Bro. Churchal Braswell and wife from near Charlotte were with us and enjoyed the meeting. We held a church business meeting and revised our class book, and Louie Braswell and J. F. Little were named for delegate to the Annual Conference.

We are sorry that our meeting closed so soon, but there is no doubt that those good, soul-stirring sermons will live in coming days. Mr. John Mullis from Gastonia was with us in the meeting and did some good talking and praying. Rev. E. H. Mullis's wife and family were also with us through the meeting. We paid Bro. J. E. McSwain $7.25 for his services, which was about next to nothing compared to what he did.

John F. Little.

Hawkin's Chapel, Littleton Circuit.

We had Children's Day the second Sunday in August. It was very good. Considering the practice the children were in they did very well. After the children had rendered their part we had an address by our pastor. There was a large congregation present, the collection amounting to $11.36. We thank Miss Eva Glasgow for presiding at the organ.

Our special meeting began in the afternoon and continued until Thursday. We had a glorious meeting, although Bro. Taylor did not have any pulpit help. Yet he did his full duty and preached some able sermons. It made us feel more like working for the Master. The church was greatly revived, there were a good many renewed, and the result was about eight conversions; six joined the church. We had a large attendance every day, more than could get into the church a part of the time. Different denominations attended our meeting; we were glad to have them to worship with us.

Our beloved cousin, Mattie Hawkins, departed this life August 7th. She leaves a devoted husband and four children. She was a consistent member at Hawkin's Chapel. She was laid to rest in the old home burying ground in the presence of a large congregation. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family. The flowers I lay on your grave will wither and fade away, but the memory and love I have for you always stay.

Vannah Shearin, Reporter.

Matthews' Chapel, Greenville Circuit.

The revival at this place has just closed. The good preaching which Bro. Hunt and Bro. Ashburn did was very much appreciated. Quite a number professed Christ as their Savior, and fifteen joined the church, and there were some who didn't join. We had a very good meeting, but not as good as we wished for. The meeting at Hobbs' Chapel will commence the first Sunday; we wish for a glorious revival.

Our Sunday school has been very good, but we have closed it until the first Sunday in September on account of the meetings. The quarterly conference was held at this church Saturday before the fifth Sunday.

Mrs. Etta Edwards, one of our members, is quite ill; I hope she will soon recover.

L. B. E., Reporter.

Flat Rock Letter.

A church reverie before the sermon. Some eight weeks ago we assembled to celebrate Children's Day. Oh, the shifting scenes of life's kaleidoscope! A Confederate soldier's burial mid silent tears and floral trophies.

A standard bearer, listening to earth's silent forces. The closing of a young lady's letter, "I hope you will be saved."

We saw him at the state reunion, addressed by the saintly Sam Jones. As the vast audience sang, "When the roll is called up yonder," and the tears streaming down their veteran scarred cheeks, as one by one they clasped his hand, passed on.

He bearing aloft his flag as gracefully it floated, moved in the front. And though sadly at times his banner trailed in the dust, we believe today he has stationed it within the gates of the City of God.

The fourth on the glorious Battle Ground, its seeming declining pageantry, music and splendor. The eloquence of invocation, and addresses of distinguished North Carolinians, Rev. Clark, Grimes, and Watson, and its ample spread.

In the afternoon an informal six o'clock luncheon on the campus of Guilford College lawn. As faculty and wives, ministers, local and visiting from this and other States, returned missionary, and tourists from Florida, seated on cushions on the lawn, circled around a group of flags, we visitors in chairs, each with all in nonchalance chatted. Chatted and thought of the bloody struggle and America's Independence. Of the prospective future triumphs of arbitration. Of the church militant and triumphant. The King's noblemen were here with royal robes aside. And the pleasures, the beauty of surroundings, and thoughts of that evening, were somewhat akin to Heaven. And looking back, it seems we might have heard God's voice speaking to all from the ethereal blue.

"For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you an expected end."

To tea with the president of Oak Ridge and Kernersville embroidery club, brought us in touch with the D. A. R. and the world and the material, and these organizations think they are giving to the State and nation's philanthropies.

The proposed visit of a bride's maid, who, invited to spend her vacation with the family of her cousin, the wife of Gov. Noel of Mississippi, with autos and pack for chase, prefers the quiet of these hills.

Two ice cream suppers immense. An educational rally with the inspiration of the years, of County Board poured upon us. A brilliant parade of the children, a mammoth dinner and victory, for today there stands a bulwark of learning at our door.

A united citizen with some fifty women in the fray was no child's play.

An outing on the pond with a select company of five.

An afternoon and supper with a loved friend from childhood in an adjoining village.

The County S. S. Convention approaching, with its anticipated spiritual uplift and enlargement of the Sunday schools.

A visit of a day of two dear little cousins.

A strong, logical sermon by our editor, Rev. J. F. McCulloch.

And in the lull we've climbed with the World's staff reporter the heights of the Sierras, and with Victoria's Grand Old Man of the Mountains, virile Joaquin Miller, viewed:

"The gold that with the sunlight lies
In bursting heaps at dawn;
The silver spilling from the skies
At night to walk upon.
The diamond gleaming in the dust
He ever saw. He ever knew."

Now these seeming volatile thoughts, they are not the delineation of perverse fancy, but actual occurrences, and are due neither to a grouchie bachelor or bachelor lady, but perhaps to the fact that within the velvet lounge upon which a fifteen-minutes siesta is daily taken, where these reveries may have accumulated, there is truly a bumble bee's nest.

But hush! The would-be anthem, and the gleaming angel figure over the departed dead, and irreverence flees. And face to face with the able sermon drawn from "If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there shall also my servant be. If any man serve me, him will my Father honor." Illustrated by the lives of prophets and seers, and we are ushered into the spiritual realm. Beneath the elusive, sacred effluence, the unction of our pastor.

Reporter.

ALBEMARLE.

Our meeting at Creswell embraced the third Sunday in July, closing on Thursday night. Rev. W. F. Ashburn was our help, doing excellent work. All were highly pleased with his preaching, and regretted that he could not remain longer. Results were not what we would have been glad to see: conversions and additions. Almost every one who attended was already a member of some church. And the daily rains reduced the size of our congregations, one service being rained out. (This was just at the breaking up of our more than three months drouth.) Still, we are sure the meeting did good. A number of the members expressed themselves as being helped. This is not to be despised, by any means. We have to take things as we find them, or have them, and not as we would have them. There is a condition, a situation, obtaining here, that is met with in few places elsewhere, if indeed at all, elsewhere. No amount of writing can give an adequate picture of it. It must be seen; and not only seen, but studied. The religious sense is dulled, blunted, darkened. The people, with few exceptions, seem to have no idea—no conception of present salvation—of pardon and regeneration as an experience; and, of course, very few are saved. They cannot, or do not, testify to salvation, and their worldly, sinful lives testify against their salvation. And the most fearful feature of the situation is, that no one seems alarmed. Every one seems satisfied, save about additions to the churches. There is a scramble for "additions." Just any way to get them. All kinds of methods are used to this end. A revival here means church-goings and baptisms, or confirmations, and proselyting as one of the chief means of promoting these pseudo-revivals. And the more rantankerous, fanatical, and unconscionable the proselyting outfit, the bigger the revival(?). Our Sabbath school, here at Creswell, is beset on every hand to induce scholars to go to the S. S. of the church, of which Sam Jones said at Wilmington, N. C., in 1890, that it was "the best organized army in America to fight the devil, but had not fired a gun in 100 years." It is said that jewelry and money are offered as inducements in this school. The apostle Peter speaks of a class of propagandists that "offer liberty, while they themselves are the servants of corruption." "Liberty," but it is not liberty from sin, but liberty (license) to dance, play cards, drink wine, swear, desecrate the Sabbath—in fact, do as you please. The heresy of baptismal regeneration, propagated by the Episcopalians and the Campbellites has done more, perhaps, than everything else, to cause this fearful state of affairs. It withers, blights, deadens (darkens) like a sirocco of hell, for it is of hell—not of God, but of the prince of liars. Said God through the prophet, "My people are destroyed through lack of knowledge." It was true then, it is true now. It is fearful! It is awful And what is to be done? "Cry aloud and spare not.' The herald of the cross must do this, to "save himself and those that hear him." No "daubing with untempered mortar," no temporizing will do. There has been too much of that done already. No popular compromising will meet the case. Is the case hopeless? We think not, if properly, vigorously and persistently treated. But it is a chronic case, of long-standing, and cannot be cured in a day, a month, or a year. There must be patient tenacity on the part of those who would remedy conditions. One big dose of quinine, calomel, or hypodermic of bi-chloride of gold will not do the work. Methodism must stick to her differentiating principles and doctrines: the witness of the Spirit in pardon and in regeneration, realized by faith in Christ, and not through some ordinance, ceremony, or priestly manipulation. We cannot whip the devil by adopting his methods, devices, and weapons. So we as Methodists cannot remedy conditions here by adopting the methods and tactics that have brought them about. Such as proselyting and church-joining without being converted (pardoned and regenerated), and in most cases without any genuine conviction. Such join the church in sin, remain in the church in sin, and become puffed up with bigotry, pride and party spirit. No spirit of Christ manifested. J. F. Dosier.

HARMONY AND YARBOROUGH'S.

Our special meetings at Harmony and Yarborough Chapel have closed. Harmony, fourth to fifth Sundays; Rev. J. D. Williams was pulpit help.

It was said by young and old of different churches that we had the best preaching that has been heard yet. The meeting was good, revival in the church, thirteen reclaimed and converted. Will report the number of members received later.

Yarborough's from first to second Sundays. Rev. Sam Rose, pulpit help. A wonderful meeting, large congregations all the time, best attention I ever saw given to the word. About twenty-five converted and reclaimed at the altar; nearly a hundred claimed to have been brought to a close life with Christ; most of these belong to the church.

Six joined the church: Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bishop, Mr. Charlie Hallis, L. E. Poole, Loree Tensley, and Miss Mamie Watkins. Twenty at the altar last night, some of whom were saved. Bro. Rose is a wonderful preacher; he has just finished college with a great future before him. He preaches the old time Bible doctrine of holiness. We praise God for this victory. Our third quarterly meeting convened with Harmony Church on Saturday before fifth Sunday. Reports show work in good shape. Yarborough was represented by Bro. Lewis and Charlie Yarborough and Bro. Knox and wife. Harmony has curtained off S. S. rooms and has a good well of water on church ground now. Yarborough has put a hedge around grave yard.

Children's Day at Yarborough's was a success. Miss Lillie Yarborough had the children in training and they showed plainly that she is a successful trainer. Collection, $24. Collection for meeting, $50. Harmony, $31. We wish it were possible to give names of the many that have remembered us by sending to the parsonage good things to eat. We are so far behind with this we will not try to mention names, only to say we surely have been cared for by our good friends. May God bless them all.

Yours in the work,

W. A. Lamar.

EDEN, HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting, which began the first Sunday of August, closed Thursday, August 10. This was the most successful and glorious revival we've had here for years. Every day God's Holy Spirit was made manifest. It did our souls good to see old men, women and children returning home to God. In all here were thirty-eight conversions and reclamations. Indeed, we do feel that God has revived His work in our church!

Our pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, had no regular pulpit help, until Tuesday, Rev. J. E. Holden of the M. E. Church, Enfield, came out and preached for him in the morning. Wednesday and Thursday Rev. C. L. Whitaker assisted in the services. All three of these did excellent work, preaching the divine Word with such heart-felt earnestness and enthusiasm. We are very grateful to Bros. Whitaker and Holden for their services. Bro. Gerringer has only one more appointment with us before returning to the Theological Seminary. We are reluctant to give him up. He has done splendid work on this charge during his vacation. He is in deed and in truth "a workman that need not be ashamed." Our good wishes will follow him wherever his life's work lies. N. B. H.

August 15, 1911.

GUILFORD CIRCUIT.

The third quarterly conference of Guilford Circuit was held at Spring Hill on Saturday, August 12, 1911. The attendance was good from six of the churches, two were not represented. The usual business was transacted in the very best of spirit. The reports were very good. Our work seems to be in a very prosperous condition at present. The votes for delegate to the Annual Conference were counted and Bro. G. A. Berrier, of Canaan Church, Wallburg, N. C., R. D. 1, was declared elected delegate and Bro. C. A. Green, of Mt. Pleasant Church, High Point, R. D. 4, alternate. The good brethren of the conference by a unanimous vote granted the pastor a release from the duties of his work until his wife's condition improved. We were forced to carry her back to St. Leo's Hospital the 13th. She is in a very, very serious condition. Brethren and Christian friends, help me to pray that God may give her back to us well again. T. A. Plyler.

Spring Hill was again chosen as the place for holding the fourth quarterly Conference, as it is the most centrally located, and by a unanimous vote of the conference it was decided to have a circuit rally at that time and invite our president to be with us. Hope our editor can be with us too. It's only three miles from High Point, N. C.

Pray for us.

T. A. Plyler.

CANAAN, GUILFORD CIRCUIT.

It has been some time since we wrote last, though we are still in the fight. We have our church completed and are having good sedvices in it, and a good Sunday school; I mean by this that the interest is good. The protracted meeting will begin at this place the fourth Sunday in this month, if nothing happens. Brethren, we want the prayers of all praying people that the unsaved of this neighborhood may be saved. Bro. J. H. Moton is to be Bro. Plyler's help. So with those two in the pulpit, we believe that there will be a good successful meeting at this place, by the help of God. Brethren, let us not forget to pray for Bro. Plyler, that the Lord may bless him in his home troubles and that Sister Plyler may be spared for many years of usefulness here on earth. May the blessings of God be theirs to enjoy in the home life.

With best wishes to all,

Yours in Christ,

Albert Berrier.

Aug. 15, 1911.

ASHEVILLE.

In the main school there were 108, Woolsey Hall 28, Woodfin Hill 25 last Sunday.

Our mid-week prayer-meetings are quite good in attendance and interest. Bro. J. H. Moton will be present at the prayer meeting this week. Last Sunday a Mr. Parker was in the services, who once belonged to our church in Texas. Also Dr. Griffith and family of Florida. He is pastor of a church M. E. S. His two daughters are graduates of Western Maryland College. Mr. Pipkin and daughter of Florida also worshipped with us. Our church treasurer, J. E. Swain, has been indisposed for several weeks. J. S. W.

HOPE CHURCH, CHATHAM CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting, beginning the second Sunday in August, and closing the following Friday night, was one of the greatest and most successful revivals that this church has known in years. Many souls were led into the knowledge of sins forgiven and peace with God, strong men and women among the number. There were about 25 conversions, and the community and church were revived, built up and strengthened.

It was a beautiful sight to see the Christian people of all denominations work together in leading souls into the kingdom.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, has been quite sick for two weeks. He is reported to be getting along nicely and we trust he will soon be out of danger. In his absence Rev. J. E. Pritchard earnestly and successfully conducted the meeting. We have never seen more faithful work; his sermons were strong and effective, and his efforts wonderfully blessed and much appreciated by the people. The attendance was good all during the week and especially at night, when the house would not accommodate the people who came to hear the word of God preached.

Mr. Pritchard made many friends who will always remember him and his good work here, and wish him success in all his work.

Pray for us and for our pastor that his life may be spared, and he be permitted to come back to this charge which needs him so much. Annie L. Hammer.

Reporter.

TABERNACLE CIRCUIT.

Our third quarterly conference met with Moriah Church in July. There was a fairly good attendance, and the business was transacted in a very good spirit; having our good old Bro. W. C. Kennettt with us to keep us in line, we got along nicely. Reports were as good and some better than they were last year at the third quarterly conference. Bro. C. C. Lineberry was found to be elected as delegate to the next Annual Conference, and Bro. J. F. Coble alternate. Bro. W. S. Job spoke of introducing a resolution to the effect of increasing the pastor's salary for another year, which will come up in the fourth quarterly conference to be held at Tabernacle church some time in Oct.

Shady Grove.

Our special meeting commenced on the fourth Sunday in July at 11 A. M. Bro. C. H. Whitaker was present and preached to a full house; Bro. E. A. Plyler, my engaged help, came in time to preach the evening sermon, and the meeting continued until Thursday evening, holding from two to three services each day. We had a good meeting, three conversions, no accessions; but hope to get two of the converts, as they were from Methodist Protestant families. This church is doing very well considering its location and surroundings, and there is no more faithful and persevering people anywhere to be found than some of Shady Grove people.

On Wednesday of this meeting I was called to Tabernacle to hold the funeral services of Mr. Kin Causey, and on Saturday following I conducted the funeral services of Bro. Robt. L. Causey; the latter was a member of Tabernacle church, the former did not claim to be a Christian when the writer talked last with him.

Julian.

Our special meeting began here on the 5th Sunday in July, and continued until Thursday evening, holding four services each day most of the time. Rev. W. C. Kennett preached at 11 A. M., Rev. J. R. Hutton, 2 P. M., Rev. W. C. Lassiter 7:30, Bro. Chafin Fields at 11 A. M. on Monday, Bro. Lassiter at 2 P. M., and Bro. Johnson, my employed help, came for the Monday night services. We had a splendid meeting, several conversions and reclamations, one joined the church and others to follow. The church was much revived and built up and strengthened for future usefulness. The ladies of this church had put a beautiful carpet in the church, and the pastor did not have to even mention the matter, he only had to open his eyes and see what pretty carpet covered the floor, and I heard several remarks as to the beautiful little church and its neat appearance, especially on the inside. Our places of worship ought to be kept as nice as our homes, or more so.

Tabernacle.

The first Sunday in Aug. found us at this church to hold our third special meeting, and we commenced with a sermon by Rev. T. J. Ogburn at 11 A. M., and one by Rev. D. A. Braswell at 2 P. M. On Monday at 11 A M. Rev. J. D. Williams preached. He and Bro. Braswell were my engaged help, and they did the preaching up to Friday noon, and the meeting closed in the evening with Communion service. This was said to be one of the best meetings that have been for years; there were between 20 and 25 conversions and reclamations; several joined the church, and others will do so soon. Some did personal work who had never done any before, and some old people asked for prayer who had not done so before, and this is only the beginning of the good that can be done in the Tabernacle community, if the members will only pray and work together for the salvation of the unsaved, and this is the only way I know for one to keep saved himself. I am quite sure there is a better state and condition of feeling existing on the circuit than has been for some time, not because I have been told so by some of my church members and some outsiders, but from what I can see for myself in the increase of the congregations and the spirit of worship, and I take none of this to my credit, it's just the people doing what they ought to do, and any church or charge can see the work progress if they will take hold and work and be faithful. It is not much matter who your pastor is if he will be faithful and fill his appointments and look after the business of the church.

Our attendance was good at all our meetings and the preaching good and God blessed it. I am thankful to all the preachers for their services in these meetings, and to all the laymen for the personal work done by them.

My next meeting begins the 4th Sunday at Moriah with Bro. J. A. Burgess as help. Rev. J. F. McCulloch will fill my appointments the first Sunday at Tabernacle at 11 A. M., Julian at 3:30. I will be with Bro. Burgess at this time, the only Sabbath I expect to be absent from my appointments.

Truly,

C. A. Cecil.

High Point, N. C., Aug. 21, 1911.

BETHESDA, YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

Our special meeting commenced the second Sunday in Aug. and closed the following Wednesday evening. Bro. and Sister Dixon, of High Point, were the pulpit help and discharged their duties faithfully. They gave us some soul-stirring sermons during the few days they labored with us. Sister Dixon was with us on Sunday and gave us an address on foreign missions at the close of the children's service, after which a collection was taken amounting to something over $22.00. She also preached for us in the evening, Bro. Dixon coming on Monday morning. There were eleven converted or reclaimed, the church was much benefited and all enjoyed the meeting very much. We had a large attendance each day.

Members of other churches came and took part in the services, especially in the music, for which we are very thankful.

Our Sunday school is thinking of taking in the S. S. Convention and picnic at Shiloh on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month.

Bro. Roby Wagner from Oklahoma is with us and seemed to enjoy the meeting very much. He will remain with us until about the middle of Sept.

Mrs. John Harrison and two children Robah and Kate from Winston visited in the community during the meeting. Also Mr. and Mrs. Joe Tussy, Mrs. Ellis Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Burl Lambeth from High Point were with us during the meeting.

DENTON.

The readers of the Herald will please pardon me for briefly speaking of a recent visit to Mcklenburg Circuit. I found the pastor, Rev. J. W. Self, enjoying a prosperous year and the full confidence of his people. At two of his meetings, just closed, he had 100 conversions, and I saw, by coming in touch with some of his people, that they were aroused along religious lines. I preached twice in our church in Matthews and am persuaded that it is unwise on our part, as a church, to lose any more time there. If our people on that charge would dispose of that property and build a parsonage and church at Stallingsville, a few miles below there on the railroad, we would soon have a strong church and the pastor would then live among his people. The membership at Matthews has moved away until we have only two lady resident members and not much prospects of getting others. Why lose precious time there when fertile fields are open wide elsewhere? I hope our people on that charge will not wait five years to see this.

We also spent one night and part of two days in Charlotte. In my estimation there is not a more inviting field for Methodist Protestantism in N. C. than there. Right in the heart of the city among the leading business men we found Methodist Protestants. Some think that there are several hundred M. P.'s there, perhaps eight or nine hundred in all, yet this is only a guess. I believe if conference would send a wide-awake man there who would begin work right in the heart of the city, that a few years would find us with a large church in Charlotte. One of the strong business men there—a member of Bro. Self's charge, said it was no need to send a man there to work the outskirts of the city. He is right. I sincerely hope our church will look upon Charlotte as an inviting mission field.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

LA GRANGE.

We have had very warm and dry weather in Eastern Carolina this year, but crops are doing fairly well under the conditions.

Our people enjoyed the sermons of Dr. Swain while on this charge very much, and we wish he could come oftener than his work will allow. The sermon of Bishop Strange of the Protestant Episcopal denomination in our church here was a fine one enjoyed by all who heard it.

Dr. Forelines gave us an instructive and elevating lecture on "God's Glory in the Sky," while he was in our State.

Our revival meeting at Hickory Grove continued two weeks. It was a good meeting, considering the adverse weather during the time. The meeting at Harris Chapel was held including the first Sunday in this month, beginning the fifth Sunday night in July. We had no pulpit help, but the Spirit was with us, and the largest congregations attended that have been there for years.

Our meeting in La Grange will be held in the fall. Yesterday was our regular day in LaGrange. The congregations were good, music fine and good attention during services. Miss Frances Sutton of Greensboro attended the evening service. Her many friends here were glad to see her in the congregation and in their homes.

J. H. Abernethy.

LaGrange, N. C., Aug. 21, 1911.

EBENEZER, GREENVILLE CIRCUIT.

Our special meeting was held last week; the success was good, 26 conversions, 7 to join the church and all of the Christians were awakened from their sleep. Bro. Ashburn didn't have any pulpit help, but the Lord was with him and gave him power to preach reviving sermons and to wake up those that had grown cold with Christ. We feel that the Lord was with us and answered our prayers to save so many precious souls. We were so thankful that there were so many drawn from the broad road that leads down to everlasting despair. We ask Christian friends to pray for the newly converted that they may find peace with God and walk in the light with our blessed Savior. I pray that God's richest blessing may rest upon each one that seeks Christ, and all you Herald readers pray that there may not be one left unsaved for a stumbling block.

M. M. Clements.

MT. CARMEL, GRANVILLE CIRCUIT.

Last Sunday school's report is as folows: total enrollment, 93; total present, 45; total collections, $.23; one new scholar. Just at this time there are many of our scholars visiting, but we hope they will soon become tired of visiting and make the attendance greater.

Special attention is called to the record of class number 2. This class, taught by Mr. E. Taylor Garrett, consists of twenty-three young men and boys. Of very much importance, isn't it? In this are several that have not been absent since April. The boys seem interested in their class and are very well behaved. Their collections have been the greatest of all the classes. What these boys could do and make of themselvs if they were to determine!

Teacher of class number 4, Mrs. R. P. Cunningham is the only teacher that has not been absent since the school began in April. Good record, isn't it?

Now, I wish to make known my own record. Of days when Sunday school has been held and a record made, I have not been absent in, I think, four consecutive years. Can you surpass this? This is my record.

Polk Garrett.

Aug. 22, 1911.

HICKORY RIDGE, FORSYTHE CT.

Our new pastor, Bro. T. A. Williams, has been doing some good work for us this year. Our special meeting began the second Sunday in August and continued until the following Thursday night. Bro. Williams was most ably assisted by Rev. W. D. Fogleman of Liberty Circuit, who did some earnest and powerful preaching during the week. We had a good meeting, 13 professions and 8 accesisons to the church. May God help them to hold out faithful. We feel that not only were there souls blessed, but many souls were revived during this meeting. God help the good done to be lasting, is our earnest petition.

Bro. Brown of Surry was with us a part of the time and gave some most helpful sermons. We are glad to say our Sunday school is doing nicely, but of course there is room for improvement, and we hope at the end of the year to be able to see that we have made many improvements. We will have a lawn party for the benefit of the church on Saturday night before the first Sunday in September. Everybody is most cordially and heartily invited to come and be with us. Much success to the Herald and all of its readers.

Florence Sullivan,
Reporter.

Rural Hall, N. C., Aug. 22, 1911.

REPORT FROM BRO. GRABS.

I now think of several questions, that are not enough settled, and yet they are not much debated. I will just now notice one, a case. Some of our people have it fixed on our minds and hearts that, as a rule our preachers ought to take a text when they preach and actually call the effort preaching, not "making a little talk," but regular preaching, and handle the text as well as they can for a whole hour—more or less, as may seem best—but "less" you may say. The people are, many of them, exceedingly slow about reaching the church, (even if they should start) and after all have been out in the various pursuits of this secular life for a whole week the case demands a real business effort at the church. The above doesn't mean to speak for a "cut and dried" thing, not by any means—as all close Bible readers will at once perceive.

Sunday night, July 30, Bro. Setzer, by short notice, preached at Tabernacle, in Forsyth. He, as a rule, wants to have an hour to preach. He preached near his hour on the occasion. After the congregation was dismissed the matter of an hour was mentioned—but no debate. Now for something of a revelation. This reporter had a word to say in connection, and in response one at once said to us, "Some of them say you preach too long, too." The expression came with all the force of a surprise, and was really a revelation—but seemed to stir up something of the humorous. The personal impulse had been so shaped, all the while, that the question about what to say (and even what not to say) was the thing at heart. However, we M. P.'s and all others should not be unmindful of the fact that the "common wealth of Israel" demands mutual rights. One of the great things to do is to preach to the people, to teach Israel, to educate up and on. If there is anything better for us mortals to depend on, under God, than the intelligence of the people, the common people, we have never learned where it came from. It is so much so that more than nine tenths of our M. P. ministers in this N. C. Conference had to eat their first bread while seeming to be "cut out" for farmers, and so much so that one of our leaders had to get something of the best part of his "fire" at a very humble prayer meeting; and the spiritual instructions were by a humble old colored man. Of course we must honor intelligence, and the rule of intelligence is the thing for our safety, but we, the people, are the intelligence. The purpose in this is to say that the governor has need to be ruled in (and ruled out) by the people who are under his rule. The common people carry the first part, and the best part of the intelligence of the world today.

By this expression I am trying to declare a thing that I expect to advocate while I live and I expect to urge these truths more and more.

One of the great pleasures between the preacher and the people is to visit the people at their homes and this is providentially so. Bro. Setleff loves to worship with the families whenever he visits their homes. On Sunday night, we stayed all night at the home of Bro. S. H. Spease. Bro. Spease has a very quiet home and there are plenty of people in the family, and the little folks, children of one of his sons, do their full share towards making up the life of the family. His premises show up better than the average in the way of some of the best of fruit trees, and he has a liberal supply of good apples. One of the little boys was so generous and thoughtful as to pick up nice apples from under a tree near, and they found a place under the buggy seat, and after nearly a day's journey, reached the kitchen of Bro. Setleff, where they were needed. We visited the home of Bro. Joseph Scales and stayed there about an hour. As numbers of our preachers and friends will remember, he is a very quiet man, is a close Bible reader, however, and does not lack for talk. His wife and all his children have preceded him to the world above, but he still has a full household of his own people—all making a very interesting family. The Bible was presented at his house, and Bro. Setleff read of the word and prayed the blessings of heaven upon all.

While visiting for the day, we had occasion to cross the Yadkin River at Donnaha, over the fine bridge where the water is 300 feet wide. We were out on a misison, as it seemed, and Bro. Setleff suggested to the gatekeeper that free crossing might be due, and perhaps it was, because the crossing was "without money and without price."

We reached the pleasant home of Rev. T. H. Stimpson by the noon hour. He lives a mile and over from the bridge.

These two ministers are so well "ordained," and so well established in the faith that they belong to the class of preachers who are empowered with the authority of preaching a whole hour to a congregation whenever they are moved by the Spirit to do so—and such a moving justly belongs to their individuality. The wife and mother of the home of Rev. T. H. Stimpson has been helpless on the bed of affliction for several months, but she is submissive to the will of God, and is cheerful and patient and happy. The large interesting family of Bro. Stimpson make up far more than only a little part for the congregation of the church to which they belong. However, they are not obliged to reach the church in order to have an interesting service, but they worship at their home. At the house of Bro. Stimpson Bro. Setleff talked religion for over an hour, and those who heard did not even get sleepy. Of course, Bro. Setleff had the honor of handing the Bible and praying with the people who are being trained up as Bible readers and true worshippers. Later we crossed back over the beautiful river, and Bro. Setleff was conveyed to his own home, and this driver reached his home, and later felt the moving for the above effort, all done under the wise providence of God. W. F. Grabs.

P. S. Bro. Stimpson and wife and family of eight children are members of the M. E. Church. They live a mile and a half west from the home fo Bro. Setleff—the river between. It is of interest to learn that singing can be heard from one house to the other. In this our immediate neighborhood the voice of Rev. Alson Gray was once heard at a distance of three miles. This was when he led a prayer at old Crooked Run—the service out in the grove. Numbers reported the occasion, and referred to it as being a time that was very unusual. They said that they could feel his voice jar the ground while he was praying. W. F. G.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mattie J. Hawkins died at the home of her husband, W. T. Hawkins, near Aurelian Springs, Aug. 7, 1911. Her stay on earth was 39 years. She was a daughter of the late John Hamille. We have not been called upon to announce the death of a purer and better woman than Mrs. Hawkins. She was converted at the age of 14 and joined Hawkins' Chapel M. P. Church and lived a true Christian to the end. Fifteen years ago she was happily married to Wilson T. Hawkins. The union was blessed with seven children, three girls and four boys; two boys preceded her to the glory world five years ago. The infant boy was laid to rest in the casket with her. The husband and one boy and three girls, her mother, two brothers, three sisters, and a host of relatives survive her. The writer has been informed by her bereaved husband that she read her Bible every day and taught her children to pray; they knelt at her bedside every night and offered their prayers to God. She was devoted to her husband and children, but often expressed a desire to go to the mansions above and be with her dear little boys. She was ever ready to work for him who had bled and died that she might live. She was unassuming in her manners, kind in disposition and won the hearts of all who knew her. She will be missed by many, her voice will be heard no more, but none will miss her as her sorrow stricken husband. Her children, too, will sadly miss her tender care, for no hand can soothe the fevered brow, no voice can speak with such melody, and no eye is so gentle as that of a fond and devoted mother. But she is gone forever, gone from that calm and happy home; the light has fled and the sunshine has departed, and a gloom now marks the place where once her footsteps were heard. Husband and children, be ye faithful unto death, and when your time shall come to leave this earth, you will hear mother saying, Husband, children, come this way. I am waiting at the pearly gate. She cannot come to you, but you can go to her, so weep not; for God who gave hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord. The remains were laid to rest in the Hawkins' burying ground on Tuesday afternoon. The casket was covered over with beautiful floral offerings, and a long procession followed the remains to their final resting place. The burial service was conducted by Rev. J. T. Draper. The pall-bearers were R. D. Hawkins, Geo. W. Morgan, F. N. Carliles, R. A. Rogers, C. M. Hawkins, and E. B. Dickens.

"With her the toil and strife are o'er,
Her labors end, her sorrows cease;
For she has gained the blissful shore
Where dwells serene eternal peace.

"She rests in hope: her hallowed dust
Is watched, and from the grave shall rise;
Earth shall restore her sacred trust,
Made all immortal for the skies."

C. M. Hawkins.

Aurelian Springs, N. C., Aug. 21, 1911.

J. Andrew Cook was born Sept. 16, 1870, and died June 30, 1911, aged 40 years, nine months and fourteen days. He married Miss Belle Pitts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pitts of this community, in the year 1891.

He professed faith in Christ when 18 years old and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Lebanon. In the year 1900 he moved his membership to Rocky Mount, where he lived nine years, returning to our community about two years ago.

During all the 22 years of his life in the church Mr. Cook lived a consistent Christian life.

For several months the deceased had been in failing health, but he was patient, bearing his suffering without a murmur of complaint. Every kindness and attention was administered to him during his illness by his loving wife, the physician, and many friends, but he gradually grew weaker and weaker until the death angel summoned and he was taken away. His wife and one brother, Mr. Armstead Cook, are the near surviving relatives.

In his death the home loses a faithful member, the community loses a kind neighbor, and the state a most earnest industrious Christian gentleman.

But while he is gone we believe his influence will live on for good in the hearts of those who knew him, for the nobleness of righteous living is eternal.

Knowing the deceased as I did, he being our next door neighbor for some time before his death, I do not hesitate to speak as I do these words of commendation. I think of the Psalmist's words as I stop to reflect on his life: Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful; but his delight is in the law of the Lord and in His law doth he meditate day and night." Mr. Cook was a daily Bible student, a merchant who read his Bible between customers' calls. In this life neighbors saw honesty, truthfulness, kindness, virtue and charity.

To the bereaved I would say, let us not mourn, for we believe our loss is his gain. Let us go on not sorrowing but hopeful, trusting in the Savior our great Comforter. May we who live be stronger and better Christians, that we may finish our life's mission well. For our faithful loved ones who have departed have finished theirs and we know that it is only through faith in Christ our Redeemer that we shall strike hands with them at home.

Lena Hammer.

Mrs. Eliza Ann Dorcas Gill entered upon her reward Aug. 12, 1911. She was born Aug. 17, 1820. Had she lived until this Thursday she would have been 92 years old. She was at first a member of the Old Salem M. E. Church on Reems Creek. She soon afterwards joined the M. P. Church at Mt. Zion, Jupiter.

Her husband, Andrew J. Gill, died July 19, 1899. She married him at the age of 18. She was the oldest child in her father's family. She has one brother and one sister living, Rev. Robt. W. Pickens of Weaverville, and Mrs. Margaret Ray of Oregon. She left two children, Mr. I. W. Gill and Dr. J. N. Gill of Weaverville.

Immediately upon the death of her husband she was tenderly received into the home of Dr. J. N. Gill, where he and his wife and son lovingly cared for her until her translation. Her other son lived near her. He and his family were always attentive and thoughtful of her comfort.

A large crowd attended her funeral last Sunday afternoon at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Gill. Rev. W. E. Poovey of the M. E. Church, her pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, Dr. Boyd, father of Mrs. Dr. Gill and a Presbyterian minister, and the writer conducted the services.

Her body was laid along side her father, the late Rev. Andrew Pickens, 1783—1860.

On the tenth of this month the Pickens reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenwood, this city. Mrs. Gill's illness was announced at this meeting. Resolutions of regret and sympathy were adopted and ordered to be communicated to her at once.

In the death of Mrs. Gill, another "Mother in Israel" has gone from us. Though she was confined within her home for many months on account of infirmities of age, she was a power. Her prayers and profound interest and sympathy were an inspiration to those who were trying to carry on the work of the church.

J. S. Williams.

"Have you any ancestors, Mrs. Kelly?" asked Mrs. O'Brien.

"Ancestors?"

"Why, people you shprung from."

"Listen to me, Mrs. O'Brien," said Mrs. Kelly, impressively. "Oi come from the rale shtock of Donohues that shpring from nobody. They shpring at thim."—Catholic Tribune.

Griggs—The doctor said I must throw up everything and take a sea voyage.

Briggs—Got the cart before the horse, didn't he?—National Food Magazine.

ALMOST.

"Oh! dear, my name ought to be Almost, instead of Amy," said Amy Baker to her friend, May Fields, as they were sitting in May's room enjoying what they called a "confidential" "Here I've tried all summer to get a little district school to teach and every time it's a dead failure."

"Tell me about it. I hadn't heard," said May.

"Well, to begin with, the first day after school meeting I applied for the Lincoln school. The trustee was away. I waited for his return, but he engaged a teacher before he came home.

"Then father spoke to the village trustee. He said he would let me know as soon as he could. Next, the trustee from Spyville came to see me. I told him I was waiting to hear from the village trustee, but if I failed in getting the village school I would go to Spyville.

"I waited and waited, but the village trustee got some one else and never let me know. The very day I decided to become the Spyville schoolma'am I received word that the trustee had grown tired of waiting and didn't want me.

"Still I had hopes for the school on the hill. I visited the trustee and was in luck, for he said he would employ me and the next evening would come down and make all arrangements.

"I was delighted and went right down street and spent every cent in my pocketbook. Imagine my dismay the next evening when I received a note from him saying his Aunt Jennie Somebody hadn't a school and he would rather she would take it. She lived in the district and every one liked her.

"The next week I heard of still another school without a teacher. I got father up at 5 o'clock and we started off to find school had been in session a week.

"Am I too easily discouraged? Oh, I'm Almost instead of Amy. Don't you remember two years ago? I stood almost first in my class. Susie Little had just a fraction more than I in our last rhetoric examination. Then when I spoke for the medal I stood second. Why, I could count up ever so many times. I believe whenever it seems I must do anything I can't quite."

"It is queer," replied May; "but perhaps those very circumstances will be a lesson that may be of great benefit to you."

"It seems to be a lesson I have to review often. I'll have it by heart pretty soon. But it is late and we had better hurry if we intend to go to prayer-meeting," said Amy.

A few minutes later, the girls entered chapel as the hymn "Almost Persuaded" was being sung.

"May," Amy whispered, laughingly, "that joins right in with our afternoon conversation." But she became more thoughtful as they sang:

Almost is but to fail!
Sad, sad, that bitter wail—
Almost—but lost!"

Amy was not a Christian. She was one of the kind who thought she was just as good as a great many church members. May, who was a devoted Christian, had talked often with her friend about her soul, but seemingly to no purpose.

"Now, Amy," said May, on their way home from church, "it came to me while we were singing "Almost Persuaded" why you had been given so many lessons in almost having your wishes met. O Amy, as you value your soul, don't carry 'almost' too far."

"I haven't carried 'almost' into anything. It has carried me. What ails you, May? You make me nervous. I am not such a terrible sinner." So Amy turned the subject to something lighter.

But the words "Almost—but lost!" would keep running through her mind and it haunted her all the rest of the week.

Revival services were announced the next Sunday and she told May she was going to go and become a Chistian. She went Monday night, and when the invitation was given for those out of Christ to become Christians no one responded. Amy thought she could not go alone. After the meeting, May spoke with her about it. She said: "I surely will to-morrow night.

To-morrow night came, but Amy was not at meeting. As Amy left the church a woman came up to her and said: "De Bakers wants ye right off," and burst into tears.

"Why, Meg, what is the matter?" said May as she recognized the servant of the Baker family. But Meg was sobbing so that May could find out nothing only that she must hurry.

On reaching the house, Meg led the way in and up to Amy's room. There poor Amy lay, pale as death. Her parents and the doctor were watching to catch some sign of life. She had gone out for a horse-back ride that afternoon. The horse had taken fright and thrown her and she had been taken into the house for dead.

For hours they watched. At last the doctor said he could feel the faintest beating of the pulse. This little sign caused great joy.

Many anxious days followed. At last there came a great change for the better. Her life was spared and she gave it to Christ.

"May," she said one day after she came back to health, "my 'almost' lesson came near lasting forever."

"Almost persuaded, harvest is past!
Almost persuaded, doom comes at last!"

—Bishop Fitzgerald, of the M. E. Church, South, died recently. He was a man of a sweet spirit.

THE FLOWER PARABLE.

As Fred Barlow came up the walk, he saw through the open door his pretty cousin Lois standing with a bouquet of roses in her hands, the picture of perplexity.

"Well?" he said, inquiringly.

She turned quickly.

"Well," she repeated, "what do you think of that?" and she handed him the flowers.

He saw at a glance that the bouquet had been one of rare beauty, but now the flowers were withered. From many of them the petals were fallen, and the ferns and smilax were yellow and drooping. Even as he took it a shower of rose leaves fell at his feet.

"With the love of Mrs. Malden," he read from the card attached.

"She hasn't just sent it, of course," he said in a questioning tone.

"Sambo brought it in that box to the door not five minutes ago," she answered.

Fred picked up the box and looked it over carefully, as if to find some explanation of the strange gift.

"Depend upon it," he said at length, "she must have sent it by him several days ago, and the rascal forgot to bring it. Of course she wouldn't insult you by sending you such a specimen. Come," he said, "let's have a game of tennis."

In the interest of the game Lois forgot the matter, but when she was alone again her perplexity returned.

"I don't believe Sambo could have forgotten it," she said. "How beautiful it must have been! I don't understand it at all, and when I get a chance I am going to ask Mrs. Malden."

The chance came sooner than she expected, for that very afternoon Mrs. Malden called and invited her to ride. Mrs. Malden's stylish turnout was the admiration and envy of all the Creston girls, and Lois felt quite elated as she took her seat in the handsome phaeton. For awhile, they talked of different matters, and then Lois said:

"Those were rare roses you sent me this morning," thinking, as she slightly emphasized "this morning" that she would find out whether they had been sent before.

"Yes," said Mrs. Malden, "they were beautiful. I gathered and arranged them for you on Monday, but I enjoyed their beauty and fragrance so much I kept them myself as long as I could."

She spoke seriously, but when she saw the look of amazement on Lois's face she could not conceal a smile.

"If it wasn't a mistake, Mrs. Malden, it must have been a parable," said Lois decidedly. "Please tell me quick."

"Dear Lois," said her friend, "I wanted to show you how you mean to treat your best Friend."

If Lois was perplexed before, she was wholly mystified now, and begged for an explanation.

"Last week," said Mrs. Malden, "I passed a group of High School girls on the street. I think they were talking about Annie Temple's joining the church the week before, for I heard her name, and then I heard one of them say: 'Oh, of course, I mean to be a Christian when I get to be an old woman, but now I am young I mean to enjoy myself, and have a good time.'"

"I said that myself," said Lois; "but surely—"

She paused, and after waiting a moment for her to conclude the sentence, Mrs. Malden said: "There never was a greater mistake than the idea that becoming a Christian lessens the enjoyment of life; but it was not that I wished to show you. Life lies before you, bright with promise like those budding roses when I gathered them. Beauty and health are yours, mental faculties alert and active, unnumbered opportunities, and the energy and enthusiasm of youth. And from the friend who has given it all to you, and says, 'Give me thine heart,' you turn away and answer, 'Not yet, O Lord, not yet, wait until I am old and feeble, when bodily strength is failing, when mental powers are waning, when life can be of no pleasure to myself and no service to thee.' Were not those fading flowers a fit emblem of such a gift, dear Lois?"

The young girl bowed her head in assent, but she made no reply.

* * * * *

The next morning Fred ran in to see why his cousin had not been at the party the evening before.

"Oh, I could not go," Lois said; "I wanted to think."

"To think!" replied Fred banteringly. "I was afraid you were sick, but I had no idea it was anything so serious. Have you called a doctor? Does he think you will get over it? Is it contagious?"

"Oh, I hope it is," eagerly interrupted Lois. "I was thinking about those flowers," and she pointed to the bouquet still standing on the table beside him.

"Oh, yes, I see," Fred began again; "brooding over the insult you have received, planning for a great revenge. If you need any assistance, remember I am at your service."

But Lois was too much in earnest to smile at his raillery.

"Do you know, Fred, when Mrs. Malden said that when she picked those flowers for me Monday, but didn't send them until yesterday, because she wanted to enjoy them herself as long as possible, I was too astonished to say a word."

"I should think so," said Fred. "Did she really say that?"

"Yes; and she did it to show that it was only like you and me putting off being Christians until we are old."

Fred whistled softly, and Lois went on—

"Don't you see, we think that while life is full of [illegible]mise it is too good for the Lord? [illegible]n it is almost gone, when Mrs. Malc[illegible]ays it is no pleasure to us and no serv[illegible]e to Him, then we mean to give it to Him."

"Nonsense, Lois," said Fred.

"Oh, of course, we never put the thought into so many words, but it really amounts to that. How do you think it sounds?"

"I think it sounds decidedly shabby; and it strikes me you might get left. What if He should refuse such a gift?"

"Oh, no, he wouldn't," said Lois confidently. "That 'whosoever' takes in the most worn and worthless. But though he would not refuse it, I would be ashamed to offer it. I have been thinking it all out. Christ has given His best for me, and I am going to give my best to Him. Will you not do the same, Fred?" and she looked at him with shining eyes.

"Oh, come, don't push a fellow so; I haven't 'thought it all out,' as you say. It seems to me it is asking a good deal," he replied.

"Asking a good deal? O Fred, it is only asking that you treat the Lord honestly and honorably! It is giving you a chance to make the best possible investment of your life. It is offering you all that gives life any meaning or death any hope."

At this minute a morning caller was announced, and Fred took his departure. But her last words followed him. All that day, and for many a day, they echoed through his brain.

Watching Lois closely he acknowledged to himself that she had gained something that filled life for her with a sweet and noble meaning; and standing a few months after at the open grave of an earnest Christian, a young man whose instant death had shocked the whole community, he realized that the religion of Jesus Christ was indeed "all that giveth death any hope."

Today he can say sincerely and joyfully—
"My life I give to Thee,
I would not be mine own;
O Savior, let me be
Thine ever, Thine alone:
My heart, my life, my all I bring
To Thee, my Savior and my King."
—Free Church of Scotland Monthly.

An Offended Mother.—The Catholic News prints the following letter to a teacher. It explains itself:

"Madim you kepe telling my son to breeth with his dierframs I supose rich boys and girls al has dierframs but how about when their father only makes 2 dollers a day and theres 4 younger I tell you its enoug to make everybody Socialists first its one thing and then its another and now its dierframs its too much."

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC—SEPT. 3.

By Charles A. Hines.

Lessons from the Life of Daniel.—Dan. 6:10-23. (Consecration Meeting.)

The life of Daniel was one of many trials, numerous difficulties, arduous duties and hard work, but it was also rich in experience, filled with wisdom, touched, softened and made beautiful by the love of the great Master. The Prophet was a man of splendid attainments, ranked as a scholar in his day, had keen perception, acuteness of mind and religious conviction. A close study of his life and character reveals all of the elements of greatness.

It is supposed that Daniel was born in Jerusalem and early in life was carried away with the other Hebrew children. He was still a young man when he was called to interpret the king's dream. In his youth he had found favor with God and had already become the serious and earnest Christian that he was through the remaining years.

After the Magi of Nebuchadnezzar's court had failed to reveal to him the meaning of his dream, the young Hebrew was called in and with marvellous readiness of mind he detailed the meaning of the dream. How terse and yet how full of meaning is every word that he spoke when before the king. In consequence of his success, like Joseph of old, he was elevated from a servant's place to that of governor of Babylon and president of the Babylonian wise men.

Later he interpreted another dream for Nebuchadnezzar to the effect that the king was to lose his throne for awhile, and then it was to be restored to him after being humbled. After the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel seems to have lost his princely position for a time.

Daniel occupied a subordinate place under the reign of Belshazzar. He had two remarkable visions which disclosed to him the fact of two of the most powerful empires of the world, and their relations to the kingdom of God. He afterward interpreted the hand-writing on the wall, which foretold the destruction of Belshazzar.

When Babylon was taken by the Medes and Persians, he was made the first of the three presidents of the empire. We now find him in deep humility and prostration of spirit, praying to God for forgiveness of the people's sins and asking for divine mercy.

Being so blessed by Jehovah and occupying such a high post of honor in the state, the enmity and jealousy of his colleagues were aroused, and they at last succeeded in prevailing upon the weak monarch to issue the decree that was so at variance with Daniel's creed, and the violation of which resulted in casting Daniel into the lions' den.

Daniel was miraculously delivered from the loins' den, raised to the highest post of honor. At the ascension of Cyrus he continued to hold his post of honor. He thus occupied a high official position during the reign of three kingdoms, the Chaldean, Median and Persian. Daniel did not accompany the Jews back to Jerusalem but died in exile when past ninety years of age.

The foundation of Daniel's greatness was his temperance. He was able to conquer others because he was able to conquer himself. Because he chose to live, not on the defiling meat and wine but on pulse and water, he came to eat at the king's table. Such temperance is the foundation of every young man's success.

It was not necessary for Daniel to pray with his windows open toward Jerusalem, right where his enemies could see him. He might have prayed in some little back room, with the curtains all drawn tightly. Ah, but public prayer was necessary for Daniel then, if never before or after. Private prayer would have been a denial of his God.

On the wall of every evil life the dread Hand appears, writing its doom: "Weighed, and found wanting!" No one can grow to middle age, or even live beyond his teens, without seeing the awful portent many times. Our folly lies in always thinking that the Hand will always write above other lives, but never, whatever we do, above our own.

Suggested Program.

1. Open with only one song, a call to worship. You need all the time for the meeting proper, for this consecration.

2. An earnest prayer by the leader. Ask two others to follow you, naming them.

3. The Bible reading, accompanied by comments.

4. After a song, the leader's opening words. It will be helpful for the leader to give a personal word telling of some lesson he learns from Daniel.

5. The roll-call may be left out of this program, and let the secretary sit at the table and mark each one present as they take part in whatever manner. As a part of your consecration meeting, you could also speak of new work, or new ways of doing the old things.

Daily Readings.

M.	Value of education	Dan. 1: 3-5
T.	Physical training	Dan. 1: 8-21
W.	A man of visions	Dan. 2: 19-23
T.	A truth teller	Dan. 2: 31-45
F.	A martyr for truth	Dan. 6: 4, 5, 16-23
S.	Daniel's last vision	Dan. 12: 1-10
S.	The topic.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address
PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

POPULAR EXCURSION TO RICHMOND, VA., VIA SOUTHERN RY.

Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Southern Railway will operate annual September excursion from North Carolina territory to Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Special train consisting of first-class coaches and standard Pullman sleeping cars will leave Charlotte, N. C., at 3 P. M., Tuesday, September 12th, arriving Richmond, Va., 6:00 A. M., following morning.

Returning tickets will be good on any regular train leaving Richmond up to and including trains of Friday, September 15. Passengers from branch lines can use regular trains, connecting with special train at junction points. This will be the last excursion of the season to Richmond, and will be a first class trip in every respect. Three whole days and two nights in Richmond. Ample time to visit the many attractions in and around this magnificent city. Following low round trip rates will apply from points named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$3.65
Reidsville, N. C.,	3.35
High Point, N. C.	4.25
Kernersville, N. C.	4.00

Proportionately low round trip rates from other points. For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., see any Agent Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

SENATOR WILLIAM P. FRYE DEAD.

Senator William P. Frye, whom the State of Maine had sent to the United States Senate ever since March 15, 1881, when he was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of James G. Blaine, died at Lewiston, Me., on Aug. 8. He was born in Lewiston in 1830, graduated at Bowdoin College in 1850, and, taking up the study and practice of law, entered the Maine Legislature in 1861, after which his rise in the political world was steady. He came into Congress toward the close of the Reconstruction period, and immediately took a deep interest in all measures pertaining to the welfare of the colored race. His long service of ten years in the House of Representatives and of thirty years in the Senate—of which he was, from 1896 to 1911, president pro tempore—won for him from all parties the reputation of being an able, sincere, and fair-minded legislator. Senator Frye took satisfaction. also in his service on the Paris Peace Commission, appointed to adjust terms between Spain and the United States. Missouri and Maine, as Speaker Champ Clark has pointed out, in a hearty tribute to Senator Frye, are the only States that ever had two thirty-year Senators, Maine so gaining an influence on national legislation out of all proportion to her population and wealth. Vice-President Sherman, Senators Lodge, Hale, and Plaisted, Governor Foss, and many others have united in very warm expressions of respect for the memory of the stalwart Maine Senator, who always treated his political opponents fairly, and his friends with gratitude, and who is recognized as having been a great statesman, ever having at heart the interests of the people. Mr. Frye was a forceful and magnetic, rather than a brialliant or profound, orator, and excelled particularly in the art of driving home his arguments with the aid of telling illustrations, somewhat in the manner of a Gough. The late Senator represented a high tradition of public service, and his exact type may not appear again. The Brooklyn Eagle well says:

"A kindly, courteous gentleman, loyal ever to his party organization and to his own ideas of right, a hard fighter, but always fair, a dignified presiding officer over the most dignified legislative body in the world, William Pierce Frye, dying at the age of 81, leaves a record of public service which men of all parties and every faction may justly admire."—Zion's Herald.

SOME OF ADMIRAL TOGO'S IMPRESSIONS.

On the way from Philadelphia to New York city on Friday, Aug. 11, a New York Times reporter, who traveled with Admiral Togo of Japan, asked him to give his impressions of President Taft, Mount Vernon, the Naval Academy, and the other interesting people and things he had seen since leaving New York. The Admiral asked that the questions be submitted in writing. That was done. The questions and the answers, the latter in the handwriting of the Admiral, were handed back to the reporter when the train reached New York. Here they are:

What Are Your Impressions of
The President?
Ideal.
The Naval Academy?
Magnificent.
Congress?
Grand.
Mount Vernon?
Beautiful.
American battleships of the Utah type?
Excellent.
The new naval 14 inch gun?
Powerful.
The Government Navy Yards?
Very good.
American railroads?
Comfortable.
American hotels?
Up to date.
Reception in America?
Very warm, for which I am grateful.

(1) The effect in Japan of President Taft's complimentary reference to the Mikado? (2) Will it further cement the friendship of the two nations?

(1) Will be very good. (2) Cannot be otherwise.

American newspaper photographers?
Very enterprising.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

Mountain Valley, Ivy Circuit.

We commenced our special meetings at Mountain Valley on the 6th and closed it on the 12th. Bro. Griffith, of the M. E Church, was my pulpit help. I don't think I ever listened to plainer gospel. The people all seemed pleased with the preaching, but it didn't move them to action. There was but very little interest shown on the part of the church or the world.

We were glad to have with us this week our President, Dr. Swain; he preached at each church on this charge, and he and I and his son John spent one day on the Ogle Meadows, and viewed the beautiful handiwork of our heavenly Father.

D. R. Williams.

We note with pleasure that Rev. J. O. Atkinson, M. A., D. D., has been elected Professor of Political and Social Science in Elon College, advertisement of which appears in another column. Dr. Atkinson has for some time been editor of The Christian Sun and we are glad of Elon's fortune in securing a man of such parts for this important professorship. Dr. Atkinson was for two years President of the N. C. Press Association.

We also note that Mr. R. N. Doak, A. B., has been elected Athletic Director in the same college. Mr. Doak is an experienced teacher and coach and will make good in baseball, tennis, basketball, and track events.

Elon's twenty-second annual session opens on the sixth of Sept. The enrollment last year was 238 from twelve states. All interested should address President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

—The costs to the Standard Oil Co. of its dissolution case amounted to $42,395.69 as the government's share. A check for this amount has been sent to the Department of Justice.

—Mr. C. C. Miller and family left last Saturday for their new home in Asheboro. We regret to lose this noble family from our midst. They won many friends while they lived in Cooleemee, and they all will be glad to se them back.—Coolcemee Journal.

—George Ross is manager of the Asheboro fair. He is at work.

—A rattlesnake with seven rattles was killed on the road between Asheboro and Randleman by Wm. Foster last Monday evening.

—Miss Elizabeth Bunch and Mr. Walter Bunch returned to their home at Asheboro Saturday, after a visit to relatives at Oak Ridge.—Asheboro Courier.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting design that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

is th first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200, 000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders liability of $200,000, making in all $470, 000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dep't.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

When choosing a school in which to place their children, parents wish to consider the following special points:

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL INFLUENCES. The moral atmosphere of Elon College is of the highest type. The Spiritual influences surrounding the young man or the young woman will not allow them to go far astray.

HEALTHFULNESS. Good water from a deep well, buildings well cared for, good heat and lights, plenty of fresh air, and a situation in the best part of North Carolina insure the healthfulness of the students here.

STRONG COURSES OF STUDY. Entrance requirements equal to those of the best colleges in the country, a strong faculty of university men, and courses requiring sixty-nine hours for the Bachelor's degree, make Elon a college whose graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of the leading Universities of the country. Courses in Business, Elocution, Art, Music, and Pedagogy are offered leading to certificates and degrees.

EQUIPMENT. Splendid Library and Reading Room, ample grounds, laboratories, large dormitories, buildings equa to the best, with every equipment and appliance makes Elon stand among the from rank of colleges in the South. All buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and have water and bath rooms on every floor.

ECONOMY. All expenses can be paid for the college courses for from $125.00 to $200.00 a year according to the student's power of economy and his place selected for board and room.

COEDUCATIONAL. Parents who read The Methodist Protestant Herald can send both their sons and daughters to Elon College with the assurance that they will have the best that the educational world has to offer.

FOR CATALOGUE, ILLUSTRATED BULLETINS, etc., address,

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, AUGUST 31, 1911. NUMBER 40.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

GOD OR SELF?

What an antithesis!

"God" stands for the noblest of all beings, the majestic Creator, the all-wise Governor of the universe, the loving Father of men.

"Self" stands for a petty creature, narrow in interests, meager in intelligence, puny in power, wanting in sympathy as in knowledge, prone to regard only its own desires.

It would seem that when it comes to a choice between God and self as the ruler of one's life, every one would gladly turn from feeble, erring self to the almighty and all-wise God, the loving Father. But the history of men shows otherwise. How many are they who prefer to order their own lives rather than submit to the divine direction! Such recklessness and folly is truly pitiable as well as criminal, for a godless life is a shallow and barren life, and brings certainly to impoverishment of soul. God himself looks with pity as well as censure upon the blind and deluded soul that vaunts itself in fancied self-sufficiency. God knoweth that "pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall." God knows that the way of happiness for man is to be found only in meek and filial submission to the Father of us all, the Infinite God. It is the highest honor as it is the greatest happiness of men that they are in intimate relationship with God as His children, filled with His spirit, in harmony with His life. To depart from God in obedience to selfish impulse is to seek darkness and court death. Those who choose God as their portion are as shining lights, shining more and more until they reach the splendor of noon-day. Those who disregard God and follow self may shine for awhile with the flash of a meteor, but they quickly go out in a darkness that is deep and dreadful.

—The editor went to Siler City last Saturday to fill Rev. J. H. Bowman's appointment on Sunday. He was kindly taken into the home of Bro. L. L. Wrenn and entertained during his stay. Bro. Wrenn and his good wife are of great worth to our church there, though they are disposed to give greater credit to others. They especially mention the faithfulness and devotion of Mrs. Siler and Dr. Matthews. Our church there is a little band, and they have the advantages and disadvantages of small numbers. They are discouraged sometimes, but they take heart again, and push ahead. They are greatly assisted by Bro. O. A. Hanner, whose membership is at another church on Chatham Ct., but who comes in on Sundays to serve as Sunday school superintendent and teacher. The Sunday school is, of course, small yet, but it can do great good, even with its present numbers. It might become a model to other schools in punctuality and in earnest Bible study. It is easier when a school is small for all to be on time, and the members of small classes in Sunday schools as in colleges can receive more personal attention from the teacher. The congregations at preaching service are made up of all the denominations of the town—Baptists, M. E.'s, Friends, M. P.'s, and perhaps others. While the editor was trying to preach in Siler City, Rev. C. H. Whitaker was beginning a protracted meeting at Piney Grove, another church on Chatham circuit. We wish for him good success, and hope that all the churches on Chatham will work not less but more because their pastor is kept away by sickness.

—We publish an announcement for Bro. Casto, who is also kept from his work by indisposition. He is still in Asheville in the interest of his health. He has our sympathy, and is assured of the prayers of his friends for his improvement in health, that he may return and be among them, if it be the Lord's will.

—"The Reappearing" is the name of a new book, written in France and published in this country by George H. Doran Company, New York. It represents Jesus as appearing in Paris for a few days last December. His appearance produced great excitement for a time, but the lack of sympathy with Him led to the request that He leave the city. The book is one that one wants to read through, yet we confess to a sense of disappointment when we finished it. The author seems to share in the worldly notion that Christianity is impractical, whereas it is the most practical system of teaching in the world. One can be a real Christian any where and all the time, by the help that Christ gives to His faithful disciples. The book also misinterprets the teachings of Jesus in a place or two, we think. The book may serve the purpose of reminding men that Jesus promised to come again and of calling attention to the fact that much of human life in nominal Christian countries is really unchristian, but somehow we question the propriety of treating such a theme in so sensational a manner.

—Dr. Tagg's editorial on "Facing Homeward" will appeal with peculiar force to many readers whose interests are being trasferred from things of earth to the life that lies hidden in the beyond. This life is a journey, and to all of us, young and old, it is a journey in which our faces should be turned ever homeward. If life is not bringing us more into harmony with God and not preparing us for the society of the good and the true, we are living worse than in vain. We are wandering off into the outer darkness, the region where lost souls must ever wander and find no resting-place, no home. God be thanked for that vision of the "home of the soul," which rises upon us and more than compensates us for the loss when this earthly house crumbles and falls.

—The acts of the special session of Congress which adjourned last week were not very numerous and perhaps not important enough to have taken so much time over. Sometimes we wonder whether a smaller body of real representatives of the people would not make a better legislature for our nation than our present unwieldy. With its two houses. But it is perhaps human nature that makes the trouble, and there would be trouble under any system. But when men are chosen to make laws, we think they should sweekly [sic] lay by themselves to legislate and not to be often to serve party advantage. The people that pay for service are entitled to it when they employ legislators as well as when they hire men to work in field or factory. An honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

—The New York Evening Post welcomes President Taft for sending a telegram of thanks and praise to the Hearst newspapers for helping in the fight for peace recently. It thanks the act towards the dignity of the President of the United States, and says Mr. Taft showed his good nature to let the letter of his sense of dignity.

—President Taft should not be punished for his solicitude in saving the American Standard Oil because of the result of failure. It is true the State must incorporate that feature after it has been eliminated, but if the President thereby makes such a proposition harmful to a State, must he not pay, and a right that he was morally bound to permit his protest when the bill came for his approval. How could he exhibit that he did not object?

—Rev. J. E. Bowman, after suffering for three weeks at the home of Mr. Will Tuck where he came from with pneumonia, was brought last Sunday by Dr. Shepherd to St. Luke's Hospital. The editor visited him Monday evening, and found him not over weak. The attendants thought he was still a sick man. But he seemed to himself to be improving, and we have great hope of his recovery in course of time. He is one of our most valuable men in the ministry, and we cannot spare him from the field so soon. Let there be earnest prayer for his restoration.

—Mrs. Rev. T. A. Tyler wishes to be remembered in prayer. She is a constant sufferer, feeling that she cannot recover without a miracle of mercy, yet she knows that cannot come only through. When she was operated on before the other so affected her that she did not recover her mental consciousness for a week. Her husband was with her three days, but she has no recollection of it: her mind is blank for that period.

—After being somewhat used to seeing only well people for a long time, it makes a painful impression to go into a large hospital and see on every room a sick one. It is a trying experience, however. It shows our frailty, and arouses a new sympathy for the afflicted. When we are going to forget while we are well and see only well people about us.

—We wish that home would do as Dr. Bethea has done—send us an interesting account of their travels. People we know and travel and like to learn about the world by reading after those they know.

NEW YORK TO HENDERSON.

Many interesting sights down the Hudson. One thing I shall not forget. At Bull Run's West a mountain 1400 feet high rising from the river's edge, was a sign painted on the rocks high above the water so as to be seen by every one passing on the different boats that pass up and down this historic stream. I thought that this person, a believer in every letter in Jesus, must be some other than those who love him and that ever put that there is preaching in an effective way to those whose business it is not to do it. This was the best plan, so simple and yet so grand: JESUS SAVES.

I will not bother you about Ephrata or Bethel Pike's first encampment. It be could say, behold the high mountain, and yet a mountain I have that great moments are products of a sense, and as Mr. Hebron says that the land is electricity has just been opened, perhaps they expect that when they have more experience in only the natural of great places that shall be produced here.

We reached New York on time, after having passed West Point and many points of interest on the Hudson. As we came in view of the city a terrific rain storm came over us, and I thought for one time we would be wet, at that was the first rain we had seen since leaving home. Indeed there was either a flood or a drought at Greenville. But by the time we reached pier 9 where the ship had moored the rain had ceased, so the docking and entertainment began.

Getting and boarding from a pilot-house, we were invited to a wet lunch just as in former days and had lunched a dreamy while but my trouble. Here we found comfortable quarters at a reasonable rate in Dr. Wright's Home Training School building. Being there it was impossible to secure a room. It's a good, safe place to go. We stayed in that night as the rain kept on. Early next morning sightseeing began in earnest, and for the two days and nights we lost no time, and were only beginning to see when it came time for us to leave.

We took in the Jewish quarters, where they average 400 children to the flat, and in six blocks there are as many schools, and the children have to be divided. Part go in the morning, the other half in the afternoon. Some singing, some fighting, and everything else sightly and unsightly, it seemed to me. We were surely glad we were riding, and in a high sight seeing car at that.

Little Italy and the Hungarian quarters were also visited. My father used to tell me of the Brooklyn Bridge, that it was so large that the first part had to be repaired before the later part was finished. I wondered then how it could be so large. But I wonder now how in that age it was ever completed at all.

The sky scrapers were a wonder. Seems like a dream almost, and yet Woolworth, the man who runs 5 & 10 cent stores in this country is beginning a building that is to overtop the great Singer and the Metropolitan Buildings. We saw the foundation being laid for this building. When will we the highest office building in the world.

We rode and we walked on Broadway and Fifth Avenue. Something always new to the stranger. We looked in on the Bulls and Bears on Wall Street. They looked like mad men or crazy men, and I guess there were both kinds there. Yet right in this seething mass the Evangelistic Committee send the strongest preachers to tell the simple story of Jesus during the summer months, and these busy men turn aside, some of them, to have a look at Jesus, as held up by these heralds of the Cross.

So many things here I would like to tell you about. We went shopping on 14th Street, called "Vanity Fair" of the city. Anything here from a shoe lace to a diamond.

While we didn't get sea sick coming back from New York to Norfolk, we did not find the Old Dominion S. S. Hamilton anything like the Merchant and Miners boat Juniata, on the going trip. Coming back it was colored service, and the abominable "tipping" was in evidence, while in the M. & M. line to Boston we saw no sign of this. The service was all white.

Mrs. Bethea remarked, "I am so anxious to get back. Not a familiar face since leaving home. I'm tired of seeing strangers." From the time we left Portsmouth till we got back there we did not see a face we had ever seen before. The first time in my experience traveling has it been so. This is a very helpful trip. To say we enjoyed it is putting it mildly.

Our associations at Northfield were exceedingly pleasant. Our boarding place was with a Congregational minister. He had for some of his guests a Presbyterian minister and wife and two sisters from East Orange, New Jersey, and a Mr. Hayes and wife, from Amsterdam, now workers in Water Street Mission, New York City, and some few others who were very pleasant. What a monument this man of God, Moody, has built. Dead as we say, but his works follow.

We had a pleasant little trip up into New Hampshire, and passed the rock on the side of the road where the Indians ground their corn, there on the famous road known as Lovers' Lane. Hope my jottings haven't been burdensome to the editor or his readers. What I have written is not all that I have gotten, by any means, but much profit has come to us of the trip. So good to be back in the best of all places, Home in the good old North State.

N. G. Bethea.

OUR FATHER.

Jesus taught His disciples, and all others, to address God with these words. Did He mean anything by it or not? If He meant anything, He meant just what the words express. If God is our Father, we are His children, members of His family, dependents upon His providential care, subjects of His government. These relations are not dependent upon our accepting the Plan of Salvation taught us by our Savior Jesus the Christ. All men are children of God because they are created in His image and likeness. In all their natural endowments they are "just like their Father."

This is the true view-point—the only true view-point—from which to study human life—its nature, its dependences, its duties, its destiny. The relation of parent and child is three fold:

1. The fact itself: one is the parent, the other is a child. This is the nearest relationship known. All other relations may be severed, but this is inseverable. No disagreement, no alienation of feeling, can alter the fact. That fact remains; one is the parent, the other the child. The duties that grow out of this relation are mutual. They are love, confidence, interest in each other's welfore and happiness, and devotion to that end. On this relation, irrespective of anything else, is based the First Commandment. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart.

2. The relation of provider and dependent. It is the duty of the parent to provide for all the needs of His children. The provisions God has made for His family are inconceivable; and what are inconceivable are inexpressible. Every fact and every law in the universe, whether in matter, mind or spirit, is of this nature. See the nineteenth Psalm. The duties this relation devolves upon the child are easily understood. Grateful recognition of the Father's providence and hearty expressions of thankfulness must be the first response of every filial soul. Here we find the first element of prayer: suggesting the great fact that should be known and understood by all, that worship is a spontaneous outgrowth of our nature, and not solely a mandatory ordinance. But another great duty lies in this connection. Knowing that "Our Father" has supplies for all our needs, those needs spontaneously prompt to the duty of petition.—the second element of worship. Thus we see that what we call religion has its imperative in our very nature

REV. THOS. HOLMES, D. D., LL. D., now in the 95th year of his age, author of the vigorous article entitled "Our Father."

3. The relation of parent and child includes also that of ruler and subject. The duty of parents to exercise authority over their children has divine sanction in the divine example. "Jehovah is KING in all the earth," because He is the Father of all its inhabitants. This reveals to us another great fact that the Kingdom of God is a Family Government: that God is a Father-King, and His subjects are His children. His sovereignty is based upon His parental love, not upon His Omnipotence. His laws are precepts of instruction, prompted by parental love; and exactly adapted to the needs of His children: instead of arbitrary edicts, based upon His Omnipotence. The imperative to obedience is filial love, not fear of punishment. This in fact is the only obedience recognized as obedience in God's Kingdom. Doing what God requires for fear of dreadful consequences if it is not done, is no obedience at all. It may be sufficient in a human government, where courts take cognizance of outward acts only, but it will never pass with God who knows the thoughts and intents of the heart.

Perhaps there is no field of inquiry, investigation and progress in the discovery of truth, in which the tendency of human nature to carry matters to extremes has made itself so conspicuous, and has led to such mischievous results, as in the field of spiritual truth and the spiritual life. The early converts from heathenism to Christianity, under the influences of the semi-barbarous times in which they lived, and the false notions of the relations existing between men and the god they worshipped in which they had been educated, conceived that the Kingdom of God is based upon His Almightiness, and that His "decrees" were uttered "for His own glory," however repugnant they might be to human reason and human love: and declared that "whosoever will be saved must believe" the decisions of their bigoted Councils. The doctrines they taught, and the creeds they framed dominated the Church for fifteen hundred years, making the pages of Church History red with the blood of martyrs, and black with un-Christ-like deeds of cruel persecution.

The nineteenth century, especially in this land of "freedom," witnessed a revolt against such a theory of the disposition of God toward the human race, and of the nature of His Kingdom: and seemed to make the discovery, long hidden from the world, that God is "Our Father," as well as "King of all the earth." In the discussion that followed the discovery, many loose ideas were advanced respecting God's dealings with men as their Father: the most mischievous of which is that He is an "Indulgent Father." Out of this misleading phrase has grown all the nonsense published under the name of "New Religion," representing God as indifferent to offenses against His laws and commands, than which nothing can be farther from the truth. Every law (precept) He has given to man must be obeyed perfectly, from the heart, with filial love, or evil consequences must follow to the offender. "He that sinneth against God wrongeth his own soul." No other father is so devoted to the welfare and happiness of His children, and no other so exacting of perfect obedience. Indulgent parents spoil and ruin their children. If God's children go to the bad, it is their own fault, not His. Let no one reject, or hesitate to receive the doctrine of the "Fatherhood of God" and the brotherhood of man as the logical inference from that fact, because short-sighted and designing men have misused it. There are truths to-day, as there were in the days of the apostle Peter, "which the ignorant and unstead-fast wrest unto their own destruction." Be-ware of such persons! "Hold fast the pat-tern of sound words." It would be a great calamity as well as a great blunder to lose the power of a great truth for good, be-cause ignorant and unstable men have wrested it from its place in God's great system of truth, and made a bad use of it.

Thomas Holmes.

Lakemont, N. Y.

THINGS WE CANNOT AFFORD.

We cannot afford to win the gain
That means another's loss;
We can't afford to miss the crown
By stumbling at the cross.
We can't afford the heedless jest
That robs us of a friend;
We can't afford the laugh that finds
In bitter tears an end.
We can't afford the feast today
That brings tomorrow's fast;
We can't afford the farce that comes
To tragedy at last.
We can't afford to play with fire,
Or tempt a serpent's bite;
We can't afford to think that sin
Brings any true delight.
We can't afford with serious heed
To treat the cynic's sneer;
We can't afford the wise men's words
To turn a careless ear;
We can't afford for hate to give
Like hatred in return;
We can't afford to feed a flame
And make it fiercer burn.
We can't afford to lose the soul
For this world's fleeting breath;
We can't afford to barter life
In mad exchange for death.
But blind to good are we apart
From thee, all-seeing Lord;
O, grant us light that we may know
The things we can't afford!

—Exchange.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

84. Solomon's unselfish choice in his early reign was wisdom.

Mrs. W. J. Mason.

81. In numbering Israel David sinned because he numbered Israel through the suggestion of Satan. Mrs. E. G. L.

Lesson for Next Week.

First Kings, Chapters 8, 9, 10, 11.

—Miss Essie Ross left St. Leo's Hos-pital on Tuesday, accompanied by Mrs. Ferree Ross; she goes to Jackson Springs for further improvement.

A PREPARED PEOPLE.

For every calling some scientific pre-paration is required. One cannot be a skilled mechanic without a course of pre-paration. The hand, the eye, the mind must be trained for the work. No one can play skillfully on the organ or harp without specific preparaion. His fingers must be trained to manipulate the keys, his ear must be trained to distinguish tones, his mind must be taught to under-stand the laws of music.

Many fail in their work. Teachers fail. Lawyers fail. Merchants fail. Minis-ters fail. Why? Not always because they lack ability, not usually because they lack energy and industry, but chiefly be-cause they lack preparation. They are not adequately prepared before they entered upon their work, and have not made pro-per preparation since.

Some young men do not appreciate the necessity of preparation. They waste the time and fritter away the opportunities afforded them for preparation, thinking that all they need is a position, and they will trust to their native ability to fill the place and do the work. This is a fatal mistake. Young men need not trou-ble themselves about a position. Plenty of places are waiting for men who are thoroughly prepared. Let every young man look well to his preparation. Be prepared for the place, and the place will find you.

Living is a business, the greatest busi-ness under the sun. Living right is great-er than being a successful lawyer, a suc-cessful merchant, or a successful teacher. To live right requires careful and con-scientious preparation. Men think and talk much about being prepared to die, but do you ever hear anyone say much about being preared to live? Who thinks about prearing to live? We are living already, are we not? Why then talk about preparing to live? Anyone can live. Surely any one can live, but very few know how to live well.

Men and women have reached middle life without knowing how to live right. Some have come down to old age with-out knowing how to live, and without even beginning to live right. To see mul-titudes existing, hungering, thirsting, eat-ing, drinking, sleeping, breathing, run-ning to and fro in the earth, struggling and toiling, without knowing how to live is one of the most pathetic sights under the sun. They are not trying to learn the secret of living well. Yet here is the greatest business in the world, and we are all in it, and most men are in this business without being preared. How loosely this business is transacted. If men transacted other kinds of business as they do this very few would succeed in anything. Are we prepared to live? Are we preparing to live?

There are many preparatory schools where young people may be fitted for life. The home is one, the common school is another, the college is another. All the banks, stores, and factories are little else but preparatory institutions engaged in fitting people for life. What mistakes we make. Most men think of the home as a place for comfort and happiness, in-stead of a preparatory school fitting young people for life. They think of the school as a place where the mind may be stored with knowledge of science, and the store and factory as places to make money. But if all these institutions are not en-gaged in preparing people for life, they are missing their chief mission in the earth.

What is the Church, together with the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and all the missionary societies, but a great preparatory school? If the Church is fulfilling its mission among men, it is training souls for right living, going out into the highways and hedges after those who are not living right, bringing them into the right way, and teaching them how to live. "To make readv a people prepared for the Lord." This is the busi-ness of the Church. One reason why it is not more successful is we too often lose sight of the most important part of the preparation for life. The most im-portant part, and the most neglected part, of our preparation is heart preparation. There is a proverb that says, "The pre-parations of the heart are from the Lord." Without Him we can do nothing. Exclude Him from life and there can be no adequate preparation. God and the heart are intimately related. The heart is His temple, His home, the place where He does His greatest work among men. "It is God that worketh in you."

Is it not strange that men devote so much time and attention to the training of the hand, the eye, the ear, the voice, the intellectual faculties and so little to the training of the heart? Yet the heart is the chief thing. This is the throne of God, the center of life. If the heart is wrong, all is wrong. What shall a good memory, a bright intellect, a fine voice, and all other departments of our being well trained avail if the heart be bad? A cold heart, a weak heart, a hard heart, an impure heart, will vitiate the whole life.

It is to be noted also that preparation is an everlasting business. We shall nev-er be through with it. Education is nev-er finished. In many places there are what are called "finishing schools." No-thing can be more absurd and ridiculous than this title applied to a school. But many young people are misled by it. There is no finishing school. The best schools in the world are nothing more than preparatory schools; nothing is ever finished for the matter of that. No minister ever finished a sermon, no poet ever finished a song, no artist ever finished a painting, no author ever finished a book. After he has devoted to it all the time and labor he can afford, he is painfully conscious that defects are still in the work. Had he more time and strength he could improve his work. One should be ashamed to say that he has finished anything. Jesus only could say, "It is finished."

And what does this fact suggest? Does it not suggest a future state? If nothing is finished under the sun, if all life is a preparation, what then? If our ideal is so high that we can never quite reach it, is that the end? Nay, there is perfection somewhere. The full corn in the ear shall appear. We are preparing, and still preparing, and never getting beyond the work of preparation. Happy if we shall be prepared at last. In old age we feel that we are beginning to know how to live. Jesus said. "I go to prepare a place for you." While we are preparing for our little places here below the skies, He is preparing a place for us above the stars. The prepared people shall enter into the place prepared, and be forever with the Lord.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

THE LEAGUE AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY REV. R. L. DAVIS,

SUPT. N. C. ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

The Anti-Saloon League stands for two ideas, one prohibition, the other temperance. In all of its teaching and instruction may be traced the Biblical doctrines of prohibition for civil government and total abstinence for the individual. The idea of prohibition for civil government grows out of the doctrine of temperance for the individual. Civil government was ordained of God, and framed by man to protect his temporal and eternal interests, and his interests demand the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor by government.

In these days of local option and statewide prohibition, we too often lose sight of personal prohibition or total abstinence, which is the foundation of all prohibition, the mud sill upon which must be built our municipal and county local option and our State and National prohibition. To justify the dram is to indorse the dram-shop. If the tribe of personal prohibitionists decreases, prohibition, in every sense of the word, will get its set-back, but if their number shall increase, the movement against the rum trade will gather strength and finally drive the liquor forces from the field.

I might add, without going into an argument, that temperance and total abstinence from alcoholic drinks as a beverage mean the same to me. The difference, as I see it, between the commonly accepted terms of temperance and prohibition is that temperance is inducing a man to leave the bottle, while prohibition is taking the bottle away from him, whether or no. The idea of temperance carries with it the thought of manhood on the part of the individual, while the idea of prohibition often suggests that the man is an overgrown child. The Anti-Saloon League, knowing that the conjugal union of the man and the bottle is alike injurious to the individual, to the state and to the church, stands for the separation of these two, and we hail this separation with delight, whether it comes through temperance or prohibition.

If we are to teach temperance, then surely, there can be no question as to the pupil. The old and common adage that "you cannot teach an old dog new tricks" is applicable, and on every hand the worker for prohibition has the statement thrown into his face "you cannot stop an old toper from drinking." We believe, however, that this statement is to be accepted with great modification. At any rate, it shows the great necessity of beginning with the child life, and teaching them the evils of alcohol upon body, mind and soul. We believe when this is properly taught our children, who are freed from the temptation of the open saloon, because of the prohibition laws, that the time will soon dawn when our country shall be filled with temperance citizens, and the toper wil be a foreign article.

If we agree that the time to indoctrinate the individual is during childhood, the point arises how to reach him. Either we must approach through the parental influence of the home, the educational influence of the school or the moral influence of the Sunday school, and as these three influences shall harmonize, our country will grow a generation of boys and girls that will look upon alchohol as they do every other poison, and will view the liquor serpent as they do the other serpents, knowing that at the last "It biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." It is quite encouraging to note that many states today in their school laws have provided temperance instruction and that many parents are laying stress upon total abstinence in the training of their children.

The Sunday school is more and more impressing itself upon the growing life of the church as the best place for Christian activity. The Christian man or woman can make his influence count more here possibly than in any other field of usefulness, and the amount of good that is being done by the Sunday school superintendents and teachers will not be known this side of eternity. The Sunday School Board, with wisdom, foresight and Divine guidance, some years ago made provision for temperance Sunday each quarter, and as time wears on, temperance Sunday in the Sunday school will mean more and more in the moral development of the child life of our country The church needs to emphasize this truth, and to urge our teachers not only to teach temperance on the temperance Sunday, but as opportunity presents itself, all through the year to instill the doctrine of total abstinence in the boys and girls under their instruction.

In communities where the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has not the Loyal Temperance Legion organized, giving entertainments of the children from time to time, the Sunday school could very appropriately have temperance entertainments given by the Sunday school, to which the public shall be invited. Occasionally on a temperance Sunday, possibly once a year, the Sunday school might invite the pastor to preach them a sermon on temperance, using the lesson as his text. In these and many other ways, the temperance work in the Sunday school may be enlarged, but certain it is, that if the child life of our growing nation is to be reached and taught to abstain from alcoholic drinks, it is essential that the Sunday school shall play a great part.

DANCING FOR VETERANS.

My wife was thrown from a buggy, here in Sanford, last week, and will have to lie at on her back for weeks, if she gets well. The people who saw the run-a-way, and the fall, did not feel like dancing.

Those who read of it in the Gazette will not feel like dancing. The three Doctors, who took charge of the crippled woman, did not feel that it was a "time to dance." As I look at her from day to day, lying so helpless, I do not feel like dancing.

As old soldiers meet and talk of the perils through which they have passed, the wounds they have received, the prison hard-ships they have endured, surely none but heartless, heathenish people would feel like dancing. I hope I shall never hear of another "Confederate Ball."

I want my friends to ask God to let my wife stand on her feet and walk into His house to worship.

Sanford, N. C. A. D. Betts.

Is your Sunday school class organized? If not, do you believe it is capable of greater work if the members were set to work in an orderly sort of way?

From Pastors and People.

Chatham Circuit.

Ths pastor on account of his illness requests that his appointments for September be called in. He says that beginning with October 1st he expects to have them filled. This does not call in the protracted meeting at Siler City for which arrangement has already been made.

J. F. McCulloch.

Lincoln Circuit.

The special meeting at Knob Creek began on third Sunday in July and closed Friday. The services began with a children's day exercise. The collection was $5.27. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk was the ministerial help in this meeting. There were thirteen professions. May Johnson, May Peeler, Daisy Garrett, Fanny Belle Norman, Blanche Garrett, Eury Garrett, and Getty Heartman united with the church.

The meeting at Pleasant Hill began the fifth Sunday in July, closed Thursday. Rev. D. A. Braswell was the ministerial help. A good revival, with several conversions. Thomas Canipe and McLure Canipe joined the church.

Hebron first Sunday in August, Rev. H. W. Braswell the help. A very good meeting with twenty or more conversions and reclamations. The accessions were Junie Boyles, Gracie Sain, Clida Hauser, Noah Hull, Nellie Hauser, Sallie Blanton, Austin Grigg, Essie Blanton, Lou Davis.

Laurel Hill second in August, Rev. H. W. Braswell help. The meeting closed the following Sunday, Rev. J. E. Hartsell conducting the services. This meeting had an unusually large attendance. The accessions were Cora Whitener, Bessie Hendrick, Callie Davis, Dora Willis, and Mamie Turner.

At Bess Chapel third Sunday in August, Rev. H. W. Braswell the help. The meeting continued eight days. A large number of conversions and reclamations. The accessions were: Willie Hoyle, Connie Bell Bess, Estella Royster, Nannie Bess, May Shull, Edna Dellinger, Vernie Tillman, Essie Foster, Ava Bess, Gertie Lenhart, Bessie Jenks, Kersey Houser, Bright Wehunt, Sankey Houser, Archie Bess, John Canipe, Daniel Bess, Milton Heavener, John Lenhart, Forest Bess, Flay Houser, Blanche Heavener, Katy Boyles, Lula Wehunt, Guy Lenhart, Grady Bess, Blanche Canipe, Irvin Beam, Peter Bess.

These meetings have all been well attended. Revs. J. E. Hartsell, A. P. Ivester, and J. B. Bivens were present at some of the servicees and assisted in addition to the help above mentioned.

T. F. McCulloch.

Efland Meeting.

Revival services will begin at Efland next Sunday, Sept. 3rd. Bro. J. D. Williams will preach on Sunday, and Bro. Lamar will arrive in Monday to assist. We are expecting a good meeting and ask the church and all friends of this church to pray for its success.

Homer Casto.

Asheville, N. C.

Denton.

Our work here is progressing nicely. A most beautiful front has been added to our school building, which makes it look like a new structure. The new church is well on the way. Our people here have done most excellent work considering their financial ability. When I came to Denton five years ago, our church had a membership of about 36, and did not own a single foot of land or property of any kind, except a church organ. We now number 111 members, and when our new church is complete, I suppose all our property would sell for at least eight or nine thousand dollars. This, of course, includes our school property, $1400 of which was given by friends of our cause away from Denton. The improvements made this summer have been or will be paid for by our friends elsewhere, a statement of which will appear later. Taking everything into consideration, I do not believe there is a people in N. C. that have done as much as our people here. We are poor, but love progress, especially in our Master's cause. Our pastor, Rev. D. A. Braswell, has done most excellent work. Without his wonderful energy, I am sure our cause would not have gone forward so rapidly this year. Watch Methodist Protestantism grow in Denton.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Flat Rock Items.

The sweet little daughters of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Ogburn spent some time with their many relatives here, and have gone to High Point in continuation of their visit, Miss Hilda, of Greensboro High School, and Miss Bessie, of Western Maryland.

Mrs. June Williams has returned to Madison after an extended visit here.

Mrs. R. S. Ogburn is home again, and she in company with a large delegation from here attended the township S. S. Convention at Summerfield Saturday.

There went up from the inner courts of this church, belonging to her inner circle, a little child, the splendid little son of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Ogburn. Interment at Summerfield. It was one of the sweetest funerals we've witnessed in years, beautiful as a dream. Our pastor, assisted by Rev. C. P. Good, drawing from the life of David and poems of Longfellow.

The pathos and sadness of this scene beggars description. May the rift through the skies prove a thorough fare direct to heaven for the sorrowing ones of that home. And may the marble form, in white linen clad, incased in casket white, overlaid with ferns and lilies, mounted on a base of white, bordered in smilax, and deposited in a grave of white and smilax, be to the witnesses an ever-living picture of the whiteness and purity of that realm to which the feet of the saints of God are tending.

The church extends to them sympathy. And may God's peace rest there.

Aug. 23, 1911. Reporter.

Halifax Circuit.

Lee's Chapel.—We had a three-days' meeting at Lee's Chapel last week. There were four conversions, two of whom will go to our church at Ringwood, the other two will join the Baptist church.

Ringwood.—We held Children's Day services at Ringwood yesterday at eleven. Large congregation—more than could be accommodated with seats. The children rendered their parts well. The whole service was good. The collection was far to small—only $6.16.

In the afternoon we began our special meeting. The meeting has started off well. There were six conversions at the afternoon service, two men, one married lady and two young ladies.

We are expecting Bro. Bethea this afternoon, and with his good preaching and the prayers of God's people we expect a good meeting.

Fourth quarterly conference of Halifax Ct. will meet at Ringwood on Friday before the third Sunday in September at eleven o'clock. All official members are earnestly requested to be present. Important business to be transacted.

Yours in service,

Linley W. Gerringer.

Aug. 28, 1911.

Why Not Circuit.

Mr. Editor:—

Your news from this field this year has been very limited. But we have been busy. In fact, too busy to write much. This work has now nine regular appointments, besides other points where they are wanting us to preach. It covers a territory about 15 by 40 miles, making something like 600 square miles going round, or through the towns of Elise, Starr, Troy, and Mt. Gilead. We have preached in churches, town halls, and under shade trees on the bank of the river. To keep the appointments going we have had to use about every body in the bounds of the work that would hold a public service. We are especially indebted to young Bros. King and Williams of our church, and Bro. Russell of the M. E. Church, South.

We have been in revival meetings on this work for five successive weeks, and will have five more weeks with one or two weeks rest, perhaps. Thus far we have had thirty professions with ten accessions, with hopes of more.

Our new organization at Starr is doing well, and bids fair to take the lead in real progress, though we cannot give them much attention.

Some different arrangements ought to be made another year, and I think it would be a good thing if the president, with some member of the Board of Church Extension could spend some time looking over especially the southern part of the work.

Many thanks to Bros. McSwain and Suits of our church and Bros. Ridenhour and Russell of the M. E. Church South for help in revival work.

J. H. Stowe.

Yadkin College Circuit.

We commenced our special meeting at Bethesda Sunday with a beautiful children's day service at eleven o'clock. Mrs. A. G. Dixon was with us, and delivered a very short and to the point address on Missions. Collection $22.78. A very large crowd present, and heard Mrs. Dixon talk in the afternoon. Bro. A. G. Dixon came on Monday morning and preached once each day. Mrs. Dixon delivering impressive talks once each day. The labors of Bro. and sister Dixon were faithful and efficient. God blessed their labors, with the earnest efforts of the church, and a glorious revival resulted, in which a number were reclaimed, some seven or eight conversions, and six joined the church.

On the third Sunday in August, with the efficient help of Rev. G. F. Millaway, we were greeted by a large and attentive audience. Bro. Millaway preached to a filled house each day, and with much zeal and power. A gracious revival, some six conversions, several reclaimed, and ten joined the church. We believe much and lasting good was accomplished. We do not have large numbers to be converted who attended these services. The children are kept worked up, and it is a beautiful sight to see the large number of children line up and shake hands as Christians.

Thanks to all the above help. This people consider themselves fortunate in having Rev. and Mrs. Dixon and Rev. Millaway, and will be glad to have them come again.

President's appointments: Friendship, Saturday, Sept. 16, at 11 o'clock.

Yadkin College 16th at night.

Shiloh, Sunday, Sept. 17, at 11 o'clock.

Mt. Carmel at 3:30.

West Lexington at night.

Bethesda, Monday at 11 o'clock.

H. L. Powell.

Asheboro.

Since last report ten members have been received, six on profession of faith, four by certificate.

Our Junior Christian Endeavorers formulated a little plan to raise six dollars to pay their pledge to the state work, and raised ten instead of six dollars.

The County S. S. Convention was held in our town recently, and brought help to our work.

Our teachers are planning improvement, such as increased activity in organized class work and Teacher Training, also Decision Day later in the year.

Our antiphonal song service last Sunday night was impressive, the people were attentive. The regular members of the choir worked faithfully. They enlisted other singers, in order to have choirs number one and two, and all worked faithfully together. As a whole the service seemed to be a splendid success.

T. M. Johnson.

Mt. Pleasant, Liberty Circuit.

The special meeing was well attended from beginning to close. Rev. N. G. Bethea did all the preaching—ten sermons. He has gained many friends by his splendid preaching, and also by his cheerful, friendly disposition.

There were 18 conversions, and fifteen joined the church. The singing, by both choir and audience, was, we believe, better than usual. While the visible results of the meeting were not as great as at some other times in the past, yet we believe that the Spirit wrought mightily works in the hearts and lives of many individuals. Among the many visitors present during the meeting, we note: Rev. J. A. Burgess, Rev. J. R. Hutton, and Rev. Clarence Woods. Will H. Neese.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

Our revival meeting began Sunday, with a "revival sermon" by Rev. W. F. Kennett, of Liberty, N. C., followed by another good sermon in the afternoon, delivered by Rev. J. A. Burgess, of Burlington, N. C., who is to assist our pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, during the meeting.

There will be two sermons each day: one at 11:00 A. M. and one at 2:00 P. M. There will also be a prayer service held each morning, conducted by different members. We hope to have a good meeting.

We have set apart the second Sunday in each month as collection day for the Denton Orphanage. Our first collection amounted to $11.00.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Mamie Plunkett, Reporter.

M. Carmel, Granville Circuit.

Our Sunday school is in good condition, and is still encouraging. The disease "visitism" is perhaps ceasing. Hope that it may soon cease to be a plague so that our attendance may be better.

Rev. and Mrs. Bethea have returned from their trip to Northfield, Mass., New York City, and other places, having completed their vacation. We are longing for the second Sunday, next, that we may have them with us.

The melancholy days will soon come, as the poet terms them, but let's not consider them that, let's determine by God's help to make our Sunday school "bigger" than ever. Polk Garrett.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.

Just closed one of the greatest revivals in the history of the church. Our faithful pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, was assisted by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Western Maryland College. He is doing some excellent preaching. Twenty-seven conversions and 27 accessions, among them being heads of families. The church was greatly revived. Much interest in our Sunday school. Hattie Wall.

A Remarkable Visit and a Surprise Dinner.

In the latter part of June, Mr. and Mrs. Laban Payne, of Graham, R. F. D. 1, began what proved to be a remarkable visit by going to the home of their eldest son, Mr. C. D. Payne, of Liberty, R. 1. From here they went to the home of their eldest daughter, Mrs. J. A. Thompson, of Greensboro. They then came on to this city, where they visited J. D. Payne, and then visited W. H. Wood, of Graham, R. 2. Thence to Mrs. Levi Sharp's, on Graham R. 1, and from there home, which they reached August 20, having been away from home on this remarkable visit for eight weeks.

Mr. Payne is 84 years old, Mrs. Payne 78. They have been married 61 years, and had ten children, seven of whom are now living. The ages of these estimable people make the visit all the more remarkable.

On the day set for their arrival home, the children and friends had arranged for a surprise dinner in their honor. About 10:30 on that morning the guests began to arrive, and it seemed as if it was an of the family. Bsides these ther were present, 61 of the number being members old time camp meeting. There were 65 fifty members of the family who were unable to attend. This makes a total of 111 in this family, and causing one to think of the old lady who lived in a shoe, but not quite, for the hearts of the old were large, the yard was broad, the table long and wide, and simply loaded with the most delicious eatables.

The day was spent very quietly, and was enjoyed by all present. Those present were:

Rev. H. S. B. Thompson and son, Robert Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wood, G. P. Payne and family, Liberty, J. S. Pickett and family, Liberty, R. M. York and family, Liberty, Mrs. L. A. Thompson, Greensboro, Mrs. B. E. Beal and child, Greensboro, Misses Lucile, Elma, and Nancy Thompson, Greensboro, W. H. Wood and family, Graham, C. W. Wood and family, Graham, Charlie Brown and family, Graham, Miss Mattie Groves, Roy Groves, B. H. Payne and family, Levi Sharp and family, C. W. Payne and family, L. T. Payne and family, of Graham, and J. D. Payne and wife of Burlington.

It was regretted that Rev. Mr. Thompson could not attend before 2 P. M.

We wish for Mr. and Mrs. Payne many more happy events before the sun of their lives shall set.

Burlington, N. C., Aug. 28, 1911.

Haw River Circuit.

Since I wrote my last, we have held our meeting at Friendship. Bro. Millaway was our help, and did all the preaching, and did it acceptably and with power. There were large congegations at all the services. There were about 20 conversions, as near as we could remember, and seven joined the church. The converts were of different persuasions, M. P.'s, Primitive Baptists, and Christians. Others may join here. We had received two before this at Friendship. The third Sunday found us at Fair Grove. Bro. Ledbetter was our help, and he did all the preaching. A large congregation on Sunday and good through the meeting. Very few unsaved people after Sunday. It was remarkable how few non-members there were, and good congregations. The preaching was well done. Mrs. S. W. Taylor, wife of Rev. S. W. Taylor, rejoined us here. She held her membership at Rocky Mount, and as there was no M. P. pastor there, she came to her old home church. The people gave her a hearty welcome. She presided at the organ during her stay. She left on Tuesday. It was with sorrow we saw her leave, but feeling she had gone to fill a larger mission—a minister's wife, we voted her a unanimous appreciation of her labor amongst us, and wishing and praying the riches of His grace upon both Bro. Taylor and his wife.

Last Sunday was a very busy day for me. I preached at Midway at 10:30 A. M., drove about five miles and baptized three by immersion. Then on to Bethany and preached and baptized four by pouring, and two more joined, to be baptized at my next appointment. We have had about 40 conversions and 26 have joined us, and two more meetings yet to hold. Every one of the seven churches has had a very good Sunday school this year, a thing that has rarely been on the Circuit. I think at least two will hold Children's Day. The outlook for Haw River Circuit I think is fair. Much interest is being manifested. I have been wonderfully blessed of the Lord. I have just closed a continuous work in special meetings for five weeks, and last Sunday was as busy a day as I have had and I was able to do it. I feel that I have had the help of the Lord and the prayers of my people as well as their help. We have been kindly remembered in a substantial way by Bros. Dillon, More, Geo. S. Kernodle, Tom Smothers, and Sister Bronie Apple, and their good wives. Thanks.

Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

P. S. I have been away, and our church in Reidsville has not had much attention from me, for I could not. This is a large work, seven appointments, and I have not had the time and can not get it to do the work of two men. I believe if I could have had the enterprise at Reidsville alone at last Conference we might now have had a church. As it is it looks gloomy indeed. To hesitate at certain times always has meant much, and means as much now as ever. An opportunity to do a certain thing, when it is passed, may never come again.

C. E. M. Raper.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.

We held our quarterly conference on Saturday before the third Sunday in August. Our special meeting began on the third Sunday. Our pastor, Bro. Stowe, preached a good sermon to a large and attentive congregation. Bro. Suits came Monday and stayed till Thursday, when the meeting closed. There was only one conversion, yet we feel that great good was done. Yet there is still a great deal more to be done among the unsaved.

We hope that the Christians will continue to pray as they did during this meeting. We all learned to love Bro. Suits, and we will not soon forget his helpful words. Our S. S. is progressing nicely under the leadership of our Supt., J. A. Monroe. But we hope that more work will be done in the future.

Aug. 28. J. C. Auman.

Siler Ciy, Chatham Circuit.

We were glad to have with us on last Sunday Dr. J. F. McCulloch to preach to us. His sermon was fine, and enjoyed by all present. Bro. McCulloch supplied for our pastor, Bro. Bowman, who continues ill. We hope for him a speedy recovery, and that he can be with us again soon.

Our special meeting begins the second Sunday in September at eleven o'clock, to be conducted by Rev. J. D. Williams, of Burlington. We are looking forward to his coming with a great deal of pleasure, as Bro. Williams is a favorite here.

G. E. M.

Henderson Station.

It has been quite a while since there was a report from us. The pastor has had quite a restful vacation and returned to his labors. And the vacation season of most of our people is now over.

We held our third quarterly conference and found that Brother B. G. Harris was elected delegate and Brother T. T. Hicks alternate.

We regret to report the removal from us of Mrs. Sarah Harris and daughter to their old home at Whitaker's Chapel. We have missed them so much already. The faithfulness of Sister Harris to her church is so beautiful and helpful, we know that Whitaker's Chapel will feel the influence of her ministrations.

Misses Belle Hicks, Ethel L. Harris, and Mary Young will soon return to the school room for another year, Miss Hicks to Salisbury, Miss Harris to Greensboro, and Miss Young to Rockingham; also Misses Helen and Virgie Harris are soon to leave us to enter school, the former at Fassifern, the latter at the State Normal College.

Brother G. B. Harris, son, Lueco, and two daughters, Mrs. H. T. Powell, and Miss Janie Harris, and S. R. Harris, Jr., are touring the northern country in an automobile; the last we heard from them they were in New York. We expect them to begin their return trip quite soon. This way of spending a few weeks has become quite popular of late, and it must be most enjoyable—when there are no breakdowns or blow ups nor long stretches to walk to find the wherewithal for the needed repairs.

Our revival meeting is to begin the third Sunday in September. We are expecting to have with us in these services Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butler, who will have charge of the singing. We are expecting a fine meeting. Just three months from today and our annual conference will be history for the year nineteen and eleven.

Since our last report we have had the pleasure of a sermon from Rev. J. H. Moton during the Union Chapel Meeting. Brother Moton made a good impression on his audience, and our people would be glad to hear him again. We thank Bro. Stubbins for preaching for us once during our vacation. With best wishes.

R. M. Andrews.

Orphans' Home.

On the night of the 22nd of August quite a little crowd assembled in the auditorium of the school building to celebrate the first birthday of the Orphans' Home.

The stage was beautifully decorated with golden rod. This with the children's bright faces, made a pleasing background. We had a simple exercise by the children, special music and an interesting talk by Rev. T. J. Ogburn. Other attractive things on the stage with the children and golden rod were corn, tomatoes, beets, flour, sugar, meat, lard, coffee, bread, soda, oats, postum, pickles, macaroni, cheese, hominy, honey, syrup, cake, candy, and dry goods too numerous to mention. Some of those whom we wish to thank for all of these useful presents are: J. R. Godfrey, Wiley Hedrick, Mr. Wise, Brower Russell, Leonard Snider, Alf Workman, J. R. Peace, J. M. Daniel, J. E. Coffin, Fred Surratt, R. E. Peace, Wall, Jno. Tucker, Wade Hill, Mmes. Addie Hill, Savannah Hill, Sexton Whit Morris, Jessie Morris, Lewis, Hulin, Reynolds, Chandler, Misses Tonkins, Della Morris, Pearle Reynolds, and others who did not give us their names.

We appreciate these tokens of kindness more than we can tell, and we pray that God may abundantly bless each one of them, not only in this but for the many tokens of kindness the good people of Denton have shown us during our year with them.

We also are grateful to the following for cash birthday gifts:

A. G. Morris	$ .50
C. H. Surratt	.50
Whit Morris	.50
Webb Freeman	.50
Rev. T. J. Ogburn	.50
T. T. Stafford, Burlington	1.00

And to Capt. A. M. Rankin for one-half barrel of nice flour. All of these nice presents make us wish our birthdays would come real often. We have a better treasurer's report this week than we have had for some time. Henderson comes up with the largest amount, but we are just as thankful to the Sunday schools who are faithful each month, and we only wish more schools would remember us. We want to thank all who have contributed in any way.

Treasurer's Report.

J. S. Kindley	$ 1.00
G. F. Cashatt	.50
Caroleen W. H. M. S.	3.75
Friendship S. S.	1.20
Spring Valley S. S.	2.77
Moriah W. H. M. S.	1.00
Moriah S. S., Tabernacle Ct.	11.07
Mrs. Rebecca Sharp	1.00
Mrs. Lattie Clayton	.75
Mr. Lattie Clayton	1.00
Fairview S. S.	.66
Brower's S. S., Richland Ct.	2.57
Flag Springs S. S., Richland Ct.	1.55
Mr. and Mrs. I. F. Pritchard	3.00
Henderson W. H. M. S.	15.85
Mrs. S. R. Harris	1.00
H. T. Powell	5.00
L. R. Gooch	2.00
A Friend	.45
Busy Workers	.55
T. T. Hicks	7.00
F. R. Harris	10.00
R. M. Andrews	5.00
Mrs. M. E. Page	1.00
Mrs. F. R. Harris	2.00
R. R. Satterwhite	2.00
Yadkin College	.87
Bethesda S. S.	3.10
W. Lexington S. S.	1.31
Shiloh S. S.	2.25
Carmel S. S.	.55

Etta Auman.

NOTES.

August 19-22 was spent on Anderson and Yarbrough charges. Rev. W. A. Lamar, the pastor, has his hands full. At last Conference Yarbrough was left unsupplied. The people there asked for Bro. Lamar to serve them in connection with Anderson. He has been meeting the appointments on both charges, but says it keeps him moving about. I found him at Fairview on the Anderson work. Bro. Danna, of the M. E. Church, South, Bro. Best of the Baptist and Bro. Lamar were holding a union meeting under a tent on the ground of Fairview Church. If the sermon I heard Bro. Danna preach is a fair sample of the preaching done in this meeting (and I have reason to believe it was) it was all up to a high standard. It was a sore disappointment to me that the unfavorable weather prevented the people turning out at Yarbrough. I tried to console some of them by saying that I thought that a majority of the people would appreciate a good rain more than a poor preach.

I want to give my full endorsement to what Bro. Reynolds said about the church at Matthews. I advised the same thing two years ago, and believe we have really lost by not acting upon the suggestion made at that time. With two members and the number decreasing, with the prospect growing less hopeful (?), it is folly to hold on there when another point near by is an inviting field. It is hoped something will be done at either a church meeting at Matthews or the fourth quarterly meting at the latest.

I rejoice with all the pastors who are having such good meetings.

I trust that all the brethren of the conference and others also will pray that Sister T. A. Plyler's health may be restored. I am sure brother Plyler has the sympathy of all the brethren.

W. E. Swain.

CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

Call No. 11.

Notice of the death of Rev. John H. Turner, a member of the North Carolina Conference, and also a member of the Conference Brotherhood, has just reached me.

Notice is hereby given of the death of Bro. Turner, and all members of the Brotherhood are asked to send in their dues. After thirty days from Aug. 31, the date this notice will reach most of you, personal notices will be sent out to those who have not paid by that time. You can save your secretary time and expense by replying promptly.

A. G. Dixon, Sec.-Treas.

High Point, N. C., Aug. 26, 1911.

—Prof. C. E. Forlines was operated on last Monday morning in Union Protestant Infirmary, Baltimore. He was taken very ill with what was thought to be acute indigestion, but later proved to be an affection of the gall-bladder. The operation was successful, and the doctors give assurance that he will be well and vigorous again, but he will be kept from home for several weeks. He has our sympathy, as has also Mrs. Forelines, upon whom falls the burden of moving into the new "North Carolina Cottage."

—Rev. H. S. B. Thompson preached at Mt. Hermon on the third Sunday.

RELIGIOUS OBLIGATIONS.

Our social and religious obligations are many and various. Both duty and privilege must be considered if we succeed. We and ours all belong to God and the people; all the people are obligated to all the people.

We can only be able to do our duty by surrendering to God. All are servants, all in every case where Christ is the Master. "For one is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." There must be service, liberal service, and where we are neded most is the place to go. Mortal man naturally wants too much power—a thing that one person ought not to have much of. God is the one for the power; not man, but God.

Man socially ought to have influence, not power. We usually are short-sighted about our human dependence. We are all social dependents. The one individual is very much dependent upon the talents and the ability of others.

A man said that his local preacher needed a new hat—and it was a fact. One might have said that the good man ought to have bought a hat and given it to the "poor man," But I would answer no. The people who are served by the preacher should unite in looking after his wants.

We usually think that we have so many varied expenses, and we do, but the above subject comes in for our first attention. We all, if honest and industrious, "deserve" good clothing, and we all need a good living; but there are peculiar cases. The case of the public man, the preacher, is such that we want to see them well dressed. This article means to urge that we do better for the local preacher.

Of course there are a few local preachers who are able to help themselves, but, as a rule, they are not able to support the local brethren. Some of them, as it seems, are often called to act out their ability to the utmost extent. A preacher traveled a long distance one very cold day to attend a marriage. He had to break the ice in order to cross some of the streams. The young man, as it seems, had considerable confidence in the ability of the preacher to take care of himself, and to shift, because he did not offer to pay any money, and did not thank the preacher. It may be supposed that the young man was absent-minded, and thus failed to think of the personal interests of the preacher.

Human nature is such that the people are often too much "absent-minded"—and thus such a call as this may be needed. One millionaire professed to be called to preach, and expressed surprise, but his was rather an odd case. Most of "the called" are very much dependent upon the people for a living, and it is providentially so.

But very few of the pulpit men are accused of being very able in expounding the scriptures. I can only remember hearing of but two, and have seen one of the two. Give your pastor a little better support, and it may help him on even in the way of expounding the scriptures. There are many who would really do better in this if they had better help from their people.

Some preachers have been seen engaged in plowing when really they had no moral right to plow. There are thousands of boys good for plowing, and not able for better work, who can never be able to do such work as God's anointed must do. Possibly the local preacher may be plowing today, and if so, he is doing a very inferior work for his hands—but a great and honorable work for the boy who should do the plowing.

Those who are paying God His claims can comprehend the meaning of this article—but there are few who are able to see the necessity of paying God His dues. If all would tithe, then all would be well able. This is a doctrine that we ought to read up on.

The above subject might involve the question of the church paper. When we venture to send in an article for publication the desire is that the friends read, but some do not take the paper, and this is a sad fact. The religious paper is so much needed in the family. When you read, please think to call the attention of your neighbor to the fact that they need the Herald.

Help your pastor to talk to those who do not have the paper. Of course you read the Bible, but the paper is needed too. Beside your own reading of the Bible, hand it to the preacher when he comes, and ask him to hold prayer in your house. This prayer service will be in order at any time of the day—even on a very short visit. Perhaps something of the most urgent part of this subject is the need of the religious paper and the worship that is directly belonging to the reading.

W. F. Grabs.

TOBACCO PSYCHOSIS IN A BOY.

Pel (Berl. klin. Woch.) does not believe that chewing and smoking of tobacco are by any means harmless, but thinks that he can trace many troubles to the use of tobacco and its contained poisons. Nicotin is by no means the only poison found in tobacco, the others being nicotein, nicotellin, pyrrhol, pyridin bases, sulphuric acid, cyanic acid, cyanammonium, carbolic acid, formaldehyd, carbon dioxide, and ammonia. Fortunately for the smoker most of these are lost by the age and dryness of the tobacco when it is used and by the fact that many of them are burned and destroyed in the smoking process. Still nicotin is one of the most poisonous alkaloids, 50 milligrams being a fatal dose for a man. The effect of this habit on different individuals varies very much, some being more easily poisoned than others. The diagnosis of tobacco poisoning is not easy on account of the inconstancy and variety of the symptoms caused. Each individual is a law unto himself. One person has headache; a second, anemia; a third, nervousness and sleeplessness; a fourth, heart symptoms such as palpitation, arythmia, tachycardia or angina; a fifth, disturbances of vision; a sixth, arterial sclerosis; a seventh, gastric symptoms; an eighth, throat and mouth symptoms. Psychoses also may develop. The author cites the case of a boy of 13 who worked in tobacco and also smoked. Previously strong and healthy, in a few weeks he had no appetite or energy and was pale, listless, inattentive, and walked with difficulty. He did not recognize his surroundings and was subject to hallucinations and hysterical attacks.—Charlotte Medical Journal.

A NEW TESTAMENT PASTOR.

Take your last look at the preacher
Whose tears gave taste to his bread;
'Twas for others alone that he labored—
Himself uncomforted;
None knew how grand was the toiler
Until his brave spirit had fled.

The message he gave to his hearers
Was gained at the Cross and the Throne,
And it came to the hearts that received it
With a power entirely its own;
More helpful, more mighty and lasting
Than records of mortals have shown.

Other preachers, perhaps, were more thronged to,
Having charms which the worldly would please;
Received more honors and praises,
And lived in more comfort and ease;
But this man was more like the Master,
Nearer even the foremost of these.

—J. Clark.

MUSIC TEACHER WANTED.

I would like to confer with some Methodist Protestant lady who would like a position as music teacher in Denton High School. We prefer a teacher that can teach music, art, and elocution, but if we can not find the three in one, we will accept the music. Write at once.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Denton, N. C., Aug. 28, 1911.

HUNDREDS OF THANKFUL PARENTS.

The two thousand six hundred orphans that have been cared for in the Oxford Orphanage were born in hundreds of different homes. Take an average of two to the home. That would give us thirteen hundred mothers and thirteen hundred fathers praising God for the kindness shown to their children. John H. Mills, the man who started the first orphanage in our state, surely is meeting many who love him for his work's sake.

We now have about seventeen hundred children in the different orphan homes of North Carolina. God bless the men and women, officers and teachers, who are working for those children.

A. D. Betts.

Greensboro, N. C.

A PORTRAIT OF CHRIST'S FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship is a matter of reciprocity and mutuality, not a one-sided affair. The devotion of two individuals is essential to create friendship. Our Lord's love toward men in their sinfulness is not friendship, but might better be styled grace, mercy, or compassion. Soul surrender and spiritual transformation are necessary preparations for the union of friendship with Jesus. Did not the Master say, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you?" But it must be a loving obedience, for he also said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments."

A man who had been nearly killed in a murderous assault obtained a pardon from the Governor for the crimnial who sought his life. On presenting the pardon personally to the murderer, the prisoner stretched forth his hand through the bars, exclaiming: "I want something more than pardon; I want friendship! I want that which will make it sure I will not do the like again. I want the friendship of the man I injured."

So every truly repentant soul feels that he wants forgiveness, but that he wants more—the heart of God, to whom he can pour out his complaint, tell his trials, and where he can find sweet sympathy, tender caresses, and loving communion every day.

Love ripens into friendship when we are one with Christ. We must, like Enoch, walk with our Lord here, having the blessed testimony that we please him; then we shall walk in perpetual companionship in the life hereafter. Christ never says to the vile, rebellious soul: "You are my friend." His honor and purity would not let him thus speak.

Jesus said to his disciples: "No longer do I call you servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard from my father I have made known unto you." Faithfulness without knowing why is the duty of servants, soldiers, and workmen; but our blessed Master takes his followers into his counsel, reveals his plans, his designs making us fellow-workers with him, partners in his triumphs, and heirs to his riches.

Again, Christ's friendship means that he is always ready to see you. Earthly friends are often too busy, too ill, too indisposed to admit you. There is a sign over some doors which reads: "No agents, beggars, or peddlers allowed. No admittance except on business." Only a few can find audience with the rich and great; to others they are not at home. Our King had leisure to listen to your words of love, of complaint, of trial, and of need. He always keeps open house. There are no bolts or bars on his doors. He is never away from home, but always says: "Come in and sup with me. Ye are my friends. I love you. Come in and rest. Let us talk together and feel our hearts burn wtih each other's fellowship."

It may be that, like those at home in Bethany, you need comfort in bereavement; or, like Peter, you seek restoration of friendship; or, like John, you would lean on Jesus's bosom for rest and peace; or, like David, under the shadow of his wings, you would abide for shelter and communion.

Jesus's friendship is sacrificial. Few are willing to die even for a friend. But Jonathan left the court of his father, the king, for his beloved David, whom he loved as his own soul. Damon gave up his liberty and life to let his friend, Pythias, go free. So Jesus left his throne and gave his precious blood to save the lost and to cement human friendship to himself.

Christ's friendship is unspeakably precious and valuable. He has a seat for his friends on the throne of his glory. His munificence has provided for you a palace among his mansions, where he will be your Lover and Friend forever.

When the first disciples entered into the friendship of Jesus, they little realized the earthly honor and glory that would come to them. The disciples said to Jesus: "Master, where dwellest thou?" Jesus replied: "Come and see." He knew he had no home to which he could invite them; only tarrying places among his friends. He had no money, no position, no influence—nothing to offer them immediately but loving friendship. He smiled upon men and said: "Follow me." "What shall we have?" they asked. Jesus said: "In the world, tribulations; in me, peace. On earth, poverty and trial; in heaven, everlasting riches."

Twelve men, hungry for friendship, followed him. What is the result, aside from their eternal salvation? None of the world's geniuses are so celebrated, widely known, loved, and revered by mankind as the writers of the New Testament. Matthew left his writing desk, Peter and John their fishing nets, to become the heralds of the gospel of the Son of God. Their words are read today in four hundred languages, influencing the entire population of the globe. All great nations are celebrating the three hundredth anniversary of the King James Version of their words. Every kindred, tribe, and tongue will sing the praises of these men who became the friends of Jesus Christ. The tide of this sacred influence rolls onward to immortal shores.

Many in the days of the Master thought they could not afford to give up a life of sin for the friendship of Jesus. They could not believe his words when he said: "Them that honor me, I will honor. They shall receive a hundredfold in this time; and in the world to come, life everlasting." If they could have weighed the weight of glory and measured the fullness of joy, they would have followed him. But it was not for honors or rewards that the disciples gave up self for him. They were attracted by his matchless friendship. As Francis Xavier says:

"Not with the hope of gaining aught,
Not seeking a reward;
But as thyself hast loved me,
O ever-loving Lord!"

Jesus's friendship is entirely unselfish. He came to minister, not to be ministered unto. The hearts of men want so much for self—servants to wait upon them, money to care for them, ornaments to beautify them, palaces to house and comfort them. Jesus had none of these while he was on his mission for men. He who was rich became poor that we might be called, as Abraham was, "the friend of God."

Mankind wants the contact of hearts of love, the touch of hands of help, the smiling face of acquaintanceship, the living, loving individuality of "Christ in you, the hope of glory."

I cannot better close this article than by giving a quotation from Bishop McDowell, who says: "I propose to establish a new order, the Order of the Friends of Christ. This is the charter: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.' Who will join? This is the oath: "'Master, I will follow thee.' Who will take it? This is the badge: A cross worn, not upon the breast, but in the heart, bearing the words, 'For Jesus's sake.' This is the grip: The hands of the member in the hands of Christ, with the hands of all the world. And these are the privileges: Obedience to him in all lands, service for mankind by all waters, our work multiplied to the end of time, our reward to hear him whisper, 'Ye are my friends.' Friends! Who will join the Order of the Friends of Christ under this charter?"—Rev. Edwin Whittier Caswell, in Christian Advocate.

FACE THE SUN.

Don't hunt after trouble, but look for success;
You'll find what you look for—don't look for distress;
If you see but your shadow, remember, I pray,
That the sun is still shining, but you're in the way.
Don't grumble, don't bluster, don't dream and don't shirk;
Don't think of your worries, but think of your work.
The worries will vanish, the work will be done;
No man sees his shadow who faces the sun!

—Today's Magazine.

THE FOUR RABBITS.

One morning very early four rabbits with long, soft ears and bright pink eyes started off to find a home.

"We must have grass," said the first rabbit.

"We must have plenty of carrots," said the second rabbit.

"We must try to find a kind little girl," said the third rabbit.

So off hopped the four, and on down the road they went until they came to a garden gate wide open. Inside the gate there was green grass, and beyond it a patch of carrots. But there came strange sounds from the garden.

"I will dig up the flowers! I won't keep my wagon in the path! I will get my pinafore dirty, if I please!"

"Ah," said the rabbits, "this would not be a good place to live."

So the four rabbits hopped along the road until they came to a second garden gate standing open. The garden was full of fresh green leaves all ready to nibble. There were carrots, too, and young cabbage sprouts, and tufts of parsley; but alas! "It's my cooky," a child was saying. "I don't wish to share it with the baby! Give it to me, I say!"

"This is not the home for us," said the four rabbits as they hopped away.

Then, after a while, when the sun was dropping down behind the clouds, and it was nearly night, the four rabbits came hopping along to a third garden gate. The gate was wide open and inside were wonderful things—clumps of clover and patches of parsnips and beds of nasturtiums and carrots and green grass. Then there came a voice from the garden: "Mother, dear, I've finished all my sewing, and I watered the flowers, and I picked up all my toys. Was there anything else to do?"

"This is the best garden we have found yet," said the four rabbits, hopping in through the gate. "Here we come, little girl!"

So the four rabbits with long, soft ears and light pink eyes lived with the little girl and played with her, and had all the grass and carrots they could eat.—Carolyn S. Bailey, in The Mayflower.

THE PERILOUS LIFE.

By Victor P. Hammer.

Bright was the day and the vernal leaves
  Enshrouded every tree and plant;
The clime was fair and beautiful,
  And everything seemed jubilant.

The seamen said in unison:
  "Old ocean now is fast asleep,
With not a cloud up in the sky,
  And not a ruffle on the deep."

A boatman took his little girl,
  Who romped and played with him at home,
And glided o'er the ocean waves
  To play upon its silvery foam.

They watched the wild ducks and the swans
  A-sunning on the distant lea;
Delighted at the sight of such,
  They ventured farther out to sea.

They rowed the boat far out from land,
  Propelling it with double oar,
Until, at last, there was no sign
  Of any life or landing shore.

The boatman, yea, had spent his years
  In storms and sun on ocean wide;
He dropped his hooks on right and left,
  And laid the fishes at his side.

The day passed on in quietude,
  Until his boat was laden full;
Yet thinking at the thought of such
  That homeward they had better pull.

Then in the eastern sky appeared
  A storm-cloud, rising fast and high;
He tried in vain to reach the shore
  In riding waves, or bravely die.

The storm approached the feeble crew—
  By angry waves the boat was tossed,
'Till night and gloom o'ertook the two,
  And soon they felt they must be lost.

The little girl—a captain brave—
  A heroine in such a storm,
Looked thither with an eager eye,
  And prayed deliverance from all harm.

She placed one hand upon the oar
  And helped in vain to row the boat,
And from the boat the fishes threw,
  Which made it then more lightly float.

A distant light appeared to them,
  As if it were a star at night:
She shouted loud: "Come quick! Come quick!"
  Then rowed the boat with all their might.

The signal for distress was not
  A signal to be lost in space;
A ship was turning into port
  And passed right by that very place.

The ship stopped still to take them on,
  And saved them from a watery grave,
But ere the crew had done its part
  The two were swept beneath a wave.

Their graves are marked by ocean mounds,
  Above the dead high waves are tossed;
Like legions of the human race,
  Were almost saved, and yet were lost!

Mother: "What are you doing, Harry?"
Harry: "I'm countin'. You told me when I got mad to count a hundred."
Mother: "Yes, so I did."
Harry: "Well, I've counted 237, and I'm madder'n when I started."—Harper's.

THE WORD IN CHINA.

Jesus Christ wants to enter into His new covenant of life. And he is working mightily to bring this to pass. He has won many in that land eternally unto Himself; and He seems to have laid it upon their hearts to let Him, through them, find entrance into the heart of the empire by way of the royal family. For some time past the Chinese Christians have been giving money to prepare four copies of the New Testament—one for the Emperor, one for the Empress Dowager, one for the Prince Regent, and one for the latter's consort. When the volumes were ready, Mr. Yu, a Presbyterian pastor from Shanghai brought them to Peking, and the Christians in those parts had a chance to see them. They were bound in silver and heavily embossed, on one side with dragons and other symbols of imperial power, and on the other side with Christian symbols, such as the Good Shepherd, the True Vine, and the like. The Foreign office promised to undertake the task of presentation, as it concerned a foreign religion. The Prince Regent was consulted in advance, and he having expressed his consent, the Testaments were presented on January 9, 1911, accompanied by fervent prayers from multitudes of Christians. A carefully worded document and several explanatory volumes accompanied the Testaments. And now it is a question of the faith of the people of Christ throughout the world, whether these records of our Lord's new covenant are to be used by the Holy Spirit to bring China's court into the court of the Kingdom of Heaven. If Christ's disciples throughout the world do their full part in prayer of unswerving, unquestioning faith for that opening of the word of God that giveth light, then the light will break in the palace of the world's greatest empire, and no man dares limit or imagine the result. Let us pray for China's royal family and God's work in their midst.—Sunday School Times.

A MOHAMMEDAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The organization of a Mohammedan Missionary Society, called 'The Society for Invitation and Instruction,' is announced in Cairo. Its purpose is the founding of a Seminary in Cairo, where men shall be prepared for world-wide propaganda in behalf of Islam. They shall proceed to heathen lands and to the lands of "The Book," i. e., of the Bible where religious liberty prevails; but they shall be used also to strengthen Mohammedans who are drifting away from Islam on account of carelessness or lack of instruction. Islam seems to be preparing for a battle royal with Christianity. May it find us prepared —The Missionary Review of the World.

WHAT MAN IS MADE OF.

We all remember, probably, "what little boys are made of," but it has taken a European scientist quite a while to figure up what the average man is made of and to state it in commercial terms. This average man in health, he finds, has the material for 13 pounds of tallow candles, one pound of nails, carbon sufficient for 800 pencils, skin to make bindings for 16 octavo books, bone for 500 knife handles, 28 violin strings, 20 teaspoonfuls of salt, and one pound of sugar. In the market the average man would fetch about $4.50, as raw material, or about three cents a pound live weight. He is, therefore, not worth half as much as the same weight of pork.—The Pathfinder.

—And now Canada is having a bitter election fight over Reciprocity with the United States. It takes two to make a bargain, and it seems not quite certain yet as to whether our Reciprociy agreement with Canada will be accepted by Canada.

Liberty Church, Liberty Circuit.

Children's Day service was held here on the second Sundy night in August. It was successful. Collection fifteen dollars. At last some of the M. P.'s living in Liberty and holding membership elsewhere have transferred to Liberty. Bro. J. F. Picket, Dr. F. A. Shepard and wife, W. H. Wheeler and wife, and C. L. Amick and wife have united with the church here, and we hope others will do likewise. Four others have joined this year on confession, one last night, and Mrs. Mollie L. York comes by letter from the M. E. Church, South, making twelve who have joined Liberty Church this year. We never could understand why people would move into town and leave their membership behind when they found their own church in the town.

Liberty Grove.

The first Sunday in August we began a meeting of five days here, with Rev. J. E. Pritchard as help. We closed Thursday night with three professions and two accessions, making six accessions here for this year. Bro. Pritchard did good preaching, but the congregations were small.

Mt. Pleasant.

Third Sunday in August we began special meeting here with Rev. N. G. Bethea helping. This meeting closed Thursday with eighteen professions and twenty or more reclamations, and fifteen joined the church, and others will join. One lady made profession and united with the church who was seventy-two years old. It was a good meeting from start to finish. Bro. Bethea did good preaching, and it was effective. Sixteen have joined here this year, Dr. Spoon having transferred from Rock Creek last winter.

Pleasant Union.

Here we hope to have a meeting beginning fourth Sunday in Sept. The new church is nearing completion, and will be ready for the meeting.

W. D. Fogleman.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.

Rev. C. E. M. Raper filled his regular appointment here the fourth Sunday, and preached to us an able sermon. His subject was "Church Duties." He made it plain, and spoke just what we needed to hear.

Pray for us that we may do our duty toward the church, to our fellow men, and most of all to God.

Our next appointment will be on Wednesday night before the fourth Sunday in September, as Bro. Raper wishes to be with Bro. Davis at High Point in a meeting beginning the fourth Sunday.

Our Sunday school attendance has not been very good during the protracted meeting season, but is improving now. There were sixty present last Sunday.

Bro. Archie Shelton left last week to enter Denton. He is preparing to enter the ministry, and we wish for him a bright future. Sister Ada Blum also left last week to re-enter Brevard College.

The drouth has at last been broken by refreshing showers the last two days, for which I trust we are truly thankful.

Berta Apple.

Fairview, near Concord.

Before our meeting at Fair View the Patterson people had an extra fine meeting conducted by Rev. Mr. Tapsley. After the meeting closed there our meeting started, but for some reason the engaged preacher could not be with us. But we had a fine man to take his place, Rev. Mr. Williams. He seemed to win the love of the people more and more, but had to leave on Friday night. There was much good work done, many confessed, and 17 or 18 joined the church at Fair View. Mr. John Foster, Mr. Hoke McCall, and Julius Hill began a prayer meeting near my home.

I am certainly thankful to say there were many that found their Savior and started a new life; papa, for instance, and hosts of dear friends. The services went on for two weeks. I enjoyed it more than any other meeting I ever attended. There were 36 new members came in at the tent or the prayer meeting and joined our church; quite encouraging to see so many take a start to do better.

We have a small baby that was given to us, which is very sick. I ask for prayers for it that it may get well. God saw fit to take the mother away, but we know she is looking ahead to see it by and by.

There has been much sickness and many deaths in our community since I wrote last. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We have been blessed with a good rain. X.

—Rev. J. H. Turner, whose death is announced this week, came into our Conference a few years ago from the South Carolina Conference, and not many of us really became acquainted with him. He impressed one as a man of quiet conviction and of liberal spirit, one who was ready to stand firmly by what he believed in and also ready to respect the views of those who differed from him.

—Mr. Rockefeller has just given another million to aid medical research. If this gift helps as did that for hookworm treatment, the gift is one of beneficence indeed.

—The claim is made that typhoid fever can be prevented by a sort of vaccination. Important, if true.

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON, SEPT. 10.

By Charles A. Hines.

Topic, "My Denomination: Roots, Trunk, Branches, Fruit."—Acts 20:17-35. Honorary Members' Meeting.

Daily Readings.

Sept. 4. The Roots, Eph. 3:14--21
Sept. 5, The Trunk, John 15:1—10
Sept. 6, The Branches, Mark 4:30—32
Sept. 7, The Fruit, Gal. 5:22—23
Sept. 8, Its Work, Luke 4:18—21
Sept. 9, Its Hope, Eph. 4:1—6
Sept. 10, The Topic.

Topics for Short Talks.

1. The Life of the Denomination's Founder.
2. Beginnings of the Denomination.
3. The History of our Denomination.
4. Missionary Work of Our Church.
5. Present Strength of the Denomination.
6. Discuss the Roots, Trunk, Branches, Fruit, Work and Hope—one of the daily readings to different members.

Denomination is a sectarian term applied to the different bodies that have come into existence since Bible days. The number is lamentably legion. Each year sees the number increase rather than diminish. The desire of good and leading men in the various denominations is to see them brought together, yet the method of doing so is not plain.

Christian Endeavor is doing much along this line of bringing the denominations into closer relationship. The Laymen's Missionary Movement is accomplishing a like purpose. The trend is toward a more harmonious feeling between the denominations, especially in missionary work. Perhaps if we work togehter, the fact that we labor under different mundane appellations will not matter so much. The thing we most need is churches that will allow freedom of conscience and liberty of thought and speech, as well as form of service, and to this added unison in missionary endeavor. civic efforts and all laudable methods of spreading the Master's gospel.

Every Christian Endeavorer should know the history of his own "denomination." This study will bring him in touch with great lives of force and heroism. It will bring him in touch with leading principles. He should know the plan of government, teaching and work of the church; its assemblies, boards, membership, missionary activity, and evangelistic spirit. Study roots, trunk, branches, and fruit.

The world has witnessed the denominational strife, has heard quarrels, and has likewise doubted whether Christ ever came or not. And if He came, did his coming amount to much, if those who profess to be his followers are arrayed against each other? They sometimes seem to be more bent on opposing each other than they are on fighting sin. I sometimes wonder what defense the divided folowers of Christ will give when lost souls lay their destruction at the door of sectarianism.

"That they all may be one." "And why?" asks the Father. "That the world may believe," responds the Son. "And in what sense would you have them one?" agam asks the Father. Why, "even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee," answers the Savior. But more, "that they also may be in us." Paul says, "There is one body, and one spirit, even as also ye were called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.'

It is not the finished product about which we are to be concerned. Many a young person becomes discouraged because he thinks his life is unfruitful, even though deeply desirous of being fruitful. To such we would say "we are not concerned abuot the fruit. God giveth the increase. Only you abide in Christ. Make that your chief concern, and he will be responsible for the fruit. Moreover, we are incapable of judging the fruit. Ouly God can measure its quality and quantity."

A Recitation.

Forgive, O Lord, our erring ways,
The separate altars that we raise,
The varying tongues that speak thy praise!
Suffice it now. In time to be
Shall one great temple rise to thee,
Thy church our broad humanity,
White flowers of love its walls shall climb,
Sweet bells of peace shall ring its chime,
Its days shall be holy time,
Thy hymn, long sought, shall then be heard,
The music of the world's accord,
Confesisng Christ, the inward word!
That song shall swell from shore to shore,
One faith, one love, one hope restore
The seamless garb that Jesus wore!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Colorado Springs, July 30.—Rev. Warren H. Wilson, who has gained fame because of his work in building up country churches, is to attend the International Congress of Farm Women in this city, October 17 to 19. He will bring an exhibit illustrating what the churches are attempting to do in creating interest in religious life among the rural people.

Dr. Wilson gave up a big New York church to undertake this work in the country. The Women's Congress is the first gathering of the kind ever held, and is an outgrowth of the Roosevelt Farm Commission report. It is an off-shoot of the International Dry-Farming Congress. Three members of the Roosevelt Commission have announced their intention of attending. One session of the program will be given up to the discussion of school and church influence on the farm.

HOLINESS IS POWER.

Holiness is power. It utilizes ability, fertilizes the soul, and energizes the whole man. It is the fire and water in the engine, bringing up to their fullest capacity the strength of all the parts of the machinery, so that the greatest amount of spiritual power may be expended in rolling back a revolted world to God. Holiness is God's power with man and man's power with God. Thus they become coworkers. Every man who dwelleth in God and God in him, in an accommodated sense is God's man, which makes him a positive power against all evil and for all good—to pluck careless souls from the incoming flood and storm of wrath, lifting them up into the sweet serenity and protection of the Rock of Ages. Without holiness we are weaker than a bruised reed; with it we are like an impregnable and well-garrisoned fort, which will stand unharmed the hottest siege, at the same time raining like a hail storm of red-hot balls from the magazine of the gospel on a world armed against Christ.—Rev. W. H. Wilson.

A delegate to the Atlantic City Convention from far-away Arkansas, Miss Mattie E. Bliss, of Little Rock, who has spent the month of July at the famous beach, writes:

"I want to tell you what I saw yesterday when I went surf-bathing: a piece of bright red, fluttering from a pole, away out in the surf.

"On wading out toward it I discovered that it was one of our Christian Endeavor flags, which a life-guard had placed out there to mark the limit of safety for bathers.'

How fitting that this little flag, bearing an emblem that represents a vast army of people banded together to warn, to help, and to save, should stand there like a loyal Endeavorer, with the waves dashing around it!—C. E. World.

Two Christian Endeavor societies have just been organized by Mr. Sam M. Burritt in the Raleigh, N. C., State Prison: a white society if seventeen members, President Baker in charge, and a colored society of nineteen members under President Moore.

It is hoped later to organize the women, as they are not permited to meet in religious service with the men.

Endeavorers are asked to remember these societies in their prayers, that many of the men may find through them the liberty that Christ alone can give.—C. E. World.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address
PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

POPULAR EXCURSION TO RICHMOND, VA., VIA SOUTHERN RY.
Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Southern Railway will operate annual September excursion from North Carolina territory to Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Special train consisting of first-class coaches and standard Pullman sleeping cars will leave Charlotte, N. C., at 3 P. M., Tuesday, September 12th, arriving Richmond, Va., 6:00 A. M., following morning.

Returning tickets will be good on any regular train leaving Richmond up to and including trains of Friday, September 15. Passengers from branch lines can use regular trains, connecting with special train at junction points. This will be the last excursion of the season to Richmond, and will be a first class trip in every respect. Three whole days and two nights in Richmond. Ample time to visit the many attractions in and around this magnificent city. Following low round trip rates will apply from points named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$3.65
Reidsville, N. C.,	3.35
High Point, N. C.	4.25
Kernersville, N. C.	4.00

Proportionately low round trip rates from other points. For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., see any Agent Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

COURAGE AND THE DENTIST.

Every inhabitant of the United States above the age of six who has a natural tooth in his head ought to go to the dentist at least twice a year. Every intelligent inhabitant knows it, but only comparatively few go. It hurts; and a great many people will suffer hours of agony rather than be hurt for a few minutes.

The dentist finally is as inevitable as death and taxes, but he is one of the many things that you can lie to yourself about for a long while. You can say you'll go next month or the first of the year; you can pretend that the unpleasant sensation in the side of your head results merely from a cold and will soon pass away. Like the "moderate drinker" whose digestion is going wrong you can tell yourself that the laws of Nature will probably be miraculously suspended in your behalf and the cavity in your tooth will presently disappear without taking the tooth with it. As with a hundred other bad or foolish practices, you can dodge and pretend and procrastinate for quite a spell.

Meanwhile the dentist is waiting for you in serene assurance. From time to time he merely takes the auger out of his electric drill and replaces it with one a size larger. If you put off going long enough he meets you with an implement which comes out through the top of your head at the tenth revolution, incidentally pulling your heart up by the roots. His profession requires him to be an exceedingly just man and pay you off to the last penny; but if you go to him courageously two or three times a year he will scarcely hurt you at all. The experience will not be more disagreeable than eating a mouthful of soft soap.—Saturday Evening Post.

WHY MEN DON'T ARRIVE.

We can think off hand of not a few men whose lives have failed of the highest usefulness because they lacked the determination to stick to their jobs long enough. Troubles, difficulties, discouragements came; every other kind of work under the sun seemed more alluring and congenial than the drudgery of their mulling grind, and they quit.

Very soon the novelty of their new work wore off, and they went through the same process, changing three or four times, perhaps oftener, in the course of a few years, and arriving—nowhere.

The clever men that have the ear of the world may have been born clever, but, on their own confession, some of them at least owe their cleverness and success to steady, persistent, iron-willed applicaion and drudgery.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, the famous British dramatist, spent nine years writing,, writing, writing, and in that time earned the lordly sum of $30; $25 of this amount was the result of writing an advertisement.

With that experience, few people would have held on. Mr. Shaw's grasp on the pen, however, only tightened. Speaking of this cheerless apprenticeship he says:

"It has enabled me to produce an impression of being an extraordinarily clever, original and brilliant writer, deficient only in feeling, whereas the truth is that I am not in the least naturally brilliant, and not at all ready and clever. If literary men generally were put through the mill I went through, and kept out of their stuffy little coteries, I should have a thousand rivals more brilliant than myself. There is nothing more mischievous than the notion that my works are the mere play of a delightfully clever and whimsical hero of the salons; they are the result of perfectly straightforward drudgery, beginning in the ineptest novel-writing juvenility, and persevered in every day for twenty-five years."

If a young man throws himself into his daily tasks with determination, if not enthusiasm, if he resolves to study his business whatever it be, and master it, and if he puts this resolution unfalteringly through, there is little fear that he will write "failure" at the end of his course.—C. E. World.

—St. John's College, Cambridge University, celebrated the four hundredth anniversary of its founding last month; and eleven of the seventeen colleges at Cambridge are older than St. John's.—Ex.

DIED.

Rev. John H. Turner.

Perhaps nothing is more common in this age of the world, with a reading nation, than to see in public print the death of some innocent babe, or some near relative or friend in the civil or religious world, often causing a pang not to be relieved but in the shroud of forgetfulness. So will it be with many who read the following demise.

A dear father and brother in the gospel has been taken from the Methodist church in this vicinity, and truly may it be said that a great man of God has fallen a victim to that grim monster whose icy grasp bids defiance to kings and potentates, and by whose cold hand Rev. John H. Turner is no more.

On the 21st of August, 1911, he breathed his last, in the bosom of an affectionate family, after an illness of several months. Although we mourn his absence, we have this consolation, that he has in faithfulness finished the work assigned him here on earth, and has been gathered to his heavenly home to receive his reward. His death has caused a vacancy which never can be filled, only by him who first gave him to the church.

He was born July 16, 1838, and was in the 74th year of his age. He was a gallant soldier in the civil war. He joined the ministry immediately after the close of the war. In politics he was a Democrat, having served with distinction in both the legislature and the Senate.

No more can we see you here on earth, dear father, nor hear your loving voice, but may we each and every one meet you where parting is no more.

Written by his son,
Robert Turner.

Loved in Life, Remembered in Death.

On July 26, 1911, at her home near Mount Olive, N. C., the spirit of Mrs. Emma L. Dail was carried by the angels to her home far above the starry sky. She was the wife of Mr. Luther Dail, and a daughter of T. H. and Hester M. F. Cutchin. She leaves behind to mourn her departure, a devoted husband, five stepchildren, five sisters, and one brother, and a host of relatives and friends.

We mourn not as those who have no hope, for she died a bright Christian, and is no doubt today at rest. She gave her heart to God early in life, under the preaching of Rev. S. P. J. Harris, and cast her lot with the Temple Methodist Protestant Church at Whitaker's, of which church she remained a loyal member until death. She was paralyzed last November, but bore her afflictions patiently.

Everything seemed to be well with her soul. After her speech got so she could not connect her words at all, she would say "Glory! glory!" and point upward, with the brightest smile the writer has ever seen on a Christian's face. She would also try to sing hymns.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends. Let us remember our loved one is now at rest, and can't come back to us, but we can go to her, if we will live as God would have us.

She was a good woman, and was greatly beloved by all who knew her. On July 27, in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends, her remains were laid to rest near her home, the burial service being conducted by Rev. W. E. Merritt of the M. E. Church.

One Who Loved Her.

Coble.

Nathaniel Coble departed this life on Aug. 8, 1911, aged 83 years, 10 months and 12 days. He died at the home of Patten Smith, a son-in-law, with whom he had made his home since the death of his wife some three years ago. In early life he married Miss Francis Jones, with whom he lived happily. To them were born five children, Mrs. G. A. Garrett, of Julian, N. C., Mrs. David Wilson, Mrs. Patten Smith and H. M. Coble, all of Guilford County. Our son, C. B. Coble, died some years ago.

Bro. Coble was a good citizen and highly esteemed by those who knew him. About thirty-five years ago he accepted Christ as a personal Savior and united with the church at Pleasant Union, and in this fellowship he died, a loyal, consistent member. He found comfort in, and delighted to read God's Word until prevented by disease. Funeral services were held in Pleasant Union church by the writer, before a large congregation.

W. D. Fogleman.

Liberty, N. C., Aug. 30, 1911.

—Saturday night, Aug. 26, 1,500 people were gathered in a moving picture show at Canonsburg, Pa., when, some nervous idiot seeing a film afire, cried, "Fire, fire." There was a stampede for the door, in which this awful and sickening record was made: Twenty-six persons were killed outright, twenty-five were seriously injured, and thirty are suffering from minor hurts.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The College Year of 1911 opens September 6, 1911. Numbers of students will be here for the opening. Will you? Every indication points to the best year in the history of the College.

The opportunities for culture and the advantages offered are of the highest type.

A strong faculty of university trained men and women stand ready to give the best of their lives for the benefit of the student body.

Have you seen and read the Bulletins issued by the College this summer? They will be of help to you in deciding what college to attend. Write for them.

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, SEPEEMBER 7, 1911. NUMBER 41.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

PRAY FOR THE PEOPLE OF MAINE.

A great battle is on in Maine. Next Monday an election will be held to decide whether that State shall give up or hold on to its constitutional provision for prohibition. Maine was the first State to put prohibition into its constitution. Through that influence of that good man, Neal Dow, and other good men, in 1858 a vote of 28,000 people was secured for constiutional prohibition to 5,000 against it. In 1884, the question was re-submitted and there were 70,000 votes for to 23,000 against. But the liquor men, wholesale and retail and the tipplers, are not satisfied, and are making a mighty effort to overthrow the law. Vast sums of money, no doubt, will be spent in the effort to secure votes against prohibition. Let us hope and earnestly pray that the people of Maine or the majority of them will measure up to the demands of the occasion. Prohibition has been the glory of Maine. It would be her disgrace should she now repeal her law. The Christian people of Maine are aroused and are working mightily too. They are entitled to the sympathy and prayers of Christians everywhere.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil is helping Bro. Burgess at Friendship this week.

MEN WHO LOVE MONEY TOO WELL.

The love of money may be a species of idolatry, more harmful spiritually than the heathen worship in which men prostrate themselves before hideous idols. Because the inordinate love of money is harmful to men, God seeks to deliver men from it. It is of course presumption to claim to be able to interpret the designs of providence in particular cases, but it seems reasonable to suppose that many of the occurrences which bring great financial loss to men come because God would deliver men from the idolatry and evil of covetousness. Consider the following instances:

A man was asked to pay a small but evidently just debt. He refused. In a short time his barn burned, losing to him hundreds of dollars. He certainly loved money too well. Was God trying to cure him?

Another man was appealed to for aid in building a church. He refused to give it. A few months later, a business in which he was largely interested failed, and he lost hundreds of dollars. Was God seeking to save his soul?

Another man was present when an appeal was made for foreign missions. Others were giving liberally, and he had a ten-dollar note in his pocket, which he felt impelled to give. But he resisted the impulse, and gave nothing. On his way home he had an accident which put him in a hospital and cost him over fifty dollars. Was not God after him?

Another man was called on to help build an orphans' home. He had surplus money, but he closed his pocket-book and heart against the appeal. In a few days his little daughter received an injury which made her a life long invalid. Was she not suffering for his redemption from the sin of selfishness and love of money?

—The editor met Rev. C. A. Cecil's appointment at Tabernacle and Julian last Sunday. A both places he arrived while the Sunday school was in session, and saw evidence of intense interest. What a great institution the Sunday school is! It is truly the people's Bible school. Popes may protest against giving the Book to the people, but in Protestant lands the people have the Book, and as long as it is read and studied, Protestantism will live. Miss Lucy Hardin we found superintending the Tabernacle school, and Bro. J. E. Devinney that at Julian.

At Tabernacle the congregation was reduced by the attraction of a near-by special meeting; still it was of respectable size, and very attentive. There were several people of advanced age present, among them Mrs. Robert Causey, aged 86 years, whom you would not judge to be much above 70. Those the editor first knew as Tabernacle's old people are all gone, and a new generation has advanced to take their place. And other generations are coming forward, all marching on to old age and that which lies beyond. When you have seen a generation pass, you begin to be impressed with the swiftness of man's transit over the stage of life. We are all moving on at the same rate to an end as certain to come as the sunset. It stimulaes one to action to realize how brief is the time in which all of life's work must be done. Even Jesus who came out of eternity felt and said: "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." The presence of the old people among us is a solemn reminder that we are passing on. There was a funeral of an aged sister (Mrs. Robert Hanner) Sunday afternoon at Tabernacle, but we could not stay for it. We found a pleasant stopping-place for dinner in the home of Bro. I. L. Trogdon, and with Bro. Cecil's horse and buggy we reached Julian in time for the three o'clock service. Here we found attentive and appreciative listeners, and enjoyed delivering to them our message. Then a good long buggy ride brought us back home. Bro. Samuel Devinney showed the substitute pastor such a kindness as our preachers who travel in buggies frequently report, and we thank him and many others for kindnesses of word or deed shown us in the course of the day.

—Has any brother copies of our last Annual Conference Journal to dispose of? The publisher has an order which he cannot fill.

—Rev. J. H. Turner left five daughters, eight sons and his wife—a large family to mourn his death.

GENERAL JOHNSTON PETTIGREW.

In the extreme southwest of Tyrrell Co., about a quarter of a mile from Lake Scuppernong, on what is known as Bonarva farm, is the old Pettigrew cemetery, in which is interred Gen. James J. Pettigrew and his father, mother, sister, brothers, except Wm. Pettigrew, who was an Episcopal minister. While there is an inscription to the above brother, it was never finished, and it seems that he was buried elsewhere.

Gen. Pettigrew was born and raised on this farm. We were talking not long since to an old colored man who was a slave of Charles Pettigrew, a brother to the General, and he spoke of the Pettigrews in very high terms. This means much.

The only sister of Gen. Pettigrew married a minister, the Rev. Neil McKay, D. D., and died in Harnett Co., N. C., but was buried at Bonarva, N. C.

One brother, James, older than the General, was "drowned in the Atlanitc, from on board the ship Waverly, while on a voyaeg from New York to Mobile, for his health, Oct. 27, 1833." He was born 1822. The General was born 1828. So they seem to have had two Jameses in the family.

Ebenezer Pettigrew, father of the General, was a son of the Rev. Charles Pettigrew. So the General's grandfather and one brother were ministers.

The family burying ground is some sixty yards square, with a stone wall about four feet high, filled with earth to the top of the wall. Of course the stone was brought from a distance, as this is a low alluvial soil, and there is no stone in a hundred miles. We visited the spot about six weeks ago, and were carried back in cotemplation to ante-bellum times when wealth and social distinction reigned here. But this is all of the past. Nothing but the soil, the lake, the woods, the sky, remain. A silent, but eloquent reminder of the fact that "man's days are as grass." Those were the days of culture that we seldom meet today. Is the change for the better? We fear not. We occasionally meet two great men of the "old school" gentlemen, and it's a treat. Their chaste, polished, dignified correct language is generally unknown to the present generation.

But we started to write of General Pettigrew. The following inscription is on his tomb:

"Brigadier General James J. Pettigrew, of the Confederate States Army, son of Ebenezer and Ann B. Pettigrew, born at Bonarva, July 4, 1818; died July 17, 1863, at Bunker Hill, (the residence of Mr. Boyd) near Martinsburg, Va., from wounds received near Falling Water, on the Potomac River, while acting with his command as rear guard to Gen. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia."

It will be remembered that Gen. Pettigrew's command was in that awful third day's assault at Gettysburg, and he went farthest to the front on Cemetery Hill of any Confederate troops. This was in some respects the Waterloo of America; not in the sense of defeat, but in the numbers engaged on either side and the number of the pieces of artillery. Like the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, only more fearful. There it was 600, here it was thousands. It was the tar heels under Gen. Pettigrew that gained the crest of Cemetery Hill through a concentrated fire, a perfect hurricane of death—and returned, some of them.

Gen. Pettigrew, after passing safely through all this, died in two weeks of wounds received while acting as rear guard. Truly the ways of Providence are past finding out.

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour:
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

J. F. Dosier.

THE WISE MEN.

It must be because the people have not read the Scriptures carefully that the false impression has come down the ages that the Wise Men worshipped Jesus at Bethlehem when St. Matthew doesn't write they went there, but they followed the star until it stood over him. It seems that they were not very wise to go to Herod when they had the star to lead them, and as the scribes told Herod he was born there it says he sent them there. How many children he had killed because he thought he was there; so they should not have gone to Herod. St. Luke writes, "And when the days of her purification were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord; and when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned to their own city, Nazareth." So you see they could not have taken the flight into Egypt from Bethlehem. The late Rev. Chas. F. Deems, D. D., wrote a large book on Jesus and he gave St. Luke's version of his birth and the great temple service, and then he writes: "The Wise Men came to Jerusalem during the year after after he was born", and after telling who they were and where from, he writes they went to Bethlehem, seeming not to have regarded what he had already written, and I suppose his expresison, "during the year after his birth" meant several months and not less than forty days. Rev. T. H. Lewis, D.D., LL.D.,writes me: "I have always understood that the purification in the temple occurred before the visit of the Wise Men and that the flight into Egypt occurred after the purification and the visit and before the residence in Nazareth;" but St. Luke writes they went to Nazareth after the purification in the temple, and so the Wise Men had to go there. St. Luke says nothing about the Wise Men and I would sooner believe what he writes about Jesus than what St. Matthew writes about the Wise Men. It seems to me the ministers and he press would try to correct this false impresison about the Wise Men's going to Bethlehem unless they don't believe St. Luke.

Yours for the truth,

T. L. Whitaker.

Enfield, N. C., Sept. 1, 1911.

(We see no irreconcilable difference between Matthew and Luke. We accept both accounts as correct. Luke passes over the visit of the Wise Men and the flight into Egypt. It seems to us that we are to gather from all the accounts that the Wise Men visited Jesus while he was yet in Bethlehem. Herod could not correctly be said to have "sent" them to Bethlehem if they did not go to Bethlehem.—Editor.)

SOME SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS INTERESTS.

I like the custom, with some, the Moravians and others, of having the whole congregation to stand for prayer—at least for one prayer at a service. We have the Bible injunction for this—we are enjoined to kneel in public prayer, and to stand. I have hesitated to venture out with what I am now trying to say, but it looks so reasonable that I will venture. We are enjoined by the Word of God to kneel down to pray and to stand up to pray. However, we all feel more of the force of kneeling in prayer than that of standing, but we are enjoined to both. I often have occasion to wish that our custom was to stand for prayer at least once during a service so that all will unite in the act. Standing for prayer in the public congregation need not come in the way of the occasions for kneeling in prayer. When we are to stand for prayer the people ought to be requested to stand—so that all will understand. The people who are not called religious people are a little too much afraid of religious customs.

The generous sinner often loves to help sing sacred songs in the church, and he ought to submit (in good faith) to the act of kneeling in the church when all are called to prayer. As it might be supposed, the sinners over where Bro. Dosier reports from are about as bold (and as brave, maybe), as the "saints;" and we can suppose that some of them lead the singing. In this section of the country the bold sinners are glad to lead the songs on popular occasions, as might be supposed, but they want to be elsewhere than at the humble prayer service when we urge all to kneel down to pray. One time at the mountain a good preacher got rather worried at the boldness of some. Four young men sat near with their shining watches, and after the preacher would get fairly well into his sermon all four, one at a time, would look at their watches. The revivalist asked Mr. R. to break those young men from bothering him—and Mr. R. consented. Mr. R. got a loud ticking, shining little clock and strapped it under his coat and sat beside the four with their shining watches; and while the evangelist was preaching (at the nightmeeting) the boys had occasion to look at their fine watches, and then Mr. held up his loud, big, shining timepiece and all saw the big watch, and the drama was such that the preacher lost his balance and could not go on, and, in a way, the little clock project spoiled that one service, as it seemed.

This article means to suggest that we have room to improve on the devotional, even in the way of form. The teaching, as it seems, is that the whole congregation should be privileged to sing and kneel and sit, all alike in time of worship. To engage in all this does not make a sinner pious or hypocritical, but he ought to have such privilege.

The injunction is to be of one mind, and one main thing for this is for all the people to use the best means possible in connection with their associations. True, forms of a social nature help on in the way of social and religious righteousness. Once I went with a good minister to visit a quiet old man who had been afflicted a long time, and who had been far from being even a church member. When we got there some of the poor old man's crowd were with him. The preacher, (as it seemed to me,) approached the feeble old man in a way that might have been better, (considering the company that he had,) and the effect was not good, on account of the first words used, as it appeared. "There is a time for all things."

At a certain interesting meeting a young man, a sinner, was encouraged to help sing. The young man seemed to enjoy very much the honor of helping the "saints" sing; but suddenly one of the preachers approached the singing sinner, and talking loudly to him, told him that instead of doing so he had better be down on his knees praying for mercy. He did not get down, but perhaps he should have gone down on his knees at once. However, our impression was that the young man could have been called to repentance in an other manner that would have been as well for him, and rather better for that occasion. The above might not have been "off" as much as this writing might indicate, but many troubles (even to persecution of the saints) have got their start by over zeal, and the lack of common-sense and humility amongst the "people of God." Imitation among men, as a rule, is not advisable, but if a sinner wants to imitate the righteous in a safe manner, let him go to the church right among the people of God and kneel down when they kneel; and when they stand up to pray, let him stand too; and when they sing, let him sing too; and when they pay their money, let him pay, too. In doing all this he may do right otherwise, and if he refuses to pray to God he will, of course, continue to be ungodly.

Give the sinner a fair, generous chance, and let him get down at the mourner's bench, if he will, but if he will help on as suggested above, he will really do better than some of the church people do, and if he will continue and will really pray to God and continue to help the good people in the way of singing, and tithing, in the way of self-denial, for Christ's sake, and for humanity's sake, he will continue under the influence and the protection of the church, and under the control of God. Observe closely, and you will find that the evidence is that the people are never hurt by the ordinances and the strictures of the church. Why criticize the sinner for some good deed while asking the help of him for some other good deed.

To observe all the ordinances of the church need not be any risk for the people of God. Of course there is a venture for all, a venture by faith all through life—and there is more of a venture for the inexperienced sinner.

In some cases the sinner who will venture to help on in the church merits more respect than the church member who refuses to help. Some sinners venture to ask the preacher, at once, to visit their houses, but there are some church people who only invite the preacher in after he is obligated to go to the home of others. The act of self-denial is the thing to think of and to try our faith on.

The people of God carry the greatest responsibility of all people in the world. The church of the living God is carrying a greater responsibility and more importance in the world than all other systems combined. There must be respect for the quiet fraternal orders, but there are many of us who feel only obligated to give our whole lives to the interests of the church.

After all, "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." The church is only safe as she is being led by the Spirit. The church, which is a system for the uplift of the human family, is worth a hundred times more than she costs, and yet but few seem to get hold of these facts. The great trouble in the way is the financial carnal power. If we could see clearly the facts in the case about the love of money, we would be convinced at once that the love of gain, selfishness, is the thing that causes the drag, the main want of life in the church. We, and ours, belong to God and the people.

W. F. Grabs.

A GIRL'S SONG.

At the time of the terible accident a year or two ago at the coal mines near Scranton, Pa., several men were buried for three days, and all efforts to rescue them proved unsuccessful.

The majority of the miners were Germans. They were in a state of intense excitement, caused by sympathy with the wives and children of the buried men and despair at their own balked efforts.

A great mob of ignorant men and women assembled at the mouth of the mine on the evening of the third day in a condition of high nervous tension which fitted them for any mad act. A sullen murmur arose that it was folly to dig further—that the men were dead. And this was followed by cries of rage at the rich mine-owners.

A hasty word or gesture might have produced an outburst of fury. Standing near me was a little German girl, perhaps eleven years old. Her pale face and frightened glances from side to side showed that she fully understood the danger of the moment. Suddenly, with a great effort, she began to sing in a hoarse whisper which could not be heard. Then she gained courage, and her sweet childish voice rang out in Luther's grand old hymn, familiar to every German from his cradle, "A mighty fortress is our God."

There was silence like death. Then one voice joined the girl's, and presently another and another, until from the whole great multitude rose the solemn cry:

"With force of arms we nothing can,
Full soon are we o'erridden.
But for us fights the godly Man,
Whom God himself hath bidden.
Ask ye His name?
Jesus Christ is His name."

A great quiet seemed to fall upon their hearts. They resumed their work with fresh zeal, and before morning the joyful cry came up from the pit that the men were found—alive. Never was a word more in season than that girl's hymn.—Our Young Folks.

—North Carolina has a post-office named Thickety and another named Shetucket.

THE BIBLE AND PROGRESS.

By Woodrow Wilson,

(Delivered in the auditorium at Denver.)

The thought that entered my mind first as I came into this great room this evening framed itself in a question—Why should this great body of people have come together upon this solemn night? There is nothing here to be seen. There is nothing delectable here to be heard. Why should you run together in a great host when all that is to be spoken of is the history of a familiar book?

But as I have sat and looked upon this great body of people I have thought of the very suitable circumstance that here upon the plaform sat a little group of ministers of the gospel lost in this great throng.

I say the "suitable circumstance," for I come here to-night to speak of the Bible as the book of the people, not the book of the minister of the gospel, not the special book of the priest from which to set forth some occult, unknown doctrine withheld from the common understanding of men, but a great book of revelation—the people's book of revelation. For it seems to me that the Bible has revealed the people to themselves. I wonder how many persons in this great audience realize the significance for English-speaking peoples of the translation into the English tongue. Up to the time of the translation of the Bible into English, it was a book for long ages withheld from the perusal of the peoples of other languages and of other tongues, and not a little of the history of liberty lies in the circumstance that the moving sentences of this book were made familiar to the ears and the understanding of those peoples who have led mankind in exhibiting the forms of government and the impulses of reform which have made for freedom and for self-government among mankind.

For this is a book which revals men unto themselves, not as creatures in bondage, not as men under human authority, not as those bidden to take counsel and command of any human source. It reveals every man to himself as a distinct moral agent, responsible not to men, not even to those men whom he has put over him in authority, but responsible through his own conscience to his Lord and Maker. Whenever a man sees this vision he stands up a free man, whatever may be the government under which he lives. If he sees beyond the circumstances of his own life.

I heard a very eloquent sermon today from an honored gentleman who is with us to-night. He was speaking upon the effect of a knowledge of the future life upon our conduct in life. And it seemed to me that as I listened to him I saw the flames of those fires rekindled at which the martyrs died—died forgetful of their pain, with praise and thanksgiving upon their lips, that they had the opportunity to render their testimony that this was not the life for which they had lived, but that there was a house builded in the heavens, not built of men but built of God, to the vision of which they had lifted their eyes as they passed through the world, which gave them courage to fear no man but serve God. And I thought that all the records of heroism of the great things that had illustrated human life were summed up in the power of men to see that vision.

Our present life, ladies and gentlemen, is a very imperfect and disappointing thing. We do not judge our own conduct in the privacy of our own closets by the standard of expediency by which we are daily and hourly governed. We know that there is a standard set for us in the heavens, a standard revealed to us in this book which is the fixed and eternal standard by which we judge ourselves, and as we read this book it seems to us that the pages of our own hearts are laid open before us for our own perusal. This is the people's book of revelation, revelation of themselves not alone, but revelation of life and of peace. You know human life is a constant struggle. For a man who has lost the sense of struggle, life has ceased.

I believe that my confidence in the judgment of the peole in matters political is based upon my knowledge that the men who are struggling are the men who know; that the men who are in the midst of the great effort to keep themselves steady in the pressure and rush of life are the men who know the significance of the pressure and the rush of life, and that they, the men on the make, are the men to whom to go for your judgments of what life is and what its problems are. And in this book there is peace simply because we read here the object of the struggle. No man is satisfied with himself as the object of the struggle.

There is a very interesting phrase that constantly comes to our lips which we perhaps do not often enough interpret in its true meaning. We see many a young man start out in life with apparently only this object in view—to make name and fame and power for himself, and there comes a time of maturity and reflection when we say of him, "He has come to himself." When may I say that I have come to myself? Only when I have come to recognize my true relations with the rest of the world. We speak of a man losing himself in a desert. If you reflect a moment you will see that is the only thing he has not lost. He himself is there. What he means when he says that he has lost himself is that he has lost all the rest of the world. He has nothing to steer by. He does not know where any human habitation lies. He does not know where any beaten path and highway is. If he could establish his relationship with anything else in the world he would have found himself. Let it serve as a picture.

A man has found himself when he has found his relation to the rest of the universe, and here is the book in which these relations are set forth. And so when you see a man going along the highways of life with his gaze lifted above the road, lifted to the sloping ways in front of him, then be careful of that man and get out of his way He knows the kingdom for which he is bound. He has seen the revelation of himself and of his relations to mankind. He has seen the revelations of his relation to God and his Maker and therefore he has seen his responsibility in the world. This is the revelation of life and of peace. I do not know that peace lies in constant accommodation. I was once asked if I would take part in a great peace conference, and I said, "Yes, if I may speak in favor of war"—not the war which we seek to avoid, not the senseless and useless and passionate shedding of human blood, but the only war that brings peace, the war with human passions and the war with human wrong—the war which is that untiring and unending process of reform from which no man can refrain and get peace.

No man can sit down and withhold his hands from the warfare against wrong and get peace out of his acquiescence. The most solid and satisfying peace is that which comes from this constant spiritual warfare, and there are times in the history of nations when they must take up the crude instruments of bloodshed in order to vindicate spiritual conceptions. For liberty is a spiritual conception, and when men take up arms to set other men free, there is something sacred and holy in the warfare. I will not cry "Peace" so long as there is sin and wrong in the world. And this great book does not teach any doctrine of peace so long as there is sin to be combated and overcome in one's own heart and in the great moving force of human society.

And so it seems to me that we must look upon the Bible as the great charter of the human soul—as the "Magna Charta" of the human soul. You know the interesting circumstances which gave rise to the Magna Charta. You know the moving scene that was enacted upon the heath at Runnymede. You know how the barons of England, representing the people of England—for they consciously represented the people of England –met upon that historic spot and parleyed with John, the king. They said: "We will come to terms with you here." They said: "There are certain inalienable rights of English-speaking men which you must observe. They are not given by you, they cannot be taken away by you. Sign your name here to this parchment upon which these rights are written and we are your subjects. Refuse to put your name to this document and we are your sworn enemies. Here are our swords to prove it."

The franchises of human liberty made the basis of a bargain with a king! There are kngs upon the pages of scripture, but do you think of any king in Scripture as anything else than a mere man? There was the great king David, of a line blessed because the line from which should spring our Lord and Savior, a man marked in the history of mankind as the chosen instrument of God to do justice and exalt righteousness in the people.

But what does this Bible do for David? Does it utter eulogies upon him? Does it conceal his faults and magnify his virtues? Does it set him up as a great statesman would be set up in a modren biography? No, the book in which his annals are written strips the mask from David, strips every shred of counterfeit and concealment from him and shows him as, indeed, an instrument of God, but a sinful and selfish man, and the verdict of the Bible is that David, like other men, was one day to stand naked before the judgment seat of God and be judged not as a king, but as a man. Isn't this the book of the people? Is there any man in this Holy Scripture who is exempted from the common standard and judgment? How these pages teem with the masses of mankind! Are these the annals of the great? These are the annals of the people—of the common run of men.

The New Testament is the history of the life and the testimony of common men who rallied to the fellowship of Jesus Christ and who by their faith and preaching remade a world that was under the thrall of the Roman army. This is the history of the triumph of the human spirit, in the persons of humble men. And how many sorts of men march across the pages, how infinite is the variety of human circumstance and of human dealings and of human heroism and love! Is this a picture of extraordinary things? This is a picture of the common life of mankind. It is a mirrior held up for men's hearts, and it is in this mirror that we marvel to see ourselves portrayed.

I would be the last, ladies and gentlemen, to disparage any of the ordinary occupations of life, but I want to ask you this question: Did you ever see anybody who had lost a son hang up his yardstick over the mantel-piece? Have you not seen many families who had lost their sons hang up their muskets and their swords over the mantel-piece? What is the difference between the yard-stick and the musket? There is nothing but perfect honor in the use of the yard-stick, but the yard-stick was used for the man's own interest, for his own self-suport. It was used merely to fulfil the necessary exigencies of life, whereas the musket was used to serve no possible purpose of his own. He took every risk without any possibility of profit. The musket is the symbol of self-sacrifice and the yard-stick is not. A man will instinctively elevate the one as the symbol of honor and never dream of using the other as a symbol of distinction.

Doesn't that cut pretty deep, and don't you know why the soldier has his monument as against the civilian's? The civilian may have served his State—he also—and here and there you may see a statesman's statue, but the civilian has generally served his country—has often served his country, at any rate—with some idea of promoting his own interests, whereas the soldier has everything to lose and nothing but the gratitude of his fellowmen to win.

Let every man pray that he may in some true sense be a soldier of fortune, that he may have the good fortune to spend his energies and his life in the service of his fellowmen in order that he may die to be recorded upon the rolls of those who have not thought of themselves, but have thought of those whom they served. Isn't this the lesson of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? Am I not reminding you of these common judgments of your life, simply expounding to you this book of revelation, this book which reveals the comomn man to himself, which strips life of its disguises and its pretences and elevates those standards by which alone true greatness and true strength and true valor are assessed?

Do you wonder, therefore, that when I was asked what my theme this evening would be I said it would be "The Bible and Progress"? We do not judge progress by material standards. America is not ahead of the other nations of the world because she is rich. Nothing makes America great except her thoughts, except her ideals, except her acceptance of those standards of judgment which are written large upon these pages of revelation. America has all along claimed the distinction of setting this example to the civilized world—that men were to think of one another, that governments were to be set up for the service of the people, that men are to be judged by these moral standards which pay no regard to rank or birth or conditions, but which assess every man according to his single and individuali value. This is the meaning of this charter of the human soul. This is the standard by which men and nations have more and more come to be judged. And so the form has consisted in nothing more nor less than this—in trying to conform actual conditions, in trying to square actual laws with the right judgments of human conduct and more than liberty.

That is the reason that the Bible has stood at the back of progress. That is the reason that reform has come, not from the top but from the bottom. If you were ever tempted to let a government reform itself, I ask you to look back in the pages of history and find me a government that reformed itself. If you were ever tempted to let a party attempt to reform itself I ask you to find a party that ever reformed itself.

A tree is not nourished by its blooms and by its fruit. It is nourished by its roots, which are down deep in the common and hidden soil, and every process of purification and rectification comes from the bottom—not from the top. It comes from the masses of struggling human beings. It comes from the instinctive efforts of millions of human hearts trying to beat their way up into the light and into the hope of the future.

Parties are reformed and governments are corrected by the impulses coming out of the hearts of those who never exercised authority and never organized parties. Those are the sources of strength, and I pray God that these sources may never cease to be spiritualized by the immortal subjections of these words of inspiration of the Bible.

If any statesman sunk in the practices which debase a nation will but read this single book he will go to his prayers abashed. Do you not realize, ladies and gentlemen, that there is a whole literature in the Bible? It is not one book, but a score of books. Do you realize what literature is? I am sometimes sorry to see the great classics of our English literature used in the schools as text-books, because I am afraid that little children may gain the impression that these are formal lessons to be learned. There is no great book in any language, ladies and gentlemen, that is not the spontaneous outpouring of some great mind or the cry of some great heart. And the reason that poetry moves us more than prose does is that it is the rhythmic and passionate voice of some great spirit that has seen more than his fellowmen can see.

I have found more true politics in the poets of the English-speaking race than I have ever found in all the formal treatises on political science. There is more of the spirit of our own institutions in a few lines of Tennyson than in all the text-books on governments put together:

"A nation still, the rulers and the ruled,
Some sense of duty, something of a faith,
Some reverence for the laws ourselves have made.

Some patient force to change them when we will,
Some civic manhood firm against the crowd."

Can you find summed up the manly, self-helping spirit of Saxon liberty anywhre better than in those few lines? Men afraid of nobody, afraid of nothing but their own passions, on guard against being caught unaware by their own sudden impulses and so getting their grapple upon life in firm-set institutions, some reverence for the laws themselves have made, some patience, not passionate force, to change them when they will, some civic manhood firm against the crowd. Literature, ladies and gentlemen, is revelation of the human spirit, and within the covers of this one book is a whole lot of literature, prose and poetry, history and rhapsody, the sober narration of the ecstasy of human excitement—thnigs that ring in one's ears like songs never to be forgoten. And so I say, let us never forget that these deep sources, these wells of inspiration, must always be our sources of refreshment and of renewal. Then no man can put unjust power upon us. We shall live in that chartered liberty in which a man sees the things unseen, in which he knows that he is bound for a country in which there are no questions mooted any longer of right or wrong.

You may remember that allegorical narrative in the Old Testament of those who searched through one cavern after another cutting the holes in the walls and going into the secret places where all sorts of noisome things were worshipped. Men do not dare to let the sun shine in upon such things and upon such occupations and worships. And so I say there will be no halt to the great movement of the armies of reform until men forget their God, until they forget this charter of their liberty. Let no man suppose that progress can be divorced from religion, or that there is any other platform for the ministers of reform than the plaform written in the utterances of our Lord and Savior.

America was born a Christian nation. America was born to exemplify that devotion to the elements of righteousness which are derived from the revelations of Holy Scripture.

Ladies and gentlemen, I have a very simple thing to ask of you. I ask of every man and woman in this audience that from this night on they will realize that part of the destiny of America lies in their perusal of this great book of revelations—that if they would see America free and pure they will make their own spirits free and pure by this baptism of the Holy Scripture.

—Bro. Berry Davidson and Rev. T. J. Ogburn spent several days at Healing Springs.

From Pastors and People.

NOTES.

Sunday, Aug. 27, was spent on Orange Circuit. In the morning we had Children's Day service. The program was well rendered, the music, under the leadership of Prof. Thos. O. Pender, a member at Chestnut Ridge, was exceptionally good. The church at the Ridge was packed, and every one seemed to enjoy the occasion. The collection was not as large as some wanted it to be, but, everything considered, was very good. I would like to stop here long enough to say that if any church or community would like to receive instruction in vocal music, Prof. Thos. O. Pender, Mebane, N. C., R. F. D., is fully prepared to meet the expectations of the most hopeful. I am saying this at the risk of shocking Bro. Pender's modesty, but beg his pardon if I have.

Sept. 2-3 was spent in the Oak Ridge charge. Oak Ridge church has recently been recovered, and other improvements made, costing in all about two hundred dollars. Preaching Sat. at 11 A. M., and the third quarterly meeting in the afternoon. Prof. M. H. Holt was found to be elected delegate to the coming annual conference.

Pine Grove Sunday, 11 A. M. The special was to have begun at that time, but the expected help could not come then, and then too, the people not having broken any ground for wheat and being very busy since the recent rains, it was thought best to postpone the meeting till the 1st Sunday in Oct. There was a large congregation because of the expected beginning of the meeting, and as they brought lunch with them we had two services, one at 11 A. M. and one at 3 P. M. I want to say here to the credit of the people I never saw people come in more promptly to the afternoon service than they. Close attention was given the word preached and it is believed many were helped. At night we held another service at Oak Ridge. A very good congregation was out, and here too the people proved themselves good listeners.

Saturday night was spent in the quiet Christian home of our aged brother, W. O. Donnell. His devoted wife has entertained so many preachers that she knows just how to make the tired preacher feel at home. While we were pleasantly chatting as we sat on the front porch, our joy was greatly heightened by the arrival of Mrs. A. B. Kimball and Mrs. Robah Kerner, of Greensboro.

Sunday night was spent with that saintly man of God known all through Piedmont North Carolina as "Squire Case." It is refreshing to be in homes like these, and sometimes they help the visitor more than they know. Bro. Lowdermilk, the pastor, is very popular with his people, and is doing a splendid work.

Rejoicing with the brethren who have had such glorious revivals in their churches, and praying the blessings of our Father upon all, I am,

W. E. Swain.

Vance Circuit.

Not through with our revivals yet, two more, one at Flat Rock and one at Gillburg. New Hope church has a good Sunday school, and the church has life and growth. Flat Rock has a Sunday school that is doing very well for a "summer school," but we want to see who is faithful enough not to let the frost get this Sunday school spirit this winter. The church there also has a working Ladies' Aid Society that has lately bought an organ for the church and is now making up money to furnish the parsonage with heavy furniture. Flat Rock church is growing, and the future for it is good.

Harris Chapel meeting was very good, with two or three conversions and one accession. Rev. Kilpatrick, of the M. E. Church, South, was our help, and did faithful work. The Sunday school there is not, for a spirit of non-cooperation has taken it away. Harris Chapel is like it has been for several years, and we would that it "were either hot or cold," although there are some members who are "loyal forever," and we feel are the "salt of the earth."

Gilburg station has a large and progressive Sunday school. Still the ladies are not satisfied with present conditions, and are working for a better Sunday school. The church is growing and has a prospective future. Some of the people on Vance Circuit have been very thoughtful in giving us good things to eat, also some feed for the horse. Such gifts as these are always appreciated, and it makes us feel good to know other people are thinking of our needs. Hope our neghbors, Bros. Andrews and Bethea, are being as kindly remembered as we are by these "Eastern people."

R. C. Stubbins.

East Winston.

The M. P. Church in East Winston, talked about for two years or more, is now a reality. The building is complete, will soon be seated, S. S. organized, and preaching services begun. I want to express my appreciation to all the good people who gave their money to this church enterprise. I am in love with all the brethren and sisters who came to the rescue, to our help. We have a house thirty by forty, a neat job executed by Bro. L. T. Long, a house builder and a Methodist Protestant. We feel under many obligations to the pastor and members of Grace M. P. Church, Greensboro, N. C., for the gift of an organ to this new church. I do not know just when we will organize a society—when the proper time comes, I trust. I do not know whether this church will be of slow growth or rapid growth, nor how great a success will come to it. Give it time, don't require too much of it. It is so easy to criticize, but means so much more and better to be patient and lend a helping hand. May it be to the glory of God.

Fraternally,
G. F. Millaway.

Spring Church.

As our special meeting has just come to a close, I feel impressed to write a few lines. The meeting began the fourth Sunday and continued until Thursday. The weather was very unfavorable, but notwithstanding, the people assembled there, and I am sure much good was accomplished.

Bro. Ashburn did all the preaching. He was expecting to have Bro. Hunt with him for help, but to his great misfortune, he was sick and could not be with us. Bro. Ashburn delivered expressive sermons each day, and expounded God's blessed truths with so much earnestness that we can not help but think that he is truly a man of God. God blessed his labor, and with the earnest efforts of the church a glorious revival resulted, in which sixteen were converted and nine joined the church.

We had a special prayer meeting here three nights before the meeting commenced, to pray for our dear people who were unsaved. We feel that our prayers were heard, for five of our little Sunday school scholars were converted; although there are some in our school yet that are out of the ark of safety.

On August 24, 1911, the spirit of Mrs. Mary A. Daniel was carried by the angels to her home above the starry sky. She died at the home of her beloved daughter, Mrs. J. T. Barham, at Capron, Va., with whom she had made her home since the death of her husband, who preceded her to the glory land fourteen years ago.

Mrs. Daniel was a good woman, and highly esteemed by those who knew her. When real young she accepted Christ as a personal Savior and united with the church at Spring church, and lived a consistent member until death. Being an invalid for several years it prevented her from attending church as often as she desired. On the fourth Sunday in July she was at church for her last time, and she made the remark that the next time she was brought there, it would be to bury her.

She leaves to mourn their loss, five children, three girls and two boys; several grand and great grand children, and a host of friends. The funeral service was held at Spring church by her pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, after which she was tenderly placed in the cemetery. The high esteem in which she was held was shown by the many floral tributes which were placed on her grave as tokens of remembrance. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends. Let us remember our loved one is now at rest and can't come back to us, but we can go to her, if we will live as God would have us.

No words will ever be so sweet
As the words she used to say.
No hour will ever be so sad
As the hour she passed away.

Nannie Massey.

September 4, 1911.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Last S. S. report as follows: total enrollment, 93; total present, 60; total collections, $.57.

Or school was reorganized in March. Since that time the average attendance has been 43. In this time the total collections have been $16.38, and the total expenditures $14.16; amount on hand, $2.22. Not broke yet.

As stated in last report, the disease "visitism" is ceasing and our S. S. is getting alive again.

Teachers, what are you doing for the betterment of your class, and members, what are you doing for the betterment of the S. S? Polk Garrett.

Sept. 5, 1911.

Baltimore, Forsythe Circuit.

Bro. T. A. Williams commenced his special meeting here the fourth Sunday in August, and closed on Friday night. Bro. Chan Norman of the M. E. Chruch was his pulpit help, and with a rainy week and disagreeable weather the meeting resulted in twenty-two or three conversions and twenty-one were added to the church.

Bro. Norman did good preaching, and every service was full of the Holy Spirit, and our church was greatly revived; and we hope and pray that it may press forward and that our young converts may hold out and be a light unto the world, and help lift up the fallen humanity.

Of the number that were added to the church, seven were young men, eleven young ladies, two mothers, and one father that is up in fifty years of age.

It is a very serious thing for one to put off his soul salvation that long, but it is better to make a start late than never. There are quite a number of people in the community, young and old, who are out of the church, and some seemed to be interested about their soul salvation, but would not make any start, but I think that there could have been several others reached if the meeting could have run on longer, but Bro. Williams had to close here and go to Stony Knoll and start another meeting on Sunday.

Bro. Williams is an able preacher, and certainly has been a help to our church this year, and we ask the Lord to give him the ability and power to continue his work.

Our baptizing will be at Doub Bros.' mill dam next Saturday at 11 o'clock. There are twenty-three candidates for baptism, two of whom were added to the church some time ago. Of the number to be baptized, three want to be baptized by sprinkling and twenty by immersion. S. E. Kelly.

Pine Grove, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Yesterday was the time for our special meeting to begin. Mr. Lowdermilk's help could not be with him, and he postponed protracting it until the first Sunday in Oct., when the help he was expecting has promised to be with him.

However, we were not so much disappointed, as we had Dr. Swain to preach two grand sermons, at eleven and also at two o'clock. We are always glad to have the president with us, and in our homes.

Let us not forget to pray for the meeting. G. Ingram.

Mitchel's Grove, Guilford Circuit.

Having seen nothing from this church for some time, I thought a few lines would not be out of place in the Herald.

The Sunday school at this place is doing well at this time, and has been all the year. The average attendance has been about 70, and good behavior all the time, which speaks well for the young people of the community and officers of the school. Children's day was held the third Sunday in August; the recitation was good, the choir did well, and the collection was good, being $18.

Miss Martha Parsons did the training of the children, and did it well.

The school went picnicking at Lindley Park last Saturday. The writer did not go, but suppose they all had a nice time.

The protracted meeting will begin at this place the second Sunday in Sept. We are hoping and praying for a good meeting. Our pastor's wife, Mrs. Plyler, remains very sick. Of course his life is wrapped up in gloom, but, brethren, pray for them both that they may enjoy life together.

I will close with this prayer, O Lord, be very merciful to us all, and especially to these in their great affliction.

A. J. Luck.

Friendship, Haw River Circuit.

Since the last report from this place, we have held our special meeting, which began the second Sunday in August and closed the following Thursday. We had a good meeting. The church was greatly revived. Rev. G. F. Millaway was our help. He preached with great power. We had good congregations throughout the meeting. There were about 20 conversions, 8 joined the church. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We expect to hold children's day some time in October.

The good Lord is continually making up his jewels. He came into our Sunday school and took one of our brightest members, Pauline Cable. She was to sing a song on our children's day. O it is so sad to our Sunday school to mark her dead. Though she is not dead, she is only sleeping. She was so bright and sweet that everybody that met her loved her. She died last Sunday morning about 7 o'clock at the home of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Cable.

She was buried Monday afternoon at Friendship church. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. J. Ogburn, of Greensboro, which was attended by a large congregation. It was a sad service, though beautiful. So many lovely flowers. She leaves a father and mother, three brothers, four sisters, and many friends to mourn her loss. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family.

Blanche Weatherly, Reporter.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Circuit.

Our pastor asked me to make a report for him as he was so busy now in his meetings he did not have time to write. He has held four special meetings, and the results were as follows:

Zoar, the fourth Sunday in July. Bro. Loy was his pulpit help. They had 57 conversions and 13 accessions.

Beulah meeting the fifth Sunday in July. Rev. Mr. Loy helped there too. They had 45 conversions and 11 accessions.

Then August, the second Sunday, we had our camp-meeting at Antioch. W. P. Martin and W. D. Reed were the pulpit help over here. We had 40 conversions and 18 accessions. There were but two tent-holders, Messrs. C. M. Garmon and J. M. Phifer. We had the best order we ever had, and we are going to have a campmeeting right next year, for we already have fifteen names of people who have promised to tent next year, and one man has already staked out his place for his tent. Most of the old fallen down tents are going to be removed and new ones erected.

Rockwell meeting was the fourth Sunday in August. Bros. Lindley, Loy, and Mullis were the pulpit help over there. They had eleven conversions, and he has eight names to receive into the church.

We had our children's day here the first Sunday in August. We had a very nice program, and the children did well under the careful training of Miss Lula Helms and Mrs. J. P. Hemby. The collection was $5.85.

Sept. 5, 1911. "Antioch."

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.

Our revival meeting closed here last Saturday. The church was greatly revived. There were several professions and nine accessions to the church. We feel sure that if all the Christian people had been praying as they should have prayed, that we would have had greater revivals than we did, and that there would have been more souls saved.

Bro. H. W. Braswell was our pulpit help. He did some honest preaching. We got our new church so that we held the meeting in it, and would have had more done on it if the carpenter had not been sick. We hope that he will recover soon.

The revival meeting commenced at Mt. Pleasant last Sunday. We hope that they will have a good meeting up there. Bro. Braswell is their help there also.

Janie Sisk.

Caldwell Circuit.

The special meeting at Burk's Chapel began the first Sunday in August, 1911, with Rev. H. D. Garmon as our help, and continued till Wednesday. No conversions and no accessions, but a very good meeting. The members were revived. Good feeling was manifested among them.

Shady Grove, began Thursday night before the third Sunday in August, with Revs. C. A. Thrower, of Rockingham, N. C., and H. D. Garmon as our help, and continued till the next Tuesday night. A good meeting; ten professions, some of whom were members of our church; two accessions, and som ethat we think will join later on. We had a good revival; Methodists and Baptists all worked together.

Pleasant Grove, began Saturday before the fourth Sunday in August, with the third qnarterly meeting. There was a very small number of the official members present. But the general business was transacted. Rev. P. D. Moore was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference, and J. L. Childers alternate. The special services began on Saturday night, with Rev. H. D. Garmon as our help, and continued till Thursday night, with rain every day and night; two professions, one of them was reclaimed, and the church revived. The congregations were fairly good considering the rain.

Our new church building at Shady Grove is getting on finely. The frame is up and weather boarded, and we think will soon be covered. The blocks are at the mill to make the shingles.

J. B. Bivens.

Henry, N. C., Sept. 4, 1911.

Piney Grove, Chatham Circuit.

Our specical meeting convened the 4th Sunday in August. The Herald readers will remember that our dear, good pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, has been taken to St. Leo's hospital and could not be with us, much to the regret of us all.

Bro. Bowman's pulpit help, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, of Greensboro, N. C., came on Sunday morning and conducted the services until they closed Thursday p. m. Bro. Whitaker is a good preacher, and we feel sure that much and lasting good was accomplished through him. There were five conversions, and five joined the church. On account of the inclemency of the weather, the congregations were not so large, though I feel sure I can truthfully say we had a good meeting.

We are praying that our dear pastor may soon be able to be with us again, if it is the Lord's will. The Lord's will be done, not ours.

Our S. S. is still progressing nicely. We held our children's day service the fifth Sunday in July, collection $5.00.

Miss Callie McPherson is very sick, can't possibly live unless a change comes soon. We are now being blessed with some nice showers every day and every thing taking on new life.

Mrs. J. A. Cooper, Rep.

Sept. 6, 1911.

CEDAR FALLS.

Rev. T. H. Hatley has just closed a series of meetings at this place and we feel sure that great and lasting good has been done. He labored and preached with much earnestness and was rewarded with a great revival. Bro. Hatley is doing a great work on this circuit; we hope he may continue the same. Reporter.

BEULAH, MECKLENBURG CIRCUIT.

The special meting was held here the fifth Sunday in July. We had one of the most successful meetings ever held in the church. Brother Self did the preaching until Wednesday, when he was assisted by Rev. Mr. Loy. Brother Loy is an earnest worker and we certainly appreciate his earnest efforts in winning souls to Christ, and the good he did for the community here.

There were forty-three conversions and nine were taken into the church, and we hope to have more soon.

Our Sunday school is doing splendid work now, has taken on new life since the meeting. We have organized a Christian Endeavor Society with twenty-eight active members and five associate members.

We hope to do more for the Master this year than ever before. Mrs. Schell, Sec.

Aug. 29, 1911.

RANDOLPH CIRCUIT.

Dear Herald:—

If you will give me space I will try to answer a probable question: "Are you people doing any good on Randolph Circuit? I don't see any reports from that work."

No, very little, if any, but the Lord is doing good. The Children's Day service was held here at Shiloh the second Sunday in July. The little folks did their part admirably; the singing was also good, and the collection was $22.56. You see the Lord used Bro. M. Brown, the superintendent, and his assistants in doing some good by this effort.

The second Sunday in August the special meeting began here at Shiloh. Bro. Hunter, our engaged help, reached us Monday evening, ready for work Tuesday morning. The Lord preached through him some heart-searching, soul-stirring sermons. The visible results were twelve or thirteen conversions. The church was of course revived and backsliders reclaimed. Eleven joined the church, with more to follow. As a token of their appreciation of Bro. Hunter's services, they presented him with a purse of $12.00. Meeting closed Friday evening.

The third Sunday in August the Children's day service was held at Bethel. The children did their part all right. The music was good. The collection was $20.00. Bethel is small, numerically, but large in liberality. There are a number of fat souls there. The Lord's hand was behind the whole thing. The special meeting began after the children's service. The visible results are a revived church, some reclaimed, and a number stirred up to live nearer the Lord in the future.

This is a short, but wholesale report, with more to follow. We have elected local reporters, but they have probably forgotten to report. W. C. Lassiter.

MOCKSVILLE CIRCUIT.

Our protracted meeting at Union Chapel began on the second Sunday inAugust and closed on Friday night following. Bro. D. A. Braswell was my engaged pulpit help, and did good earnest and faithful work. The church was very much revived, 15 persons professed to be converted or reclaimed, and 3 joined the church.

Our third quarterly conference convened at Elbaville Saturday before third Sunday. Two churches were not represented. Stewards' reports were very unsatisfactory. Bro. John W. Cartner, of Mocksville, was declared duly elected delegate to next Annual Conference, and Bro. Luther Crouse, of Advance, alternate. The meeting at this place was continued till Friday night following. Much interest was manifested, the church was revived, 20 persons converted and 20 joined the church. Large congregations attended the services here and at Union Chapel too. Bro. Matthews was my pulpit help and did good work. He and Bro. Braswell have my sincerest gratitude for their faithful services.

On Saturday morning after the Elbaville meeting closed we assembled at a little pond near Bro. James Myers and I baptized 3 persons by immersion. I have two or three others to immerse the third Sunday in September.

Dulins church has been painted at a cost of about $50.00. A new organ has been placed in the church at Elbaville costing $75.00.

Bro. Matthews and I are in a special meeting at Byerly's Chapel. There is no interest as yet, and the meeting has been about rained out. This church is nearly extinct, and if there is not a revival in the near future, it will soon be entirely so. Since writing the above, the Byerly's meeting has been rained out. To date there have been 42 conversions and 25 additions to the churches. A house and lot in a beautiful residence section of Mocksville on North Main Street have been bargained for at $1200.00 for a parsonage. The trade is to be closed right away.

Fraternally,

D. A. Highfill.

Aug. 31, 1911.

—Dare to do right.

REHOBOTH, ALBEMARLE CIRCUIT.

A few facts about this old historic church may be of interest to some.

When it was founded no one living seems to know. But it was more than sixty years ago. The present house was built prior to the Civil War. I am told that it was painted before the war, and looks as well as many houses painted ten years ago. Much of our modern work is much like Jonah's gourd in durability.

It is located about a quarter of a mile from Albemarle Sound, which could be easily seen, were it not for the intervening forest, on the public highway highway leading from Plymouth, the county seat of Washington Co. to Columbia, County seat of Tyrrell County.

This neighborhood saw some of the realities of the Civil War; the Federal Gunboats coming up the sound—some of the shells thrown by the Federals are to be seen in some of the yards as ornaments, today. The community was sometimes under Federal, and then under Confederate authority. Some of the older members, who were young then, can tell how they entertained, by alternation, Confederate and Federal soldiers. At that time the best people of the community, both socially and financially, were identified with Rehoboth church. But nearly all of those families have either died, or gone to other parts, leaving the church in possession of little of her former self. Though a few still remain, true and loyal. Some who are, and some who were once, members, are scattered to Norfolk, Washington, Belhaven, Charleston, S. C., Greensboro, N. C., Baltimore and New York City, and other places.

We find baptisms recorded as far back as 1850, by Rev. J. L. Michaux. Persons baptized, born in 1838.

Among the names of those who performed the baptismal rite, (the most being pastors) we find Revs. J. L. Michaux, B. L. Hoskins, R. H. Jones, J. F. Speight, W. H. Wills, R. R. Prather, A. F. Whitaker (this must be a mistake for G F. Whitaker) R. H. Wills, John Paris, T. H. Pegram, (Pastor) J. Y. Pegram, J. H. Gilbreath, E. A. Wilson, F. M. Totten, W. A. Bunch, T. T. Ferree.

Of course Bunch and Ferree were not pastors. I have heard Bro. J. L. Michaux say that Albemarle was his first charge; that there were nineteen appointments, extending from Gaston on the west to Columbia in Tyrrell Co. on the east and to Tabernacle in Greene Co., on the south, the latter point being a part of La Grange Ct. now, and known as Harris's Chapel. This chapel is about two miles north of Tabernacle, which is still used by the M. E. Church South, as it was built jointly by the M. P.'s and the M. E.'s—Captain James Speight, of the M. P. Church, contributing the most to the enterprise.

Some may feel a little incredulous about the size of this circuit, but J. L. Michaux told me these facts more than once, over twenty years ago. Let the interested consult the map and see the distance from Gaston in Halifax, to Columbia in Tyrrell, and to a point about 20 miles north of La Grange, and 16 east by south of Wilson. Quite a territory. Those were the days in which the preacher preached, was expected to preach, and not expected to do about everything else but preach. Is the new an improvement?

Rehoboth goes back to the days when the sound had to be crossed in sail boats—but persons did this to attend church. Now sail-boats and schooners are few. The steam-boat and the gas-boat have taken their place. And the railroads are doing much once done by boats; done more rapidly but more costly to the people. The Norfolk and Southern's bridge of nearly six miles' length, makes crossing quicker, but less safe; sometimes in 12 to 13 minutes. A plunge off this bridge would mean death to all aboard.

Our Sunday school and congregation show a gradual increase. Pray for Rehoboth.

J. F. Dosier.

CONCORD.

Our services at Concord on Sunday night were well attended.

At Fairview Church at 11 o'clock 30 were received into the church. Twenty-one were baptized by the pastor; one will be immersed on the third Sunday. These are some of the fruits of the faithful laymen, who have been working to save souls. This makes a total of 65 who have been received into Fairview Church within the past month, since our meeting was begun. Bros. Foster, McCall, Hill and others have done some faithful work and God has blessed them.

Pastor.

Sept. 4, 1911.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

Some changes having been made in my schedule for revival meetings, I will say that any pastors desiring my services for third and fourth weeks in September will please write me at Asheboro, N. C., at once. Jesse E. Pritchard.

A REUNION.

Saturday, August 26th, was a memorable day at the home of Noah J. Wright, of Fallston, N. C., that day being set apart by him to bring together his children, grandchildren and some friends. It was high noon when the last ones arrived. As fast as kindred and friends arrived they were met by the old veteran of the Cross and ushered to cozy seats in cool shady places. Though being 65 years old his step was spry, and his face literally beamed with sunshine. Having suffered the loss of his dear wife less than a year ago, he was able by faith and his devoted service to God, to submit to Him who doeth all things well, and in this event shed rays of sunshine and hope in the hearts of his devoted children. His children living are: Mrs. R. A. Lackey, Mrs. J. D. Morris, Mrs. De Lafayette Martin, Mrs. Edny Willis, Mrs. R. W. Wilson. The morning was spent in cheerful conversation, rehearsing childhood days, and other topics suited to the occasion. Then, after breaking the hearts of many nice watermelons, we were asked to gather near the large table under a shade tree in the lawn. After returning thanks we were permitted to partake of all the good dainties and palatable food taste could ask for, or eye wish to see. It was a warm day, but Mr. Wright had made ample provision for the occasion. Our temperature was lowered by the delicious ice-cream which we enjoyed immensely. The occasion was informal, some of the older serving cream in the parlor, while some of the younger preferred shady places on the lawn. Among the latter, Miss Benna Reed, daughter of Rev. W. W. Reed, Mr. James Cline, of Fallston, and others. Mr. Wright has been superintendent of Friendship Sunday school for 45 years, 1856—1911. He never has missed a Sunday unless providentially hindered. His life is an inspiration to those with whom he comes in contact. Oh, may we all bring our bodies into subjection to the divine law as he has done. And as the years roll by may the spirit of Christ so permeate his life in faith, that he shall say with the Apostle Paul, "Nothing shall be able to separate me from the love of Christ."

One Present.

DEATH OF LITTLE ETHEL FREE.

On Monday night, Aug. 21, dark clouds gathered over the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Free—yes, their little girl's life was ebbing out. All through the still hours of the night we watched over her little couch and prayed if it was God's will, that her life might be spared; but not so; just as the morning light was breaking the sun light of Heaven broke in on her life and her little spirit was carried away on the wings of the morning to that great city where cometh no night and we remembered that the Savior took a little child and set it in the midst of them when asked who is greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven, and we could imagine the heavenly host coming out to meet her and the great king himself adorning her little spirit in the shining garment, such as angels wear; but it tore our very heart strings to give little Ethel up. She was a sweet obedient child, and was the apple of her parents' eyes. Sometimes we find it hard to understand why we are so sorely tried, but God knows what is best for us and sometime we'll understand. Then let us bear our afflictions with submission, knowing that he doeth all things well. He knows just what it takes to make us just what he would have us be, and while it is hard, yet we know that it is right. It awakens a tender feeling for each other, and makes our hearts vibrate with such sacredness as nothing else could do. Not only the relatives feel the loss of this little life, but the whole community. Everybody loved little Ethel Free. Her life was short, a little more than four years. Men and women have ripened in years, lived and died and not been missed like this little child. She will be missed in the Sunday school, but most of all she wil be missed in the home, and we commend the parents and grand-parents to the great Father who was able to give and take this little child. He is also able with the same hands to bind up the broken hearts.

Sorrowfully,

Mrs. J. V. Free.

In the Hygeia Hospital, Richmond, Va., on Sabbath evening, June 4, 1911, Shelby C. Cameron went to his eternal reward, aged 33 years. About a week before, he had left his home in St. Paul, N. C., to receive medical treatment with the hope of restoring his health and prolonging his life. But God, whose ways are not our ways, ordered otherwise; for when His servant had fulfilled his earthly mission, he went to his heavenly home. Just three weeks prior to his death he made a public profession of his faith in Christ as his personal Savior by uniting with the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. His friends had wished that he might be permitted to spend many years in the service of his Savior. But his ilfe was in God's hands, and was terminated in God's own time. His short Christian life was not in vain. He was a dutiful and loving son, an affectionate brother, a kind neighbor, a jovial companion, a sincere friend.

It is no wonder that his death, coming so unexpecteuly, caused such deep sorrow among his many acquaintances, and was such a severe shock to his parents and brothers and sisters. We shall certainly miss his genial presence; but we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We thank God for his cheerful spirit, the charm of a noble unselfish life and a gentle, sunny heart.

His funeral was held in the Methodist Protestant Church at Liberty, N. C., the home of his childhood days, and was conducted by his pastor, who was assisted by Rev. W. D. Fogleman, the pastor of the church. After the service his body was borne to the beautiful cemetery on the south side of the town, and there gently laid to rest by loving hands, to sleep in sweet repose till the resurrection morn.

He is survived by his father and mother, two brothers and five sisters, to whom we offer our tenderest sympathy, assuring them of our earnest prayers for the abiding presence of the Divine Comforter.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him. For He knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust."

"Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And then, sometime, we'll understand.

"We'll catch the broken threads again,
And finish what we here began,
Heaven will the mysteries explain,
And then, ah then, we'll understand."

J. McIver Wicker.

THE WAR ON PURE-FOOD WILEY.

It looks as if congress, in the course of its 23 varieties of investigations, has run upon some real skullduggery in the Dr. Wiley case. To begin at the beginning of the story, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley was put at the head of the chemistry bureau of the agricultural department 23 years ago. In a large measure he is the faher of the pure-food and drug movement. As such he has naturally been singled out for attack and sacrifice by the big whiskey, drug, canning and other interests which he has antagonized. Not only that, but his pioneer work in the pure-food cause has been more or less neutralized and opposed by other government officials, who for one reason or another have thought that he was going too far. Thus a condition of armed neutrality has existed for a long time, and several weeks ago active war broke out.

It broke out when Attorney-General Wickersham with President Taft's approval, gave Wiley notice to resign, on the charge that he had disobeyed the law in employing Dr. H. H. Rusby, of New York as a drug expert at a higher rate of pay than the maximum of $11 a day which the law allows. When the house investigating committee came upon this subject they saw at once that they had struck pay dirt at last, and Chairman Moss declared that they would sift it to the bottom. Numerous witnesses were examined and interesting revelations were made. It was brought out that if there was anything technically irregular about the employment of Dr. Rusby at rates not contemplated by the law, the same thing was true of the famous Remsen board, whose employment at vastly greater cost had been approved by the department of justice. This board consists of five eminent private chemists, headed by Dr. Remsen of Johns Hopkins university, to whom important chemical questions were supposed to be referred for final judgment. This board has cost the government over $175,000 so far, and about all it has done has been to decide that benzoate of soda, as a food preservative, is not harmful, and that saccharin as a sweetening is harmful. In the notorious benzoate of soda case the Remsen board overruled Dr. Wiley, who has always held that the use of any of this substance as a preservative in food is dangerous to health.

Dr. Wiley told the committee how, instead of receiving the co-operation of the officials placed over him, he had found his plans antagonized and check-mated at nearly every move. The man who has principally overridden him has been G. P. McCabe, the solicitor of the agricultural department, who is the chief law officer of the department and decides whether those charged with disobeying the pure-food and similar laws shall be prosecuted or not. Dr. Wiley stated that about 9,000 cases had been prepared by his bureau against offenders at an average cost of $200 each, but that in two-thirds of the cases submitted for action he had been overruled. For instance, he wanted the use of alum in baking powder and pickles stopped, but he found his policy vetoed by the powers above. His indictment of his superiors includes Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, who has been at the head of the department, under changing administrations, for 14 years—this being the longest any cabinet officer has ever served. And of course inferentially the president is also involved. He is placed in a most embarrassing dilemma, to say the least, and everyone is much interested to see how he will decide the matter. It is evident that either one crowd or the other has got to "go," and the question is which side the president will uphold. It is generally conceded that whatever stand he takes, the airing of the unsavory situation will hurt the administration politically.—The Pathfinder.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Questions.

85. What misconduct is recorded to Solomon's discredit?

86. How many times did God appear to Solomon?

87. How did God punish Solomon?

Question 85 is assigned to W. A. Speer; 86 to Mrs. W. O. Reynolds; 87 to Mrs. C. E. Smith.

Lesson for Next Week.

1 Kings, Chapters 12, 13, 14, 15.

YOUNG MEN AND THE MINISTRY.

If we are to get young men to join the army of ministers we must brighten the brass of our buttons, and make the steel of our muskets glisten in the sunshine; we must quicken our step, and give more color to our music. When we show to them that we are headed for a great country, on the borders of which we are already marching, they will not be slow to fall into line with the directions we are following. When a boy the Rev. Lewis J. Davis was my presiding elder. The first time I ever heard him preach, I prayed, Lord, do help me to preach the gospel. I felt I had rather be a preacher as I listened to that old prophet and saint than to be an angel. He was the first preacher I ever knew who was reading the best books.

To do fine work in the pulpit one must read the best books, he must write, he must study, and he must do this every shining day. Six hours of every day at least should be devoted to hard work in one's library. Darwin, it is said, even when he was old and unable to work more than one hour at a time, would count as many as twenty thousand eggs of some diminutive insect in order to settle some point in science.

When Francis of Assisi consecrated himself to the service of Christ by the threefold cord of chastity, poverty and obedience, he became so attractive that almost every young man of spirit and force in his native town wanted to join his band of monks. The little town of Italy became more talked about than Rome itself. Francis embarrassed the pope with his daring feats of service. The great painters made pilgrimages to the place of his birth, and left visions of his devotion which glow on canvas to this day. Architects of genius built vast cathedrals over the places made holy by his prayers. And now, after a thousand years, Francis insures a support to the citizens of the place where his life was spent. He was not a great thinker, he simply accepted the will of God revealed in Jesus Christ, completely, unconditionally, eternally, and gladly as the law of his own life. He determined to know no other law and no other order than that of the kingdom of God. It was because of his daily practice of absolute fidelity to the divine that he drew into Christian service artists, scholars, preachers, and the leading spirits of his time.—Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

—Licenses have been isued for over 3,000 automobiles in this State.

—Farmers of Peoria County, Ill., are preparing to convert their water cisterns into cider tanks to care for the bumper apple crop.

CORNELIA AND THE GOAT.

"It's a real watch, and it goes," said Cornelia.

"He's a real goat, and he goes," cried Janet.

Cornelia glanced at the goat. Then she looked again at the little watch in her hand. Out of her blue sunbonnet Janet watched eagerly.

"It has a mamma-gram on one side," said Cornelia.

"My goat has a harness on both sides. You can have the harness—and the wagon, too—just for the watch and chain."

As she spoke, Janet came close to Cornelia. Her hands ached to hold the watch.

"Just think," she coaxed, "of the goat and the wagon and the harness and the whip—I'll throw in the whip. That's four things—for a watch and chain. That's only two—and such little weeny things."

"The watch keeps splendid time," said Cornelia, faintly.

"So does the goat," cried Janet, triumphantly. "And my father says he never knew any goat who could be driven so far."

Nebuchadnezzar surely was a beautiful goat. There was but one reason why Cornelia didn't finish the trade then and there. The watch and chain were mother's. That is, they would be at the end of a week. Mother had given them to Cornelia for her very own until her visit to Cousin Laura was over. But it did seem that mother would much rather have a goat that you could drive, than a watch.

"Well, I guess I'll harness up now," said Janet, "and go riding; that is, unless you make up your mind right off to take him."

"I'll let you know when you come back."

"Maybe I won't come back," said Janet, "not till after Monday. Then you'll be gone home. Sometimes I drive the goat to grannie's house and stay a long time. You can have such fun if you only have a goat of your very own."

"I'll take him," said Cornelia, suddenly. She slipped the slender chain over her head and dropped it—watch and all—into Janet's hand.

Between them they harnessed Nebuchadnezzar to the little wagon. Cornelia climbed in. She took the lines in one hand. She flourished the whip.

"I'm going to drive straight home," she cried. "You can tell Cousin Laura."

Away through town dashed the goat and Cornelia. Nebuchadnezzar was in fine trim. He kicked up his heels and capered along.

Cornelia forgot the watch. Mother would be so glad to have a goat for her very own. If she wanted to, she could go riding now.

When Cornelia reached the river, the goat began to grow weary. He wanted to lie down. When Cornelia wouldn't let him, he tried to turn around.

"Indeed you shall not go back," cried Cornelia, firmly, "until mother sees you."

Cornelia used the whip gently. Nebuchadnezzar thought it was a fly. But he went slowly on. And all the time the big sun kept getting nearer and nearer the far-off hills.

"Oh, do go on, please!" cried Cornelia. She shook the lines and coaxed a little with the whip. Nebuchadnezzar turned and looked at her. He set his jaw firmly. He stood still. Just as it seemed that he would never take another step, he wheeled suddenly to the right, bumped over some stones, and dashed up a drive-way which led to a neat farmhouse.

On the porch of the house sat an old lady piecing a quilt out of triangles of bright calico. Beside her stood a young man. Grazing quietly near by was a pretty brown horse.

"It's a good bit further to town," the old lady was saying, "Better stop to supper"—

Just at that moment Cornelia and the goat arrived.

The old lady stopped as quickly as they did. She sprang to her feet and peered through her glasses.

"Sakes alive," she cried, "if it isn't Nebuchadnezzar! Come to make grannie a little visit, Janet?"

"It isn't Janet," said Cornelia. "But I would like to stop just a minute, please. Are you Janet's grandma?"

"Who else should I be?" said the old lady, sharply. "But who's this run off with Janet's goat?"

"I didn't," cried Janet, ready to cry. "I traded my real gold watch and chain for him. He's mine now."

"Who are you?" cried the old lady.

"What's your name, little girl?" said the young man. He came to the side of the cart, and lifted Cornelia out.

"Cornelia Hill," said Cornelia.

"I believe she's Jet Hill's little girl," said Janet's grandma. "She's got the Ross look to her eyes. But this is Janet's goat—I'd know him anywhere."

"If she's Jet Hill's daughter, she's my niece," said the young man. "I haven't seen any of them for six years, but I'm on my way to make them a visit. I'm Mrs. Jet Hill's brother."

"Oh, I know!" cried Cornelia. "You're my Uncle Tom."

"It looks that way," said the young man. "But where did you come from, Cornelia?"

"I've been visiting Cousin Laura," said Cornelia, "and I traded my watch and chain for Janet's goat. Janet lives just across the street, you know. And now I'm on my way home to show mother."

"Sakes alive!" cried Janet's grandmother. "Jet Hill's little girl! Her mother was Cornelia Ross. What on earth does she want of a goat?"

"Don't you think she'll like him?" said Cornelia. "I'm 'most sure she will. Won't she, Uncle Tom?"

"We'll soon find out," laughed Uncle Tom.

Janet's grandma made them stay to supper. Nebuchadnezzar was fed and watered. So was the brown horse. Then Cornelia and Uncle Tom set out for home. Uncle Tom went ahead on the brown horse. Behind him rattled Cornelia and the goat as fast as the goat thought best.

When mother saw them coming into the yard together, she was so surprised and glad over Uncle Tom and Cornelia that she hadn't time to see the goat. But, when she heard about the trade, she looked sober.

"Then, when the week is up, you will give me a goat instead of my watch?" she said.

"He's a beautiful goat, mother," said Cornelia.

"But he isn't my watch."

"I thought—maybe—you'd like him better."

"I think," said mother, gravely, that you thought you'd like him better."

The next day was Sunday. And in spite of Uncle Tom and his stories, it was about the longest Sunday Cornelia had ever spent. She didn't want to drive the goat. She didn't even like to look at him, cropping grass in the back yard.

Long before any one else was up, Monday, Cornelia harnessed Nebuchadnezzar to his wagon. She climbed in and turned him toward his own home.

Nebuchadnezzar seemed pleased. He trotted nimbly along.

"But just supposin'," said Cornelia to herself, "Janet won't trade back."

When Cornelia and the goat reached the pretty farm-house where Janet's grandma lived, the goat turned in. And, when they came to the porch, there sat a small girl in a big sunbonnet. In her hands was a round something which shone in the sun.

"Hello, Janet," cried Cornelia.

"Hello," said Janet, out of her sunbonnet.

"Here's your goat," said Cornelia. "I don't want him any longer."

"Here's your watch," said Janet. "It won't go—not one single minute."

Janet droped the watch into Cornelia's hand. She threw both arms around the goat.

"I'm visiting grannie," she said, "but I'm going home. And you shall go too, Nebby. You shall never be traded again—not for anything."

Cornelia stood with the little watch close to her ear. It was silent. She shook it gently. Still it did not answer.

Just then into the yard galloped the brown horse, Uncle Tom on his back.

"O Uncle Tom," cried Cornelia, "I brought the goat back, and I've got the watch. But it won't go—not a single tick."

Uncle Tom reached down from the back of the brown horse. He picked up Cornelia, watch, dangling chain, and all, and set her in front of him. He guided the horse slowly out of the yard and headed him toward home. Cornelia looked back. There on the grass by the porch were Janet and Nebuchadnezzar.

"Good-bye," she cried.

"Good-bye," said Janet.

Uncle Tom took the watch from Cornelia's hand. He worked at it a minute, listened, nodded, moved its hands. Then he put it down close to Cornelia's ear.

"Why, Uncle Tom," cried Cornelia, wasn't wound!"

"Tick, tock!" said the watch happily.—Alice E. Allen, in Westminster.

AN AGE OF WONDERS.—Rev. G. F. Millaway tells this anecdote: An old woman of Winston was sitting on a porch one day. She saw a boy passing on the street with a kitten in his arms. She cried out—"Look! look! There goes a boy totin' a kitten." Then she added: "Oh, well, one can see anything these days."

—A small girl of three years suddenly burst out crying at the dinner table. "Why, Ethel," said the mother, "what is the matter?" "Oh!" Wailed Ethel, "my teeth stepped on my tongue."—Young Evangelist.

—Sir William S. Gilbert was once standing outside his club when a stranger approached him and said:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but do you happen to know a gentleman, a member of this club, with one eye called Matthews?"

Sir William paused for a moment.

"I can't say that I do," he replied. "What is his other eye called?"—St. Paul Dispatch.

Lady—Yes, I've an umbrella that needs mending; but how am I to know that you will bring it back?

Umbrella Mender—Have no fear, mum. I allus charges more for mendin' than I could sell the umbrella for.—Red Hen.

Have you seen Miss Beanpole since she inherited a fortune?

Yes, she is greatly changed.

How?

Well, she used to be frightfuly skinny, and now she's divinely slender.—Toledo Blade.

Would you mind tooting your factory whistle for a little?

What for?

For my father over yonder in the park. He's a trifle deaf and he hasn't heard a robin this summer.—Kansas City Journal.

"I wish to say to the congregation," said the minister, "that the pulpit is not responsible for the error of the printer on the tickets for the concert in the Sunday school room. The concert is for the benefit of the Arch Fund, not the Arch Fiend. We will now sing Hymn 6, 'To err is human, to forgive divine.' "—Driftwood.

A celebrated Anglican divine, then the Bishop of Rochester, who had been ailing for some time, decided to consult Sir Frederick Trevers, the noted surgeon. After a careful examination, Sir Frederick pronounced his verdict, and added: "Your lordship must go to Algiers or some winter resort on the Riviera."

"Impossible," replied the Bishop, "I have too much work to get through."

"Well," said the doctor, "you must make your choice. It is either Algiers or heaven."

"Dear me!" exlclaimed the Bishop with a sigh; "then I suppose it must be Algiers."

A teacher in one of the cooking classes of a New York school tells of the unique criteria by which her pupils sometimes judge each other's work in that line.

One little girl was criticizing the production of a pie by another pupil, when she said:

"That pie's all right, but it isn't as good as me aunt in Orange uster make. You take a piece of them in your mouth an' walk all 'round the place eatin' it an' it wouldn't break!"—Ex.

"And so the grippe has settled in yer head, Mrs. Mulvaney?" "Oi'm afraid it has." "Sure that grippe is aterrible thing, Mrs. Mulvaney. It's a terrible thing; an' it does always sittle in the wakest spot, so it does."—Driftwood.

The Cheerful Giver.

"No, I don't go to church very often," a young man declared to the girl whom he had accompanied to a house of worship Sunday evening, "but when I do go I make up for my absences by slipping a five-dollar gold piece in the offering.

"I don't think I have been to church in six months, so that sort of squares me," he whispered, when he dropped a coin about the size of the five dollar piece in the box as the usher passed it.

At the close of the service the minister arose and announced: "The collection for foreign missions this evening amounted to $3.26."

The young man didn't have much to say on the homeward walk.—Philadelphia Times.

NOTES.

—Mr. Geo. W. Crawford, aged 89, died recently at his home near Graham.

—Rev. H. L. Powell visited Greensboro, Tabernacle and Moriah neighborhoods last week.

—We are pleased to report that Rev. Homer Casto returns to his work at Efland greatly improved in health.

—Bro. Chas. A. Shoffner, merchant of Climax, was in Greensboro last week buying goods.

—The Guilford Poultry Association has been chartered. The object is to promote the raising of thoroughbred poultry.

—The three sons of Mr. J. M. Long, of Caswell County, accompanied by Mrs. Long, their mother, passed through Greensboro on Tuesday on their way to Guilford College to enter as students.

—Rev. Egbert W. Smith, formerly of Greensboro, has just resigned the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian Church of Louisville, Ky., to become co-Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Southern Presbyterian General Assembly.

—Since the convention last April, 16 Philathea and 11 Baraca classes have been organized by the State Union. The next Convention will be held in Salisbury.

—Hyman Harrison, a 15-year-old boy of Statesville, became overheated in running to a fire and died as he reached the scene.

—Greensboro post-office has been designated by the Postmaster General as a postal savings bank. It will open for business Sept. 28. The government pays two per cent. interest on deposits.

—Bro. S. S. Cox and his daughter, of Why Not Circuit, were in our office yesterday. He has the name of a former distinguished Congressman, "Sunset Cox," but he says he is not the man.

—The marriage of Miss Nora Coble, of Grace Church, Greensboro, occurred yesterday morning. The happy groom is Prof. R. C. Cox, principal of Liberty Graded School. They will be at home in Liberty after September 12th. The ceremony took place in Grace Church, Rev. T. J. Ogburn officiating.

—"The saloon," says an observant writer, "is a bank in which you deposit your money—and lose it; your time—and lose it; your character—and lose it; your manly independence—and lose it; your home comfort—and lose it; your self-control—and lose it; your childr n's happiness—and lose it; your own soul—and lose it!"

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON, SEPT. 17.

By Charles A. Hines.

Daily Readings.

Sept. 11. One Effect — Mark 2:29-31.
Sept. 12. Purity. — I Tim. 3:1-7; 2:8.
Sept. 13. Patience — Col. 3:17-24.
Sept. 14. Service — 1 Tim. 5:4-8
Sept. 15. Christ makes good neighbors. — Mark 12:31.
Sept. 16. Invite Him. — Rev. 3:20-22.

Sun., Sept. 17. Topic—Living Christ in the Home. Eph. 6:1-18.

Discussion Topics.

1. Have talks from Daily Readings. (Do not read them in the meeting, but have members talk on them).
2. What are results of living to one's self?
3. How may we best please Christ?
4. Duties of master and servant toward each other.
5. Mutual duties of parent and child.
6. Relation of old and young.
7. How should we act toward homefolks.

Brief Quotations.

Deliver me, O Lord, from that evil man, myself.—T. Brooks.

As a man grows nearer Christ, he goes farther from self. He grows larger in sympathy.

Spurgeon says that we carry our worst enemies with us, that is selfishness.

Listen to Young: "Man, know thyself; all wisdom centers there." Some men seem to think they are all wisdom.

"An humble knowledge of thyself is a surer way to God than a deep searching after learning."

"Nothing will make us so charitable and tender to the fautls of others, as, by self-examination, thoroughly to know our own."

Sefishness is that detestable vice which no one will forgive in others, and no one is without himself.—Henry Ward Beecher.

"A man is called selfish, not for pursuing his own good, but for neglecting his neighbor's."

Suggestive Thoughts.

If we are not Christians at home, we can hardly be Christians anywhere else.

Often think of Christ and speak of Christ as actually an inmate of your house, just as He was an inmate of Lazarus's home at Bethany.

It is a good plan to review each day, at night, with especial reference to the inmates of your home: have you been to each one as kind and loving and helpful as you might have been?

Your home is a little world, and as you live Christ there you will find no difficulty in living Christ in the larger world outside.

Faith must be the foundation of the home,—faith in one another, faith in God, faith in God's world. Many homes have no foundation, and the first hurricane of trouble carries them away.

Short Addresses.

1. Plain living and thinking as high as heaven, and a devotion so Christlike, that it knows no depths of human poverty and suffering to the bottom of which it will refuse to go; are true characteristics of wholesome living. Such a career will be conducive to moral and spiritual growth. It will infuse new life into the old, diseased life of selfishness, that will push off the old habits of sin that cling to us.

2. Jesus is the standard of love for the world, and especially for that part of it that has accepted Christ. So the Savior says, that if you do not love even your enemies, you do no better than those who have no standard. Even the savages love those who treat them kindly, and those that they consider their enemies. Even the brute nature can be won by kindness.

3. According to Scripture Jesus is the Son of God, and all depends upon our accepting Him as such. He has power on earth to forgive sins, which he has promised to do if we believe on him. "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed,' are the words of Christ himself to Thomas. Similar are his words to Peter, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah," etc. Not a passage but reveals a blessing for all who accept his sonship."

4. "Then we are told that, if the Son makes us free, we shall be free indeed. True freedom depends upon some other greater than man or our laws. Many a time a free man is put behind bars and a prisoner is set loose. Our streets are working alive daily with prisoners, those upon whom sin has served its summons, drawn up its bill of indictment. No one less powerful than the Son of God can free from this monster."

5. Paul endeaveored to show the Corinthians Christ as "the most excellent way." For did not Christ suffer long, and yet was kind in it all? He never envied another, did not vaunt himself, was not puffed up. If he seems ever to have behaved himself unseemly, it is because we can not appreciate what the right sort of behavior was under his circumstances. Neither did he selfishly seek his own interest. And on through the entire list, we may substitute his name for the word love and have the truth and the meaning."

REFORM BY THE WHISKEY GENTLEMEN.

Liquor dealers are still harping on reform for their business. The annual meeting of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association has just been held in Chicago. After citing the inroads that have in recent years been made in their business, they conclude a public statement with the following words and recommendations:

"We must admit that the Prohibitionists could not incite these great waves of fanatical opposition unless there was some foundation for their attacks. Granting this, our problem is plain.

"1. We must consistently continue to influence the retailer to so conduct his business as to eliminate those features that may be open to criticism. It was Daniel Webster who said that 'liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint.'

"2. We must endeavor to educate the American public to the great evils that statutory prohibition creates, so as to build up sentiment in favor of license, regulation, and control.

"3. We must be able and prepared to defend our calling before that greatest of all tribunals—the bar of American public opinion."

As to the suggestion that the saloon-keeper be influenced to so conduct his business as to eliminate objectionable features, we need only say that the most objectionable feature about a saloon is the sale of intoxicating drinks. When the influence of the wholesaler can result in the elimination of such sales the public will be satisfied. We would be reasonably contented if the wholesaler would see that his retail agents obey the plain provisions of the law. This would be a great step in temperance reform, but, of course, this is hardly to be expected.

If this association will take the trouble to read through the report of the Chicago Vice Commission recently published in a volume of over five hundred pages, they will have impressed upon them afresh what they should already know; that prostitution and liquor drinking are twin evils, and the one leans heavily upon the other. Were it not for the saloon, vice could be handled with little trouble, but as it is the most serious difficulty, confronting those who attempt to lessen the evils of prostitution is the obtrusion of the liquor seller, both wholesaler and retailer.

As to referring their cause to "that greatest of all tribunals—the bar of American public opinion," we are strongly of the opinion that there is where it will have to go, after all.—Western Christian Advocate.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House, Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St., Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address
PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

POPULAR EXCURSION TO RICHMOND, VA., VIA SOUTHERN RY.
Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Southern Railway will operate annual September excursion from North Carolina territory to Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Special train consisting of first-class coaches and standard Pullman sleeping cars will leave Charlotte, N. C., at 3 P. M., Tuesday, September 12th, arriving Richmond, Va., 6:00 A. M., following morning.

Returning tickets will be good on any regular train leaving Richmond up to and including trains of Friday, September 15. Passengers from branch lines can use regular trains, connecting with special train at junction points. This will be the last excursion of the season to Richmond, and will be a first class trip in every respect. Three whole days and two nights in Richmond. Ample time to visit the many attractions in and around this magnificent city. Following low round trip rates will apply from points named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$3.65
Reidsville, N. C.,	3.35
High Point, N. C.	4.25
Kernersville, N. C.	4.00

Proportionately low round trip rates from other points. For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., see any Agent Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.

The auxiliaries of the W. B. H. M. will find the monthly program for September in the Annual Report of the W. B. H. M. Secure a copy in good time from the corresponding secretary, Miss Alice Conway, Catawba, Ohio. (Note. The reading for September program, "Dr. Talmage on the Highlanders," can also be secured from the corresponding secretary.)

Write to Mrs. M. O. Everett, Pine Ridge, Ky., for a copy of "The Galax Gatherers," enclosing one dollar for same. The book is said to be a fair representation of the White Mountaineers. It is written by E. O. Guerrant, D. D., a man of broad vision and mighty faith, and one who has had almost unlimited opportunities for securing a positive knowledge of existing conditions.

The Japalac Sunday school, on the Pipe Creek Circuit, Indiana Conference, has lately contributed $24.00 to the Ky. Industrial School building fund. Let other Sunday schools take notice and do likewise.

The Michigan Branch meeting of the W. B. H. M. convenes at Grill Lake, Aug. 24 and 25. Mrs. C. W. Gray.

FROM MRS. C. W. GRAY, OF THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.

Another communication has come to hand from an educated and talented young lady on the Pipe Creek Circuit, Indiana Conference, who volunteers her services for our work in Kentucky, or among the White Mountaineers. I met the above-mentioned lady and was impressed that God wanted her to make this sacrifice. Methodist Protestants, Christians, the door is open; willing workers are not lacking; the need is appalling: will we stand by and refuse to give our money, or even a tithe of it to save our brothers and sisters of our blood and language, who have not the gospel and who cannot know it unless we who are favored give it to them? Funds are needed for the school building, for the farm, etc. Teachers are a necessity. Think of it, four hundred children within walking distance of our proposed school in Pine Ridge, Ky.! Let us get the work completed. Will each one do his or her part? What can I do? What can you do? Consider; decide; act. Send your contribution to Mrs. Fred Neer, treasurer W. B. H. M., Mechanicsburg, O., or send it direct to Mrs. M. O. Everett, Pine Ridge, Ky. Mrs. C. W. Gray.

NOTES.

—Rev. J. D. Williams conducted a series of meetings at Glen Raven last week.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway went to Graham on Monday to the assistance of Bro. Curry.

—Prof. E. H. Moser is now located in Zebulon, N. C., as principal of the Wakelon High School.

—The name of the Southern Baptist Assembly grounds has been changed from Bluemont to Skymont. A large hotel will be built there and water and sewer systems put in.

—The Baraca and Philathea Classes of the M. P. Church were very pleasantly entertained on their picnic outing Thursday night. They went in wagons to the home of Mr. Cad Albright's near Graham. —State Dispatch.

—Bro. J. E. Pritchard writes from Pinnacle under date of Sept. 5, saying that a fine meeting has just closed at Pilot Church, with thirteen conversions, making forty conversions in two weeks on that charge.

—Rev. T. E. Davis, of Welch Memorial Church, High Point, has seen a great increase in the attendance at Sunday school in two years. The average attendance has run up from 30 to about 90. Several new members have come into the church recently.

—Our thanks to a good sister down east for an invitation to call and receive a donation of canned peaches. That is very tempting this year, when peaches have almost failed to put in an appearance in this vicinity. We found, however, that Chatham County people have also been canning peaches this year. It is good to hear of the good fortune of our friends at a distance. In spite of dry weather, corn crops, we believe, are generally good this year, where well cultivated, but no amount of cultivation will bring out peaches from frost-bitten buds.

NOTABLE CELEBRATION.

Distinguished Gathering Anticipated for Golden Jubilee of United Women's Missionary Societies at Greensboro Next Month.

A meeting, not only of State wide, but of national interest and importance, will be held in Greensboro next month.

The occasion of this most notable gathering is the celebration of the golden jubilee of the united Women's missionary societies in this, the 50th anniversary year of the woman's foreign missionary movement in America. This movement, which, like all other great things, had small beginnings, under difficulties and discouragements, has grown to such proportions that the possibilities of Christian civilization have forced themselves upon busy men—men living and striving in the most strenuous age the world has ever known—the result being the laymen's missionary movement organized a year or so ago with a view to hastening the great, glad day when all the world would be brought under the elevating influences of Christian thought and Christian teaching.

To stimulate interest in mission work in the foreign fields by letting the world know just how far it has proven successful is a part of the plan of the national organization, which originated the jubilee campaign and which has enlisted the sympathy and co-operation of the best workers, and most entertaining speakers to be found in the country. The fact that more than 30 cities have availed themselves of this rare opportunity to bring all the missionary societies of the various Christian churches into closer touch with each other—all denominational lines being obliterated in this common work for a common cause—is the best evidence that the plan has proven a most successful one, and Greensboro and North Carolina are to be congratulated on the prospect of entertaining such a distinguished body.

Throughout the West these rallies have aroused great enthusiasm. Portland, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Louisville, Nashville, New York, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Richmond being among the number already visited by the jubilee party scheduled for Greensboro Oct. 13 and 14.

The local committees in charge of arrangements have adopted as their slogan: "Go Tell," and the religious and secular press will be used to spread the tidings and aid in making the 50th anniversary of foreign missionary work by American women a memorable event in the State's history.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The College Year of 1911 opens September 6, 1911. Numbers of students will be here for the opening. Will you? Every indication points to the best year in the history of the College.

The opportunities for culture and the advantages offered are of the highest type.

A strong faculty of university trained men and women stand ready to give the best of their lives for the benefit of the student body.

Have you seen and read the Bulletins issued by the College this summer? They will be of help to you in deciding what college to attend. Write for them.

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

Greensboro opens wide her doors and says "Come." Large delegations are expected from every town in North Carolina, but Greensboro is accustomed to crowds, and has ample facilities to care for every visitor. "Come and learn more about it.—Charlotte Observer.

APPALACHIAN EXPOSITION, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

"The South's Greatest Show, Many and Varied Attractions."

Attractive Low Round Trip Fares via Southern Railway.

Low round trip ticskets on sale daily from September 9th to October 1st, 1911, with final return limit ten days from date of sale.

Many attractions every day. Mighty, magnificent and mammoth midway. Great Aviation and aerial flights daily. Great fireworks displays. Grand hippodrome of great acts, presenting the world's greatest acrobats and feature performers.

Four further information, rates, schedules, etc., see any Agent, Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DEBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

Elder Hardy Vindicated.

We have watched with great interest the contempt proceedings of the municipal court of Reidsville, N. C., against Elder L. H. Hardy of the Primitive Baptist church. For several years, we have known this minister personally and felt that he was true to his convictions and fearless in his fight against the liquor traffic. We knew also that he was discreet in his statements and therefore we are not at all surprised to see that the superior court has thoroughly vindicated him, and that the citizens of the good town of Reidsville have given him needed and worthy support.

We believe that this prosecution for righteousness sake will not only bring a reward to him, but will be blessed of God to the enforcement of law throughout North Carolina. All honor to officers and courts, who do their duty, and to citizens, who are fearless in their efforts to overthrow the liquor traffic.—The American Issue.

—J. Frank Skinner, who is said to have been one of the tallest men in the world, died at his home in Augusta, Ga., a few days ago. He was seven feet and four inches high.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER, EVEN CHRIST, AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1911. NUMBER 42.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

BROTHERHOOD.

Not to be different, Lord,
I ask, from those that fare
Beside me on life's way,
But that my spirit shall accord
With their great purpose, that my share
Wholly I may fulfill, in thought and will;
And that the simple creed
Of all men's right within thy sight,
I may affirm by word and deed.

O, save me from the blame
Of those who have forgot
Their brotherhood, and boast
Of worth ancestral, and feel shame
For such as bear the common lot.
Make me, dear God, to see if aught through me
Find favor in thy ken,
'Tis but in part the grace thy heart
Pours richly on my fellow men.

—John D. Barry.

—England cabled last Monday to Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, of Maine, president of the W. C. T. U., "Hold the fort, the world is watching." After the election Mrs. Stevens replied: "We have held the fort against the combined forces of the liquor makers, liquor sellers and their allies, and the world will rejoice."

Hurrah for Maine!

—President Anthony, of Adrian College, lectures on the life of Thomas H. Stockton.

With the Winston People.—The editor spent last Sunday with our people in Winston, in their church and in their homes. Bro. O. W. Hanner was closing Sunday school when we arrived. There is enough of the Germanic element in the Winston population to affect the speech of the place, and we have repeatedly been impressed with their vigorous mode of expression. They do not whine or drawl, but they speak with energy. The Sunday school of our church has an average attendance of more than a hundred and is very much alive. The congregation at preaching service, which was said to be about the average, was made up of earnest-looking people, many of them men. Bro. and Sister Ellis are among the older; old enough, they think, to be permitted to retire from active service, but they are still looked to for advice, at least, on various occasions. Bro. B. F. Norman is climbing up on the ladder of the years, but is generally to be found in his place in the church. He and Mrs. Norman are always interested in every measure to advance the interests of the church. Bro. Speer has been doing mission work, in conducting a Sunday school in East Winston and the new East Winston Church, of which Bro. Millaway wrote last week, comes to his aid. Bros. Cummings, Hester, and Speas are among the prominent members of the church. But time would fail us to tell now of all the active members growing up into usefulness in the Winston church. It is a church that serves a purpose, that meets a need. Bro. Hanner took us to his splendid new home for dinner, then took us out in his buggy to call on a number of people and to see the new East Winston Church. We found it on the corner of Seventh and Woodland Streets, within a stone's throw of the end of an electric car-line, which will soon be extended beyond the church. The church is large enough to seat about 200 people, and is neat and cozy. It stands not far from the school building where Bro. Speers formerly conducted Sunday school, but from which the school was ruled out by official action. The Sunday school will be reorganized next Sunday in the new church. The lot on which the church is built is 50x150 feet,—large enough for a much larger church, and future exigencies may require it. This church has been built largely by the contributions of members of the first Winston M. P. Church. Bro. Millaway asked that names be proposed for the new church and that a committee select and recommend the most suitable. Perhaps we will know by next week what has been decided on. Our best wishes to the new church and to the old.

REMEMBER THE CASE OF MAINE.

According to report, prohibition has been saved in Maine, but by a very small majority; small enough to make one tremble when he thinks how near the victory came to being a defeat. We felt it our duty to pray for the triumph of prohibition in this conflict with the spirit of lawlessness and greed. We should now thank God that the right triumphed.

But by this experience of Maine, we should be made aware of how great and persistent is the effort of the forces of rum to gain and keep the territory they have lost. They will probably be encouraged by the largeness of their vote to further efforts there and elsewhere. Had they won there, they would have been hopeful of winning everywhere. We don't know where they will try next; it may be here in North Carolina. But wherever it is, we may be assured that they will be united, they will plan their campaign and they will wage the fight with ruthless energy. Let the friends of prohibition remember the case of Maine and be on their guard.

—Rev. J. H. Bowman went home several days ago. We talked with him over the 'phone yesterday. He hopes soon to be well.

—Mrs. Plyler is still at the hospital. She does not know how her sickness will terminate, but seems prepared for any event. She has suffered so much; one can see the marks of pain in her face. What could she do now if it were not for the all-sustaining grace! Remember her when you pray.

—Prof. C. E. Forelines is steadily improving from the surgical operation of two weeks ago, and expects within ten days to return to his home at Westminster. He even hopes to take up his work in the Seminary soon after the school opens.—Methodist Protestant.

THE CHRISTIAN OBLIGATION IN ORPHANAGE WORK.

(A paper prepared by Rev. A. T. Jaimison, Sup. Connie Maxwell Orphanage, Greenwood, S. C., for the fifth annual session of the Tri-State Conference of Orphanage Workers, Charlotte, N. C., April 18—20, 1911.)

It may be wise to begin negatively by giving a definition or two, and to clear the field by removing any possible cause for misapprehension. This paper is submitted by one who sees clearly the Christian obligation in the topic, and who, appreciating the obligation, is prepared to champion the cause. At the same time it is perfectly patent that some good people who are not Christians or churchmen may feel certain obligations too, and their views should be regarded with utmost respect.

Let it be definitely understood that there is no quarrel with the city of Charleston because she saw fit to establish an orphanage house in the year 1790 for the care of indifferent fatherless ones. The city by vote of its representatives provided money for the foundation of such an institution and has since maintained it with appropriations from city funds. This is, by the way, the oldest municipal orphanage on this continent, having had a consecutive history of 121 years. In his recent volume on Preventive Treatment of Neglected Children Hastings H. Hart states that it was the first institution in America to be maintained at public expense for dependent children.

We find no fault with Masons, Knights or Fellows who see fit to establish orphan institutions. If they find in such a work an activity that satisfies them and that they believe realizes and makes practical the noble principles of their several orders, let no one may say them nay. It is a great, free country and none of us should forbid the be done precisely according to our method.

We have no criticism for the Chidren's Home Society in placing children in family homes. There is call for such work. Many a homeless child is in need of a home and many a childless home wants, or thinks it wants, a child. Wherever this work is properly conducted it has found favor and in many of our states it is the most popular form ofchild-saving effort. The churches look with no sort of suspicion on any peculiar scheme that does good and lifts the old world along a bit. If any of our ills can be helped or cured the church is willing for any one to do it who will, if she is temporarily inadequate to or ill-fitted for the task. She will call down fire from heaven on none who may not see fit to "walk with us."

It is freely admitted that the State should pass laws for the good of society, because government is simply organized society. Certainly the State must be social, not in any present day technical sense, but literally. The State is not ethical, which is far from saying that it is anti-ethical. It is social, however, and must enact laws that look to the protection of the weak from cruelty and oppression as well as provide helps to a higher standard of living. The State, therefore, passes a law forbidding the abuse of the child physically by prolonged labor in manufacturing establishments. Has the State a right to do this? Certainly. On what grounds? On the ground of self-protection, if no other. It has a right to protect itself from a future generation of weakened degenerates. If prolonged labor is seriously injurious to an undeveloped child in that its symmetrical muscular development promotes nervous irregularities and puts too heavy burdens on soft young bones, then the State has a right to declare that it will not allow conditions to prevail that lead to the injury of society in the next generation or even in succeeding generations.

The State has a right to pass a law compelling the education of all the children living within its borders. On what grounds? Certainly on the one ground of self-protection. It has a right to protect itself against the blight of ignorance. Feeling that illiteracy is a curse and a shame, the State may declare its unwillingness to submit to such a reproach and may declare that parents, willing or unwilling, must send their children to schools freely provided for htem. The basis of such laws rests not on moral but on social grounds. They are for the good of society as a whole and an enlightened twentieth-century sentiment gives them deserved support.

Not only do we not deny the right of the State to educate her citizens, but we Christians are perfectly satisfied to bear our share of the burden of taxation in supporting schools for higher and lower education. Why then do we assume an extra and additional expense in providing denominational colleges and Christian Orphanages? Simply because the State cannot teach religion, and we do not wish our young people brought up in schools that are not avowedly religious. We find the support of one school a patriotic duty and of the other a Christian duty and we wish to discharge both. So the Christian orphanage is not necessarily a protest against a State or municipal institution, nor against a non-religious society. It is simply a declaration that we can oureslves accomplish this work more nearly according to our notions than others can possibly do.

Let me submit the proposition that if the lodge finds in helpless orphanhood a condition to challenge its activity, we, the Church, find a greater. If the non-religious (not anti-religious) society perceives that it has a duty to the homeless litle one, the Church, more. If the State in its governmental capacity recognizes its right to interfere with certain maladjustments that lead to the destruction of childhood's joyousness and to future good citizenship, we Christians, more. The ethical teachings of Jesus overtop those of the lodge or club. The emotions of kindliness that stir the heart of the average good citizen are sublimely over-reached by the splendor of the love of Jesus. The selfish idea of the State in seeking to protect itself from social decadence is different not merely in degree but in kind from the spirit that would give, hoping not for any return.

Prof. Simon Patten has recently asserted that there are two and only two attitudes to assume toward the weak. We must either eliminate him or we must succor him. The doctrine of evolution would eliminate him on the principle that only the fittest shall survive. But the gospel of Jesus would give him succor because of its all-embracing sympathy. Christianity is willing to be told by the scientist that she is retarding the upward progress of the race by refusing to allow the "little ones" to perish from off the face of the earth. She will let the physicist bring that charge if he will. But her adherents are nevertheless prepared to defend the position that material and physical progress are not so important as that the bruised reed shall not be broken nor the burning flax be quenched.

But the Christian is not a fool in offering his sympathy to the helpless and degenerate. He is an unblushing optimist whose faith in God inspires him to believe that an outcast can be saved, that a degenerate can be regenerated, that a weak one may grow into strength. Hence, there is in the Christian program of helpfulness a world of sound reason and good sense. His enthusiasm springs from this belief that a man is not damned by either heredity or environment, but may be rescued and saved; yes, even every little one for whom Christ died. Edward T. Devine has recently said: "Regeneration and the saving of social outcasts is the answer of religion to the fact of degeneration, and to the demand that those who are not fitted to survive unaided in the social struggle must go to the wall in the interests of culture and civilization."

So that we who profess and call ourselves Christians find in the teaching of our Master enough to cause us to espouse as one of our important obligations that of caring for the destitute orphans. And it may be declared with emphasis that that great cause is worthy of the support of the great Church. Let it not for a single moment be admitted that the church, concerning itself with greater and weightier matters, may turn this over to the women in their societies or to the children in the Sunday school. Believing earnestly that every Sunday school should be enlisted in so worthy an enterprise, it should nevertheless be laid upon the great heart of the church itself that it should spend its substance for the orphan child.

The Christian obligation presses because it requires an outlay that is immediate and outright, and which, in theory, at least, is not expectant of return. And if the business of the church in this wicked world is not to give rather than to get, then I have entirely misconceived its mission and am a preacher of a perverted gospel. The Savior was accused of turning the world upside down. The world was engaged in a mad craze of seeking to get all it could lay its greedy hands upon, and Christ turned its theory of life upside down by telling men that the only true way to live was to give all one could. He taught that the Christian only realizes himself in his very utmost ability of sympathy, time,, influence, and opportunity. And he set the example by grandly, matchlessly giving his life. The Apostle Paul had learned this lesson in the school of Jesus, else he never would have said to those suspicious heathen reprobates, "We seek not yours but you." If we have caught the spirit of the unselfish and giving Christ we shall not wish to deny that for this reason at least the cause of the orphan rests upon the church as a Christian obligation.

It was laid down by the great interpreter of our Lord that this law was fulfilled in bearing one another's burdens. I know of nothing in Christian literature more suggestive of fellowship and fraternity, or, as the prayer book has it, "the communion of the saints," than this fine phrase in the Epistle to the Galatians. It is the exemplification of such a spirit that is given in the life and character of each devoted saint of God whose life has made his sphere radiant with holy influences. It is this spirit that brings not sanctimoniousness but a sanctity to every unselfish need. The apostle in another letter states the truth only a little differently when he says that we who are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak. Whether or not the Greek allows special emphasis on the word "ought," certainly this occasion and this topic will permit me to declare with emphasis, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."

More than one picture in the life of Jesus will give us the right to believe more strongly than merely inferentially that a true Christian obligation is to care for the helpless fatherless dependents. Do you recall the occasion when he took the little child in his arms and blessed him? Oh, sweet and rapturous record! The poor disciples, learning but not fully learned, did not fathom the tenderness of the great heart that beat sweetly and sympathetically and majestically for the little ones. Rebuking them, he gave utterance to the immortal words that have comforted the mother's broken heart and dried the tears of the father, who felt that the light of his life had clean gone out. On another occasion he set a little child in the midst of his disciples and reminded them that unless they became like that little child, simply docile, eager, pure, childlike, that it was a hopeless thing for them to expect ever to enter the kingdom.

For another reason I find that the work of the orphanage imposes a Christian obligation. It is not the custom to quote Matthew 28: 20 in this connection, but when Jesus gave command to the disciples to go and teach all nations he meant one's own nation as well as others. If others should be taught and not one's own, then one nation at least would be omitted and those taught would not be "all." The work of proclaiming the gospel was primary, but only primary. Our Lord planned that those won to the gospel by its flaming message of fire and invitation should also be instructed. Teaching was to follow conversion and baptism. Otherwise there would be no way to conserve what had been won.

Our present conception of orphanage work is that it is a school. Here the children are taught. That was not the idea of the orphan asylum of the old days, which, thank God, is rapidly giving way. The business way of handling orphan children is to get rid of them as soon as one can. The Christian way is to hold them as long as one can. The cheap way, the dollars and cents way, is to pass them out and on. The loving way is to receive them to the church's arm and to assure them that in the Saviour's name they are welcome; to let them understand that they are not to be pushed off but held; to let them feel kindliness and friendship, educational and vocational training, uplift of life, regularity of occupation and systematic instruction shall all be vouchsafed them. And furthermore, without the bother of any age limit they shall, when the day of their departure arrives, go out into the world wearing no badge of poverty, asking favor of charity of no living man.

Oh, brothers, I have only this remark to submit in closing. I believe the topic given me is unfortunately worded. The committee should have asked me to discuss, not an obligation, but a blessed, sweet, sanctifying, glorious Christian privilege.

—Hon. J. Z. Green was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. H. B. King Saturday afternoon.

THE KING'S REWARD.

"Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Revelation 22:12.

The blessed Lord said to his disciples, "I will come again and receive you unto myself." John 14:3. To have Christ, and be with him eternally, is no small reward. But this promise was not for the disciples alone. When Paul the aged was in prison, waiting for his death sentence to be carried out, he wrote: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Timothy 4:6—8. A crown of righteousness is a part of the great reward which the King will bestow. This is called by some writers a "crown of life." James 1:12, Revelation 2:10. Another says "when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Peter 5:4. But in order for this crown to be received by all for whom it is intended, some must be called from the dead; for many who now sleep in the dust have been righteous. The Lord, however, has made provision for all these. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (go before) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thessalonians 4: 15, 16. Thank God that though good men may die the grave cannot hold them when the Lord comes and calls for them. No, indeed; for " all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth." John 5: 28, 29. Not only this, but at the very instant they come out of their graves the gift of immortality is theirs. This is the Lord's promise: "Behold, I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible (immortal) and we shall be changed." 1 Corinthians 15:51,52. Glorious change indeed; no more sickness, sorrow, pain, or death, "for the former things are passed away Revelation 21:4. Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Corinthians 15:54), and all things are made new—a new life, a new home, a new occupation, a new song—and best of all, these may be enjoyed throughout the eternal ages. Is all this worth looking after? Who does not desire such a reward? Oh, to be able to receive it! But in order to have this, each one must be "counted worthy" of it. When the Lord comes, only the "dead in Christ" arise at his call. 1 Thessalonians 4:16. The rest of the dead do not rise till a thousand years afterward, Revelation 20:5. This shows that the righteous are separated from the wicked when the Lord comes. But even this is done in a moment, in the "twinkling of an eye." There is no time for the Judgment, then. No, before the Lord comes, he looks over the cases of those who profess to know him, and decides who are faithful. All the rest are left out, and when the King comes the faithful alone are raised to life. After these are taken to dwell with him, the wicked have their resurrection and are brought forth to be punished, John 5:29. After the decision has been as to who are worthy to come up in the resurrection of the just, then the Lord comes to give them the reward of everlasting life. Let us remember, then, that we must be ready to meet the Lord before this decision is rendered, for if we wait until the Lord is seen coming, it will be too late. We shall then be obliged to cry, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Jeremiah 8:20. The Lord gives us a solemn warning on this point. He says to all: Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your heart be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Luke 21: 34, 35. Snares are placed in concealment, where they will take birds and beasts that are not looking for them; as they move along carelessly, not thinking of any danger, suddenly, in an instant, they are ensnared, never to escape alive. In just the same way will the Lord's coming overtake those who are not prepared for it. "Watch ye therefore," the Savior said, "and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Luke 21:36. We have seen that our resurrection, our immortality, our being with Christ, our crown of inheritance, all depend upon, and are to be given at His second coming. How important, then, that coming is. If the coming were to prove a failure, all would be lost. But that can never be. All through the dim ages of the past, as the saints have fallen one by one by the stroke of death, angels have marked their places of rest. And when the order of the returning Lord shall be heard, "Go gather my saints together unto me," with what joyful haste will the angels fly to meet those who have burst the tomb at the sound of the voice of the Son of God! Oh, glorious awakening! Perhaps the first sight to greet the vision of those opening eyes in the dawn of Eternity will be the face of an angel, radiant with glory. It must surely be an awakening of song, when death is thus "swallowed up in victory," and the sweet voice of Him who is our Redeemer is heard to sing, "I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee." Hebrews 2: 12. Then will the very heavens ring with the jubilee of that assembled throng.

Dora L. King.

Matthews, N. C., R. F. D. 18.

SALVATION BY FAITH.

God gave Martin Luther a wonderful insight into the way of faith. We can be glad that salvation is by faith, it opens up the way so clearly for us. However, while salvation is by faith the plan involves work, resulting from our faith.

Abraham, "the father of the faithful," who was "the friend of God," had faith, and his faith moved him to erect an altar for the worship of God.

Abraham, being a friend of God, wanted to sacrifice to God, and he became stronger in the faith by making the effort. It is such an easy matter to lose sight of the fact that we must move up with our present faith in order to increase in the faith.

We think we have faith in the Bible, the Word of God; well, the way to have faith in the great Book is to read it. We think we have faith in prayer, and if we do we will pray. We, by faith, know that we need the grace of God in order successfully to serve God, and thus we pray for grace.

By having some faith in friends, we seek their friendship.

If we are just what we ought to be socially, we, when we need help, would rather call for the help of our near friends. The children would rather have the help of their parents than the help of distant relatives. Later on the parents would rather be waited on by their helpful children than by other relatives more distant.

A good man had so much faith in God and such a high regard for his family that he said that he was not expecting to have his children to provide for him, but that he intended to provide for them—that he was living for his children, and did not think of having his children provide for him.

That man died after educating his children, and was highly honored by the people, and duly respected by his children. Another case; where a man looked forward to much help by his children, and he wanted things to turn in shape for his children to wait on him; but the turn was not much that way—and the big honors never came. Self often comes in the way and spoils that which should be faith in God and man.

There is never much faith in man unless there is faith in God. If we do not have faith in God our faith in man fails.

Find a people who are really generous and patriotic, and public spirited, and they are of the class who have faith in God. It is wonderful how the salvation that is by faith affects the social side of life. The people who have salvation sacrifice and live a life of self-denial so as to be be able to help to lift up their people to a higher plane. The love of money, the root of all evil, is the thing in the way, and is so much so that we see it prominently in the vicinity of our churches. A few who are large-hearted, having the welfare of suffering humanity at heart, toil and sacrifice, and endure, and pay to God and give, but there are others who seem to be callous about some of these very important things. An over-worked poor man, who was hardly able to pay a dollar, gave fifteen or twenty dollars' worth of work to a certain church work that was very badly needed—but if those more able had met their obligations, the poor man would not have been over-burdened. There are others as the case of the good man above referred to. This case comes in as evidence indicating the justice and the consistency of tithing. I want to note right here that I am heartily in sympathy with the over-worked and over-burdened suffering people who are so generous and liberal. The love of ease and gain on the part of a few causes a drag, and thus throws the over-work on a few. However, a singular thing is the fact that numbers of the over-burdened, hard-worked class, are often found negligent about the spiritual interests of the church. A man that must do "double duty" because he is determined to have his church painted can't afford to neglect the spiritual interests of his church; if he does, he will neglect the thing belonging to his salvation.

"These things ye ought to have done, and not to leave the other undone"—is the scripture.

However, the "love of money" is the sin that "lieth at the door." Nothing less than the grace of God will right the wrong. If a people are willing to let the devotional drag, there will be stupidity somewhere.

We read that "the children of the world are, in their generation, wiser than the children of light;" but this fact need not hinder. The devotional must be urged. One of the ideals on the devotional lines is to open the Sunday school with prayer, and to close it with prayer; and besides the regular preaching have a prayer service in the church at least twice a week. The singers say that they "want to practice singing anyhow," and by all these song and prayer services, there can be abundant practicing. The instrumental music is not to be forgotten, and we all love to hear the sound of the church organ; and a few of us Methodists love to hear the vigorous sounds of the Moravian cornet band, but at times it seems that only the vocal is needed.

Perhaps at the humble prayer service the leader, if able to do so, might serve without the organ. However, there seems to be a finer ideal to notice—after the example and order of the devout man, Cornelius.

In a town or village, or where the devout men live neaer the church, there is space for a church service every day. This thing ought to be. There are but few families in a town, or near a church, but what could furnish a representative at the service once a day. The "representative" is no little matter, and if only a little child has occasion to represent for a big family once a day at the church, God will not overlook the account.

Some who think so much about their representatives gone on before to heaven, had better look after the representation here on earth, because such is the way to look towards heaven.

Not long since an humble family, who worked hard in order to serve their friends in the way of worship, etc., was seriously prostrated, and all became seriously sick. One of their friends, who loves to pray went there, and urged that they pray for their immediate recovery. The wife and mother of the family, at once got up shouting and praising God. I was not there, but I do not hesitate to publish through this article that the friends had at least that one case of being instantly restored in answer to the prayer of faith. I believe that the family above referred to have been wonderfully blessed, in answer to the prayer of faith. Troubles come on the "just and the unjust," and the just must pray to God about their life and ask God to dispose. Much of our living is a venture.

Martin Luther heard that Melancthon, his friend, was sick, and made haste to see him. Melancthon told Luther that he can't spare thee," and Luther then went said: "We need thee, Phillip, and we can' spare htee," and Luther at once went down in prayer for Melancthon, and the sick man recovered and went to work. It is good for our faith to think on such things. W. F. G.

—During six days in July, 1,026 horses died from over heat in New York City.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

I Kings, chapters 16 to the end.

NOTES.

—The Raleigh Times was recently sold.

—Ahseboro has a layman's convention Sept 28 and 29.

—The path of least resistance leads downward. Where will it ultimately land you?

—Mrs. J. C. Morris, of Haw River, is a patient at St. Leo's.

—A special meeting to begin in Burlington next Sunday is announced. Prof. Pender will lead in song.

—There is a rush of young people to schools and colleges. May they all work hard and get on well.

—Mr. J. Frank Coble and wife of Tabernacle are rejoicing over the advent of a son.

—Miss Xannie Stowe, professional nurse, has moved from Rex Hospital, Raleigh, to Moore County Hospital, Southern Pines.

—Please send no more Conference Minutes now. We have received two packages which will supply all demand, we think. We thank the brethren who have written offering copies.

—Prof. H. L. Feeman, of Adrian College, has accepted a professor's chair in Westminster Theological Seminary. He and Mrs. Feeman were pleasantly surprised by a large concourse of friends in Adrian one evening shortly before their departure.

—Mr. Ed. Hartsell and his wife, of Henderson, called in our office today. They had been on a visit to Rev. J. E. Hartsell, Mr. Hartsell's father, and stopped in Greensboro to visit Dr. W. K. Hartsell.

—Asheboro, N. C., on September 2nd unveiled a monument in front of the Court House in honor of the Confederate dead. The monument is made entirely of Mt. Airy granite and is capped by a bronze figure. The monument was erected through the efforts of the Daughters of the Confederacy of Randolph County.

—The Beattie trial ended in conviction and sentence to death. Now another tragedy comes on in our own State. Miss Myrtle Hawkins, of Hendersonville, was found dead in a lake a few days ago, and now it is reported that she was the victim of a crime, and there will be an effort to identify and punish the criminal, involving, probably, a great sensational trial.

—The Greensboro Telegram, after a career of years, involving a number of ups and downs, has passed out of existence, Mr. Fain, the late owner, having sold to the Greensboro Daily News.

—Curtis Allen, while driving an automobile, at Asheville, a few days ago, collided with an electric car and injured Mr. and Mrs. Sibley and little daughter, of Memphis, Tenn. For reckless driving he was given 15 months in jail.

—Wilmington put $100,000 worth of bonds on the market the past week and the best offer for them was 98 1-2 cents.

—Recent floods in China drowned 100,000 people and destroyed crops almost totally over a large area.

—President Perry, of the Michigan Conference, observes that union with the Methodist Episcopal Church is very unpopular in Michigan.

—Mr. Winburn Scott, who lived about six miles west of Pilot Mountain, N. C., was overcome by dead air while being drawn out of a well in which he was working and fell back into the well and was instantly killed.

—Dr. John Clifford, one of the best-known Baptist ministers of England, has for the twenty-ninth time been summoned before a British court for his refusal to pay the tax which goes to the support of denominational schools of the Church of England. Thus far he has not been given a prison sentence, but has suffered the seizure and sale of his household goods to satisfy the tax levy.

—Mr. Justice S. King, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. B. King, is sick. Dr. William H. Price, of Matthews, N. C., spent four hours with him giving him medical treatment; he is very sick. We ask the prayers of our ministers for him that God may rebuke his disease and heal him.

—H. J. Hohart of Kansas City, a Presbyterian Sunday-school teacher, has brought suit for $55,000 damages against the Missouri Pacific railroad because four railroad hands caught him and forced him with drawn revolvers to take a drink of whiskey.

—The Methodist Recorder states that President T. H. Thompson, of the South Illinois Conference, went recently to Cole's Chapel and prevented a deliberately planned steal of church property to another church. Stealing a church is like stealing a Bible. Certainly there should be honor among church members. Bishops and presiding elders cannot make stealing right, even though it is a church or a Bible that is stolen.

Little faithfulnesses are not only the preparation for great ones, but little faithfulnesses are in themselves the great ones. The essential fidelity of the heart is the same whether it be exercised in the pits or in the royal treasury; the genuine faithfulness of the life is equally beautiful whether it be displayed in governing an empire or in writing an exercise.—F. W. Farrar.

From Pastors and People.

EFLAND CHURCH.

Our revival meeting closed last Sunday night. The meeting was helpful to the church, and eight professed conversion. Bro. J. D. Williams preached the first Sunday and Bro. Lamar came on Monday and stayed until the close. This is the third year Bro. Lamar has assisted in revival work here and is loved by the people of this church and community.

Bro. Edwards of Mebane was present at several of the services and did good work. He has preached for the people during the absence of the pastor and is held in high esteem by them.

Bros. Cecil and Bryans were also present at the services on Thursday.

The people of this church have kept up the work during the absence of the pastor the past three months. They also have kept the salary paid up and have shown every possible kindness. It is pleasure to serve such a people. Homer Casto.

DENTON.

We held our third quarterly conference with the Denton church on Saturday before the first Sunday in September. It was the most spiritual conference that I was ever in. All the business was transacted in a warm spirit of love. Both churches were well represented. All the reports were good. It was found that Brother C. H. Surratt was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference, and Brother W. A. Loflin the alternate. We are getting along fine with our work.

Pleasant Grove has been repaired and painted and a nice steeple built to the front and a good bell placed in it, and it is all paid for. Our special meeting there was a great success. They tell me the church is in the best condition it has been in for many years. Old things have passed away and all things are become new. Bro. John Hulin was our pulpit help and did most of the preaching, and all the people enjoyed his preaching and it did them good. Bro. Hulin is a good earnest preacher, and he is doing a good work in our section. We thank him for his timely help. Our work at Denton is in good shape. We hope to have the new church inclosed in five or six weeks. The Sunday school and prayer meeting are doing good work. Our people there are alive. Bros. Reynolds and Hulin have been a great help to me in my work, for which I thank them. My people are all good to me; God bless them for their kindness to us. Bro. Reynolds has greatly improved the school building. It looks nice, and the school has opened up better than usual. If our people at large will fall in line and help to make our school what we can make it, we can soon have a school at Denton that will be as good as the best. And I feel like our people will help to make our school what it ought to be. Let us not forget our dear little orphans; they are looking to us for help. I am so glad our Sunday schools are beginning to do something for the orphans. The keepers of the Orphan's Home desire our prayers and help. And the church at Denton needs the help of the church at large to complete our church there so the orphans, the students, and all our people there may have a church to worship God in. Brethren at large, remember that your brethren at Denton have been burdened very heavily this year. And remember the Lord has commanded us to bear each other's burdens. Please remember us in a substantial way.

Yours in the work, D. A. Braswell.

BETHESDA, YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

The long-looked for season has come of which we should be very thankful.

Death has visited our community and taken away the little infant of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Leonard; it was buried at Bethesda last Monday eve, the burial services being conducted by our pastor, Bro. Powell.

Little Selma Wagner, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wagner, has been very sisk with typhoid fever, but is better now.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment at Bethesda yesterday, preaching from Gal. 2:20, and giving us a very good sermon. Our Sunday school is moving on very well; they attended the Sunday School Convention at Shiloh on Saturday the 26th of August, which was a grand success. About 10 o'clock the Sunday schools from different places on the circuit began gathering near the church until it looked as if everybody was coming. After all of the schools on the circuit got there except West Lexington school, we all drove up in front of the church and stopped. After Shiloh's singing a welcome song and the pastor's inviting us into the church, we began filing in until it was full and all of the extra chairs and benches brought in and then they did not all get in.

The exercises, consisting of recitations, solos, quartettes, and songs, lasted for something over an hour, after which the crowd gathered out in the grove around a table 180 feet long, filling it with many good things to eat until it was loaded down. After Bro. Garrett returned thanks they began to give the little folks and all until all were filled, after which the crowd reassembled in the church and the exercises continued, Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Lexington, making the address which, to say the least, was good. Being dismissed the different schools began to leave for their respective homes. All seemed to enjoy the day, talking about when we should have another S. S. rally. May the Lord use these blessings of man to his glory.

Chas. M. Yokley.

BETHANY, RANDLEMAN CIRCUIT.

Since the last report from this place, we have held our special meeting, which began the second Sunday in August, and closed the following Friday night. We had a good meting. The church was greatly revived. Rev. Mr. Plyler was our help. He preached with great power; we had good congregations throughout the meeting.

There were about 20 conversions; 12 joined the church.

We are now having prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Last Sunday at 11 o'clock our president, Mr. Swain, was with us and preached an excellent sermon. We are always glad to have Mr. Swain with us. Reporter.

PILOT CHURCH.

Our special meeting, which began the 4th Sunday at 11 A. M. closed the first Sunday with 13 conversions and 6 accessions to the church. The church was very much revived, and we surely had the best revival that has been in Pilot Church in several years.

In the first place, we had a fine, good preacher, Bro. Jesse E. Pritchard, of Westminster, Md., College. He is said to be one among the best preachers that ever entered the pulpit of Pilot Church. In fact, I think the church did more personal work than usual. I trust that all who professed but did not join Pilot will join some church, for I don't think there was ever a person born into the kingdom of God, but that there was some personal work for him to do, and I think it is almost impossible for any one to live a Christian life out of the church.

We are aiming to meet next Wednesday night for the purpose of starting up prayer meeting at our church twice a week, Wednesday night and Sunday night, at 7:30 P. M. Hope all will come out and help make this hour as interesting as possible.

I am glad to say that we greatly appreciated Bro. Pritchard's presence in our homes, and we regret very much to see him leave, but will ask him through The Herald to "come again" and not to forget the writer.

Yours in Christ,

Etta Whitaker, Rep.

Pinnacle, N. C., Sept. 11, 1911.

BESSEMER CITY.

Our church is in the best shape it has been in for the past six years. We have a good Sunday school; we had 73 present Sunday and $1.54 collection. Our school is increasing every Sunday and we want to make it even 100 by the end of the year. We have one of the best pastors in the conference; he is doing this church so much good. It is Rev. D. M. Loy. He has attended our prayer meetings and has filled his appointments promptly. Bro. Loy is a good man and tries to do his duty towards his churches and his members and he is liked by every one of them. The Sunday school had a picnic on the 9th of Sept. and everybody had a nice time. There were about 85 or 90 at dinner. We went to the Mouney Park near Kings Mountain and we had a nice dinner.

We are having a good singing school here taught by a Mr. Hicks, of Gastonia, N. C.

L. H. Tucker.

HENDERSON.

We are trying to prepare for a revival—are wishing hoping, praying, talking about it—wondering why we have failed so many times; that is, if we have failed. Perhaps we have been vived all the while and did not have to be revived. Hardly—certainly not in the sense in which it is usually understood. Every church in this town has tried to wake it and its inhabitants morally, spiritually, religiously, repeatedly. I shall not admit that they have not done well. All plainly see we may do better. We discussed the 18th chapter of Matthew last Wednesday night. The pastor was absent. Verse 19 made us pause. "Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." Certainly, as far as we are able to comprehend, many of us agree many times touching matters temporal, spiritual, but they do not come to pass. Bro. Editor, what does it mean? How shall we become able to agree? Can two transcend the law and course of nature? Can two or more prevent a sowing of sin producing a harvest such as nature has devised to grow from such?

We are expecting a great singer, Mr. Butler, to awaken our consciences and emotions. We wish all the ministers and churches to remember us in their prayers, that heaven may reveal itself to us and show us the way of life so that we will walk therein.

T. T. H.

(Bro. Hicks asks a difficult question. Some commentators think Christ's promise was limited to the apostles. Others think the promise general, but to be interpreted by other Scriptures. John says (1 John 5:14), "If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." We take it that the promise is general, but to be interpreted by "the rule of reason." If the people of a town should agree that they need a town clock and should ask God to construct one for them miraculously, we do not believe that God would answer their prayer. If they should ask God to guide them in the movement to procure a town-clock for themselves, we believe God would answer that prayer.—Editor.)

MORIAH, TABERNACLE CIRCUIT.

Our Sunday school is still on the upward trend. We are glad of this fact, as we feel that it is one of the most important branches of church work. The total number present was eighty-seven.

At the close of the lesson, a collection was taken for the Denton Orphanage, which amounted to $7.44.

Instead of hearing our pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, preach at 3:30 P. M., as we were anticipating, we were very pleasantly surprised to find that he had secured Mr. E. O. Pritchett, of Brown Summit, N. C., who preached to us, using as his text Psalms 4:4: "Commune with your own heart and be still." His sermon was enjoyed very much by all who heard him. We were glad to have him with us and hope he will come again.

At the close of the sermon, upon invitation by our pastor, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Clarida and Mr. Cleo Burgess came forward as candidates for membership in our church. Mr. and Mrs. Clarida were received by letter. We are very glad indeed to welcome them into our church. As Mr. Burgess desires to be baptized by immersion, he could not be received into full membership at this time but will at an early date. We are glad that he is going to unite with us also, and trust that the church will be a help to them and that they will be a help to the church.

Miss Flossie Hughes, who has been ill with malarial fever, worshipped with us again Sunday.

Mr. Robert Sharpe, who is confined to his bed with typhoid fever, is gradually improving.

Misses Theodocia Blackmon and Vivian Rogers, of Greensboro, N. C., worshipped with us Sunday. We were glad to have them with us and hope they will come again.

Reporter.

ROCKINGHAM.

Dear Brother Swain:—

Our third quarterly conference was held last Saturday night with the Pee Dee Church. Every church was well represented except St. John's. The conference was to have been held in St. John's Church, but owing to the small-pox near by there, it was thought best to move the conference to Pee Dee. McFarlan Church was well represented by a large delegation which arrived on Friday evening and remained over till Monday. Rev. J. L. Giles and wife from Winston-Salem were with us in the conference. Among the visitors from McFarlan were Mrs. S. A. Braswell, Miss Eunice Braswell, Miss Liddie Sing, Miss Pauline Brooks, Miss Artie Hurst, and Master C. E. Braswell. The Rockingham people were delighted to have these good people in their homes. By their visit to the conference and presence in our services Sunday, both at 11 and night, the services were more inspiring. Their reports from McFarlan Church show that our church there is growing. The business of the conference was transacted in a spirit of love, as usual. Rev. J. W. Willis, of the Baptist Church, was present and offered the opening prayer. After hearing the reports, Bros. Giles and Willis gave us very helpful speeches. Mrs. Giles having applied for a license to preach or exhort, the conference granted her request. The votes for delegate to Annual Conference were counted. Bros. W. S. Braswell and C. A. Thrower were the nominees, and Bro. W. S. Braswell, of McFarlan, N. C., was declared elected. Rev. J. L. Giles gave us a great sermon Sunday morning from the text, "He that winneth souls is wise." Miss Annie Collins, who is our organist at Pee Dee, has been very ill about two weeks, but is improving slowly. Miss Eunice Whitley and Miss Eunice Covington have been taking her place during her ill health. Their faithful service is much appreciated. Mrs. Robt. Webb, of this place, has been and is now very sick. Pray for them.

J. E. McSwain.

—A colored preacher, who had only a small share of this world's goods, and whose salary was not forthcoming on several occasions, became exasperated. At his morning service he spoke to his church members thus:

"Bredern and sistern, things is not as dey should be. You must not 'spects I can preach on u'th an' boa'd in Heben."

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

Bro. "Nat" Harmon, of Brinkleyville, has preached for us since I wrote last; his discourse was good. We shall love to hear him again.

Third quarterly conference was held in M. P. Church of Littleton some time ago. Work done harmoniously. Immediately after adjournment a number of ladies came in with box and baskets and good things to eat. All enjoyed their dinner thoroughly. Going to meet there next time. See what Brother Taylor gets by working surprises.

Mr. R. C. Riggins is elected delegate to Annual Conference. He means to go.

Our protracted meeting closed here last Thursday with six additions. The Lord alone was Bro. Taylor's pulpit help.. With such help can his sermons fail to have the desired effect? Daily as Christ spoke through him every sermon grew better. May the truths he preached be as a fire that will burn all error out that we too may get earnest in what we are about. "We can't start a fire that will do our hearts good if all we have produced is faith and damp wood."

Mr. Brown Neville, wife and daughter, and Mr. Belamy, of Eden Church, Halifax Circuit, attended our meeting a day or so.

Mrs. Bernice Carter is visiting her mother who lives near Norfolk.

Mr. J. E. Glasgow is spending some time at Moore's Springs for his health.

Miss Virgie Butts has returned to Halifax, her home, having spent some time with Miss Eva Glasgow.

After Sunday school last Sunday we gave out recitations for Children's service. Wish to have it 1st of October.

Fannie Barnes, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon.

This is special meeting month on Mt. Hermon Circuit. The first Sunday we began our meeting at Friendship. On Sunday we had an unusually large congregation. Bro. Cecil, pastor of Tabernacle Circuit, was my help at this point. He conducted every service and did some excellent preaching. The week of this meeting was an unusually busy week with the people, but they seemed ready to drop their work and attend the meeting. The result was thirteen conversions and fourteen accessions to the church. We feel thankful for this meeting and we are sure that the full fruits will be reaped in the future. It was an ingathering of the children. In this meeting we could not help thinking, how easy it is for the children to step into the kingdom of God, and how difficult for those who are grown up! Such a meeting as we have just closed at Friendship emphasises the importance of coming to God while young.

J. A. Burgess.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.

The Baraca class of Mt. Lebanon, Randleman, N. C., reorganized last Sunday with 13 members. The prospect for a larger class is bright. We ask prayers.

The following officers were elected:

Mr. Charlie Redding, President; Jesse Farlow, Vice-president; Add Hinshaw, Secretary; John Gaster, Treasurer; L. R. Hughs, Teacher; Press Reporters,—Basil Hughs, Walter Matthews.

Committees: Hustling Committee,—Jesse Farlow, Fred Johnson, Walter Matthews, Bob. Lineberry, John Gaster.

Social Committee,—Clarence Parsons; Walter Matthews, Guy Parsons.

Greensville Ct.

Since I write last, our special meeting has been held at Hobb's Chapel. Rev. Mr. Hunt was Mr. Ashburn's pulpit help. He did some excellent preaching. Although, at times, he did not seem able to preach, he said. "I would rather wear out than to rust out. for there are too many rusting out now." Our meeting wasn't as good as we had hoped for, but we all feel that we were greatly benefited by those uplifting sermons. Come again, Bro. Hunt!

Last first Sunday was our usual preaching day, but instead of preaching, we had the honor of having Mr. Wm. Powell, of Emporia,—Chairman of the Greensville County Sunday School Association—with us on that day. He gave a splendid address on S. S. We hope that our S. S. may have a larger enrollment than we have had in quite a number of years.

The special meeting begins at Philadelphia the third Sunday in this month. Pray that good will be accomplished during this meeting.

Dora Pair.

September 7, 1911.

Tabernacle Ct.

Our special meeting began at Moriah on the fourth Sabbath in August. Bro. W. C. Kennett preached a splendid sermon at 11 o'clock, A. M., and Bro. J. A. Burgess from Mt. Hermon Ct., preached at the afternoon hour, and it is known to all who have heard Bro. Burgess that he preaches good sermons, and he and Bro. Kennett did all the preaching until the close of the meeting on Thursday evening, and their good sermons were appreciated and enjoyed by those who were fortunate enough to hear them. On account of the continual rain our congregations were not as large as we expected; we had a good meeting; one conversion, three reclamations, two joined the church and others are to follow. We have had good revivals in all four of our churches, and I am certain the spiritual condition was improved; but there is still room for more development in this direction. On this field there are many good people, they are kind, nice and hospitable. The finance of the circuit is about as well up as it was at this time last year, and I am expecting to raise every cent of every claim and if I fail it will be a regret to me, for I am sure if all will do their part the entire assessment will be paid, and let each member who is behind see the stewards as soon as possible and settle the amount behind, so we can have encouraging reports at our last quarterly conference to be held on Saturday before the third Sunday in October at Tabernacle Church, and at this conference we want to see all of the officials from each church present, and ready to report as to the interest they represent.

I hope we will have a good Annual Conference. I, for one, am anxious to hear the pastors make their synopsis reports; which I believe will be interesting and helpful in several respects.

I believe the plan as adopted by our last Annual Conference for the work of the President is a step in the right direction, notwithstanding some think otherwise. However, if anyone has a better plan or method to offer, I am willing to join in and make it go to the extent of my influence and ability.

I was glad to have Brother Powell worship with us for two days in our meeting at Moriah, and I am truly thankful to all of the ministerial brethren who assisted me in my special meetings, also to Rev. J. F. McCulloch, who filled my appointment for me the first Sunday in September.

C. A. Cecil.

Granville.

All the churches on the charge have been visited since my return from Northfield, except Antioch. Good congregations at each place. Have received six into the church, three at Union Chapel and three at Mt. Carmel. It is encouraging to see the number still on the increase. This makes a total of 44 received on the charge this year. And there have been as near as I can get it about 107 professions. All except three received into the church have come on profession of faith. Finances are somewhat behind now. Due, I suppose, to the fact that some have been so busy with their crops that some even neglect the church and S. S. We are expecting everything to come up by the close of the Conference year, and that is not far distant now.

The people have been very kind through all our push and rush of work and have co-operated in making the work a success so far.

We have a lot of new song books for the Sunday School at Union Chapel now and are expecting that to increase the interest in that part of the work. This book was bought on recommendation of the pastor and all seem to be well pleased with it.

We have been kindly remembered with gifts to satisfy the appetite and please the taste by Bros. Henry Finch, Lonnie Woodlief, and J. H. Mundy; also Sisters Rogers, L. H. Stone, and R. H. Hight. We haven't been stormed like Bro. Stubbins, but we appreciate what has been done.

The Ladies' Aid Societies are doing good work now. The Society at Union Chapel has paid for a nice side board, dining and cook table and two dressers. The Rehobeth society has bought a nice set of chairs and will have some money left to pay for some other things of usefulness. A little time and we think this parsonage will be well furnished.

The last quarterly conference appointed a committee to have the well dug deeper and larger curbing put in so it can be cleaned out. This is a much needed improvement.

We are encouraged to see the people interested in the material improvement of the charge and can but feel that this is indicative of a deeper spiritual development.

Many of our people are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of Mr. and Mrs. Butler to sing in the Henderson meeting. We are praying for a great revival in our church there.

Sincerely,
N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, Sept. 11.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Ct.

Our special meeting began the second Sunday in August, and continued until the following Thursday night. It seemed that the people had no mind to work, therefore we ventured to run the old machine with belts off, so she did not hum very much. It is useless to mention the number of converts and additions to the church from the fact every reader can guess at the results of such a procedure. I mean on the part of the church. The fault was not in the preaching; it was first class. Bro. Curry worked earnestly and faithfully to show the unsaved their condition and the importance of looking after the soul's salvation. The people of the community learned to love Bro. Curry; his few days stay among us was much appreciated and his preaching highly esteemed by all who heard him. Bro. Lowdermilk's condition was such that he was unable to render but little service during the meeting, so Brother Curry had a hard row to weed. It seems to me if I was going to compare some of our fellows I should compare them to a half bushel sack stuffed with two pecks of selfishness and one of indifference. It swells and of course manages to burst just before the commencement of the special meeting; that means a clog in the machine. How we come hobbling along with the old machine, whack! whack, all out of order to reap a harvest of souls for the Lord. I wondar if any one was silly enough to take that kind of machine to the harvest field to reap his wheat with the past summer. I imagine not, and why should we use such a machine in the great harvest field of the Lord?

Our third quarterly conference convened at Oak Ridge on Saturday before the first Sunday in September. A sermon by President Swain at the eleven o'clock service; his sermon was real interesting and inspiring. All who failed to attend the meeting missed hearing a splendid sermon. Quarterly conference in the afternoon. Business transacted in a spirit of love. The next meeting will be held with the Kernersville church. I am glad to say that Bro. Lowdermilk's condition is better; he was able to preach two sermons for us yesterday, enjoyed very much by his congregation. I want to say to others that have not had their meeting yet to put the machine in order, so that when the time comes that may be successful in reaping souls and gathering them into the kingdom of God. I rejoice to read of so many converts. May the Lord bless them all.

J. H. Gordon.

Union Chapel.

Our S. S. attendance is very good now. New S. S. song books have been bought and are proving a great success in every way, giving joy and pleasure to all. Last fourth Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bethea sang some of the songs for us and we liked the "sample" so much we decided to get the books and can certainly join them in saying they are fine in the S. S. Our pastor and his wife take a very great interest in all the work of the churches on the circuit and are always ready to help all in any good work.

Three members joined our church at last fourth Sunday's service. Bro. Bethea preached to a large congregation that day. We were glad to have Misses Ora Cooke and Fannie Belle Allen, Mr. Charlie Kearney, of Franklinton and Mr. Paul Winston, of Youngsville, worship with us that day.

The ice cream supper given by the Ladies' Aid some time ago was quite a success. About twenty-six dollars was made and turned over to the treasurer of the society there. This has already been spent for furniture for the parsonage.

Mr. Ollie Finch left for Chapel Hill today where he will resume his studies at U. N. C.

Misses B. Edwards and Warren, of Danville, Va., are visiting Mr. S. Edwards.

Mrs. Sallie Wilson and two daughters, of Norfolk, Va., are spending some time at the home of Mr. D. H. Gill.

Mr. Myrtle Stone, of Henderson, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Stone.

Misses Lessie Finch and Lillian Huff and Messrs Norwood White and Melvin Edwards visited Flat Rock Sunday.

Reporter.

New Hope, Vance Ct.

Our beloved pastor, R. C. Stubbins, filled his regular appointment the first Sunday; he certainly preached a good sermon. We had a very good congregation. There were five to join the church; hope there will be others later. The Sunday school at New Hope is doing well, better than it has this year. We have a larger attendance and seems to be more interest taken; do hope it will continue to grow.

Am sorry to report that my uncle's little girl and boy are sick.

The quarterly conference will be held at New Hope Friday, September 22, at ten-thirty o'clock, A. M. Hope there will be as many present as possible.

Best wishes to all.

Esther S. Paschall, Rep.

Sep. 12, 1911.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Rev. Bethea filled his regular appointment at this place Sunday last. Having been absent the preceding one, surely we appreciated having him. Of course the sermon was exceptionally good as usual.

S. S. still alive; forty-two present last Sunday. Two of our members still visiting. Miss Maggie Finch is visiting about Dabney, N. C.

Miss Gladys Faris is visiting relatives at Emporia, Va.

The writer visited the Gillburg S. S. Sunday afternoon last. This school is in good condition.

We are hoping to enroll the hundredth one soon.

Polk Garrett.

Sept. 12, 1911.

Tabernacle, Forsyth Ct.

Since the last report from this place we have held our special meeting, which began the third Sunday in August and closed the following Friday night. We had a good meeting. The church was greatly revived. Bro. Williams was expecting Bro. Austin for pulpit help, but on account of sickness could not be with us. Bro. Brown was then secured for help. The meeting resulted in 8 conversions and 2 accessions to the church. We held a special prayer-meeting three evenings before preaching to pray for the unsaved.

A recess pulpit has been built at this place since the last report which adds a lot to the appearance of the church.

May the Lord give Bro. Williams and Bro. Brown the ability and power to do great work for him.

Blanche Spear.

FROM A LITTLE GIRL TO LITTLE GIRLS.

Star, N. C.,
Sept. 11, 1911.

Dear Editor:—

Will you please give me space in our Herald to write to the little girls?

I am a little girl seven years old and mama bought me two little Bantam chickens and I have been selling the eggs sending the money to the orphans. I let the little hen sit on big chicken eggs and she raised seven and I sold them for $2.00 and sent to the orphans. In all I have made for the orphans this year from one Bantam hen over $3.00.

Now I have let her sit on her own eggs and she has nine little Bantam chickens that I am going to give away to some little girls here that have promised to send to the orphans what they can make.

I wish all the little M. P. girls would get at least one hen and sell every egg and every chick she raises, and give the money to the little children that have no papas and mamas.

Won't some little girls join me in this, and report through our Herald now and then what they have done?

Our school starts to-morrow, the 12th, and also the corner stone of the College is to be laid at 1:30 o'clock.

The school opens with five teachers and will be in the old Academy, but we hope by this time next year we will be in the College building.

I must close, as I am afraid my letter is already too long. Will write more later.

Ruth Vuncannon.

Loved in Life, Remembered in Death.

On August 29, 1911, at her home near Gillburg, N. C., the spirit of Mrs. Elizabeth Coghill, aged 79 year and three days, was carried by the angels to her home far above the starry sky. Her husband preceded her about five years ago. She leaves five boys and three girls. We mourn not as those who have no hope, for she died a Christian, and is no doubt today at rest.

She gave her heart to God early in life. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends. Let us remember our loved one is now at rest and can't come back to us, but we can go to her if we live as God would have us. She was a good woman and was greatly beloved by all her neighbors and friends. Her remains were laid to rest near Gillburg, the burial service being conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, of the M. P. Church.

One who loved her.

PHILLIPS.

Mrs. P. L. Phillips died at her home on Laurel Ave. Sunday morning at one o'clock of typhoid fever. She had been sick about three weeks, but not thought to be seriously ill until Friday night, when she began to get worse and did not live but a few hours.

The remains were taken to Graham, N. C., Sunday P. M., and the funeral was held at Mt. Hermon Church, Monday at 11 o'clock, services being conducted by Revs. Millaway and Curry.

The deceased was 33 years of age and leaves two little children and a host of friends to mourn her death.

She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Hargis, of Burlington, R. F. D., and sister of Mrs. W. B. Cheek of Mebane, N. C., and Mr. B. H. Hargis.

Mrs. Philips was a lady of even temper and was always ready to lend a helping hand to those in need, and to speak a word of cheer to those in trouble.

She will not only be missed by her husband and children, but by all who knew her.

While she lived in Greensboro she had made many friends who will hold in fond remembrance the noble life she lived.

A Friend.

THE WISE MEN.

St. Luke says it seemed good to him having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write them, and it seems his vocation and opportunities enabled him to know more of the early life of Jesus and therefore he wrote more, and how glad we ought to be that he did. When St. Matthew wrote Herod sent them to Bethlehem, I suppose he did not know then that Jesus was taken from there to Jerusalem, and after the great temple service to Nazareth for he would have written something about it.

Can you tell me where I can find any more about the wise men except in St. Matthew?

I can't believe that Joseph was told to flee into Egypt during the days of her purification, and they could not have gone before the purification in the temple, for they stayed in Egypt about two years.

How could the wise men visit Him at Bethlehem after the purification in the temple when St. Luke says he was at Nazareth?

Yours for the truth,

T. L. Whitaker.

(Have you become a higher critic, Bro. Whitaker? I take it that Luke refers to the return to Nazareth after the stay in Egypt. Luke does not profess to tell all that occurred in the life of Jesus.—Ed.)

THE COUNTRY MINISTER.

I wonder is we estimate aright the noble self-sacrifice, the pluck and endurance of those Christian ministers who preach to scattered flocks in the country circuits. We know how great is the strain upon vitality made by the demands of a city parish. The pastor of a city church ministering to crowded congregations twice on Sabbaths, at the call of outside functions, visiting the sick, fulfilling obligations, furthering civic reform, and doing to the utmost of his capacity the work of the Lord, wears out and sometimes drops in the meridian of his powers. Yet the tasks laid upon him are not more excessive, nor his life more strenuous than than of the country minister who preaches, it may be, to from four to nine churches. Visiting the sick, burying the dead, responding to every call for help in a circuit of several miles, in all kinds of weather, must always be ready and on time or some one is ready to find fault with him.

Such a man may easily travel in the teeth of a blizzard sixty or seventy miles a week in winter in the performance of a single duty. He must be ready to give up all of his home desires. He is expected to have a family who cares but little if he is ever at home. In fact many seem to think when a man accepts a call to the circuit he has forever abandoned home. I have heard members who lived on a country charge say, I wish our pastor had no home, so he would have to stay with some of us all the time. Many times the requirements of the country charge are as unreasonable as they are unjust. Of all men on the earth who ought to love his home it is the minister. Yet many think or act as if they thought he has no love for home, and after he spends three fourths of his time away from home some complain because he does not visit more. You surely forget our Savior had his hour of separation, meditation, study and prayer. And the salary of the country minister, anywhere from 200 to 500 dollars a year, with the usual condition, let us hope, of a house and lot, and a bit of garden of some kind or other, but he must make out uncomplainingly. Forgetting that the successful minister could at other callings make from $800 to $1,000 a year. But he is called to preach, and preach he must, and be ready at each beck and call. And some of these parishioners who are hardest to satisfy making from $800 to $1,000 a year and paying anywhere from $1.00 to $3.50 a year. O! inconsistency. But the true country minister looking away from these discouraging things sees emerging from his charge men and women who have reached the front rank in scholarship and influence. The country manse sends out its sons and daughters early inured to self-denial and early accustomed to plain living and high thinking. They become explorers, professors, doctors, lawyers, editors, governors, ministers, and sometimes, merchant princes. A country pastor sees young men and women annually going to our cities and towns who carry away from the home, church and Sunday school, preparation to resist the tempter and his wiles, while in brains, physical health and courage they are fitted to forge ahead and become leaders. We can see with justifiable pride the success of those who have already started from our little villages to find employment and preferment in the places they had sought in town. The country minister, burning his steady light for Christ and humanity, is in the advance guard of those who shall make the future strong and splendid. He puts himself behind his work; he asks neither fame nor praise and gets but little pay in dollars and cents. His feeling is that it is enough for him to follow in the footsteps of his Lord, though the pathway may be rough and the feet may bleed. It is the way the Master went; shall not the servant tread it too? R.

REPENTANCE.

Is there not at least the appearance in this day of an unconsciousness of sin that requires repentance? Are not men and women asking, What have I done that makes it necessary for me to repent? I have been honest, truthful, and kind to my friends—what more can be asked of me?" The fact is, a man who feels that way is in the greatest need of repentance. He has wrong views about himself, and about his relation to duty and to God that are fatal to a safe condition under the gospel.

That was the attitude of the Pharisees. There was an outward propriety of life, with the forms of religion observed, but it was the pride of a formal morality, and not the spirit of godliness. Religion is far more than good behavior. A man who lives as if he were independent of God, and who ignores Him in his thoughts and conduct, has no true idea of what constitutes a sinner. A proud remorse does not forgive itself the forfeiture of its own dignity, but it is the very beauty of the penitence which is according to God that at last the sinner, realizing God's forgiving, does learn to forgive himself. What is meant by the publican's going to his house justified, but that he felt at peace with God and himself? The very words which in our Bible are rendered repent and repentance, the words by which the evangelists describe the preaching of the Baptist and of our Lord himself, mean far more than we in this day ascribe to them. It means a change of mind, a change of heart, a change of thought and of feeling. It applies to those solely who have bgun to lay aside their old thoughts about sin, and to look at it not as an unfortunate mistake, which may be remedied by a little reformation, but as a desperate infraction of the law of God, from the peril and the power of which there is no deliverance except by the regenerating interposition of Almighty God. So long as a man asks, "What great harm can there be in this or that thing?" when God has forbidden it, so long as he says, "I am sorry for what I do but I can't help it;" so long as he comforts himself with the delusive notion that he is no worse than other men—he may not be, but what comfort is that to him if he is bad enough to be lost?—so long is he only deceiving himself by false ideas of what constitutes the mercy of God; and by a gross misinterpretation of the promises of Christ. His promises are to those who are changed, so that they will gladly and loyally follow him. Repentance is a serious business. Repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the only entrance to the kingdom of God. A. M. Hamilton.

DR. WILEY ON THE ALCOHOL AND DRUG.

Mrs. Martha M. Allen, Marcellus, N. Y.

A short time ago, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Pure Food Commissioner at Washington, in speaking before a Congressional Committee on a bill to regulate the sale of narcotic drugs, said:

"In my opinion there would be no harm done to the Pharmacopoeia of the United States if alcohol were absolutely excluded from it."

In the same speech in which Dr. Wiley declared for prohibition, he said:

"But alcohol is only one kind of drug. There are plenty of other drugs that are undermining the health of the community. We area drug-habit nation. We take something for every little ailment. The indiscriminate sale and consumption of drugs every day does as much as bad food to undermine the health."

Such expressions from men like Dr. Wiley are what the department of Medical Temperance has been appealing to the medical profession to give forth, for it is certain that the health authorities must be lined up on the side of total abstinence before prohibition laws can be effectively enforced.

ASHEBORO LAYMEN'S CONVENTION

Some of the features of this convention will be as follows:

All the speaking, singing, and praying is to be done by men.

Good speakers address the convention at each session, some of whom can tell of their own experiences on the foreign field.

No registration fee will be charged.

No collection will be taken for any cause or purpose.

It is earnestly desired that the laymen of the county arrange to attend this convention in large numbers.

L. F. Ross,
Chm. Publicity Com.

NO SUNDAY TRAINS.

Asheboro, N. C., Sept. 6, 1911.

Dear Brother:

In a recent issue of your paper you mentioned a railroad in another state that did not run a train on Sunday. I am glad to tell you that we have a railroad in North Carolina, Randolph County, that does not run a train on Sunday. There is no train run on Page's road from Asheboro to Aberdeen, on Sunday, but I am sorry to say that the Southern runs one here on Sunday. W. J. Teague.

Afraid She Had Hook-worm.

"O John!" cried the farmer's wife, so Punch avers, "I'm afraid I've taken that dreadful new disease!"

"What makes you think so, dear?" he asked, alarmed, gathering the frail little woman into his arms and stroking the thinning hair as she sobbed out the story of her fears upon his broad shoulder.

"Well," she explained, "after I got up, dressed myself and children, cooked breakfast, washed the dishes, prepared the children for school, strained the new milk and set it away to cool, churned and worked the butter, swept and dusted, done the ironing, given the baby his bath, cooked dinner and washed the dishes, sewed all the afternoon, cooked supper and washed the dishes, undressed the children and put them to bed, and sat down for the evening, I am too tired to do any darning! I never used to feel so. It must be the hook-worm!"—Deaconess Advocate.

CAROLYN BRADSHAW'S HITCHING STRAP.

"I wish I could have a pony of my own!" This was not the first and only time that Carolyn Bradshaw ever put her great longing into words.

"Why not wish for the moon?" suggested her sister, Maud.

"No earthly use," was the prompt retort. "If I could have a pony, though, I would gallop away into the country as if I belonged to the wild west. And I'd do errands, too, for the whole family, and I'd take care of the pony myself and I'd let the rest of you ride horseback if you were kind to him, and—"

"While you are wishing, sis," interrupted big brother Robert, "why not wish for an airship for me? I'd take care of it myself and go skimming through the air as if I were a bird—and—"

"S'pose I might as well, agreed Carolyn. "I can get the pony about as easily as you can the airship."

"While we have the auto," Maud interposed, "why do you want a pony, Carolyn?"

"Because a pony is a different thing. Can you love our big touring car, Maud Bradshaw? Can you talk to it and put your arms around its neck, and—and can you feed it sugar?"

Every member of the assembled family laughed with the exception of Robert, who pretended to be too depressed for smiles.

"I am your only true sympathizer, sis," he remarked in gloomy tones. "That's just the way I feel about my airship."

"Want to feed it sugar?" inquired Maud.

During the laugh that followed, Carolyn escaped to the attic, where she sat half an hour beside the open window dreaming of her pony. Of course the pony was an impossibility. Carolyn knew something of family expenses. In September Robert would begin his second year in college. Norman would enter the following year. Maud Bradshaw's music was no small item. The family were proud of talented Maud. Carolyn understood that she and the little ones came in for their share of attention, so, everything considered, it was useless to ask for a pony. Nevertheless, two weeks later, Carolyn did request her father to buy a pony.

"Wait until you are through high school," Mr. Bradshaw suggested. "Perhaps then we may be able to manage it."

"That is such a long time, father," Carolyn objected.

"It will pass too quickly, little daughter. Maybe, though, by that time you won't care for a pony."

"Oh, yes, I will. Why, father, I have wished and wished for a pony ever since I was a little bit of a thing when I first saw pictures of King Arthur's knights! Oh, how I have wished—"

"Look here, sister," interrupted her father, "I know more of the meaning of a genuine wish than you do. I am going to ask you a few questions to test your wishing ability. How much will your pony cost?"

"Seventy-five dollars at the Shetland pony farm. I have often talked with Mr. George, the manager."

"Cash payment or the installment plan?"

"Cash." Carolyn's tones were sad.

"I suppose it wouldn't cost as much to feed your pony as it would a big horse?"

"Yes, father, I'm sorry to say, Mr. George tells me that Shetland ponies have enormous appetites. I did think though, if we could later on buy a harness and a little cart—you can get one for twenty-five dollars—that the children and I could take satchels to the train and do enough errands of that kind to earn the pony's feed. You know we have many traveling friends in our neighborhood, and fresh air and responsibility would be good for our children. I'd let the little ones help."

Mr. Bradshaw's eyes looked extremely happy, but he knew better than to laugh. "Carolyn," said he, "how much money have you?"

"Just enough, father, for a medium hitching strap."

"What do you mean?"

"I have fifty cents. Hitching straps down town cost from twenty-five cents to one dollar. I should think fifty cents would buy a medium-priced strap. I know how to tie them; I learned it from our butter woman's hired man. He used to be a cowboy. I learned with a piece of clothes line. It's just as good—only—"

"Only what?"

"I'm afraid you'll laugh and call it silly."

"No, I won't, Carolyn. What is it?"

"I'd like to go downtown this very day and buy that hitching strap. It would make the pony seem real. I'd love to own that hitching strap. I'd hang it over my mirror and it would help me hope."

"Come with me and we'll buy that strap," advised Carolyn's father. "To wish for anything reasonable, earnestly enough, is to possess it. I'm beginning to believe you'll have that pony before you are through high school. Anyway, to own the hitching strap is a step in the right direction."

Thus did Carolyn Bradshaw become the possessor of a hitching strap, to the amusement of the family.

The following day when the ice-cream cone man passed with his wagon, Mrs. Bradshaw gave her children each a nickel with which to buy a cone. Every child, little or big, flocked to the wagon except Carolyn.

"Come along, sis," called Robert.

"Got to save my money," was the reply. "This five cents will buy my Shetland pony's first eyelash. It would make me feel like a cannibal to eat up my own pony."

That evening when the family gathered around the library table, Carolyn knew by the actions of every grown person and child that a secret trembled in the air.

"Well, tell me quickly," she urged, "I know that there is something that I don't know, because you all look so—so kind of silly. Do tell me!"

"Charming sister," Robert began, "hurry up and sit down or how can I drop on one knee before your majesty? That's right, but stop your grinning and don't rock. It isn't dignified. Charming sister, we have all become interested in your pet, the Shetland pony. It distresses us to know that at the present time you have but one of his honorable eyelashes."

"Oh, I have his hitching strap," Carolyn interrupted with a gay laugh.

"Can one feed sugar to a hitching strap?" again inquired Maud.

"Hush, fair sister Maud," Robert commanded. "Accept, then most honorable but somewhat young Carolyn, what we are about to offer you, and accept also our fond hope that your Shetland pony may soon be joined ear to ear, eye to eye; also that his various legs, head and body, be speedily united and hitched to our front post by your hitching strap. I trust you understand all poetic references. Here, beloved sister, is my gift, a paltry three dollars; in other words, one hoof."

Norman straightway thrust an envelope into Carolyn's lap, marked, "Three dollars of my caddy money for the left front hoof."

Maud presented four dollars. "That's a whole foot," she declared.

The three little ones had emptied their bank of nickels, insisting that the pony now owned six more eyelashes. Father and mother each contributed five dollars, representing, according to Robert's calculations, two front legs.

"Twenty dollars, thirty-five cents and a hitching strap toward Carolyn's pony!" Maud announced after a troublesome time with paper and lead pencil.

"That's almost him!" exclaimed Carolyn. "We'll have to get two more legs and his head. I know how I can earn his ears—going after cottage cheese to the creamery for the neighbors and taking care of Aunt Elizabeth's baby club afternoons. Oh, now I know I'll get him! I'll pick strawberries at the fruit farm to earn his tail!"

"Don't get excited," cautioned father, "but if you wish hard enough for a pony, it means that you will work to get him, and hopeful work will accomplish wonders."

Carolyn was a trifle inclined to doubt the efficiency of hopeful work when, after three months constant endeavor, only five dollars was added to the pony fund.

Unknown to Carolyn, her father had forbidden assistance from the family during that length of time. He wished to know that his small daughter would persistently do all in her power to accomplish her purpose. When she had done this he permitted the aunt's, uncles and cousins to celebrate her birthday according to their own desire. Their united contributions on that joyous occasion amounted to thirty dollars.

Next day Carolyn visited the Shetland pony farm to choose her pony.

"Because, Mr. George," explained Miss Carolyn Bradshaw, "I have money enough now to pay for all of him except his body. Of course I'll get that!"

"Of course you will!" declared the manager of the pony farm.

One day more—only one day, and the pony was eating sugar in the Bradshaw's garage. "The owner presents his body!" Mr. George announced, "and begs Miss Carolyn to accept a pony cart that is still good, although it has been in use several years.

Straightway Mr. Bradshaw called at the pony farm to offer payment for what he considered due on the pony.

"Don't mention it!" exclaimed the owner. "I assure you this is an advertising scheme. My man says a girl like your daughter will make ponies so popular in this part of the country that we shall have orders from far and near. You wait and see!"

The prediction proved true. Carolyn Bradshaw not only shared her pony with her own family, but took all her friends and neighbors to ride, and was especially kind to old ladies. Shetland ponies became popular.

"Good thing the touring car is a machine," declared Robert, "because we all love Carolyn's pony so much it might be jealous. I never knew before that one small Shetland pony could do so much good. Remembering Carolyn's hitching strap I shall do things in college that I used to think were impossible."

"Queer thing about that hitching strap," observed Carolyn. "The pony doesn't need it. He stands still when I say 'whoa' and never has to be tied. "I needed the hitching strap, not the pony."

Many a college boy in days to come wondered why Robert Bradshaw kept a new hitching strap hanging with his neckties, until he graduated with honors.

Years after, many a girl wondered why Carolyn Bradshaw took that same hitching strap to college. How could they know that the bit of leather signed Hope.—The Continent.

Mercy cannot get in where mercy goes not out.—George Macdonald.

Her Probable Future.

"I am going to marry him to reform him."

"Try one experiment first."

"What experiment?"

"Take in a week's washing and see how you like it."—Courier-Journal.

Bob Burdette's Aside.

When "Bob" Burdette was addressing the graduating class of a large Eastern college for women, he began his remarks with the usual salutation. "Young ladies of '97!" Then, in a horrified aside he added, "That's an awful age for a girl!" —July Lippincott's.

New Use for Holes.

"What animal is satisfied with the least nourishment?" asked a natural history teacher.

"The moth," replied a student confidently. "It eats nothing but holes!"—Exchange.

Irishman—"I don't like mutton, and I'm glad I don't like it, for if I liked it, I'd eat it and I don't like the stuff."

"Papa," said four-year-old Grace one evening, "mamma whipped me today. I wish you hadn't married such a strict woman."—Chicago News.

Sunday school teacher: "I told you last Sunday that I wished each one of you would try to make at least one person happy during the week. Did you?"

Boy: "Yes, miss, I made grandma happy."

"That's noble. How did you do it?"

"I went to visit her, and she says she is always happy when she sees I've a good appetite."

"Nature knew what she was doing when she deprived fishes of a voice."

"How do you make that out?"

"What if a fish had to cackle over every egg it laid?"—Exchange.

"Papa, what is the silent majority?"

"Two men when there is a woman present, my son."—Boston Transcript.

—The Fleming philologists have introduced a new term into their language. In Flemish an automobile is a snelpaardeloozoondeerspoorwegpetroolrijtuig.

—The Presbyterian Standard tells of a preacher who bought a lot at Montreat, bought the material for a house and built it himself at a cost of $50.

—Robt. G. Fowler left San Francisco Cal., Sept 11, on a transcontinental flight to New York on a Wright biplane. He expects to reach N. Y. Oct. 10.

PROGRESS IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

It is twelve yeaers since our work was taken up in the upper peninsula of Michigan, and almost as far back since this work was set off as a district. In this time our church has conducted preaching services and sustained Sabbath schools with more or less regularity in 13 or 14 different places over an area 100 miles or more in length. Now we have scores of members and probationers where at that time we had none, and church property running up into several thousand dollars in value. People like our church when they become acquainted with our doctrine of mutual rights.—Church Recorder, Laurium, Michigan.

—One of the most faithful and also successful Sunday school workers that we have known states that is has been a rule with him all the way along never to go visiting on Sundays unless it should be a sick person, or someone he wished to induce to attend public worship; neither did he encourage any to call on him, but if they did, he treated them well and always invited them to go with him to school and church.—Church Recorder.

—Governor Kitchen appointed Mr. Howard Foushee, Durham, N. C., to be Superior Court Judge in the ninth District to succeed Judge Biggs resigned.

—President Taft's tour of the country, to begin shortly and continue till Nov. 1, covering a disance of 13,000 miles, is, the President says, purely an educational campaign.

—Evangelist R. G. Pearson and Dr. R. A. Torrey, both men of wonderful drawing power in the pulpit, are to teach the Bible the coming scholastic year, Dr. Pearson in Columbia Theological Seminary, Columbia, S. C., Dr. Torrey in a college out in California. These successful preachers should be powers for good in the class-room.

—Virginia Democrats voted by large majorities in a primary election Thursday, Sept. 7, that Senators Martin and Swanson be re-elected United States Senators at the next session of General Assembly.

—Germany and France are in a diplomatic dispute about affairs in Morocco, and the most pleasant relations between the two nations do not obtain at this time.

—Senator La Follette introduced a resolution providing for government ownership of Alaskan railways.

—The Raleigh Evening Times was sold last week for $25,000 in gold. A company of Raleigh capitalists are the purchasers.

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON, SEPT. 24—SUBJECT: A MISSIONARY JOURNEY AROUND THE WORLD—IX. AFRICAN MISSIONS.

By Charles A. Hines.

Daily Readings.

Sept. 18. Souls in desert places. Matt. 9: 35—38.
Sept. 19. A promise. Isa. 45:14.
Sept. 20. Light in the gloom. Isa. 9:2—4.
Sept. 21. Habitations of cruelty. Ps. 74: 20—22.
Sept. 22. God's freedmen. Rom. 6:16—23.
Sept. 23. Help to the uttermost. Heb. 7: 24—26.
Sun., Sept. 24. Topic.

The Cape-to-Cairo railroad stretching through Africa from north to south will be 6,400 miles long, the longest railroad in the world. It will cost about $1,000,000,000, and will be well worth that to the material and spiritual interests of Africa. It now extends up into the Congo Independent State and down to Khartum in British Egyptian Sudan, and therefore it is two-thirds completed.

At first the Zulus opposed the missionaries, and it was ten years before the first convert was won. Now, after seventy years of work, there are 5,374 native Christians, and 4,756 pupils in the mission schools.

Not all the dark people of Africa are negroes, but only about one-fifth along the west coast and the southern Sudan. The people in the south are Bantus. In the north they are Hamites and Semites, classed with white men. More than 10,000,000 in heathen, while more than 50,000,000 in the north are Mohammedans.

This is from a Zulu letter: "I am first writing to tell you that liquor is a great sin to natives. Now did you not notice in England that liquor was a sin when people got drunk? Why did you bring it here, then?"

In 1904—5 there were 18,181 children in the Protestant mission schools of Uganda, central Africa; in 1907—8 there were 35,116.

The French rule in Madagascar is doing all it can to destroy Protestant mission work, that was so gloriously successful under native rule. The Malagasy Y.M.C.A. has been suppressed. Three-fourths of the mission schools have been closed, though the government schools will accommodate only one-fourth of the children, and rank infidelity is taught in them.

The United Presbyterians have the field in Egypt almost to themselves. They have won 20,000 converts, and are powerfully affecting the Mohammedans also through their schools, hospitals, and the visitation of the harems.

Christian Endeavor flourishes in Africa wherever it has been introduced, especially in Egypt and in South Africa. In the south there are very strong unions holding enthusiastic conventions.

There are at work in Africa 104 Protestant missionary societies. There are 8 colleges, 59 theilogical training schools, and many other educational institutions.

What a dollar will do in Africa:

1. Pay native evangelist one week.
2. Buy gospels for two hundred.
3. Put boy in school for one month.
4. Support Bible school two weeks.
5. Keep an orphan for one month.
6. Furnish Testaments for twenty people.
7. Rent church for fourteen days.
8. Provide medicine for twenty people.
9. Furnish bed in hospital for two weeks.
10. Get literature for forty people.

Some Thoughts Worth While.

Jesus died for the whole world.

Jesus commanded that we give the gospel to the whole world.

God is giving wonderful success to missionary effort, and you should have a share in it.

Sympathy with your friends now on missionary ground should enlist your interest in what they are doing.

Your question should not be: Why should I go as a missionary? But why should I not go? Here is a command; why should you be excused from obeying it?

You are the descendants, not of Jews, but of heathen, and common gratitude should move you to pass on the Gospel; which is so great a blessing to you and yours.

You should give to misisons; not merely to incite others to give, but you yourself should give. It is not enough to give for the narrower field round about you; the whole world has a claim upon your gifts.

Discussion Topics.

1. What is Africa's greatest need?
2. Describe Livingstone's work in Africa.
3. Discuss the great work at Bolenge.
4. Tell of Alexander Mackay Uganga—Uganda's White Man of Work.

THE REAL ISSUES IN MAINE.

Let us sweep our glasses along our enemy's lines and our own, and see exactly the status of the Maine battle at this hour.

Those who seek the repeal of prohibition see clearly that they cannot win with those voters who wish to license rather than prohibit the saloon. That all the arguments for local option and statutory prohibition are tricks to capture gullible near-Prohibitionists, ought to be evident to every one.

Arguments for total abstinence should wait until after election, for the question of personal drinking, to which the enemy would like to turn aside the debate, is not involved. No prohibition ever yet attempted or even possibly by State law, under present Federal acts and decisions, can prevent any man who will take the trouble, from importing liquors for his own private use.

The purpose of prohibition, for which Maine is fighting, is to keep out of the ranks of legitimate business and, so far as possible, out of business altogether, those persons who make their living, day after day, by inducing other people to dring. By thus reducing the facilities to drink, by making it harder to buy it, and easier to abstain, we greatly reduce the evil, and if moral forces strongly co-operate—the schools, the pulpit, the press—as infantry and cavalry and sharpshooters should co-operate with artillery, we shall steadily reduce the drinking, and so make easier all the while the task of law enforcement.

Law is a sword, and if at times there are not brave, strong hands to wield it, still let us keep the sword and seek to develop the strength and the courage to use it more effectively.

The liquor traffic of the whole world desires the overthrow of the citadel of prohibition—the Maine Law. Why should any one who is really against that traffic, aid them by removing prohibition from the constitutional citadel to the less defended outer breastworks of the legislature?

The people of Maine have held for sixty years the steadfast opinion that the liquor traffic is not a legitimate business. If there are any ideas ripe enough to be kept in the State constitution surely this is one of them. One of the foremost statesmen that New England has ever produced, said recently: "The people of Maine will not repeal prohibition, for they will see it would be a confession to the whole world that for sixty years they have been fools."

If all in Maine who hate and would destroy the saloon, refuse to be divided about this time about secondary questions of how it shall be done, they will on September 11 meet the enemy's proposal to surrender constitutional prohibition with a triumphant No!"—Christian Herald.

—Rev. C. E. M. Raper wishes to warn people against publications sent out to teach the annihilation of the wicked. This tends to make the wicked more reckless. It is a more wholesome teaching that men will be rewarded according to the deeds done in the body, as the Bible teaches.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address
PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

POPULAR EXCURSION TO RICHMOND, VA., VIA SOUTHERN RY.
Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Southern Railway will operate annual September excursion from North Carolina territory to Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, September 12, 1911.

Special train consisting of first-class coaches and standard Pullman sleeping cars will leave Charlotte, N. C., at 3 P. M., Tuesday, September 12th, arriving Richmond, Va., 6:00 A. M., following morning.

Returning tickets will be good on any regular train leaving Richmond up to and including trains of Friday, September 15. Passengers from branch lines can use regular trains, connecting with special train at junction points. This will be the last excursion of the season to Richmond, and will be a first class trip in every respect. Three whole days and two nights in Richmond. Ample time to visit the many attractions in and around this magnificent city. Following low round trip rates will apply from points named:

Greensboro, N. C.	$3.65
Reidsville, N. C.,	3.35
High Point, N. C.	4.25
Kernersville, N. C.	4.00

Proportionately low round trip rates from other points. For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., see any Agent Southern Railway, or write,

R. H. DeBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

RUSSIAN CHURCH OPPOSES OTHERS.

The American Baptists have been making many converts in Russia of late, owing to the fact that baptism is provided for in the Russian Orthodox church and the transition from one church to another is therefore easy. The Baptists had hopes of carrying on a widespread crusade, but the holy synod or orthodox body which has charge of religious matters in the empire has put a veto on their plans by virtually placing the Baptists on the black-list as a "revolutionary" sect, having no religion at all. Plans for the founding of an international seminary in Moscow for training Baptist preachers have been emphatically rejected by the authorities. In Russia the church is intimately connected with the state, and it is difficult to preach any religion except the state reliogion without running counter to the laws and customs which underlie Russian society. The church officials know that if they once lose their hold on the people the whole system of church and state may be overturned together.—The Pathfinder.

ON BIBLE SUMMITS.

Mount Sinai is the great mountain of the Old Testament. It is the Mount of the Law, the awful mount of flame and thunder. But it no longer has terrors for the world, for now we know that Jesus was there.

The hill called Calvary is the great mountain of the New Testament. To be sure, it is hardly to be called a mountain, or even much of a hill; and yet it overtops Sinai and the Alps and the Himalayas. Its summit reaches beyond the clouds and touches the very throne of God.

Mount Hermon, the Mount of the Transfiguration, is the mount of the Old Testament and the New Testament together, for upon it Christ talked with Moses and Elijah, and the subject was Christ's death, foretold in all the Old Testament and gloriously accomplished in the New.

The Horns of Hattin, the scene, perhaps, of the Sermon on the Mount, is the Sinai of the New Testament, where the laws of the new Kingdom were promulgated. They were not diverse from the old laws of the same Kingdom, but carried a long step further.

The Mount of Olives is the mount of the ascension. Its message is to us. "Live no longer in the material but in the spiritual. Cease to think of Christ in a perishable body, and begin to live for His immortal body, the church."

Mount Carmel is the mount of testing. All of the Bible mountains, in a sense, are mountains of evidence, but Carmel particularly so. God is always proving Himself, upon His foes by fire, upon His friends by rain.

Mounts of Ebal and Gerizim are mountains of the covenant. It is well to speak our good resolutions in the presence of the mountains, that their staunch and abiding fidelity may serve as our examples. An Ebal and a Gerizim should be set up in every heart.

Mount Pisgah is the mount of hope. To be sure to Moses it was the mount of defeat, for the lands, he saw from the summit he was never to tread; but he was not living for himself, but for his people, and in their success he recognized his own.

Mount Hor is the mount of succession. There Aaron was stripped of his sacred vestments, and his son was made high priest in his stead; and there Aaron died. Every life must come to Mount Hor, and must provide, in some fashion, for its work to go on in other hands.—Daily Companion.

The Right Way.

"Nellie, what do you do when you feel cross and naughty?" asked a lady of a little girl five years old.

"Shut my lips and eyes tight, and think a little prayer to Jesus to come and make me feel right." Nellie knows the way. Let all the boys and girls try this plan. If every one followed this plan, there would be fewer unkind words spoken.—Selected.

—Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk went to Friendship last Friday to conduct the funeral services at the burial of Miss Viola Robertson, who died last Thursday of tuberculosis. She was a highly respected young lady and will be missed by her many friends.—Forsyth News.

NIAGARA FALLS FROM A NEW POINT OF VIEW.

It seems that a great deal of valuable energy is being wasted in hysteria over the supposed wanton destruction of Niagara Falls.

We hear great tales of woe, with heavy sob effects, fernint the time when this beautiful cataract shall become a dribble and the wild ragged gorge shall be but a dirty, grinding workshop where a coterie of millionaires are enabled to pile up further hoards of unearned increment, to the detriment of all "the people."

I hold that whole volumes of this kind of gush can be very easily dispensed with or turned into other channels, without any injury to the body politic.

It seems strange to me that in all this discussion, we hear nothing whatever of the good to come to humanity from allowing this immense falls to work out its board and lodging.

Here we have a force of a sum total of 5,000,000 horse-power not doing one thing but tumbling down stairs and showing off its shape (the latter being at present in bad order and getting worse). But a very small part of this immense power is put to work to benefit man, while under proper management, fully two-thirds of it could be made available and the falls still left a thing of beauty and a joy forever. The works now using the water seem to have their outfalls on a very high level. Were these at a lower level, far less water would do the same work. Then look at the way the falls itself is wasting good material; there is that ugly V-shaped crotch in the "horse-shoe," where the water is now about twenty feet deep. Some aesthetic asses become very emotional over this fault, referring to it as the "great green heart." It reminds me more of a stomach, greedy and insatiable and bidding fair to soon ruin the whole show by eating back into the rock and soon forming a narrow sluice. To this feature, more than the power houses, can be attributed the shallowness of water on the other parts. My remedy is this: let the State of New York and the Province of Ontario jointly build large sluiceways around the falls, their combined capacity great enough to accommodate all the water running over the falls. By diverting the water to them, the edge of the falls can be built up of concrete and trimmed off to a uniform level, so that one-third of the water would at all times keep the falls falling. If thought necessary, the coping could be made of vanadium steel, so as to insure against any wearing away of the bed and spoiling it. This would allow of an immense amount of energy to be available which would give employment to many people and furnish necessaries of life to thousands at cheaper prices than if made by using coal and that without smutting up the country with smoke. In addition it would bring a good revenue to the State from the renting of water supply, and it wouldn't be any more difficult than for the Panama Canal engineers to take care of the Chagres River, or the Dutch engineers to keep out the Atlantic Ocean, or for the Dublin police to keep the loyal Irish from setting Ireland free. A strong, husky man looks far better when engaged in honest toil, making the world better for his existence, than when he is standing around a street corner showing off his shape, and I say the same of a waterfall.—Senex Smith, in Scientific American.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The College Year of 1911 opens September 6, 1911. Numbers of students will be here for the opening. Will you? Every indication points to the best year in the history of the College.

The opportunities for culture and the advantages offered are of the highest type.

A strong faculty of university trained men and women stand ready to give the best of their lives for the benefit of the student body.

Have you seen and read the Bulletins issued by the College this summer? They will be of help to you in deciding what college to attend. Write for them.

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

A FLYLESS CITY.

From Texas the report comes that Hubbard City has banished the fly. That is the greatest triumph yet recorded. Hubbard is a small city, but large enough to have a mayor, and he believes that flies have no place in a properly regulated government. They have been warred against by the simple weapon of perfect cleanliness. The streets of Hubbard are swept twice a week. No manure, filth, garbage, or scraps are allowed to remain within the city where flies can reach them. With nothing to eat and no place to breed, the flies naturally die out, and the diseases which flies convey are not communicated and multiplied within the limits of Hubbard City, Texas.—Deaconess Advocate.

—Mrs. Victor Kirkman, of Winston, has been ill of typhoid fever for six weeks, in the hospital there.

—Winston has a remearkable man—one who pays his own wife for doing the family cooking. It is a good plan for others to try.

—Miss Annie Hunter, daughter of Bro. T. A. Hunter, has had typhoid fever, being kept in for six weeks. We are glad to hear that she is now so far recovered as to be able to sit up.

—Bro. O. W. Hanner, for six years jailor in Winston, is now in the real estate business, having formed a partnership with a gentleman bearing the promising name of Money. Bro. Hanner says he has succeeded at last in getting some Money about him. The Money-Hanner Co. is the name of the firm.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1911. NUMBER 44.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

SAINI AND CALVARY.

There are two mountains hallowed
By majesty sublime,
Which rear their crests uncouquered
Above the floods of Time.
Uncounted generations
Have gazed on them with awe,—
The mountain of the Gospel,
The mountain of the Law.

From Sinai's cloud of darkness
The vivid lightnings play;
They serve the God of vengeance,
The Lord who shall repay.
Each fault must bring its penance,
Each sin the avenging blade,
For God upholds in justice
The laws that He hath made.

But Calvary stands to ransom
The earth from utter loss,
In shade than light more glorius,
The shadow of the Cross.
To heal a sick world's trouble,
To soothe its woe and pain,
On Calvary's sacred summit
The Paschal Lamb was slain.

The boundless might of Heaven
Its law in mercy furled,
And once the bow of promise
O'erarched a drowning world.
The Law says, As you keep me
It shall be done to you;
But Calvary prays, Forgive them;
They know not what they do.

Almighty God! direct us
To keep Thy perfect Law!
O blessed Saviour, help us
Nearer to Thee to draw!
Let Sinai's thunders aid us
To guard our feet from sin;
AAnd Calvary's light inspire us
The love of God to win.

John Hay.

ANOTHER VIEW OF ATONEMENT.

Men persist in trying to explain the fact of Christ's death on the cross. They may never succeed, but they will keep on trying.

One of the latest attempts is that by Henry Sloan Coffin, minister in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church and Associate Professor in Homileties in Union Theological Seminary, New York City. "Social Aspects of the Cross" is the name of his book. It is published by the Geo. H. Doran Company. It is a little book of only four chapters, on "Sin," "Duty," "Man," "God."

Whether the reader agrees with the author or not, the book will be read with interest by the student of theology. And there is so much of comfort in the view taken by Mr. Coffin that one hopes to find that a correct interpretation of the Scriptures will sustain this veiw.

Christ's being "numbered with the transgressors" is reduced to terms of our own consciousness by being regarded as a result of Christ's possessing the "social conscience" which made him feel the shame and guilt of the sins of other men, though He was absolutely sinless. "He numbered Himself with the transgressors; and no one ever appreciated how heavy was the burden of their transgressions until the Son of God staggered under it."

Not only did Jesus identify Himself with sinners, but "God made Him to be sin for us, who know no sin." "God did not make Jesus a sinner, but that love which led Jesus to feel socially accountable for every injustice and oppression and falsity among the sons of men and take to Himself what they should have felt and could not for their dullness of conscience, that was the divine, was God in Jesus, for that love is what God is." "Christ by an eternal spirit offered Himself." "In His pouring out His soul unto death, He is not dispelling some new spirt, but the everlasting and eternal Spirit who is behind and in all history. The Father abiding in Him, felt this responsibility and was burdened with this guilt. Jesus and the Father were one in this. God feels implicated in every wrong in the family life of His children and shamed by the guilt we ought to feel, and usually do not, for our wrong,doing."

This view of God's feeling about sin will prepare us for the author's thought of God's sense of duty to men. "When God fathered us and brought us into being He obliged (obligated) Himself to love us, and to do for us all that love involves." "God's fatherhood puts Him in debt to us. He owes us love. Duty is the same for God and for man; love is for both the fulfilling of the law; and hereby know we love, because He laid down His life for us.' Calvary is the standard of duty, divine and human."

"We never understand the meaning of the cross for God unless we recall what is implied in John's description of His character: 'God is love.' Then Calvary becomes inevitable from all eternity. From the moment God gave another life, His parental responsibility required Him to devote Himself to that other's perfecting. If His child sinned, He must suffer with and for him, and He cannot cease loving him, nor doing for him all that love endlessly suggests. The Lamb was slain in the conscience of God from the foundation of the world. * * * Calvary is the typical event in time through which we look in on God's eternal self-devotion to His children."

"The Cross, then, is part of God's justice; that which He feels He owes us. We speak of the grace of God sometimes as though all that God did for us sinners were a sheer gift on His part. No doubt all that He is to us and does for us is a gift in the sense that we do nothing to deserve it nor to pay Him for it. But grace is obligatory on Him. Forgiveness is not a gratuity which He feels He may bestow or refuse. * * * Jesus did not consider His suffering and death an optional service which He was not bound to render to His brethren."

This is a bold view, and many will not be prepared to accept it. For proof, the author quotes, "The Son of man must suffer," Mark 8:31. But was the necessity an eternal one or one arising out of the gracious purpose to effect man's redemption? But the author asserts that the family claim we had on our Elder Brother imposed on Him the necessity of suffering for us when we sinned, and made it His "duty" to die for us. And we ought to feel a like obligation. "Hereby know we love, because He laid down His life for us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren."

From the fact of Christ's love and devotion to men, to men individually, the author argues the dignity of the individual man, the "brother for whom Christ died." If we would accustom ourselves to see in every man we meet one that Christ loves well enough to die for him, would it not make us gentle and loving to all?

In the final chapter on "God," Jesus is regarded as the true revealer of God. Men try to guess what God is from the world He has made, in Jesus they may see God's real character. "Ours is a Jesus-like God." "We are facing Christ crucified, and letting a voice tell us, "Be still and know that I am God." Through the cross we are peering into the very center of things—though this conscientious Brother, who owes and pays His kinsmen a life, to a conscientious Father, who acknowledged Himself indebted to His children and obliged to spare no thought or pains for them; through this Man of sorrows to a God who feels the shock and shame of His children's sin; though the writhing body and burdened spirit of this broken Life to the quivering and laden Heart who bears the world; through the victorious love of the Crucified drawing all men unto Himself to the good-will of Him who is First and Last, Author and Perfector of all."

CHRIST'S PROMISE TO ANSWER UNITED PRAYER.

"Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven."

The above Scripture is the words of our Saviour and requires more faith than the average man has to fully comprehend. Before faith comes humility, and here I believe is the trouble with all of us. What is humility? What did Christ teach it was? Webster's definition I believe is just what Christ taught, "Freedom from pride and arrogance." In this chapter from which the above was taken, we see a spirit of pride clamoring for position. Note Christ's answer: "Except ye turn ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." The greatest man or church is the most humble. Without humility there can be no faith. Without both we cannot hope or expect the above promise. Pride may be very near and dear to us; though as dear as an eye, we must pluck it out before we can claim this promise. I do not believe this promise limited to the Apostles, but to nations, to the church, to local churches, and individuals.

If we love one another, as he gave us commandment and do the things that are pleasing in his sight we can go to Him in boldness (yet with humility) and ask anything according to His will and he heareth us. In both ancient and modern history (including Bible history) we find that all nations, churches and individuals that have been the most humble and followed the great commandments (Love to God and man) have been those that God has given riches, honor and life. The reward of humility and the fear of the Lord is riches, honor, and life. "Before honor goeth humility."

Yes, I believe God's eye is upon every local church and any local church has a right to claim this promise and God will comply when, and not until, the conditions are met. I don't believe humanity has ever attained to that degree of greatness and goodness that God intended. Neither do I think there has ever been a time in the history of man when he did not need to be revived. The same is true of any local church. This is due alone to man's rebellious nature. A local church may and often does get a spirit of false pride that they are "vived" and need not to be revived, or they may get the big head, or rather the soft head by their seeming liberality, and the whole church and world may sing its praise far and near for its seeming liberality until the church actually thinks it is "vived."

(I fear my own church is guilty of this).

But others see that the church is not "vived" but needs a reviving spirit and why it does not come is no mystery.

We think we are agreed often when if we examine ourselves we find two great obstacles confronting us, Pride and Criticism. Especially is this true in town and city churches.

I am sorry to have to say to my own knowledge there is a class of people, and , I believe, the best people we have, who are dirven or kept from some churches by critics; they criticise dress, criticise the way "they stroll in the church," how they hold the song book, the ancient way of pronunciation, and if some good bro. or sister feels their souls revived it must be suppressed, or they are pronounced "cranks," of a fit subject for an asylum. I have heard these very expressions myself. We still have Pharisees among us, who cry "crazy," "crank," "Master, rebuke them," but Christ still says as He did upon entering Jerusalem, "I tell you that, if these shall hold their peace, the stones will cry out." Yes, I truly believe this promise is for any church that complies with the conditions found in these passages referred to in this verse, but as long as any church, family, or individual, persists in pride, criticism, social card parties, punch bowls, and such like, they need not wonder at the mystery of this promise.

E. C. Harris.

Sept. 25, 1911.

COMMON SENSE MAXIMS.

Never fail on any and every occasion to make use of your common sense.

Never sit at home on a lovely Sabbath day and refuse to go to church except for the best of reasons. If you reflect a moment you cannot fail to know that the Church of God is the greatest institution under the sun, and is the gateway to heaven, besides being your greatest earthly protection against the evils that are in the world.

Never fail to practice what you preach; "Don't be like the sign-board which stands and points the way but never goes."

Never rail at the world, but go in with all your heart and soul to make the world better because you have lived in it.

Never imagine that it is cowardly not to fight when some biped insults you. It is the brave man that controls himself and refuses to act the brute. Dogs are expected to fight, but you need not act the dog.

Never tell some ridiculous story about someone that is present and then say I was only joking; in nine cases out of ten a joke (so-called) is the subterfuge of a malicious fool.

Never say insulting things to any one, then laughingly declare that you only did it to tease him or her; you may by so doing make as bitter an enemy as you deserve.

Never fail to be kind and courteous to every one. If you expect to find a home in heaven with God and all the holy angels you will have to radiate from your own conduct and character something very near akin to heaven while you are in this vale of tears.

Never imagine that every thing has gone wrong; if you are doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with God, for He will never leave or forsake you.

Never speak evil of any one; remember that you must reap just what you sow.

Never forget that one of the most prominent evils in this sorrowful world is the tattling tongue; therefore let thy words be few.

Never forget that we are passing swiftly away and must soon stand in the presence of the King eternal, and give a strict account for all our conduct here and remember each day and how that , We are building, ever building, Building for Eternity,''

Never meddle with other people's affairs upon which you have no claim whatever. Read the third verse of the 20th chapter of Proverbs and be admonished thereby.

Never fail to watch for opportunities to do good and to bless humanity. It will leave you little time to do evil.

Never, oh, never, injure any human being by word or deed; you know not the woes that must be endured by most of us; then do not add a single pang to an already overburdened heart.

Never leave your church to join a more fashionable or pretentious one. We feel sorry for the man or woman who cannot climb into good society in any other way than by joining some big church and we have never yet known any one to succeed in boostig himself by any such unlawful methods. You are just what you are and you will surely find your level. Remember that by humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life.

Never fail to use commonsense.

An Old Lady.

THE WISE MEN.

I thought a higher critic was a learned college professor who thinks he knows more than the translators of the King James Bible, but am sorry to say I have but little education. Never read much, have a poor memory, and know very little, but I have commonsense enough to believe in all of the King James Bible and when St. Luke writes Philip and the aunuch went down into the water, I don't believe they went under the water and when Saul in the house of Judas in Damascus arose and was baptized I don't believe they went out and was immersed in the river, and when St Luke writes Joseph and Mary after the days of her purification were accomplished they brought Jesus to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord. And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord they returned into Galilee to their own city, Nazareth, so I don't believe they went from Bethlehem or Jerusalem to Egypt. Surely Joseph and Mary wanted to get back to their good home where they would not have to pay board; and they left Bethlehem as soon as they could. Nearly all we know about Jesus we get from St. Luke, also the Acts of the Apostles, and I suppose he has written all he knew of importance and I have proved by him that the Wise Men could not have visited Jesus at Bethlehem and our good Editor has given no proof that they did and would be glad if any other brother will prove it, and if they cannot, please don't preach and teach that they did go there.

Yours for the truth,

T. L. Whitaker.

Enfield, N. C.

THE RIGHT WORD AT THE RIGHT TIME.

''If I have been able to accomplish anything in my life,'' said a woman famous as one of the most kindly and lovable among leaders of the best American society, ''it is due to the word spoken to me in the right season, when I was a child, by my old teacher. I was the only homely, awkward one in a class of exceptionably beautiful girls; and, being also dull at my books, I became the derision of the school. I fell into a morose despairing state, gave up study, withdrew into myself, and grew daily more bitter and vindictive. One day the French teacher —a gray-haired old woman with keen eyes and a bright smile,—found me crying. 'Qu' as-tu, ma fille?' she asked. 'O madame, I am so ugly!' I sobbed out. She soothed me, but did not contradict me. Presently she took me to her room and said, 'I have a present for you,'— handing me a scaly, coarse lump covered with earth. ''It is round and brown as you. Ugly, did you say? Very well. We will call it by your name, then. It is you. Now, you shall plant it, and water it, and give it sun for a week or two.' I planted it, and watched it carefully; green leaves came out first, and, at length, a golden Japanese lily,—the first I had ever seen. Madame came to share my delight. 'Ah!' she said, significantly, 'who would believe so much beauty and fragrance were shut up in that ugly thing? But it took heart and grew into the sunlight!' It was the first time it ever occurred to me that, in spite of my ugly face, I too might be able to win friends and make myself beloved.''

—C. E. McCulloch, master of trains for thte Atlantic Coast Line in Wilmington, recently visited Randolph and Guilford relatives, in company with his wife and little girl.

REPORT OF TREASURER OF BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENTION.

Receipts.

Rev. J. H. Stowe, Why Not, ...$	5.00
Rev. H. L. Powell, (1910) Yad. Col.	52.81
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, Stanley ..	9.25
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, Stanley ..	65.00
Rev. D. A. Braswell, Denton, ...	5.75
A. M. Rankin, High Point, ...	75.00
Geo. B. Harris, Henderson, ...	185.00
Rev. W. D. Fogleman, Liberty, ..	22.00
Rev. G. L. Curry, Graham & H. R.	25.00
Rev. J. H. Bowman, Chatham ...	12.00
Rev. S. W. Taylor, Littleton, ...	11.55
W. K. Hartsell, Treas., Greensboro,	140.00
Rev. W. F. Kennett, Flat Rock, ..	15.00
Rev. W. M. Owen, East Winston,.	17.38
Rev. G. F. Millaway, Winston, ..	25.00
Rev. E. Suits, Thomasville	16.00
Rev. J. F. Dosier, Albemarle, ...	3.00
C. E. McCulloch, Personal, ...	10.00
Rev. T. E. Davis, Welch Mem'l ..	5.00
Rev. C. A. Cecil, Tabernacle, ...	25.00
Total .....$	724.74

Some of our Mission Pastors are in urgent need of the money promised for their support. I respectfully submit the case to the other pastors who know so well what this means.

J. Norman Wills, Treas.

THE PERIL OF NEW BLESSINGS.

Every new spiritual blessing from God is a fresh challenge to Satan. And Satan is never slow to accept such a challenge. The closer into the heart of God we are drawn, the more sensitive we find ourselves to the lack of God's presence in certain lives about us. Then we begin to be thankful that we are not as they are: spiritual Pharisaism sets in: and Satan has scored. But out of the failure God can wring a blessing for us, if we let it teach us this new peril of the more advanced Christian life. Our safety is to know that this temptation lies in wait for us, and to commit it to Christ before it strikes again, or even as it tries to strike. In every life we can see rare beauty if we let Christ look from our eyes. He who gives us the new blessings which invite new temptations can give us more than enough new grace for their dissolving.—Selected.

—One of the most appalling disasters, in time of peace, in naval history, occurred at Toulon, France, Sept. 25 when a fire in the magazines of one of France's largest and finest fighting ships, the Liberte, caused terrific explosions tearing the ship to pieces, damaging other ships in the harbor and killing between 350 and 500 sailors and others, more than half of the ship's crew of 750.

RUTS OR ROUTES—WHICH?

It is so easy to go in ruts that many careless drivers never go any other way.

Rut-drivers are the farmers who take all day and far into the night to go to a town five miles away; the doctors who laugh at hospitals and hookworm and pellagra, and employ in their practice the remedies suggested in the college lecture-rooms half a century ago; the preachers who present the faith once delivered to the saints with the outlook of the saints on life, without any reference to modern conditions, who draw their illustrations from books rather than from life, who look with suspicion upon, if they do not openly condemn, every new movement in the church; the Sunday school superintendents and teachers, the Christian Endeavor workers, the prayer meeting conductors, who have their backs to the future, their eyes riveted on the past,—veritable brakes, all of them, on the wheels of progress.

So prone are the thoughtless, imitative masses to get into ruts that they dislike the ocean with all its majesty and power, because in it there are no ruts.

Ruts always lead to the same place; routes do not. Ruts become second nature, automatic, require no exercise of thought or judgment; routes exact constant exercise of thought, discrimination, judicial ability, and lead to other than the usual results.

Ruts are easy; routes are hard. Therefore the conservative, non-progressive workers, the plodders, the muck-rakers, the wood-choppers, the water-drawers, in every line of activity fall into ruts; but the man who makes a route for himself, keep your eye on that man. He will make mistakes, but he will redeem himself and come out "on top" sooner or later. Give me the rout-loving, the rut-hating man. He will lead me to higher planes, to more charming heights.

Especially in the religious world is there need of route-loving rather than rut-following leaders. Deliver us from the monotony, the killing monotony that hangs like a biting frost over many of our religious services. We open our church services, our Sunday school services, our Christian Endeavor services, our prayer meetings, our conventions, our conferences in the usual way; every part of every service of them is in the usual way; the closing of them is in the usual way; may some power deliver us from the thraldom, the bondage of this usualness, this ruttiness.

Children do not like to go to preaching, because every service is like every other. Shall we change the children, or the order of service from time to time? They are restless during the often dreary opening and closing exercises of the Sunday school, because there is no variety there. Which can best be changed?

Why should the Sunday school forever open with a song, have two prayers, have the responsive reading from the quarterly always between the superintendent and school, etc., in unending and unbroken succession?

Why should a Christian Endeavor or other prayer meeting always begin with a song or two, have the Scripture invariably read by the leader, a few words of comment by him, a series of sentence-prayers, a song, a few Scripture references, another song, etc., without any variety?

Why should a conference or a convention always open with addresses of welcome by the mayor of the town and the pastor of the church, and a response by the presiding officer or some one designated by him?

For no reason except that it is usual, that it is easy to stay in the rut.

Christian workers, we plead with you for routes, not ruts, in religious work. Let's have variety, which, according to the adage, is "the spice of life," but which, rather, is life itself.

Ruts mean inadequacy, and lead to failure; routes mean adequacy, and yield a large fruitage of success.

Do you follow routes or ruts?

Which did Christ follow?—Prof. W. A. Harper, in The Christian Endeavor World (Boston).

THE BEQUEST OF PEACE—CHRIST'S GIFT TO TEMPTED AND SORROWFUL SOULS.

By Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D.

"My peace I give unto you." These words gain immensely deepened significance from the circumstances in which they were spoken. When we put them into the surroundings they shine like a radient gem with a foil of dark background. When the Lord spake these words He was not resting in the domestic love and quietness of the home at Bethany. The air was thick with rumors, and the betrayer had gone out, and was even now engaged in his treacherous mission. Even Peter's loyalty threatened to surrender to evil popular will. Crucifixion was not twenty-four hours away. Christ's enemies were at the very gate. It was in circumstances like these, turbulent and stormy, that our Lord quietly claimed to be in possession of deep and mysterious peace.

Not Mere Words.

"Peace I leave with you." The form of the speech is that of a customary salutation or farewell. "Whatsoever house ye enter let your peace be upon it." But our Lord's speech is widely different from the common convention. People had fallen into the habit of saying "Peace" as we have got into the habit of saying "Good morning" or "Good-by," and there was as little vital content in one as in the other. The salutation had lost its sanctity. It had become a formality of life. The customary speech was used just to break an awkward silence; the Lord's was used to renew and enrich the heart. The conventional speech was idly ceremonial; the Lord's was a gracious achievement. At the best, the popular speech was an expression of affability; the Lord's benediction was an invaluable bequest.

Right With God.

What is the nature of this peace? First of all it is rightness with God. When the Lord Jesus Christ brings His own peace into the hearts of men, they become inherently sound by becoming fundamentally at one with God. It is significant that the radical meaning of the original word is suggestive of union; two sundered thing are brought together again. And the gift of peace means a recovery of healthy fellowship between the soul and eternal God. The gift of peace does not imply perfection. There may be a general "rightness" or healthiness of the body is consistent with an occasional chill or superficial scratch or pain. There may be a temporary derangement while the heart is as sound as a bell.

Our Lord acknowledged this possibility in His own gracious teachings. Men may be essentially right with God who are not yet by any means perfect. Even a man who has been bathed "needeth to wash his feet." And so peace consists essentially in this innermost "rightness" with God. The general life tends toward the highest. Its primary ambitions are fixed upon the good pleasure of God.

Independent of Circumstances.

Our Lord has this peace. It was His through all His changing days. It was independent of seasons, and He had it "in the dark and cloudy day."

This peace can exist in the midst of apparent defeat. It does not require success to assure one of its presence. We can have God's peace and yet be apparent failures in the world. For look at our Saviour himself. Look at His position when the words were uttered. The antagonism of the multitude was approaching culmination. Despite His wealth of gracious deeds He was everywhere met with deep and fierce resentment. Even His own disciples pathetically misunderstood His mission. After a training of three years, when He had daily led them into the realm of the Spirit and into communion with the Master, they had just been quarreling one with another. "Who should be greatest."

One of the disciples was the victim of greed, and he deliberately sold his Lord for thirty pieces of silver. The rest of the disciples were becoming fearful, and the mood of desertion was upon them. Crucifixion was at hand. What an apparent failure! From the worldly point of view everything had gone wrong. And yet, in spite of everything, the Lord retained His condition of peace. And so it may be with the Lord's disciples. The applause of men may not gratify our ears. No worldly garland may be put upon our brow. We may climb unto no high place in the world's esteem. We may stumble along a painful way, we may be continually jostled and elbowed into the rear of the competing crowd, and yet we may have fundamental "rightness" with God and share with Jesus the condition of heavenly peace.

Persistent in the Midst of Sorrow.

If Jesus Christ had this peace, then its possession does not make us incapable of sorrow. No; it would be more true to say that this peace makes us more capable of sorrow, for to be right with God is to be sensitive to His joys and sorrows, and to share them. The Master who spake about "My peace," wept over Jerusalem, and His heart was torn by the contemplation of the sins of the city. He wept by the grave of Lazarus as He called to mind the accumulated common sorrows of the world. He wept over the vagrant, aimless multitude, for what is "compassion" but a most refined and delicate form of grief? He saw the crowd was wayward and vagrant, purposeless, moving here and there in constant danger, and He pitied the crowd with a pity that redeemed it.

Thus the Lord had an ifinite capacity for sorrow, and yet He was in possession of peace. It is even so with His disciples. The Apostle Paul used words which are seemingly incinsistent with one another, "What sorrow have I!" "What travail!" "How I agonize!" And yet he could also speak of "The peace of God which passeth understanding." He was fundamentally right with God, but the fountain of tears was not dried up.

Peaceful Though Tempted.

..And then it is evident that the possession of peace does not banish the possibility of temptation. Our Master, who claimed the possession of peace, was tempted on every side. He had the temptations that besiege the flesh and seek the unlawful gratification of appetite. He had the temptations which assail the mind and seek to entice it to mental presumption. He had the temptations which waylay the soul and seek to seduce it into illicit homage. And these temptations were repeated throughout His life. He was essentially at one with the Father, and yet temptations were never away from His door.

We are sometimes inclined to suspect the reality of our union with God by the number and prevalence of our snares. We are apt to regard our temptations as signs of our detachment from the Master. We may be at peace when temptations crowd the field. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." God's saints have in all generations sat at that table, and their souls have been filled with holy laughter in the confidence of their God.

This wonderful peace is the gift of the Lord Jesus. In Him we have the forgiveness of sin. In Him we obtain the mystic union with our God. In Him we find the secret strength of holy continuance. All are "His and His alone." This peace is not the prerequisite of some particular temperment. It is not the refined fruit of prolonged culture. It is a legacy; "Peace I leave with you." It is a gift: "My peace I give unto you." "He is our peace."

"Not as the World."

There are two ways in which this gift of peace differs from the gifts of the world. In the first place, it differs in the matter of the gift. When the world seeks to give peace it addresses itself to conditions; the Lord addresses himself to character. The world deals with things; the Lord deals with kinship. The world keeps in the material realm; Jesus Christ moves in the spiritual realm. The world offers to put us into a fine house; the Lord offers to make a fine tenant. The world will introduce us into "fine society;" Jesus will make us at home with God.

In the second place our Lord differs from the world in the manner of His giving. The world always gives its best at the beginning. It offers gaudy garlands, brimming cups, and glittering crowns. "But knowest thou not it shall be bitterness in the latter end?" It makes an imposing fire, but we are speedily left with the ashes. It leads us to a showy feast, but we soon encounter aches and pains. blinds us with the "garish day;" then comes chill twilight and uncompanionable night. "Not as the world giveth give I." He keeps His good wine until the last. He leads us from grace to grace, from faith to faith, from glory to glory. "Greater things than these shall we see." His gifts grow deeper, richer, fuller, right through the eternal years.

GOD LOVES YOU IN SPITE OF YOURSELF.

My great victory was won through father-love. I was scheduled to speak in Northampton, England, and an audience of fifteen thousand gathered to hear me, attracted more by curiosity than by religious interest. Northampton is most difficult ground from an evangelistic view. The atmosphere is infidel; it is a hotbed of atheism. My reception was anything but inspiring, but I had a mission there, and I was in to win. It took me forty minutes to cover the ground ordinarily gotten over in five. When I mentioned the name of Jesus, they shouted and raved like mad men. The committee of clergymen managing the revival urged me to give up. But no; here were men who needed the Word of the Master, so I started to sing a hymn, and my choir followed. After forty minutes there was a slight lull, and I stopped my song and shouted, "God loves you in spite of yourselves!" and that was my text. I singled out an old man in the front row, and said: "Are you a father, sir?" He said he was, and I asked him how many children he had. "A daughter and two sons," he answered. "I have also," I said. And here was a bond of sympathy. Are your sons good?" I asked; and the hung his head, and was silent. "Are they good?" I repeated; and he raised his head, and said, falteringly: "No; one is a drunkard and a thief, and has broken my heart." "You do not love your son?" I accused him. He looked straight into my eyes, and said, slowly: "Yes, in spite of it, I love him." "And God loves you in spite of yourself," I answered. Through a parent's love I snatched victory from defeat, and led a most enthusiastic revival in Northampton.—Gypsy Smith.

A NEW HOSPITAL.

Moore County Hospital opened to the public Aug. 20, 1911. It is a private institution for the treatment of general surgical and medical diseases.

Special privileges to citizens of Moore County.

No tubercular patients admitted. They are referred to the State institution at Montrose.

Mrs. Laura Marr, graduate of Rex Hospital, Raleigh, is Professional Supt.

Xanie Stowe.

—Miss Mabel Williams, manager of the Denton Orphanage, confesses to matrimony this week.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Second Kings, chapters 8-14.

From Pastors and People.

Chatham Circuit.

I will fill all my appointments beginning with the first Sunday in October. Will those seeing this tell others about it? Fraternally,

J. H. Bowman.

Mocksville Circuit.

President's Appointments:

Byerly's Chapel, Thursday, Oct. 12th, 7:30 P. M.; Union Chapel, Friday, Oct. 13, 11 A. M.; Bethel, Friday, Oct. 13, 7:30 P. M.; Dulins, Sat., Oct. 14, 11 A. M., and Sunday, Oct. 15, 10:30 A. M., Elbaville, Sunday, Oct. 15, 3:00 P. M.

The fourth quarterly conference is to be held at Dulins at the time of the president's visit. A full attendance of the official brethren is very much desired.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Mocksville, N. C.

Asheville.

C. E. McCulloch, wife and child, of Wilmington, N. C., recently visited Asheville and generously contributed five dollars to the building fund.

We also gratefully acknowledge one dollar from Bro. Hough, of High Point.

Bro. J. W. Pegram and bride worshiped with us the second Sunday.

Our young friends, Walter A. Havner, goes to Elon College this week to enter school.

Our Ladies' Aid conducted a booth at the park on labor day and cleared $65.00 —besides lots of fun and an all day good time.

J. W. Barrett is our delegate to Conference. W. A. Swain is alternate.

Rev. Homer Casto is much missed since he returned to his work at Efland.

J. E. Swain is quite well again. His mother, Mrs. Harriett Swain, is yet indisposed. J. S. W.

Mebane Ct.

Hebron: The special meeting at Hebron began last Sunday, Sept. 17th, and closed Thursday afternoon. Rev. A. H. Bryans preached Sunday and Rev. C. A. Cecil came on Monday and stayed until the close. And did some good preaching. It is the consensus of opinion that there has not been in quite a while such powerful and heart-reaching sermons preached at Hebron. We were so glad to have Bro. Cecil with us. We all learned to love him and hope he will come again. We were also glad to have with us Bro. Bryans, who conducted the singing and also gave us some good sermons. The church was greatly revived. There were some 25 or 26 conversions and 17 united with the church.

We all love our pastor, Mr. Edwards, and feel he is doing much good. On next preaching day the first Sunday in Oct. the Lord's Supper will be administered, also the baptism of infants will take place.

I close wishing the Herald and its many readers much success. Lelia McAdams.

Mt. Hermon.

Our special meeting at Mt. Hebron closed on last Thursday evening. Bro. E. G. Lowdermilk, my engaged help, was with me from first to last. He conducted every service. He did some of the most simple, pointed, and earnest preaching I ever heard. Bro. Lowdermilk is truly a biblical preacher. He seems to be as familiar with the Bible as a lawyer with his law books. To him the the Bible is the infalible Word of God. He also takes it for granted that it is the court of last resort to his hearers. Standing upon this he picks it up and hurls it at his hearers with great convicting force. Every statement is backed up by some plain portion of the Word. Our meeting here resulted in twelve conversions and ten accessions. The church seemed to be greatly revived. We feel thankful to our kind Father for his gracious work at this place. J. A. Burgess.

Hawkins Chapel.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment here the second Sunday in Sept. Bro. Taylor gave us one of his most powerful sermons. The large audience listened very attentively to his impressive words. Many said that it was his best s rmon since his pastorate here.

Our young men's prayer meeting seems to be showing good effects, I think. A good many of our young men are working in it.

We now have our nice new altar rail erected and it adds a handsome appearance to the church. I hope this will lead to paint, for the benches and carpets and other needed improvement for our church.

Our S. S. is in a flourishing condition considering the difficulties that August always brings. I hope we will attend more regularly now.

Bro. W. W. Hawkins, Jr., our efficient S. S. secretary, had the misfortune to injure his arm very badly in a fall from a wagon recently, but is improving rapidly, we are glad to know.

Mrs. Tempie Shearin, mother of the writer, is on a visit to her daughter near Rocky Mount.

Mrs. Donnie Morgan, from Berryville, Va., is on a visit to her people of this vicinity. Will remain some time, I learn.

Miss Lula Hale and Mr. Smith, of Heathsville, ran away and were married on Wednesday of this week, at Warrenton. We extend congratulations.

On Sept. 15 the Farmers' Union of Halifax County held a very enthusiastic county meeting at the school house near our church, and in honor of the occasion there was served a magnificent dinner, consisting of eight shoats, barbecued, one whole beef, about fifty gallons of brunswick stew, ever so much of fried chicken, and cake of every flavor imaginable; bread of all kinds from the most delightful light-bread, to the famous old standby, "corn pone."

Dinner was announced at one o'clock and immediately a large assembly of gentlemen, ladies, boys, girls, and children of all ages inclusive, were arranged in an orderly way to partake to their satisfaction of this bountiful feast. It is needless to say that every one enjoyed this opportunity, none more so than the inexorable small boys, of whom there were a large number. There were estimated to be 300 people present. The committee in charge did honor to themselves by their untiring efforts to please this assembly.

An honored member of the Farmer's Institute was scheduled to deliver an address appropriate for the occasion, but for reasons not known to the writer, he could not be present. The day was saved, however, when the trustees kindly consented to open the doors of our church and invited Rev. Mr. Mustain, a Baptist minister who was present, to preach in the afternoon.; and so while we were disappointed in not hearing the lecture intended, we very gladly listened to the gracious words of Life, as it is in Christ Jesus, as told us by this man of God. We felt his sermon was eminently fitting with the events of the day.

Withal, the program was admirably conducted and the occasion thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Judging by this, and other similar occasions, and their work generally, we think that the Farmer's Union people are capable of, and are, doing a wonderfully great good for the people of the United States.

Faithfully yours,

Vannah Shearin, Rep.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Ct.

Our special meeting began here the second Sunday in Sept., and closed the following Thursday night. Had a glorious meeting. There were 19 conversions and 4 accessions to the church. Our pastor, Bro. Joel Trogdon, did all the preaching o n Sunday and Monday; as usual, gave us some of his most excellent, interesting, and soul-stirring sermons. On Monday evening, Bro. Edward Suits, of Thomasville, came to assist Bro. Trogdon during the meeting and he did all the preaching from then on. He gave us some plain soul-stirring gospel sermons which were greatly appreciated by all and I am sure all who heard him were benefited by his excellent sermons. We were exceedingly d lighted to have Bro. Suits with us again as we all remember he was formerly our Pastor and served us three years. May the blessings of God ever rest upon this man of God and his family and may he win many precious souls for Jesus here below, and best of all, Heaven at last. Also, we were very glad indeed to have our pastor and family with us during the meeting and their pleasant faces in our homes. Mrs. Trogdon was so much help in the good work and was grand indeed to hear those bright little children with their sweet voices sing the beautiful songs of Zion. Was sorry for Mrs. Trogdon and children to leave Wednesday morning, but they had to go away on account of their protracted meeting at Giles Chapel the third Sunday.

Mr. A. M. Fentress, of Pleasant Garden, N. C., instructor in vocal music, played and sang for us all during the meeting. He was of great help and we feel assured one and all appreciated and felt benefited by his being there.

The church seemed greatly revived and it was most beautiful to behold so many praising our dear Saviour at the same time. We feel more determined to stand for Christ than ever before, and we trust there has been much good accomplished for Christ at dear old Piney Grove this year. Had good attendance all during the week. The Sunday School is doing very nicely with Mr. B. W. Nance as Superintendent. Pray for us that we may do our whole duty and get the reward at last. When things look dark and dreary for us, may we ever look to that world where life is eternal, which our blessed Saviour has prepared so freely for us all, and though dark clouds sometimes intervene, the glorious sun of Righteousness can soon disperse them all. If we will only cling to the Rock of Ages.

"Grandma" Morgan who is 90 years old has been right sick; did not get to attend a single service. We missed her presence so much, but we feel assured her prayers were with us. She is improving, we are glad to say. We ask the Herald readers to pray that she may be restored to health again. Also Mrs. Pallie Delk has been very sick, and could not attend service any. We wish her a speedy recovery. Also pray that she may be restored to health.

Our pastor will fill his regular appointment the third Sunday in October. Mr. Trogdon is highly esteemed by his people and we hope the Conference will send him back to us next year.

With best wishes to the Editor, the Herald, and its many readers, I close.

Erma H. Morgan.

Jackson's creek, N. Car.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct.

Our special meeting was held beginning the second Sunday in September and proceeding until Wednesday. The writer did not attend the service any in day time, but attended at night. The pulpit help was Mr. Luck, of Greensboro; the preaching was excellent.

The preachers worked faithfully and also the church; but the meeting closed without any conversions, although we are still hoping that the influence of the meeting is not closed; and that we shall see the result good in the future.

The church seems in hope and not discouraged. It is still putting forth efforts. We have started a prayer-meeting on Sunday nights. Every body seems interested, and we hope to make a success.

Our Sunday school is still lively, and thriving. Every scholar does his or her duty most of the time; that is, they are there.

I. W. Cashatt.

Caroleen.

Bro. H. W. Braswell has just closed an eleven days' meeting here and I have never been in such a meeting in my life. Men and women got down and cried out to God, and were saved. When the meeting closed we had fifty-five converted and reclaimed. Eighteen joined the church and some others will join soon. After the meeting had been going on for a week good old Sister Jordan came and stayed three days. She is a power in the hands of God. We were glad to have her in our homes and church. Bro. Silver who has been living at Morganton has come to Forest City and gone into business. He attends our Sunday school and was here at preaching Sunday. Coming six miles to Sunday school! We are glad to have him with us.

Our Sunday school is getting along well. It has been averaging about 100 for over a month. I think it will continue to grow. We were so sorry to give up from our S. S. Miss Bryte and Knox Bess. They have gone to Davenport College. Miss Bryte will complete there this year.

Our Sunday school and church is in the best condition it has been in since I have known it. We are ahead with the pastor's salary and have all the claims paid and subscribed by people who will pay. So we will go ahead of anything this church has ever done this year. Bro. Braswell has done faithful work on this charge this year and we think he and the work at Shelby and Lincolnton deserve the attention of the boards.

This work will be able to support him next year. The Conference ought to be proud of the work done in Shelby and Lincolnton.

I close with best wishes to our Conference and churches.

H. E. Waldrop.

Denton.

To those interested in our Orphans' Home I wish to assure that my resignation will not retard the work in the least. Miss Auman, who has been with me all the while, now has charge and a better, more consecrated Christian could not be found.

I feel that she is far more capable than I and that the work will prosper under her supervision. I beg of you that you will co-operate with her as she cannot make the work a success alone. She needs your prayers, sympathy and financial support.

While I am out of the work I assure you my heart is still in it and I hope to be of great help.

Yours,

Mrs. Mabel Wms. Russell.

Denton, N. C.

Randleman.

The Philathea class of Mt. Lebanon, Randleman, N. C., reorganized last Sunday with 14 members. The prospects for a large class are bright. We trust that much good may be accomplished.

The following officers were elected: Miss Mary Parsons, President; Ruby Hughes, Vice President; Florence Lamb, Secretary; Kate Parsons, assisaant; Ollie Wood, Treas.; Sallie Robbins, Teacher; Jessie Caudle, assistant; Press reporters: May Parsons, Jessie Caudle.

Committees: Hustling Committee, Zula Fogleman, Hattie Hinshaw, Lillian Lovett, Marjorie Fogleman.

Social Committee: Fannie Fogleman, Ettie Lamb, Beulah Lineberry, Note Anderson.

Winston Station.

Our third quarterly meeting was held on Sept. 19th, 1911. The usual business was transacted. Finances not so encouraging as we would like to see, but not so discouraging as they might be. Hope to wind up well. J. R. Cummings is delegate to next Annual Conference, Bro. W. A. Speer, Alternate. We held an opening service in the East Winston Church last Sunday at 3 o'clock. There was present a good congregation. Short talks by Bros. W. J. Ellis, J. W. Brinkley, B. F. Norman, W. A. Speer, O. W. Hanner and P. W. Mock. These brethren all made appropriate remarks. There seemed to be in the congregation a holy solemnity. God was in the midst of the people. It was a good meeting. Tears of joy were shed. Praise the Lord. Amen.

Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., preached for us on the night of Sept. 20th, 1911. We were glad to have him. I have never said Bro. Swain could not preach, and if I had said it, I would be compelled to recant now. I have not heard a sermon that surpassed it in a long time, if I have at all.

G. F. Millaway.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Ca.

The special meeting began the third Sunday and closed Thursday. Our pastor, being absent, sent his father, Bro. E. A. Plyler. He finding the field ready to harvest thrust in the sickle and gathered in many precious souls. The sickle being sharp he made almost a clean sweep, except two old heads that were nearly dead; they jumped over the fingers.

Bro. Plyler's father did all the preaching and did it well, and the word was with power. The church members laid aside every thing at home and came to the rescue of souls, and the Lord poured out such a blessing upon them that they could not contain. Sinners were made to cry aloud for mercy and fifteen found Christ in the pardon and forgiveness of their sins and two backsliders were reclaimed and ten joined the church. More will follow. Our pastor came Monday and remained until the close of the meeting. May God bless and restore sister Plyler to health, is my prayer.

E. S. Jones.

Flat Rock.

Our pastor on last second Sunday discoursed on the twenty third psalm, beginning "The Lord is my Shepherd."

Aptly illustrating through David the life of a shepherd and David's knowledge of it, that God through him had destroyed the ferocious beasts and the giant, certainly he should not want, and his rod and staff should comfort him. That if he allowed God to direct him he believed God would use him in the place where he could be of greatest service. And so long as he could work, work would be given, and when unable would care for him to the end. That a faith short of this would be a reproach to God. May dear Mr. and Mrs. Kennett, these frugal servants of God, find it so.

In this intense age, shocked by wickedness, so rampant, our faith sometimes fails.

Flat Rock extends congratulations to the sweet-spirited Miss Mabel Williams and husband. After having tried life's storms alone, may happiness illumine her pathway and God's peace abide in her heart. We have often thought surely the prayers of the saintly mother would avail in material things for these orphan daughters.

Masters (as we once put them) Tom Ogburn, a machinist, of Richmond, and Herbert, of Baltimore, have been retracing the paths of their childhood among these haunts. And like hungry bears made raid on their Aunt Laura's larder, this writer escaping. We know not what girl figured in this campaign. Pardoning the vernacular, Won't the latter make a handsome pill driver. Success to these noble boys.

Rev. T. J. Ogburn and family, in a circuitous route, through forests, over Guilford's thoroughfares, drove up to visit his young aged sister, Mrs. C. A. Brittain, on Saturday afternoon.

The relatives have heard only the whirrings of the sails of that aeronaut, Rev. J. S. Williams, in his flight near the vicinity of his homeland.

Our neighbor, that splendid young man, Mr. Wright Pegram, brought a sweet young bride of Chatham home. We've seen her. It's up to you, Flat Rock, to know her, too.

Miss Mattie Ogburn, of Monroe, that noble specimen of womanhood, renewed not only her youth, but that of her chum, and delighted her host of relatives by a ten days' visit here.

Success to the Herald whose constant upbuilding is apparent to all.

Reporter.

Sept. 25th.

Philadelphia, Greensville Ct.

I feel that ought to thank the Lord for the meeting which we had last week. It was a glorious one. We were very much discouraged at the number of conversions after having with us young Bro. S. W. Taylor for help and also other good help. We feel proud of saying Bro. Taylor and others did their part towards saving others. But thank the Lord for those who did come out on the Lord's side. Oh! I am so glad that I can report that Bro. Walton, who has never been a member of the church before, gave his heart to the Lord during this meeting. I think he had reached the age of about forty years. I thank the Lord he did escape before it was too late. Now may the Lord keep him and watch over him that he may never turn back to the world. And may the Lord keep those others who found him in the right path for ever and bring in those who seem to say, I'll wait awhile, and turn away. Oh! will thou bring them in before it is too late? is my prayer.

Now dear readers, we are going to reorganize our S. S. next Sunday morning and we want all who can and will to come out and take a part with us, so that we can say that we are having the best S. S. we have ever had; and will those that can't join us in prayer that those who can will do their part, and I know if all try we are going to have a grand S. S. Our next quarterly conference will be held at Ebenezer Saturday before the second Sunday in next month.

I will close with best wishes to the Herald readers,

Yours for Christ,
Beatrice Chambliss, Reporter.

Forsyth Circuit.

Our special meeting began at Stony Knoll first Sunday in September. Closed on Monday night week with good results: 25 conversions, and 19 accessions. Rev. W. C. Norman, of the M. E. Church, for pulpit help; he did good preaching which was enjoyed by all. We also received 23 in the church at Baltimore.

Our special meeting will begin at Oak Grove the second Sunday in October, with Rev. W. D. Fogleman, for pulpit help. Pleasant Hill the 3rd Sunday in October, with Rev. J. D. Williams for pulpit help. Pray for our success.

Yours in the work,

T. A. Williams.

Concord.

At Fair View church on September 17, three were received into the church. The attendance was unusually large.

Our services at Concord are well attended.

Our special meeting will be begun on the 8th of October. Bro. Suits will help us. Pray for our meeting! Pastor.

Dear Herald:

Since our last report we held our meeting at Fairview church. Rev. J. H. Danner was our help at this point. A good meeting, general revival in church. Nine members added to church. Our people are awaking and it looks now as if our new church at Fairview was a sure thing. We have some good saints here, faithful to the church. We feel that better things await them in the near future.

Fourth Sunday in August our meeting began at Liberty Hill. Bro. McSwain pulpit help. I got to him Monday night; found him in battle. He preached the Word and made many friends. Our people were delighted with him. Meeting closed following Sunday night. Bro. McSwain going away on Friday. The meeting was a success. A good number saved and reclaimed, two joined the church. Had good meeting, large congregations, good attention to the Word and a revival in Church. The people are exceedingly kind to us always loading our buggy with good things when away from home. The good people at Cross Anchor never forget us at home. Mrs. L. H. Wilson is continually pounding us with good things to eat. May the Lord bless them, they seem to know how to get the best out of their preacher. Some works have this to learn.

Yours faithfully,
W. A. Lamar.

Burlington.

Present at S. S. last Sunday, 203.

Our special meeting which began the third Sunday closed on last Monday evening. It was a great meeting. We had good preaching, good singing, good congregations, and a genuine revival. There were seventeen professions and reclamations. Nine have thus far united with the church, viz., J. D. Williams, Jr., J. L. Thomas, Frank Sykes, and Misses Allene and Verona Amick, Mamie Minnis, Ira Freeman, Mittie Jeffries and Lula Foster. Others are expected to join. Bro. Pender who had charge of the music was a great help in the meeting, and he had the loyal support of the choir, which was very faithful during the entire meeting.

The pastor expects to be away next Sunday to begin a meeting at Union Grove, his home church. The pulpit will be filled by Rev. C. J. Edwards, pastor of Mebane charge.

It has been announced that Burlington's first street cars will be in operation Sat. The line extends from here to Haw River and is about eight miles long. It passes every church in town except two or three.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Sept. 27.

Midway, Haw River Ct.

We held communion services last Sunday. We were glad to see so many partake of this sacred ordinance.

Bro. Raper preached a helpful sermon from Titus 2:12. We only have one more appointment before Conference. How swiftly time passes!

The fourth quarterly conference will meet at this place Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October.

Our Sunday school moves along slowly. The attendance is not what we would like to see, nor what we think it should be. There were fifty-three present last Sunday.

We are preparing to re-cover our church and have a new carpet.

Pray that our church and Sunday may take on new life and that we all may do more for the Master's cause. We think we have one of the best pastors to be found, and if we all will co-operate with him. I feel sure that much more good would be done. Remember us in your prayers.

Reporter.

Albemarle.

The second Sunday in September we began our protracted meeting at Rehoboth, with Rev. D. A. Fishel as help, who did all the preaching, and did it well. All were well pleased with Bro. Fishel. The church was encouraged, strengthened—helped, by Bro. Fishel's sermons. But we had no conversions nor additions. Neadly all who attended were church members. The weather was not favorable. One day and night wholly rained out. The rainy weather, and the unprecedentedly early cotton crop made the congregations small. One day, however, we had Methodist "close communion." "How was that?" you say. All present were M. P.s', and all partook of the sacred emblems.

Monday night after the third Sunday in September we began at Mt. Elma, and continued up to Thursday night. Four presented themselves at the altar the first service. We had eleven professions and seven accessions. We had no help in this meeting. This church has put on new life recently. A weekly prayer-meeting has been running for some time; a Sunday school o f 42. This speaks well for this place, considering all the conditions. This is real missionary ground, as much so in some respects as in the regoins beyond. Born under the darkening, deadeding, dwarfing influence of "Hard-shellism" for generations. They believe in the Bible, enjoy hearing the Word, but assimilate the truth slowly. Time and patience are needed to save them from their delusions. There is work here for Methodism—missionary work. It is not a matter of denominational upbuilding, but a matter of salvation—souls to be saved, or lost. Not a matter of financial investment from a commercial view-point—will it pay now, in dollars and cents—but a matter of "laying up treasure in heaven." A matter of carrying out the command "to preach the gospel to every creature." In places we are building churches and preaching to people who would hear the gospel if we did not preach it; but here it is a matter of preaching the gospel, or leaving them without the gospel practically. We believe there is an obligation on us here that we cannot shake off.

At our last appointment at Edenton, one member received and baptized.

J. F. Dosier.

A LAUDABLE LEAFLET.

The leaflet sent out by the Board of Sunday Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church entitled "The Organized Adult Bible Class: A New Religious Force," is worthy of more than one reading. There are many germs in it—not pernicious germs, but health-making germs. Some of them we transcribe:

"The weakness of much present-day religion is that it is Scriptureless."

"Once the Christian was the man of one book. Now, in private and family life, he is likely to be a man of many newspapers and magazines but of no book!"

"When earnest men unite definiteness of plan with enthusiastic effort, the end aimed at is achieved."

"There can be no genuine Christian evangelism without Bible study."

"Vital Bible study is sure to fruit in personal religious effort for others."

"Men or women who have insight, understanding and teaching ability are absolutely required, to teach the Bible as a book for instruction."

The leaflet from which these truths are culled is in the interest of the Adult Bible Class. One of its statements seems too good to be believed, but it certainly is possible:

"A man won to the class (that is, the Adult Bibile Class) means in almost every case a man won to Christ."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

—Sin boasts itself and is otherwise puffed up and boisterous. Virtue is modest, and content to shine. "The disciple that has the purest character is the one that boasts of it the least."

—The North Carolina Agricultural Society will hold its fifty-first annual Fair at Raleigh, Oct. 17-20, 1911. Mr. Jos. E. Pague, Secretary, has issued a neat booklet giving facts, data, etc., worth seeing which are for free distribution on request. We are pleased to see that by a vote of the Executive Committee all questionable shows and doubtful games have been forbidden the giounds. The Fair improves in attendance and in the quality of its exhibits and this year promises no exception in that regard.

JACOB GARRETT.

(Note—The writing of this has been delayed to get the fullest facts available).

The subject of this sketch was born in Alamance County (then part of Orange) December 14, 1816. In 1846 he became a citizen of Chatham County, and in 1908 he moved to Liberty in Randolph County, from which latter place he went to his reward June 28, 1911 Ninety-four and one-half years is a long time to live in the world. He was probably the oldest person in the county or in any adjoining County. But he not only lived long, he lived well; and if it is true that "he liveth longest who liveth best," his was an exceedingly long life.

His Religious Life.

He professed faith in Christ in 1832 and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Mt. Hermon a little later while the denomination was yet young. When he moved to Chatham he transferred his membership to Flint Ridge Church, and later placed it at Rock Creek where his body was laid to rest with the other members of his family, except his second wife, who survives him. He kept the faith to the end.

In 1842 he became secretary of the quarterly conference at Salem church, Orange County. From that time on his name appears frequently in the quarterly conference record in various official capacities. The last session the record shows him to have attended was at Flint Ridge, July 22, 1905, at which time the secretary notes that "he delivered a very earnest exhortation to the brethren."

I am told that he frequently represented his circuit in the Annual Con; that he was representative to the General Conference, possibly several times It would be interesting to trace his record here if the records were at hand, for he maintained a deep interest in the doings of the church and in her history, often speaking to others of important historic facts. He grew up with the denomination and his interest never wavered.

As an Exhorter.

His name first appears as a licensed exhorter in 1849. However the minutes of the Third and Fourth quarterly conferences of the preceeding year, at which time he was probably licensed, were not recorded. In recent years he requested that the Conference renew his license each year if he was deemed worthy. This was done as long as he lived.

My first recollections of "Uncle Jacob Garrett" as we younger people were wont to call him are in connection with his work in the camp and protracted meetings. He perhaps attended as many special meetings each year as did then or does now the average pastor. The younger people of the present can hardly appreciate the power such a layman was in a revival. His prayers and exhortations carried with them a power that must be felt to be appreciated. I do not depreciate the work of the ministry when I say that my recollections of the religious impressions made on me in the meetings of those days by "Uncle Jacob Garrett" and "Uncle John McPherson," another exhorter of power who passed away several years ago, are more vivid than those made by the men who did the preaching with a few exceptions. I simply cannot think of the meetings of those days and impressions they made without thinking of these two men. And I might add that the thought is very pleasant and exceedly profitable.

Concerning Bro. Garrett I now quote from a letter to me from one who being older than I knew him longer: "He loved his church and sacrificed his time and money for what he thought was right. He gave much time to camp meetings, as he was a fine singer, being vocal music teacher for years. He was found in prayer, song, and exhortation. Many were brought to Christ through his influence. His appeals to sinners were plain, simple, powerful, and convicting. His pictures of Christ on the Cross as their Savior and the awfulness of their souls being lost if they rejected him were of the most touching kind. Often his eyes would overflow with tears while many in the audience would cry aloud. His tone was tender, pathetic, and sympathetic. Truly it may be said, a great one is dead."

As a Man.

As a man he was much above the average in judgment and general intelligence. I shall ever be grateful for a timely suggestion to me on one occasion which proved very helpful. He was one of the few laymen who owned and studied extensively a comprehensive Bible commentary. His character was positive and strong. His convictions were decided. You would find him on the moral side of questions, actively so. He was an increasing advocate of the cause of temperance, being a charter member of the noted Pleasant Hill Temperance Society, known, I think, as "The Sons of Temperance." His faithfulness was unfailing. Some of my later recollections of him in recent years are of his riding in company with his faithful wife to the weekday church service a few miles from his home, though nearing then ninety years of age, of necessity somewhat feeble, and nearly blind. His disposition was non-complaining. His two sons were killed in the battle of Gettysburgh. His only grown daughter died in young womanhood. His bosom companion died when he needed sympathy and companionship. In his extreme old age he was almost totally blind. Yet through all this he was uncomplaining, but happy and cheerful. He blessed the world and added no little to its moral wealth and beauty. Such characters are rare, and are valuable as they are rare.

To the widow who is lonely and to the relatives who feel a great loss I would suggest that there is much for which to rejoice, in that he lived so long, and so well, and still lives so much in the lives of others, and in the fact that those who knew him and loved him here shall yet know and love him in the beyond.

T M. Johnson.

Asheboro, N. C.

MOTHER DIED TO-NIGHT.

"Your mother died to-night,"—that's all
it said;
But, somehow, in that simple line I read
The last sad words of love and sympathy,
The last heart blessing that she gave to me,
The admonitions all that went amiss.
And what God ne'er can give,—her farewell kiss;
The fadeless picture as she knelt to pray
That she might meet me up above,—some day.

"Your mother died to-night" is all it said,
As on the throbbing wire the tidings sped
From that old, happy home, from which
I came,
To strive anew for honor and for fame,
To moil with will to win a golden store
To lay in solemn suppliance at her door;
But shattered are the hopes, unnerved
the might,
By that sad message, "Mother died to-night."

O stars that glide through heaven's unfathomed sea,
May I not meet her in Alcyone?
Oh, let me know, as oft in childhood's
harms,
That peace found only nestling in her arms!
Gone the gray hair, the eyes that wept in vain,
Gone the sad smile I ne'er shall see again,
Gone the true heart, the soft, love-laden breast,
Gone the one mother to her last long rest.

—Robert Mackay.

—Rev. H. L. Powell is advertising a six-room house and 14 acres of land for sale in the town of Liberty, Randolph County, one mile from the depot.

THE NEAR AND FAR EFFECT.

A visitor to Amsterdam, wishing to hear the wonderful music of the chimes of St. Nicholas, went up into the tower of the church to hear them. There he found a man with wooden gloves on his hands pounding a keyboard. All he could hear was the clanging of the keys when struck by the wooden gloves, and the harsh, deafening noise of the bells over his head. He wondered why people talked of the marvelous chimes of St. Nicholas. To his ear there was no music in them; nothing but terrible clatter and clanging. Yet all the while there floated out over beyond the city the most entrancing music. Men in the fields paused in their work to listen, and were made glad. People in their homes and travelers on the highways were thriled by the marvelous bell tones which fell from the tower. There are many lives which to those who dwell close beside them seem to make no music; they pour out their strength in hard toil; they are shut up in narrow spheres; they dwell amid the noise and clatter of common task work; they think themselves that they are not of any use, that no blessing goes out from their lives; they never dream that sweet music is made anywhere in the world by their noisy hammering. But out over the world, where the influence goes from their work and character, human lives are blest and weary ones hear with gladness sweet, comforting music. Even away off in heaven, where angels are listening to earth's melodies, these entrancing strains are heard.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

A HAINAN FIELD THE LORD HATH BLESSED.

Tai-fong ("Western fullness") may not mean much to some who hear of it, but to us of Nodoa Station many visions cluster round this name. We remember the discomforts of those filthy inns which we shared with chickens, pigs and cows, as, years ago, we made the trip to and from the coast by the old road. There is the memory of a long climb up, up, till the top ridge of the hills is reached, and before one is spread the beautiful valley with streams, gorges, and stretches of flooded rice fields reflecting the encircling hills and clouds and blue sky. Almost in the center of this valley is the round hill, so filled with lodestone that a compass here points to it alone. At its foot nestles squalid Tai-fong.

These later years have presented new visions of Tai-fong as a hallowed region where God's spirit is working. A young man from there came to Nodoa school and became a Christian. On his return home, he received the reviling of his whole family and neighborhood. When his older brother died, all charged his death to the anger of the ancestors because of the desertion of one descendant from the old way. Through it all, the young student held fast to his faith and used every opportunity to reach his young men friends. And not in vain. Gradually Tai-fong has been changing. Where formerly hatred, gambling and vice were a matter of course, there has grown up a community which teaches people to walk uprightly, to live decently, to fulfill Christ's words, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

Many of these new-born souls have come into their inheritance of life and faith through deep waters. One is Diemow. His brothers and neighbors, armed with sticks and stones, beat on the doors of his house for hours, ordering him to come out and renounce God, be chastised by the clan and then go and renew his allegiance to the ancestors and village idol. But he sits in an inner room reading the Bible and praying for strength, till his wife, who had been bitterly opposed to Christianity, wept and believed. She said no power but God could have kept her husband from killing some of his revilers, for he had been a man of a very violent temper. Not daring to break down his doors the crowd dispersed, and Die-mow never retaliated in heathen Chinese fashion. So the whole village became interested and friendly, others learned to understand this change and they too believed, and now they serve the true God.

Recently a young man, ten miles from Tai-fong, became interested in Christianity and became a Christian. About this time, to the great consternation of the uncle and cousins, the family idol insisted upon standing upon its head. While it apparently assumed this position at will, it cost the family a pretty penny to get it back into proper form and the priest said the Christian was the cause of it all. The priest also warned them that the spirits of their ancestors would flee if this rebellious descendant were not forced to return to the old worship. The Christian takes all their persecution and reviling, with no diminution in loyalty to the true God. His wedding with a Christian service, the first in that region, is a triumph of faith.

Some years ago, a man near Tai-fong was left by the death of a relative with a roomful of idols which took all his income to serve and care for. Becoming weary of this burden, the man sought out a priest of sufficient courage and avarice to remove these idols to a shed in a vacant lot. All arrangements were made as to price, date and immunity from wrath of the Gods. On the day before the lucky day selected, the priest went to the young man's home to be ready for his job at cock-crow: but at dawn, the priest was found dead and a great fear fell on all. The owner took up again the burden of his legacy of idols and struggled on until, one day, he met a Christian who explained to him the way of salvation. He bought books, studied them, and finally believed in God. Before his baptism, the man invited some of his neighbors to his house, and, after a prayer and hymn, he carried his idols, ancestral tablet, and incense bowls, to an open place and burned them all. Then he came to Nodoa and made public confession of faith in Jesus Christ.

So Christ has looked with compassion on Tai-fong region, with its fear and hopelessness, and He is giving those who seek Him light and joy.—Margaret Rae Melrose, in Woman's Work.

IS IGNORANCE A CRIME?

In recalling the names of the truly great men of the past, one is impresed by the fact that they often suffered greatly because of the lack of understanding and the unwillingness of the people to think with them. Washington and his army suffered cold, hunger and humiliation at Valley Forge because the colonies would not unite to help them. Later in his public career and during the war Washington, the unselfish patriot,—"The Father of His Country," was criticised and attacked continually by ignorant and selfish men. This great man was weakened and brought to an early grave by the torture and cruel attacks of the ignorant and ungrateful.

Lincoln freed the South from slavery, and united the country again in a free industrial republic. He was the champion of liberty, a man great in soul and human kindness. His reward was assassination by a narrow unthinking ignoble partisan.

Columbus died in chains after his great work had been accomplished for the world. Galileo, inventor of the telescope, had a hard fight to keep his enemies from placing him in the insane asylum. Morse, the inventor of the telegraph, was called a fool by enlightened Americans. And even the Wright Brothers had to go to Paris to obtain recognition and help. It is a strange thing that all of these men worked as servants of the people, for the people at the risk of dying in the poor house or asylum. They did not become Vanderbilts or Goulds. They were simply servants of humanity.

The test of greatness is unselfish service to one's fellow men.—Donald Baker.

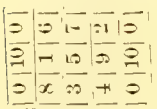
—After weeks it seems settled that Me. went against prohibition by a majority of 20. We would like to know how many good cash dollars those 20 votes cost the liquor dealers.

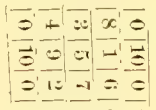
A GOOD OUTDOOR OR INDOOR GAME.

* * *

The game of "deck billiards" or "shuffleboard" which is so popular on vessels at sea, can easily be adapted for home use. The apparatus is so simple that anyone can make it at no expense at all. It is a fine game for winter or summer, combining as it does many excellent points. It is good exercise, but not too violent and it is a game in which "luck" and skill are satisfactorily blended.

The outfit includes eight disks or circular pieces of wood about five or six inches in diameter. They should be rather heavy, as they will not "carry" properly if too light, and they can be sawed out of any common inch lumber. They should be carefully smoothed and sandpapered, and it is well to paint half of them one color and half another, or otherwise mark them so that those belonging to each side can be told apart. The "cues" or shooters are merely small pieces of board with an old broom handle fixed into them at a suitable angle. Two cues will answer, but it is better to have four, in case of four players.





For a court to play on, a cement walk is just the thing, or a smooth porch will do; or when you are playing indoors any room which is of good length can be used. There is no strict rule about the length of the court. At each end of it you lay out with chalk a rectangular goal with figures in the squares as shown. Some players mark one of the 10's "10 plus" and the other "10 minus" for variety. Either two or four can play the game. If there are two, they shoot first from one end and then from the other; if there are four, they can play on "sides," and one player of each "side" stands at each end of the court, as in playing quoits. The object is of course to shoot the disks so that they will stop on the high figures. First one player shoots one disk, and then the other shoots one, and they continue alternately until they have each shot four disks. If your opponent has a disk on a figure it is your object to try to knock him off and do it in such a way that your disk will stop where it will count. The side that makes the highest count of course wins. About 300 makes a good "game."—The Pathfinder.

A Story on Giving.

A wealthy young man, studying in Switzerland, accompanied a professor on an evening walk. Seeing a farmer at work, who had taken off his shoes, the student said, "Professor, I should like to play a prank on that man by hiding his shoes, and then have the fun of seeing him hunt for them." The professor replied, "Let the man alone. A noblemided person never plays tricks on poor people. If you want fun, permit me to suggest that you do him a secret kindness by placing a dollar in each shoe, and then watch and see what he will do." The student immediately followed the suggestion and placed a silver dollar in each shoe.

They hid themselves, and in a few minutes the man quit work, pulled on his shoes and rose to go home. Feeling something in his shoes he pulled them off again and found the two dollars. Looking about he saw no one. Thinking he was unseen he fell upon his knees to thank God. He fervently prayed: "O Lord, now I know that thou doest wonders to them that trust in thee. My wife lies sick at home, and the children need bread; but Thou hast sent me help in my need. I thank Thee from my inmost soul and pray Thee to bless the man who brought us Thy blessing."

The student, overcome by his feelings, confessed to his teacher: "Such a blessed experience as this deed has brought me I have never had in my life before."—Ex.

The Heritage of Family Prayer.

Family prayer omitted; children cheated. Perhaps fathers have not thought of that feature of the case. Merely for expression of one's own personal religion, men are apt to think that praying aloud is not necessary anywhere. They can be true and kind in the home and clean and upright in the world, and still say all of their prayers secretly.

But this does not touch at all the vital point about family prayer. Family prayer is not simply the father's prayer prayed in the hearing of the family; it is really the family's prayer. The family is entitled to it.

The question of family prayer is at bottom a question of children's rights. The father who omits it must face an indictment, not of personal irreligion, but of injustice toward his sons and daughters.—Ex.

MANNERS.

Courtesy may be one of the smaller virtues, but it is a virtue nevertheless, and one that makes life more pleasant and happy. It is close kin to kindness and has its springs in the love that "seeketh not her own." One cannot be too kind or too thoughtful of others. Strange to say, this lack of courtesy is often found in the home, among those who are supposed to love each other. There is no more excuse for being rude and unkind to one's brother or sister, mother or father, than to the stranger.

Parents should so influence and train their children that it will be easy for them to be considerate and thoughtful. Too often the young people are reared in an atmosphere of self-seeking and rudeness. The finer feelings and sensibilities become calloused, and the disposition hardened. There are those who think a child must go through a toughening process in order to become strong and independent. In a certain sense this is true, but strength and independence acquired at the expense of gentleness and courtesy is not to be desired. Gentleness and greatness are not incompatible. The expression of the psalmist, "Thy gentleness hath made me great," is full of suggestive thought.—Friend's Messenger.

AN ESSENTIAL TRUTH.

There are professedly Christian people who are saying that the virgin birth of Christ is not an essential truth. Some thoelogical teachers are making such a statement. They are telling their students that they can reject the miraculous birth of Christ, and yet be gospel Christians. One of this class, a professor in the University of Chicago, in a paper before me, says: "The narratives of the birth of Jesus do not belong to the common body of Gospel material, but are additions to it." He also says that "it cannot be ranked with the essential elements of the Christian faith." He quotes from a note, written by a woman, who gives advice to some young friends of hers about this subject. She says: "Can I suggest to them that to find the Christ may be easily possible, even though they fail to hold the belief in the miracle of the birth? After all, it is the life of Christ that we need." Such sentiments show that those persons suppose that they can deny the miraculous birth of Christ, and still believe enough in Him to be loyal Christians.

They assume that the doctrine of Christ's birth is a mere non-essential, and that, to reject it, does not hinder one from receiving from Christ every blessing which His atonement provides for believers. These persons are in great error. They are blind to the fact that Christ's virgin birth is one of the great fundamentals of the Christian religion. If Christ were not thus born, then he was only a mere man, no more divine than were the apostles, or any other man. If he were not miraculously born, then he was not sinless, but had a sinful nature, and therefore he could not have been the Savior of sinners. He certainly was not God in the flesh, if he were born as any child was born. The very deity of Christ was involved in his conception and birth. He said that he came down from heaven, and this means that he came in a supernatural way. Do not be deceived by the false statement that Christ's birth is not an essential truth. It is a vital doctrine.

C. H. Wetherbe.

LET ALL ATTEND.

Greensboro is honored in having been selected by the Central Committee on United Study as the place for holding the Golden Jubilee of the United Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies of North Carolina, and members of the Central Committee—chosen from the missionary societies of all the Christian churches, are putting forth their best efforts to make this great interdenominational missionary rally the success which has marked these celebrations from Oakland, California, where the first Jubilee was held, extending across the continent, in the leading Western and Eastern centers, to New York City.

In this fiftieth anniversary year of the work of American women in foreign mission fields, it is fitting that those who have quietly labored so long in the vineyard should come together, and with praise and thanksgiving review the work already accomplished and with the new lights, gleaned from the personal experience of those who have dedicated their lives to the service, plan for the future a greater campaign—one that will reach the remotest corner of the earth, carrying the gospel of Christ to every creature.

Such was the thought that filled the mind and fired the heart of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the Central Committee on United Study and originator of the Jubilee idea, on reading Mrs. W. A. Montgomery's great work: "Western Women in Eastern Lands." The plan, which came as an inspiration to Mrs. Peabody, was enthusiastically received, the result being a series of triumphant missionary rallies, such as had never before been dreamed of, the services being attended by immense audiences in all the places visited, among which were Portland, Oregon; Seattle, Denver, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Louisville, Nashville, Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other leading Eastern cities, including Boston, Albany and Buffalo. On the Southern tour Richmond has enjoyed the privilege of the great spiritual awakening, and North Carolina is to have her share in the great national movement in the meeting at Greensboro October 13 and 14.

Realizing the importance and far-reaching results of this bringing together the Christian women of all the churches in a common bond of sympathy for the advancement of a common cause—and that cause the extension of Christ's kingdom on earth—the committee earnestly asks the loyal co-operation of the women's missionary societies throughout the State, requesting their prayers and urging that they send representatives to the Greensboro Jubilee. Ample accommodations can be secured at hotels and boarding houses for all who attend, a partial list being given for the benefit of those desiring such information.

The Jubilee party, organized for systematic, effective work, will be made up of the most noted and attractive speakers in the missionary field, among them being Mrs. Peabody, of wide knowledge and experience; Miss Crane, secretary of the Southern Baptist Woman's Missionary Work; Miss Davies, field secretary of Woman's Foreign Missionary Work of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church; Miss Miller, of the Christian Church; Miss Lindley, of the Episcopal Church; Mrs. Sallee and representatives from the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches. In addition to these, a number of returned missionaries, not of the party, will be in attendance, and the two days set apart for the Jubilee celebration will be filled to overflowing with inspiring talks and conferences, denominational rallies, drawing room receptions and other meetings of a semi-social character, giving every one interested an opportunity to meet and get in closer touch with these earnest and untiring workers; to become thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit, and to carry away with them some of their enthusiasm, energy and power. A feature of the Jubilee will be the luncheon in the beautiful and spacious dining hall of the State Normal College, with a seating capacity of six hundred. This luncheon arranged by the committee on entertainment, will be prepared under the direction of the Domestic Science department of the State Normal College, the price of plates being a nominal sum—merely enough to cover actual cost.

The Denominational Rallies will be held in the West Market St. M. E. Church, Saturday morning, Oct. 14. The Methodist Protestant Rally will be conducted by Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of High Point, and it is the wish of the ladies of Grace Church Woman's Foreign Missionary Society that this feature of the Jubilee may be most uplifting and inspiring.

It is hoped that Miss Annie L. Forrest will be present. It is earnestly desired that presidents of Missionary Societies and many friends of Missions in the Methodist Protestant Church in our State attend this Jubilee Celebration. It will be a rare privilege for the Christian women of our church who find it posible to attend.

The ladies of the W. F. M. Society are inviting many of their lady friends from out of town Methodist Protestant churches to visit them and attend this celebration.

ALL GOD'S FLOWERS.

The flowers got into a debate one morning, as to which of them was the flower of God. And the rose said: "I am the flower of God, for I am the fairest and most perfect in beauty and variety of form and delicacy of fragrance of all the flowers." And the crocus said: "No; you are not the flower of God. Why, I was blooming long before you bloomed! I am the primitive flower; I am the first one." And the lily of the valley said modestly: "I am small, but I am white; perhaps I am the flower of God." And the trailing arbutus said: "Before any of you came forth, I was blooming under the leaves and under the snow. Am I not the flower of God?" And all the flowers cried out: "No; you are no flower at all. You are a come-outer." And then God's wind, blowing on the garden, brought this message to them: "Little flowers, do you not konw that every flower that answers God's spring call, comes out of the cold, dark earth, and lifts its head above the sod and blossoms forth, catching the sunlight from God and flinging it back to men, taking the sweet south wind from God and giving it back to others in sweet and blessed fragrance—do you not know that you are all God's flowers?"—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

SIMPLY CHRISTIAN.

It is the imperative duty of the Christian ministry to expose the frauds, affectations, barnacles and hypocrisies that have fastened themselves like parasites onto Christianity. One of the surest earmarks by which these can be distinguished is the names their devotees assume. They are hyphenated Christians—their name assuming that they are either more or less Christian. For instance, "Christian-Science," "Holiness-Christian," "Bible Christians," etc. Whenever a man assumes that he is anything more or less than simply a Christian he has confessed that he is not a Christian at all. A hyphenated Christian is a species that is not recognized by the Holy Scriptures. Let us be simply Christians—that is good enough.—Christian Indicator.

"The church has not yet discovered, still less begun to realize, the limitless possibilities of intercession."—Mott.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC—OCT. 8

By Charles A. Hines.

Daily Readings.

Oct. 2 One who saw work. Hag. 1:1-15.
Oct. 3. Beginning aright. Ex. 25:1-9.
Oct. 4. How Paul began. Acts 13:1-4.
Oct. 5. A committee chosen. Acts 6:1-7.
Oct. 6. Information committee. Isa. 52: 7-10.
Oct. 7. Personal work. Jas. 5: 20.

Sun., Oct. 8. Topic—New Work Our Society Might Do. Matt. 25:13-30. (Led by the executive committee).

This meetting is to be led by the executive committee, with the president in the chair. The members of the executive committee should sit at the front and all participate in the meeting. The president had best arrange a sort of program in advance. Each committeeman should speak in turn and suggest new work that his committee has undertaken or might do. Not only this, but suggestions should come also from members. Perhaps the committeeman have used all the schemes they have or no new work occurs to them, while the outsider may think of a number of things that the committeeman would not.

Look-out Committee. To this committee should occur a number of matters of new work for the society; new plans for obtaining members; suggest a membership campaign, or provide for the mid-week church prayer meeting by having one fourth of the members of the society go and assist in one meeting each month.

The Prayer Meeting Committee should have new plans for getting the members of the society to participate in the meetings. This is something that many societies fail in doing. Some members dearly love to talk and are willing to take up the time of the backward member, but this is not the thing to do. Outline a plan of giving some member something to do each time—either a quotation from the Bible or some author, a sentence prayer, or something to read. If this is adopted by the society, let the committee agree to see that the assignments are made.

The Social Committee should be ready with a bunch of suggestions, for the chances are it has not done anything during the summer. Now is the time to have two or three business and social meetings and get the members lined up for definite, aggressive work.

The Missionary Committee should suggest some special missionary meetings in the church, with addresses by men who are familiar with the great mission work now being undertaken, namely, "The Evangelization of the World in this generation." It should also suggest the idea of an every member canvass in the Sunday school, in the church and in the society, and get every one to agree to give a certain amount weekly for missions.

The music committee, the flower committee, the temperance committee, the Sunday School committee, the Junior committee and the good literature committee should all have good suggestions to make. Some of them might be made here. It is better, however, for the committee to study the needs of its particular society and make suggestions suited to it.

Every one should take the opportunity of pledging to do better and more faithful committee work. The time has come when committees must give time, attention and serious thought to the work of the society.

Some Thoughts for Committees.

A question box on the pledge, to be opened by a good speaker, will enforce the pledge. Ask the members to speak frankly about their failures and successes in pledge-keeping.

Sentence prayers are the best school of prayer, and no Christian Endeavor meeting should be without them. The leader —may call for them. Sometimes ask that all the members of the society offer a sentence prayer in order as they sit. This will open many mouths in prayer.

A soul-winning society will give an opportunity for Christian decisions often in the prayer meetings. Train the different members in this important service. Such a society considers its associate members its most important field of work, and does not rest till they are all Christians.

In many communities the social life of the young people has not risen above cards, dancing, and the theatre. There our Christian Endeavor social committees have a great public sevice to perform.

In seeking to substitute a better social life for the young, nothing numby-pamby will serve the purpose. The Christian Endeavor socials will never supplant the card party unless they are made more interesting.

The social committee must study hard and work hard, and rather have one first-class social a year than ten poor ones. In planning your socials, utilize all whom you can. People enjoy and value what they have helped to create. Trust to people's good impulses. Appeal to the best in them. In the end you will succeed, and your triumph will be great.

Committee work teaches persistence. You will meet with many hindrances, and gain strength in overcoming them.

Committee work in our societies teaches us how to do the larger committee work of the church, and trains up the church workers of coming years.

A good motto for any committee is Paul's words to Timothy: "Keep that which is committed to thy trust."

When things go wrong with you in the home, when you feel ready to sit down and "have a good cry," because perhaps, the temperature of the oven has been too great, and your loaves, that should have come out brown and crisp and toothsome, look like burnt cinders, resist the temptation to give way to your feelings. The enemy has come in on you like a flood, it is true; but are you, in the strength of your womanhood, and the consciousness of your power over circumstances, going to lose self-control, to allow an accident that will have completely passed from your mind tomorrow to make you miserable and unhappy today, even for an hour? It is by calmly meeting these small vexations that we are strengthened to overcome in the more serious battles of life.

Happiness is normal; unhappiness is abnormal. God meant for us to be happy; it is our own fault if we are otherwise. Circumstances and conditions may control our bodies, to a certain extent, in that we may be constrained to be at a certain place and do a certain work for a certain number of hours each day; but no circumstances or conditions, no man or woman, should control our minds. We can become whatever God intended us to be, no matter how hard the tasks which our hands have to do.

"He chose the path for thee;
No feeble chance, nor hard, relentless fare,
But love, His love hath placed thy footsteps here;
He knew thy way was rough and desolate,
Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear,
Yet tenderly He whispered, Child, I see
This path is best for thee."

Room At The Top.

The schoolmaster was explaining the circulation of the blood.

"If I were to stand on my head, the blood would rush to my head, wouldn't it?"

No one contradicted.

"Now," he continued, "when I stand on my feet why doesn't the blood rush to my feet?"

"Because," the bright boy suggested, "your feet ain't empty."—N. Y. American.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

ADRIAN COLLEGE.

Adrian College, located at Adrian, Mich., offers exceptional opportunities in its College of Liberal Arts, its Conservatory of Music, its School of Business, and School of Fine Arts. This school is located in one of the most healthful sections in the North.

It has had during its history some most excellent students from North Carolina.

The rates are very reasonable, and it offers a home life which is seldom equalled.

It is the oldest educational institution in the Methodist Protestant Church.

For further information address
PRESIDENT B. W. ANTHONY, LL. D.,
Adrian, Michigan.

NOTES.

—At a general election in Canada, Sept. 21, the proposed "Reciprocity" with the United States was defeated. Pres. Taft expresses himself as greatly disappointed at the outcome. So after all it seems that "Reciprocity" is about not to reciprocate.

—Mrs. Laura J. Arnold, the only sister of the late General "Stonewall" Jackson, died at her home in Buchannon, W. Va., Sept. 25. She was 85.

—Because reciprocity was defeated in Canada last week the price of wheat, flour, oats and many other necessaries advanced in price on the Chicago and other exchanges.

—Frank Miller, an aviator, giving an exhibition at a county fair at Troy, Ohio, was burned to death in mid air Sept. 22, the gasoline tank of his engine having exploded.

—Senator Tillman of S. C. and of "Pitchfork" fame announces that he will stand for re-election next year to the U. S. Senate, unless his health further fails him.

—It is said that there is a considerable movement on foot by the "Insurgents" of the Republican party to nominate Senator LaFollette, of Wis., over President Taft for the presidency next time. Headquarters have been opened in Washington and a great demonstration is to be made in Chicago Oct. 16.

—President Taft, in a frank and free manner, at Peoria, Ill., told his audience that he was a poor politician, that his ambition had been toward the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, but that as President he had tried to do his best though he was quite sure he had made mistakes.

Mr. Taft declared he was not allied with the extremists of his party, either conservatives or progressives, but had tried to take a middle ground between the two.

"But we middle-of-the-road people believe we are the real progressives," said the President, "because you do not make progress in great strides, you make it step by step."

—Doctor Surratt, accompanied by a nephew, returned to Western Maryland College last week. His brother remains at home to teach this year. The nephew completed the course at Denton High School this year. We understand that both these young men have the ministry in view.

—Asheboro ministers joined in a letter to the laymen of Randolph County reminding them of the laymen's convention in Asheboro on September 28-29, and urging that all churches send representatives.

THE OLD SCOTCHMAN'S PRAYER.

I was pleased the other day with a story which an aged Scotch minister told me about an old Scotchman who, many years ago, was on his way to a meeting of the people of God held in a tent, or some such temporary structure.

The old pilgrim was poor and ill-clad, and partly deaf, but he trusted in the Lord, whom he served, and rejoiced in His kind providence. On the way to the meeting he fell in with another Christian brother, a younger man, bound on the same errand, and they traveled on together.

When they had nearly reached the place of meeting, it was proposed that they should turn aside behind the hedge and have a little prayer before they entered the meeting. They did so, and the old man, who had learned "in everything to let his requests be made known unto God," presented his case in language like the following:

"Lord, ye ken weel enough that I'm deaf, and I want a seat on the first bench, if you can let me have it, so that I can hear Thy Word. And ye see that my toes are sticking through my shoes and I don't think it is much to your credit to have your children's toes sticking through their shoes, and therefore I want ye to get me a pair of new ones. And ye ken I have nae siller, and I want to stay there during the meeting, and therefore I want you to get me a place to stay."

When the old man had finished his quaint petition, and they had started on, his younger brother gently suggested to him that he thought his prayer was rather free in its forms of expression, and hardly as reverential as seemed proper to him in approaching the Supreme Being. But the old man did not accept the imputation of irreverence.

"He's my Father," said he, "I'm weel acquainted with Him, and He's weel acquainted with me, and I take great liberties with Him."

So they went on to the meeting together. The old man stood for a while in the rear of the congregation, making an ear trumpet of his hand to catch words, until someone near the pulpit noticed him, and, beckoning forward, gave him a good seat upon the front bench.

During the prayer the old man knelt down, and after he arose, a lady, who had noticed his shoes, said to him:

"Are they the best you have?"

"Yes," said he, "but I expect my Father will give me a new pair very soon."

"Come with me after the meeting," said the lady, "and I will get you a new pair."

The service closed, and he went with her to her house.

"Shall you stay during the meeting?" said the good woman, as they went along.

"I would, but I am a stranger in the place, and have nae siller."

"Well," she said, "you will be perfectly welcome to make your home at our house during the meeting."

The old man thanked the Lord that He had given him all the three things he had asked for. The younger brother's reverence for the Lord was right and proper, but there is a reverence which reaches higher than the forms and conventionalities.—Selected.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The College Year of 1911 opens September 6, 1911. Numbers of students will be here for the opening. Will you? Every indication points to the best year in the history of the College.

The opportunities for culture and the advantages offered are of the highest type.

A strong faculty of university trained men and women stand ready to give the best of their lives for the benefit of the student body.

Have you seen and read the Bulletins issued by the College this summer? They will be of help to you in deciding what college to attend. Write for them.

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

To Kill Mites on Chickens.

Kerosene oil sprinkled on roosts will destroy mites and lice. Application once a month is sufficient to prevent them. When they appear, application of kerosene should be made every ten days until they disappear, and then application every month will keep them away.

For dust bath take a pound of sulphur and one pound of moth balls powdered, and mix with half bushel of fine road dust and keep in a dry place. Dust the fowls once a month. The way to make the application is to take the fowls off the roost at night and sprinkle the application of dust.—Ex.

—John Hubbard, an old negro man, was arrested Sunday afternoon by Deputy Crutchfield for breaking the Sabbath. The negro had a load of malt and meal and was driving down Ashboro street towards his home, near Kimesville. The negro was given a preliminary hearing before 'Squire D. H. Collins and bound over under a bond of $25, which he gave. It is thought that the negro was hauling the malt and meal to a distillery near his home, of which he is thought to be the presiding genius. Search about his home failed to locate the plant.—News.

—Notre Dame University has issued a decree to expel all students who smoke cigaretts. God Almighty issued a decree a long time ago that students who smoked cigarettes should be left and far outdistanced in the race of life by students who did not. And that decree has been unalterable as the law of the Medes and Persians.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1911. NUMBER 45.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

WHAT WE STAND FOR.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world neds,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing,
And the song of victory.

—Rev. J. H. Garrison in N. Y. Observer.

THAT CONVENTION NEXT WEEK.

We mean the missionary convention of women to be held in this city on Friday and Saturday of next week. It is going to be a great meeting of women. We hope none will stay away because of a failure to appreciate the importance of the occasion. It is comparable to the great Laymen's convention held here winter before last. Addresses will be made by earnest women from a distance. Let every live woman, and every woman who wants to be alive to the cause Christ holds most dear, be present, if possible.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

Who can draw the dividing line so clearly that all may see it? The people of the church and the people of the world have very much in common. They live on the same planet, eat the same kinds of food, are under the same civil laws and government, attend the same schools, mingle in business affairs, and are often members of the same family. Even in the matter of amusements, in some cases, the two are found commingled.

The case is somewhat like that presented to the naturalist in the classification of plants or animals. Some plants of different species resemble each other in many characteristics and differ only in one or two. There are some living creatures that are so like plants and also so like animals it seems impossible to tell which they are. Yet the vegetable world is a different world from the animal world. There is no difficulty in distinguishing an elephant from a tomato plant.

And the Christian community is a different community from the community of worldlings. Outwardly, the difference may not be apparent, but it is real and infinitely important.

Beads may be strung on one string, so that they are distinct from all other beads, or they may be strung so that a bead is on two or more strings. So it is with men. A man has a number of interests. One interest, if he is a Christain, allies him with the other Christians, and he belongs to the Christian community. Another interest may ally him with other men in trade and bring him into the business world. It is proper that a Christian have other memberships than church membership, but he should ever regard his Christian fellowship as his principal fellowship, and should enter into no other fellowship antagonistic to that. It is right for a Christian to be a merchant, but not right for a Christian to be a liquor-dealer. It is right for a Christian to take vacations, when needed, but it is not right for a Christian to be a habitual idler. It is right for a Christian to seek diversion and amusement occasionally, but it is not right to be a mere pleasure-seeker, and not right to indulge in degrading amusements.

The principle of Christian communion is different from the principle of worldly communion, vastly different. The real Christian knows this, the merely nominal Christian does not know it, and can see and feel no difference between the church and the world.

The principle of Christian communion, that which draws Christians together and differentiates them from the people of the world, is Christ formed within the mind and heart, Christ enthroned over the life, Christ set before them as their exceeding great and eternal reward. People of the world are drawn together by no such a principle. Nothing higher than social ties and mutual dependence and a blind trust in the power of man acts upon them. Some one has compared men to a flock of porcupines, huddling together for warmth, yet piercing and hurting each other with their quills. Such an illustration may be fitting in the case of men of the world, but the Christian communion is a perpetual delight. Christians sing—

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

States Rights.—The question of the rights of the States under our federal constitution was not wholly settled by the war. The right to secede is not now claimed, but the right to control intrastate commerce is still claimed, and at a meeting of governors of leading states, a committee was appointed to protest before the Supreme Court of the United States against the usurpation by the federal courts of authority belonging to the State governments. Governors Harmon, of Ohio, Aldrich, of Nebraska, and Hadley, of Missouri, compose the committee. They have prepared a brief which will be filed in connection with the Minnesota rate case.

—Rev. Chas. J. Edwards was called to Mt. Pleasant on Tuesday to conduct the funeral of Bro. A. G. Amick, who died on Monday after a lingering illness. He requested a year ago that Bro. Edwards preach his funeral if he were in reach.

THE GENEROUS SIDE OF LIFE.

The question of human life is of vast importance, so very important that none can comprehend the weighty matter as it is. We have been hearing the instructions all through life that we should look on the bright side. In this we must consider the generous, the generous side of life. Our good teachers instruct us to the duty of being thoughtful about the comfort and welfare of our neighbors and friends—and of all.

Any direction that we look we see the necessity of thought and care for those with whom we deal. The idea is that we live and let live, and rather that we live to help live. God has given us his precepts for all this and if we are close Bible readers, our lives will be improved by the reading. All, however, are not able to do so much of this close Bible reading as some of the favored are, but the highly favored are, by the grace of God, able to help those who are not so well favored.

We are acquainted with some who are glad to gain knowledge, and to use it for the benefit of their less fortunate neighbors and friends. An able minister, who lived rather as a local preacher, who, by hard secular work, became well to do, in the conveniences of life, traveled far, and endured much, through the extremes of heat and cold, in order to do all he could in the way of promoting the welfare and happiness of those with whom he had to deal. That good man who has gone on up to his reward above the skies, thought and prayed and toiled and endured, and lived a life of self-denial in order to help others live. He had faith in God, honored the divine injunctions, and was not afraid of such righteous self denial as the duty of tithing. He loved order, and regarded system, and hence was not afraid to confine himself to systematic duty—a thing that is, or would be, worth volumes if we would be so wise as to act it out. The devotional, who have the word of God fixed in their hearts, are glad to be confined to the evangelical system of worship, and the selfish side of life does not come in their way—but stupidity and ignorance has come in the way of many, as was the case with Saul of Tarsus.

The carnal mind has come in the way, the trouble that cannot look on the bright side of life, because of the gross darkness, and has caused great confusion and suffering in the world.

The carnal mind is not generous, never has been, nor ever will be, but has been a fearful persecutor among the churches.

A man, one gifted, if he could have been termed so) was noted for something of the ungenerous, but he tried to serve as a spiritual leader among men. He was zealous however, and so was Saul of Tarsus; they were very zealous, but such zeal was not wisdom—and did not belong to the generous side of life. One of the close observers once said of one of the "able preachers," that "he just lacked what Saul lacked before his conversion." And we read that Saul made havoc of the church. The reading in Acts 8: 3, is, As for Saul, he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and haling men men and women and committed them to prison. The zealous man, as above referred to, "got in among the sheep," and a flock that had been carefully and justly gathered together, but the stranger succeeded to "scatter the sheep."

The "tragedy" was a clear case of proselyting—and, perhaps, one of the most daring cases that has ever come off in this country. It is exceedingly ugly for a man, making religious pretensions, to push in among a quiet worshiping people in order to make gain by their losses. We have the warning from the Bible, that could be given through these columns—but all are at liberty to take their Bibles and read. There is a sight of difference in counting worldly success and "gain for godliness," and acting out the deceit, and that of human life, on the line of self-denial, and generosity. While the generous, "the salt of the earth," are praying and socrificing, and toiling in order to encourage and to further the good cause, there are lurking enemies conspiring to tear down the good work..

The building up of necessity costs something, and in any branch of society there must be cost; and the cost necessitates sacrifice. The life of a family must of a necessity cost something, and the church costs the real life of its members —and so with society in church and state throughout.

The head of a family, who is a genuine patriarch, wants his family, his people, to have mutual rights—and in this he is generous. Really the generous are an humble people wherever you find them.

The generous leader feels a disposition to be led, and only leads in order to help his people to do well. The generous governor wants to be governed, and while he is in a place of authority and power, he feels the social force of the power over which he rules. Mordecai, who was a man of great integrity and determination, was not stubborn, but because of his high regard for a noble people he resisted the impudence and insults of a tyrant. Moses was not revengeful, and did not hate the powers of Egypt, but he was very generous, and wanted to see that the oppressed should have protection—and if he had not killed the Egyptian, perhaps the tyrant would have killed a very innocent man. Perhaps he would have killed the poor man and then brutally turned on Moses. The case for Moses is easier to be understood than that of Saul.

A man of average intelligence, and able to meet his obligations in life, managed, when about the age of forty-five, to give in his age at 50, so as to dodge the poll tax paying. It had been, before that time, said of that man, that if he would try as hard to make an honest living for his people as he did to beat people out of things, he and his family would have a good living—but he really formed the habit of looking on the ungenerous side of life.

Mr. John Wesley taught the people very clearly, and he was the greatest teacher of his day, and he said, make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can —and in this he had the true idea of generosity. Perhaps Moses was the greatest authority on generosity among mortals, that this world has ever seen—but some, there are, who had rather trample generosity under foot, before acknowledging all the authority that is being given by Moses and the prophets.

W. F. G.

IS IT NOT STRANGE?

A minister is wanted by a circuit and wanted badly. He will pull up and go. Expense not considered. He goes and does his best, the work builds up, members added, and everything seems to be moving along nicely, but one or two humorists gets a little wrong because the minister does not "anty" to his particular notion in everything and said humorist goes to work quietly and stirs up a feeling with enough and a sentiment and all unknown to the minister—he is tried, condemned, discharged privately so far as the charge can go. Never considering the minister has feelings and that he has a family. After a minister has built up the work and made it go, Now we are through with him, says this particular class, we are in good shape, and apparently it is of but little consequence what goes with the minister or his family. It is but little appreciated, any sacrifice he or his family have made, We want a change, but do not say anything about it. Do not let the minister find it out; we will give him a complete surprise right in the beginning of winter. Why do this? The want of grace and "backbone." Now if you think best for a change be a Christian gentleman; take your pastor into your confidence and frankly tell him: Bro., we appreciate the work you have done for us; we are glad the Lord has used you to His glory and our good, but really and truly, we think a change would be best. We want you to help us get a man to carry the work on, and anything we can do for you we stand ready to help. Is this not the right course to pursue? But how often the preacher is left in total darkness—and sometimes the minister leaves the charge that has worked with him, helped him, paid him every cent of the salary; in total ignorance. I say is it not strange that Christian people will do this. I can't for the life of me see that Christ is in such movements. Yet, sometimes this is done.

Observer.

P. S. I believe there ought to be a fair and square understanding between pastor and people and then there will always be a pleasant memory attached to the pastorate, I have gone to Conference with the understanding if satisfactory arrangements could not be made, I was to return. Once I did return when all concerned thought best to have a change and I did one of the best year's work of my life. I have been called to that same work several times since, to assist in services and always found it, I trust, both pleasant and profitable. So far as I am concerned, I have always asked divine aid and been frank with my people. O.

THE RADIUM ENGINE.

In his remarkable British Association address, Sir William Ramsay stated that the disintigration of radium liberated three and one half million times the energy available by the explosion of an equal volume of detonating gas—a mixture of one volume of oxygen with two volumes of hydrogen. He pointed out that the major part of this energy comes apparently from the expulsion of particles (that is, atoms of helium) with enormous velocity. "Suppose," says Sir William, " suppose that the energy in a ton of radium could be utilized in thirty years instead of being evolved at its invariable slow rate of one thousand seven hundred and sixty years for one-half disintegration, it would suffice to propel a ship of 15,000 tons, with engines of 15,000 horsepower, at the rate of 15 knots an hour, for thirty years, practically the lifetime of the ship. To do this actually requires one and one-half million tons of coal."

Here is a statement of radium's possibilities that may well give a steam engineer pause. Why bother about thermodynamics, about Carnot cycles, about the relative merits of turbines and reciprocating engines? Why not develop the radium engine and conserve our coal supplies, and manipulate ounces of radium instead of tons of coal? At one fell blow all elaborate coal conveying machinery disappears, and with it roaring furnaces, the blackened faces of stokers, and all the sooty paraphernalia that the word "steam engine" stands for.

The possibilities are fare more romantic on paper than in actual fact. In the first place, where are we to get a ton of ralium? Sir William himself in times past has placed the total supply of radium in the world, in laboratories, at much less than a pound. Physicists and chemists have time and time again pointed out the enormous personal risk involved in handling even half a grain of comparatively pure radium. Bacteria, insects and even mice, we believe, have actually been killed by radium rays, suitably applied, to be sure. What will be the effect upon a man sitting in a room containing, let us say, ten pounds of radium? Would he ever emerge alive? Obviously, the mere difficulty of handling so terrible a substance imposes problems far more difficult of solution than those which the old steam engine ever offered.

Assuming that we really had a safe method of handling a large quantity of radium, how are we to make its energy available in practical form? Some totally new type of prime mover must be developed, Some contrivance which will render it possible for electrons hurled into space with the speed of light to do their work.

Then again there is the subject of materials to be considered. Radio-active substances are no respectors of ordinary containers. The particles prejected from radium permeate most substances with comparative ease. To confine them would be a far more serious task than the insulation of a steam pipe.

Stupendous as the problem is, who shall be bold enough to say that it will never be solved? After all, is the utilization of the enormous energy contained in a half grain of radium any more startling than the transformation of the energy pent up in a shovelful of black coal? If the radium engine ever does come, it will simply be another instance of the triumph of mind over matter.—Scientific American.

Give spicy blooms where flowers never grow;
Give food where starving hearts fight fate's decree;
Give rest where tired hands and feet drag slow;
Give sight to eyes too full of tears to see;
Give music where sweet trumpets never blow,
Give happiness, and joy shall garment thee.

Emma C. Dowd.

BY STARLIGHT.

By Eleanor R. Johnson.

Pilgrim, despair not, though all hope seem gone;
The night is darkest just before the dawn;
And even if this one should appear to be
The everlasting night, canst thou not see
The stars, the beacon stars that shine above?
They teach thee, Pilgrim, Faith and Hope and Love.
Faith, that the God who these created hath,
Lord of all Life, and even Lord of Death,
Is all omnipotent to give to thee
His noblest creature, immortality.
Hope, the beyond each immemorial star,
Thy heaven and thy dear Lord and Father are;
Love, all-abiding love, for this thy Lord,
Who is by all these mighty stars adored,
Who holds within His hand thy petty fate;
Love for thy Father, all-compassionate,
Who sees and pities us, his children frail,
And makes these stars across the heavens sail
That we, in looking up, may surely know
Them sent to guide our footsteps here below.
Pilgrim, look up! Behold the beacons shine!
What better proof canst have of Love Divine,
That cares for thee, than that through all the night
Thy God hath sent the stars to give thee light?
Pilgrim, look up! And, kneeling, turn thy face
Toward the sky as toward a holy place,
And pray, O Pilgrim, pray that thou mayest be
A star, a beacon light, for all to see
And learn divinest Hope and Faith and Love
From thy clear shining, like the stars above.

—Gen. Julian S. Carr announces that he will not allow his name to be used as a candidate for the United States Senate. General Carr is just now engaged in a higher and better business, we observe from the daily press. He is traveling this good State soliciting funds with which to build a Methodist Church in Washington, D. C. The General himself has given $5,000, and is receiving encouraging responses from the brethren wherever he goes. This, to our thinking, beats running for the Senate.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Latest from Japan.

The reports for the quarter ending June 30th, 1911, show that there were 22 baptisms, and 44 applicants for the ordinance. Also that 58 church members were received, and 20 probationers. There has been an increase of two regularly organized churches making 17 in all, with 3 provisional churches—not having required number of members—and 26 other preaching places, a total of 46.

The number of full members was 1129, absent members, 425, enquirers enrolled, 287, and probationers 233, a total of 2074 adherents.

There were forty-five Sunday schools that had 2758 scholars and 121 teachers making a total of 2879. There were also 5 C. E. Societies. 5565 tracts were distributed. Equally encouraging are the reports from our two educational institutions. The Yokohama School of English (Night School) has an enrollment of 204 young men, and "we have more young men to listen to the gospel than any other institution in the city." Each teacher conducts a Bible class, and the 3rd church occupies the upper hall of the school with regular services. Average attendance at the Bible classes was 125, and 15 students have become enquirers.

The girls department-classes meet in the afternoon, and the W. F. M. S. is expected to take charge of this work—had an enrollment of 35 in July, and the outlook is most promising.

The Nagoya College had an enrollment of 230 young men at last report, and, as the prospects were for more to enter, the capacity of the institution will be greatly taxed, if it has not already been so. This certainly speaks well for the standing, influence and work of the school, and is a marked commendation of our excellent corps of 19 teachers.

The religious work is bearing fruit in the conversion of teachers and students as has been indicated before, and, with several students having the ministry in view, the institution is proving of great value in the building up of the church in Japan.

This great work is a challenge to our people in America to seize the present opportunity to adequately provide for the institution's development.

Latest at Home.

A number of the Annual Conferences have met, and the custom of pastors bringing up the assessments and offerings to the session, was still in evidence. Treasurers of all our Boards would have far less financial difficulties if pastors would make an earnest effort early in the year to secure the assessment, and forward it promptly to the treasurers. Those who have adopted the plan are more than pleased, and they have helped the general interests by so doing.

Thus far in this fiscal year, Oct. 1st, the special contributions are in advance of those for the same period last year, but the assessment and the Children's Day Offering have fallen below.

This does not indicate shrinkage, but rather that a number sent in the assessment before May 1st, and it was counted in the last fiscal year. Then the number of schools that ordered the Children's Day Offering was less than last year and from them no offering was received. This is chargeable largely to the fact that the Easter service came so late this year thus bringing the two services in sharp conflict.

If pastors who have returned to their charges for the year's work will only exert themselves to secure, and send to me the assessment for Foreign Missions at an early date everything will be adjusted. Brethren, help now.

A New Missionary.

A Missionary will son have to be sent to Japan to relieve Rev. E. I. Obee whose term of 7 years of service has expired, but who, in loyal devotion to his work, volunteered to remain until next spring rather than see the work suffer.

Rev. E. I. Obee is the denominational C. E. Union's Missionary, and the Missionary Superintendent, Rev. P. W. Dierberger, of Muncie, Ind., is appealing to the C. E. Societies to promptly raise the amount required for his support. This can readily be done, and in addition enough to bring him and his family back to America. A copy of the special missionary service entitled "A Vision" will be sent to your Society. It consists of tableaux, scripture readings, etc. The C. E. World had a notice of it Sept. 7th, and daily requests for a sample have reached me from many states from Maine to California. With this service any Society can raise a nice sum for the work, and it should be done now. Send an order for a copy.

The last two years we have asked our Sunday schools to give us a Christmas offering for Foreign Missions, having two objects in view—to teach the young the true idea of Christmas, and train them to share in the work of the church. Our necessities require that we ask for such an offering this year. There will be no special printed service provided by the Board. We are more anxious, however, that every school will participate in this good work so that enough can be secured to send the new Missionary to Japan, and pay his salary for the first year. That is a worthy objective, and we wish you to keep this in mind. He will thus be the missionary of our Sunday schools.

The Maryland Conference C. E. Union has Rev. L. Layman as its Missionary. We appeal to every Society to do its utmost to send to the treasurer, Mr. T. Pliney Fisher, their offering at once. The special service noted above should be used for raising funds for this purpose. More anon.

Fred. C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Balto., Md.

REVIVAL OF ANCESTOR WORSHIP.

"It is very hard to become a Christian in the place where one was brought up," said a Japanese lady the other day. We, with our Western Presbyterian ideas of man being a free moral agent, cannot at first realize the pressure brought to bear upon anyone who leaves the path which his ancestors trod, in this land where family is paramount and rights of the individual are nil.

Any person who lives in the ancestral home must visit the family graves at appointed times and burn incense, must have the bonze come to the house and say mass on anniversary days, must keep offerings on the god self every day, and light the votary lamps ever night. If these duties are neglected, wrath of all the relatives, quick and dead, is incurred. In order that there shall everlastingly be some one responsible for these offices, the family line must not become extinct; therefore concubinage and divorce were allowed with their attendant evils and, nowadays, many houses are continued by adoption.

The lady whose remark has been quoted belongs to a family that has lived in the same place in Yamaguchi for seven generations. She would fain be a Christian, but is held back by the weight of those seven generations.

Just now there is a vigorous revival of ancestor worship, brought about ostensibly by the affair of the Anarchists. For the first time in history, the sacred person of the Emperor has been threatened. Every one seems to be alarmed and perceives that the moral health of the country is not good. Those in high places are anxious for the future loyalty and commercial stability of the country, but in their prospectus of amendment they are leaving out the one thing that will avail. They are taking no account of the Power "that makes for righteousness," and appear to believe that in this age of the world patriotism and piety can be inculcated by word of command.

Recently, in a conference at Tokyo, all the Prefectural Governors were addressed by the Minister for Home Affairs and

THREE RULES: AND YOU'RE HAPPY

It was at a Girls' Summer School, years ago, when one of the girls rose and said to Alice Freeman Palmer, who had been talking to them:

"Mrs. Palmer, you are always so cheerful and happy; will you tell us, please how we can be happy?"

"I will dear," said this saint of her sex. "I will give you three simple rules:

"The first is this: Commit something to memory every day, something good. It needn't be much; three or four words will do, just a pretty bit of a poem, or a Bible verse.

"The second rule is: Look for something pretty every day; and don't skip a day, or it won't work."

"My third rule is—now mind, don't skip a day: Do something for somebody every day! That is all there is to it, dear."

These three rules are just as good today as when they were spoken: they will work always and everywhere, in the country as well as in the city: for women as well as for girls. They will make a farmhouse warm in the chill winter and a tenement cold in the blazing summer. They will help to make us masters of our lives. They are so plain that everybody can keep them. No matter how gray the sky these rules will make the sun shine through.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TWO WOMEN AT THIRTY.

There is a woman, Annie McQuillan by name, whose profession in life is to launder the garments of the rich. Her drunken husband left her when she was barely thirty years old with three children to feed. She rises with the dawn and meets what might be called a full day. She clothes her offspring neatly, feeds them three times a day with good substantial meals ,sends them to school, and works eight hours a day at the most beautiful washing and ironing ever done by the hand of woman. Then she cleans and sews and cooks for her own family, and goes to her pillow weary and full of sleep. Does she repine in her quiet moments? Does she wonder if life is worth living? Does she rush into print with articles on "The Disillusionment of Marriage"? Not she. Being too busy to think circuitous and morbid thoughts she thanks God. For what? "I thanks God," says she, "for me two hands, for me health, and for me kinds. They're the comfort of me life, sur!" Her laughter is Homeric; her appetite is hearty; her vitality is inexhaustive. Coarse, you say? Yes, as coarse as Nature. Common? Yes, as common as salt. But do we love Nature less, or feel the need of salt less? Annie McQuillan does this: she does her work and does it well, and she faces her destiny undaunted.

There is another woman—also thirty. Annie does her laundry-work. She is pretty winsome, and refined. Her husband earns three thousand dollars a year, but the pretty wife cannot make ends meet with it. No, she has no children; she has not the strength for children, she says, and, besides, "we cannot afford children" Cook? No. Sew? No. But she is a "lady": so refined, so pretty, and she plays bridge "wonderfully" and dresses divinely. Common? No, indeed. Coarse? Bless you, no!

But down in the bottom of your heart, tell me: which of these two women, think you, comes closest to the original design for a woman?—Ladies' Home Journal.

SAVING FOR A RAINY DAY.

A mother, whose young daughter is about for the first time to enter an active business life, has asked that something be said to young girls on the importance of saving for a rainy day. Others besides the young in this lavish age of ours and in this bountiful country need this reminder. The rainy day, by which is meant the day of illness, of loss of employment, of a sudden and passing emergency, or of help that must be given to dear ones, may come to the most prosperous. The temptation to a young girl who has been compelled to deny herself pretty things and nice clothing and the luxuries attractive to the young is to spend all she earns, put nothing aside, and especially to be reckless in buying thing to wear. A better way is for the young wage-earner from the very beginning of a business life to determine how much he or she will need for actual wants and then week by week lay aside a definite sum, however small, in the savings bank.

To spend all that one earns is foolish, while often to spend more than one earns is little short of criminal. If one would sleep well at night, meet the world fearlessly, and remain young in defiance of time, one must be prudent and discreet in the use of money. A good test of character is to be observed in the manner in which money is treated by the average boy or girl. Parents should early train children in thrift, not in hoarding. If money is wisely saved, wisely spent, and wisely given away, character will broaden and deepen and happiness will be unshadowed.—Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, in The Christian Herald.

A QUESTION.

Bro. Editor:Will you and others tell through The Sun which is more blessed in the sight of the Lord, to visit the sick and carry them just a little something to nourish the body and help them to feel better, or to go to picnics and carry big dinners?—Enquirer.

Answer.—For our part we would not assume to answer for the Lord; but we cannot conceive of a condition that would bring about the above antithesis. If one is free-hearted and willing enough to prepare a dinner for a picnic we would certainly think such an one would be more than willing to share that dinner or any other dinner such an one might prepare, with one who was sick. Sometimes moral difficulties weigh upon our minds because we place one deed, which we assume to be an evil, over against another deed which we are sure is not an evil, which deeds are not opposed to each other at all, save in our reckoning. Some times the one readiest to prepare a dinner for a picnic would be the quickest also to prepare a meal for the sick, since the one has no logical connection with the other.—Editor.)—The Christian Sun.

A GIVING MEETING IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Recently there was a large gathering near the Bushmen Caves, Silonga's school room opening. The Amasidindi tribe turned out in full force. The chief councilors and people were all in good time. The kraals round about the school room were a mass of red; fires were on all sides for the many pots containing meat and Indian corn. The usual giving meeting took place. Several led off well, giving £1 each; then followed the long speeches and threepenny pieces, fowls, etc. One man noticed no pennies had been given, and so gave a new penny. Aother made a speech, saying he was much surprised that cattle were not given to pay off the debt. He gave one hen for himself and one egg for his baby. After four hours' talking, I was glad to announce that the debt had been cleared. Then followed the feast; it did not take long to finish off the four sheep and goats. Many women ran along to their kraals carrying two large pots balanced on their heads, smoking their pipes.—Canon Waters, in The Mission Field.

—Between twelve and fifteen thousand mechanical employees on the Illinois Central, Yayzoo and Miss., Valley, and Southern Pacific railroads, known as the Harriman system, went out on strike Saturday A. M., Sept. 30.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, OCT 15.
By Charles A. Hines.
Subject: Why We Believe in the Bible. Romans 10:17; 15:4, 14. (A Memory Lesson).

Daily Readings:

Oct. 9. Because it is true. Ps. 19:7-14.
Oct. 10. Its appeal to conscience. Heb. 4:12, 13.
Oct. 11. Its inspiring message. I John 1: 3-5.
Oct. 12. Its help in need. Rom. 15:4, 5.
Oct. 13. Its saving power. I John 3:1-5.
Oct. 14. Its revelation of God. John 3:16.

Sun., Oct. 15. Topic—
Suggestions for the Meeting.

1. Remember this is a memory meeting. No books are to be used, not even song books, except by the pianist. No slips of paper are to be used in a memory meeting, such as this. The plan will work well. Speak from memory.

2. This lesson will need some research work to make it really profitable, and that is the only sort you wish. Do your Bible reading during the week, study the Quarterly at home and leave it there, take only your memory to the meeting. Speak from memory.

3. The daily readings, the lesson analysis, the discussion topics all furnish ample suggestion for open meeting. The quotations from other pens will give inspiration to discussion. Study the eight reasons, and the four short addresses and speak from memory. Speak from memory

Hr. Herbert H. Monninger gives the following eight reasons why he believes in the Bible:

1. Because it meets the needs of human life. Under all circumstances man can go to the Bible and find help. The Bible fits perfectly into human experiences.

2. Because of its unity. This book was written by some forty men widely separated by time, culture, training and language. In spite of the lapse of time and composite authorship, the book as a whole makes an impression of unity upon the mind of the student.

3. Because it is superior to all other books. There is no other book that is so widely or reapeatedly read. Among books it is immortal. Few books outlive their authors. Within forty-eight hours after publication the revised version, two million and a half copies were sold.

4. Because of its influence upon the world. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the safest foundation for judgment ever laid down. If you draw a line around the countries where the greatest freedom is enjoyed and the highest civilization flourishes you will find that you have included the countries where the people believe in Christianity, and excluded those where it has very little or no influence. Wherever the Bible has gone it has sweetened the home, exalted womanhood, sanctified the cradle, and redeemed men.

5. Because of the character of those who accept it. Business propositions are often turned down, merely because of the class of men who are promoting them. Who are the men of your community who believe the Bible and are endeavoring to live by it? Who are the men who are opposed to the Bible.

6. Because it reveals the plan of salvation. It is the answer to the soul's greatest question, "What must I do to be saved?" It brings peace and satisfaction to the most powerful as well as the most humble minds.

7. Because man unaided could not have produced the Bible. "I know that no man made the roses. I know that no man painted the sunset on the evening skies. In the same way I know that no man, nor set of men, unaided, have produced the Bible."

8. Because those who grow in holiness cherish the Bible more and more. "We outgrow friends, books, and schools, but nobdy has ever outgrown the Bible.

Topical Analysis.

1. Because it is not partisan. It fits every person. It fits all ages. The nation that follows it grows.

2. Because it meets competition. It is read more and more. No other book has stood so long. It silences all criticisms.

3. Because of its transforming power. It lifts the fallen and degraded. Business follows Bible to new fields, education and enlightenment follow it.

4. Because of its ideals. The more bible, the higher our ideal. It reveals the Christ, the sinless One. It teaches service of love, gratitude.

5. Because it teaches industry. "Work and pray." "Endure hardness." "Delight in business, fervent in spirit." "Be steadfast, unmovable, abounding."

6. Because it tells how to be saved. The Bible reveals the plan of salvation. It promises rewards and condemnations. It pictures heaven and hell.

TEMPTATIONS.
By Miss Winnie Floyd.

(Published by request of Alabama S. S. Convention).

Blessed is the man that endureth temptation. James 1: 13.

Temptation and sin have been in the world since the beginning, with Adam and Eve in Eden. Someone has said that the tree that represents temptation stood in the center of the garden where all roads converged, where Adam and Eve passed each day.

So it is in man's life. Temptation stands in the center of our lives where we have to pass every day, and every man's weal or woe depends on the attitude he takes toward it. There are many attitudes we can take. We are all tempted, and will be as long as time lasts. We find there is a difference in temptations. Some people can stand where others fall; some fall before drink, some are tempted to steal, others to lie and others to swear and profane the name of the Lord.

The Bible says: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you," James 4: 7, and again: "For I will never suffer you to be tempted beyond that you are able to bear, but with each temptation will make a way for you to escape." Temptation is not sin. We have the promise that we have a way to escape, but temptation becomes sin when we willingly and wilfully yield to it, but, "He will make a way for you to escape."

Temptations come often as surprises. We are met by the tempter when we leave our closets of prayer.

God has a purpose in allowing us to be tempted. Just as man becomes physically stronger by exercising the body; so we become spiritually stronger by each temptation we meet and overcome.

We all belong to the class who have been tempted, for at some time in each life the tempter has come. Christ was tempted but He did not sin. Hear His words: "Get thee hence, Satan; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." To us comes this message of hope; no matter how far from God we have wandered, or how great our temptations, God can save us and give us grace to resist every evil suggestion. Sin is that in man which must be forgiven and he cannot eradicate it from his nature. It is a state of poverty, a state of blindness, a state of universal disease, a state of total wrechedness, a state of imminent peril. It says to the carnal man: "Don't resist that temptation, but yield to it," and each time we yield, we harden our hearts to the grace that gives strength to overcome.

If we do do not resist temptation, and if we fall into sin, then our influence is felt for the evil one and we become a tempter. This is especially true in regard to the young convert. He sees older church members indulge in things that are not right and there the devil gains a victory.

We all have our temptations and there are some who tempt others.

"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to stand; but will with temptation also make a way to escape; that ye may be able to bear it." I Cor. 10:13. We can overcome temptation by the study of God's word. The best way, as our frail barks go floating down the stream of time against the rocks of unbelief, through storms of trial when dark waves oftemptation roll over us—is to take Christ for our companion and pilot, and let Him steer our craft clear of the breakers, out into the still waters of His strength and glory.

Instead of being tempters, we can help others to overcome temptation by letting the man or woman who has fallen deep into sin know that we are interested in them and their souls by going into their homes and talking and praying with them, thus causing them to feel that there is something in the Christian religion that the world has not and knoweth not of, until Christ is found in them. It is the place of the church to help the men and women, and on the other hand the church is responsible for placing before men and women temptations. Sone good, moral people say the church has become so worldly and has departed from the way of true holiness and right living that they feel satisfied to stay out of the church until the church reforms and gets back to God and the Bible. To counteract this trend of feeling the church members must watch themselves closely, purge their hearts with the fire of the Holy Ghost, and if we would be soul-winners and remove temptation from our fallen brethren we must be filled with the Holy Ghost. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." So let us be valiant soldiers of the Cross. Stand steadfast and firm and putting on the whole armour of Christ, do battle against the sins and temptations of the world.

DIED.

For days a shadow had been over the home of Bro. A. P. McDaniel, when on the afternoon of Sept. 16, the white robed messenger from the Father entered the home and took away little Morton Emory, just as he had finished the ninth month of his little life.

For about two weeks he had been suffering, while all that could be done by the watchfulness of loving parents and friends, and the attention of skilled physicians, was done. But nothing availed, and he passed from our sight. He passed through the shadow, out from this world of sin and suffering to a brighter clime.

"There is a reaper, whose name is death,
And with his sickle keen.
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between.
He gazed at the flowers with tearful yes,
He kissed their drooping leaves;
It was for the Lord of Paradise,
He bound them in his sheaves.
'My Lord hath need of these flow'rets gay,'
The reaper said, and smiled;
'Dear tokens of the earth are they,
Where He was once a child.'"

On a beautiful Sabbath afternoon—the resurrection day—we laid him to rest in faith in Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

C.

—Dare to do right.

NOTES.

War.—Italy is up in arms against Turkey. Tripoli is assailed and likely to be taken by Italy. The relations between several of the European powers seemed to be strained almost to the breaking point. Christianity does not yet prevail all over Europe; in fact Turkey is largely Mohammedan. Just now Turkey is weakened by internal divisions, and it seems that it will have to submit to Italy's demands, just or unjust.

—The Wall Street Journal says President Taft talks too much for the good of the country. It says that before the days of Roosevelt it was thought beneath the dignity of the President of the United States to go over the country making stump speeches. It thinks that administrative affairs should engross the Chief Executive's attention. There is some truth in the Journal's view, though allowances should be made for "Wall Street influences."

—Burlington, Graham, and Haw River can now visit each other easily. The trolley line has been completed and the cars set going.

—A charter has been granted to the Denton Chair Co., of Denton; authorized capital, $25,000, with $10,000 paid in by C. C. Shaw, J. R. Peace, and others.

—One of our policemen (Mr. Pugh) has been charged with drinking, and is off duty pending an investigation.

—Admiral Schley who helped conquer the Spaniards in the naval battle near Cuba fell dead in New York one day this week.

—Another man claims to have cured rheumatism by the stings of bees. He took the treatment for three weeks, each day provoking the bees to a new attack.

—Mrs. Thedore Roosevelt was thrown from her horse and injured last Saturday, though no bones were broken.

—Lewis Cook, of Danville, riding a motorcycle, ran into a rope stretched across the street and was thrown to his death.

—Norris was found guilty of slaying Bissett in Raleigh and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary.

—A battle between railroad strikers of the Illinois Central Railroad and strike-breakers occurred in McComb City, Miss., in which several persons were killed or wounded. The people of McComb City demanded that the strike-breakers leave, which they did, and peace was restored. The Illinois Central declares that hereafter it will deal with its employees as individuals.

—Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Heflin, recently married, were knocked from a buggy yesterday by a train at Summit Avenue crossing and badly cut and bruised. Mr. Heflin had just opened a new shoe store here for the Wear-U-Well Shoe Company.

—The first brick on the new Masonic Home here was laid yesterday.

—Bro. W. A. Ledford has returned to college from the eastern shore of Md., where he worked during the summer.

—Raleigh Hunter has returned to Westminster to resume his studies.

—Bro. R. A. Swaringen is in school again,— this time in Westminster Theological Seminary.

—Bros. H. C. Stout and J. G. Rodgers are numbered among Burlington's "city fathers."

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The College Year of 1911 opens September 6, 1911. Numbers of students will be here for the opening. Will you? Every indication points to the best year in the history of the College.

The opportunities for culture and the advantages offered are of the highest type.

A strong faculty of university trained men and women stand ready to give the best of their lives for the benefit of the student body.

Have you seen and read the Bulletins issued by the College this summer? They will be of help to you in deciding what college to attend. Write for them.

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

More Dollars than Sense.

The young man told of in the following seems to lack a sense of the fitness of things. The young lady in the case would have been very foolish to wed such a specimen:

"Meriden, Conn., Oct. 4.—Peter B. Hall, a young business man of this place, wants to get back from Miss Theresa Archler, who jilted him, $12.32, which he lavished on her during the courtship of two months. He has brought suit. He says he knows just what he spent because he kept an itemized account.

"In June and July he took Miss Archler on several trolley rides. Twice she had icecream sodas at 10 cents per. On one occasion he bought chocolate for 35 cents. Twice they went carriage riding at $1.50 a ride. Once they dined in Hartford, and Hall tipped the waiter a quarter. They had dinner at Savin Rock one Sunday, and Miss Archler ate $1 worth. The girl says the fact that Hall kept tab on all he spent amply explains why his wooing did not terminate happily."

A young man in Durham, twenty years ago admittedly one of the handsomest and most popular young men of the town; good family connection, excellent social standing, bright, brainy, promising, wealthy—more than twenty thousand dollars to his credit. The last dozen years, an out-cast, under indictment, serving sentence, living from hand to mouth, when and as he might.

Last Friday found dead and stretched upon the floor, cold, forsaken, alone, in a deserted house of the city.

Strong drink did the dastardly deed

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1911. NUMBER 46

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.

Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

PRAYERS ASKED.

Will you please ask through the Herald for the prayers of Christians for the recovery of Rev. Homer Casto? Rev. A. G. Dixon has been spared to us, and it may be God's will to spare Bro. Casto if we ask Him.

The above request which comes to us from a noble Christian lady will we have no doubt enlist the sympathy of many of our readers. Bro. Casto needs only good health to make him one of our very best workers. Let him have the earnest prayers of our people.

INSTRUCTING THE DELEGATE.

Soon our lay-delegates will be going to Conference. One of their duties will be to advise the Stationing Committee regarding the pastoral relations of the succeeding year.

Sometimes delegates go to Conference hampered by cast-iron demands of their constituencies: they must have Rev. A. B. C., or nobody. Such instructions as that should never be given. It is disloyalty to the Conference to send or carry such a message as that. It disregards the rights of others and reveals a spirit of narrowness. It reminds one of a spoiled boy who couldn't drink his milk save out of one particular cup. One day the cup got broken, and the boy found out that milk was still milk if imbibed from another cup. What would a charge do that must have Rev. A. B. C. or nobody if the Lord should translate Rev. A. B. C.? It would find out that the Lord still has other ministers who can preach the gospel.

Rev. A. B. C., if he is a sensible man, would prefer not to serve a charge that must have him or nobody, because such a demand is puerile, babyish, and he would rather go to a charge where there are some sensible grown-up people. Such a demand instead of making him feel honored, makes him feel that he is next to nobody. It is proper to give the delegate all necessary information as to the needs and wishes of the people. It is proper to name to him some one man that seems to be best suited to the work, but imperious demands should be avoided, and there should be large deference to the judgment of the Conference itself. The whole church is one body, and the aim should be to distribute the workers to the best advantage of all.

—By the way, are all satisfied that our present form of stationing committee is the best? It seems that a larger and more representative committee would be better, having more information and being less likely to be swayed by personal influence. A representative from each section of the District, properly divided, might not be bad.

Rev. C. A. Cecil, accompanied by a number of people from Moriah Church, held a baptismal service in the Christian Church, Greensboro, last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Burgess was baptized by immersion. The Christian Church is equipped with a pool for the purpose.

—Beginning next Sunday, Grace Church, Greensboro, is to have a series of sermons by Rev. G. F. Millaway. He will preach each night next week. It is hoped that our people will be revived and others brought in.

—The ladies of Greensboro are making eager preparations for the Jubilee Missionary meeting to be held here on Friday and Saturday.

—The last report received concerning Mrs. Plyler's condition is of a more hopeful character than any the physician has given out.

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW BOOK.

Marie Corelli is out in a new book, entitled "The Life Everlasting: A Reality of Romance." It is published by George H. Doran Company, New York.

Those who have read no other book by the same author might find this book instructive as revealing how minds of a certain order view the world and human life. We predict, however, that the book will not find many readers that will lay it down with a feeling of satisfaction. It will not please lovers of love stories because of the unnaturalness of the romance it presents. It cannot please those who are earnestly seeking the best way of life because it points out no practical way of life. It cannot please the Christian reader because, while declaring Christ to be "the only Divine Friend this world has ever had or ever will have," it rejects the view that Christ is the world's Redeemer, holding that it is a barbarous belief that God would be obliged to invent a scheme to redeem His own failure! It also declares that there is no forgiveness of sin.

The author seems to have been misled in her thinking (or dreaming, rather) by the speculations of Oriental philosophers. She represents the soul as an indestructible and eternal entity and its life in this world as only one of many similar existences. She makes the distinction of sex an inherent, essential and eternal one, and holds out hope to all disappointed old maids that sometime, it may be ages hence, the other half will be found, and happiness will be complete. Jesus said that in Heaven they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but to Miss Corelli his words seem to have little weight except when they can be perverted to support her vague theories. She is right in thinking that the world will give little heed to her message. The world is too seriously engaged with practical problems to be interrupted long by so uncertain a sound as that which this book gives forth.

Miss Corelli is a remarkably brilliant woman and it is a pity that she has been turned awry by such influences as evidently have swayed her.

—Conference approaches.

—Bro. T. A. Hunter has been elected to represent Grace Church in the Annual Conference at Henderson.

ENOCH'S TRANSLATION.

By W. A. Ledford.

Once there was a little girl who, while at church service, heard the preacher tell the story of how "Enoch walked with God three hundred years and was not for God took him." She, like many other little girls, did not know the meaning of the expression, "Enoch walked with God," and "God took him." After the service she ran home to her mamma and said, "Ma, the preacher today told about a man who took such a long walk with God that night came on them before they got back home and God took the man home with him."

This was a simple child-like conception of the story of Enoch, but is what is going to happen to every father, mother, brother or sister who is living at Christ's second coming. Every one will be translated at that time immediately into a blessed or cursed being depending, of course, on the life lived before His coming. Get your mamma to tell you what is meant by Christ's second coming, if you do not already know.

His first coming is a very important event, for by it every father, mother, brother and sister as redeemed from a life of bondage, shame and sin to a life of righteousness, joy, freedom and peace in the Holy Spirit. The plan of redemption is broad and great enough for every person but every person will not believe the plan. Hence only those believing that Christ is and is the rewarder of those diligently seeking him, will be saved.

The plan was fully established hy his first coming, life on earth, death and resurrection and by His second coming we will be enabled to see Him as He is ,be like Him, know then and not till then the full meaning of being redeemed by "the precious blood of Christ." The second coming of Christ and the estblishment of His Kingdom in its completeness is "that far off divine event toward which all creation moves," as Tennyson wrote. Also the Psalmist had the same thought in mind when he said, "As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

Biblical history is divided into three great ages, namely, the Patriarchal Age, The Prophetic Age, and the Gospel Age. The translation of Enoch served a remarkable object lesson to his age to the reality of the future world. Elijah's translation and Christ's resurrection served the same in their ages. These three men have been used by all authorities to prove the possibility of a resurrection of the body and of a true human existence in glory.

The story of Enoch sounds almost like a fairy tale, but unlike the characters in a fairy tale, which are imaginary, Enoch was a man just as George Washington was, a man to whom all could look with pride and well may all point to him with pride for he was a worthy man. Despite the prevalence of evil doing during his time, he kept himself unspotted from the world. While those around him were living lives of sin and disgrace he was walking with God, enjoying good society. Enoch's companionship lifted him to heaven. Is yours leading you in that direction or toward the bad world? Enoch walked with God 300 years; how long do you want Him to walk with you? Enoch had the testimony that before his translation he pleased God. What kind of a testimony have you? Live such lives that you can be able to say with Philip Sidney, "Here is a friend of Jesus Christ."

WORKING FOR GOD.

Every Christian is supposed to be a worker for God; and each one will, in some way and in some sphere, do work for Him. Let it not be thought that because a certain Christian does not take an active part in the affairs of his church he is not doing anything for God. In ways not conspicuous, he is so living that the cause of God is being served by him. But a higher thought is that the Christian should have a definite aim to work for God. He should ask Him for the necessary orders to do whatsoever will please Him. He should never do his own planning, but let God plan for him. A great preacher says: "When Brunellschi built the cathedral at Florence he said: 'I am going to build for God. I am determined to build in His way.' Consequently it was necessary for Him to follow God's example—to be with that cathedral evevy step of the way. He saw the first shovelful of dirt taken out; he watched it every day; he saw the foundations laid; saw every stone, every brick put in place; every carving upon it. To the capstone at the top, that great architect followed every detail. The wonder of the world, it remains today, beyond even that of St. Peter's. It is because of the accuracy, the nicety of every form and line. A godly man does all of his work that way." I do not think that it is true of all really godly people. That minister's statement is too extreme; nevertheless, it should be the purpose of every Christian to work in accordance with the plan which God has for him. One may be a farmer, yet be a true worker for God. It is a great mistake to suppose that one engaged in a secular calling cannot well serve God. One can work with God on the farm. He can consecrate his toil to the service of his Lord. Are Christian farmers ever thinking of this fact? I am sure that if they would have this purpose in mind, God would prosper them as He does not favor those who work only for themselves. Whatever you do, let it be for God's pleasure, and not your own.

C. H. Wetherbe.

THE BARACA MOVEMENT.

By Marshall A. Hudson.

The question often asked, "Wherin does the 'Baraca Bible Class' differ from other so called adult Bible classes?"

It is estimated that nearly nine thousand differently named classes come under general head of "adult Bible classes," which of course includes "Baraca." There are many things about the Baraca movement which laces it in a class of its own. Especially is this true with reference to the platform.

Every man who has reached the age of maturity is necessarily an adult, but he is a Baraca only as he becomes such by choice.

I fully believe that the platform, "Young Men at work for Young Men, all standing by the Bible and the Bible School," is of divine inspiration.

A good platform is essential in any well-regulated organization, and the closer its membership is guided by it, the better the results will be.

Our platform holds the same relation to the Baraca movement as does the United States Constitution to the people of America. Many times has it been assailed and many the efforts made to change it, but it remains just the same, a guiding star that keeps us from dashing against the rocks and holds us true to the principles laid down in the beginning by its founder.

It has stood the test of time because it has embodied in it the spirit of philanthropy and places Bible study as the foundation upon which to build a class.

As long as our classes work under this platform they will have no trouble about the age limit—"Young men" means young men, that is the kind we have always wanted. It is estimated that three-fourths of our young men remain out of the Bible school. As long as one of these remain out we all have work to do. I know of no better way to get them in than to follow the plan indicated in the phrase, "Young men at work for young men." Certainly this is the Bible plan. The fact that "no one can reach a man like a man" has been proved again and again. The sympathetic touch, the brotherly love, the man to man interest, all have their power. Since this is true, I am sure we can do no greater thing than to put our young men to work for each other.

If one would do successful work, it is well to have something good to stand by and something good that will stand by them.

In religious work, I know of no better thing to recommend to our young men who are at work fr young men than that they go about their work "All standing by the Bible and the Bible school."

No one thing in the Baraca movement has contributed so largely to its success as the fact that we have always stood by the Bible and the Bible school. In fact, I think I can safely say it has been the thing that has made the movement a success.

Nothing in the physical, social and mental development is overlooked—but the Bible comes first. Place the Bible first and other things are easy; place the other things first and Bible study is hard.

Observation teaches us that the classes who give first place to Bible study are the ones who hold their membership the longest and who develop the largest number of Christian workers. If we stand by the Bible and the Bible school, our classes will not get too big for the school but will be an active part of the school, and will be the right hand helpers of church and school.

The value of the platform. "Young men at work for young men, all standing by the Bible and the Bible school," cannot be estimated, for eternity alone can tell.

It brings out the best in the man, and is helping to shape the destiny of our nation.

GOD'S MERCY

(He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy. Mic. 7:18, Golden text for Sunday, Oct. 15).

We shall never be able to measure the length and breadth. and depth of God's mercy. We try to do so, but all in vain. We have to measure mercy by that which the men and women about us manifest, and many of these are merciless while God is full of mercy. God wants to show mercy. God seeks a way of manifesting his mercy, not of withholding it.

In the Sunday school lesson of today we have a strange and wonderful display of God's mercy. The Israelites were captives, in an alien land under a pagan king, and justly so. They deserved by their own deeds and conduct to be there. They had disregarded all the commandment and pleas and warnings that a righteous God could give them; they had killed the true prophets of God and violated every law and statute laid down of a loving Father for their security and salvation. They had willfully, rebelliously, deliberately gone into sin and idolatry. The more favors that were granted them the more they sinned and the more openly did they rebel. On this account, after warnings were unheeded and pleas were of no avail, God allowed His chosen to be carried into captivity. For seventy years they had served as captives and bondsmen in a foreign land. Now the God of their father, not because they deserved it, but because of His own boundless mercy, gives them opportunity to return to their native Jerusalem and to once again become a nation and a people. In spite of their conduct God gives them another chance.

Surely God delights in mercy. God understood that these people had suffered enough and had now learned a valuable lesson. They were yet on teachable ground. God had taught them through suffering to hate idols and to return to the true worship.

Dr. Talmage once told of a father who had forgiven his wayward son three times and had come back the fourth time for his father's forgiveness. "No," said the irate and injured father, "I forgave you three times, but I will never forgive you again." And the son went off to the world again with a broken heart and died in shame and in sin. But God takes back His children the thousandth time as cheerfully as the first. "I am told," continued Dr. Talmage, "that the mercy of God is an ocean. Then I place on it four swift-sailing crafts, with compass, and charts, and choice rigging, and skillful navigators, and I tell them to launch away and discover for me the extent of this ocean. That craft puts out in one direction, and sails to the north, this to the south; this to the east; this to west. They crowd on all their canvass, and sail ten thousand years, and one day come up to the harbor of heaven; and I shout to them from the beach, 'Have you found the shore?' And they answer: 'No shore to God's mercy.' Swift angels, dispatched from the throne, attempt to go across it. For a million years they fly and fly; but them come back and fold their wings at the port of the throne, and cry, 'No shore! no shore to God's mercy."

Indeed there is no limit to God's mercy. It embraces all who will, who accept, who turn, who desire to be saved, blessed and benefited by it. "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth."

—From The Christian Sun.

FATHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

From a school in Japan comes a singular story, such as hardly any other country could offer. Some yeaers ago two cousins, Miss A. and Miss B., both of them strongly opposed to Christianity, had entered the school, and at the end of three years each appeared equally indifferent. One morning the school set out for their spring walk, leaving behind Miss B. who was not well. A long, quiet day afforded the opportunity for an earnest talk between her and her teacher. This resulted in the revelation made, upon the teacher's promising to "never tell," that Miss B. had believed in the Bible from her first student year, but she had assumed indifference because her cousin would report her at home and she feared the persecution which would follow. It seems that on sending the girls to the foreign school, each father had exacted a promise from his niece to spy upon her cousin and if she detected the least manifestation of interest in Bible lessons, she was to inform the girl's parent. In her last vacation, Miss B.'s father had become suspicious of her attitude and kept her out of school six weeks. While the cousins never ventured to exchange confidences, it proved, some months later that Miss A. was no more indifferent than Miss B. Her class having written papers upon the Reformation under Luther, Miss A.'s paper gave evidence that she was a Christian believer. The teacher, while constantly praying for these pupils, maintained a scrupulous silence and left them to work out their own salvation. Finally, Miss B. gathered courage enough to make an open confession of her faith before the whole school, and was baptized. When her father heard of it, he mildly remarked: "Well, if you put a girl in the lion's mouth, don't you expect her to be bitten?" He made no trouble for his daughter and married her to a Christian man.—

—Last Saturday, Oct., 7, the Southern Power Company's electric lines from beyond Charlotte to Durham were put into active commission when electric voltage of sufficient power to turn factory wheels in Durham shot through these lines, a distance of 173 miles, from the Catawba River. Durham is to use 20,000 horse power generated at the Catawba River and transmitted over what is said to be the longest line for the transmission of electric power in the world.

—Italy and Turkey do not seem to be fighting much and it is believed they will settle their hostilities without much bloodshed. To that end all good people should have anxious solicitude, for war is awful, and is to be avoided always.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Answers to Assigned Questions.

I think Elijah did not do all the things commanded at that place. Some of them were left for his successor to do.

W. F. Kennett.

Lesson for Next Week.

Remainder of 2 Kings.

OUR STRENGTH MAY BECOME OUR WEAKNESS

Our strength as a Church may easily become our weakuess. Indeed, we fear this has, in a measure, already come to pass. Our doctrines are very broad, as broad as the New Testament, and they ought to be. Our spirit, if we are genuinely Christian, is sufficiently catholic to make us greet, in the name of the Lord, all who profess to be his. And this is as it should be. We would not, if we could, make any Methodist bitterly sectarian or become so narrowly partisan that he could not give to every lover of Jesus Christ the right hand of Christian fellowship in truest sincerity; but we are fully persuaded that Methodists lack too much of what may be called, in no offensive sense, a proper churchism. There is no requirement that as a Methodist, one shall be so broad as to think that any other Church is as good for him as his own, and that in order to be friendly with other Churches he must let his devotion to his own languish or be faint. If our Church is to us what it ought to be, it is worth contending for and worth standing for as the best expression of the New Testment truth. This does not mean that all others but Methodists are beyond he pale of redemption or that they teach error. Let us stand by our Church as for us who are in it in the very best form of evangelical truth worth contending for and, if need shall come, worth dying for. A little more real churchism among us will do nobody any harm, and it will do us a great deal of good. Try it.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

BE BRAVE.

It was a principle with one of England's great modern artists never to reveal the frequent moods of sorrow to which his sensitive temperament made him the victim, but rather always to display a brave and hopeful temper, "to ease life for everybody," as he said. It is a chivalrous way in which to bear one's self for the sake of the encouragement which even the forced attitude of good cheer may bring.

There is a very subtle danger in sorrow. It tends to magnify itself and to induce selfishness. It pushes into the inner circle of all occasions and declares its presence. We must reckon with this, and not permit the thrusting forward of gloom or grief. Life does need to be heartened, and it is the gracious ministry of many who feel the sorrow of the world most keenly to bear themselves so bravely that their very presence brings blessings. In the process of encouraging others we ourselves become braver. One way in which to prevent despair is to make life easier for others by the assertion of what little bravery we have at the moment. This act induces courage. It also helps the battle for our friends.—Zion's Herald.

THERE IS ANOTHER MAN.

During a heavy storm off the coast of Spain, a dismantled merchantman was observed by a British frigate drifting before the gale. Every eye and glass were on her, and a canvas shelter, on a deck almost level with the sea, suggested the idea that there might be life on board. With all his faults, no man is more alive to humanity than the rough and hardy mariner; and so the order instantly sounds to put the ship about, and presently a boat puts off with instructions to bear down upon the wreck. Away after that drifting hulk go these gallant men through the swell of a roaring sea; they reach it; they shout; and now a strange object rolls out of that canvas screen against the lee shroud of a broken mast. Hauled into a boat, it proves to be a trunk of a man, bent head and knees to gether, so dried and shriveled as to be hardly felt within the ample clothes, and so light that a mere boy lifted it on board.

It is laid on the deck; in sorrow and pity the crew gathered around it; it shows signs of life; they draw nearer; it moves, and then mutters—mutters in a deep, sepulchral voice, "There is another man!" Saved himself, the first use the saved one made of speech was to seek to save another. Oh! learn that blessed lesson. Be daily practising it. And so long as in our homes, among our friends, in this wreck of a world which is drifting down to ruin, there lives an unconverted one, there is "another man," let us go to that man and plead for Christ; and go to Christ and plead for that man; the cry, "Lord, save me, I perish," changed into one as welcome to a Saviour's ear, "Lord, save them, they perish,"—Thomas Guthrie.

Tuberculosis Serum.—A California physician claims to have discovered a cure for tuberculosis, if taken in the early stages. The testing of it will be watched with interest. The man who discovers a sure cure for the great white plague will be a great benefactor of the human race.

ON GOING STRAIGHT AHEAD.

Teach me, dear Lord, to be independent not only of others but of myself—of my successes and my failures. I am constantly made weak by thoughts of myself: "Am I doing well?" "Am I getting on?" Make me ashamed and afraid when I cannot see that thou art the doer of my deeds. And if thou has done them, I may peacefully leave them with thee. Yet each day has its lesson for me, I know, to be read out of the temptations and sins, the joys and accomplishments, of all its hours. Teach me this lesson, dear Master, as from a book, that I may not be puffed up by my good deeds, or depressed by the attempts thou hast not thought best to make succeed. O, how much I shall be spared when I am able at length to trust my life to thee—heartburning and fretfulness, disappointments and covetousness, envy and foreboding, the fever of ambition and the chill of despondency. Human rewards are uncertain and often inadequate; thine are sure and abundant. Human recognition is slow and cold; thine is quick and loving. With men my masters, I am a serf; with thee, my Lord, I am a king. I will mark my path as far ahead as I can see, but I will rejoice if thou dost bend otherwise the course I lay down. I will listen earnestly to all voices of men, their commendation, their advice; but one whisper of the still small voice shall drown them all. I will begin this day to live straightforward with thee, taking up my tasks one by one, doing them as best thou dost give me to do them, rejoicing to be used of thee to win some victory; rejoicing also when no victory is won, that I have been used of thee; too loyal to my Leader to claim any triumph, or find fault at any defeat. That is my ideal, but how far short of it I shall fall, dear Lord, if thou do not lift up my life!—Deaconess Advocate.

THE TESTIMONY OF A FUNERAL.

The death of Dr. Fuzinaka, proprietor and chief physician of the Choshun Hospital in Osaka, brought striking testimony to one instance of quiet Christian influence in the empire of Japan.

Dr. Wallace Taylor reports that Dr. Fuzinaka's funeral was entirely Christian and simple in its conduct. No Buddhist or Shinto rites were in any way connected with it. Representatives from every church in the city, and several from outside, took part in the services. Among those present was a large delegation of the city police, also companies of boys and girls from the city school and vicinity. The city physicians, though not seated together, were present in large numbers; over 380 'rickshaws were included in the procession, which was between two and three miles long. Dr. Taylor records his own surprise at the demonstration; he had not realized that Dr. Fuzinaka had so large a hold on the esteem and sympathy of the city. It was a tribute to the worth and Christian influence exerted by the man and his hospital.

Dr. Taylor's acquaintance with this Japanese physician covers a period of more the twenty-five years, and the entire history of the Choshun Hospital. In the days when that hospital was in his charge he took Dr. Fuzinaka as his assistant, and later aided him in completing his medical education. When it became difficult for an American to continue in charge of the hospital, Dr. Taylor persuaded his protege to purchase it and stood by him in the venture. Dr. Fuzinaka finally accumulated a considerable fortune for a Japanese through this institution; he was a conscientious, Christian man, and benevolent, not only in his hospital, but outside in his medical work and by direct gifts to good causes.—Missionary Herald.

A TYPICAL COUNTRY MEETING IN JAPAN.

It is in a great farmhouse in the Yoshikawa and all the paper doors have been taken out, thus throwing the matted rooms into one. Every inch of space is taken up with men, women and children, sitting close together on the mats. The meeting began at two o'clock. I gave my little talk and the Bible-women talked too, and by and by we dismissed the meeting, but they did not want to go. Four times Ono san talked, and we sang until at last it was half-past seven o'clock and the big room grew so dark that I could hardly see Ono san's face; and yet those eager people stayed and listened. At eight o'clock we had our supper, served by the dim light of a tiny lamp, and out in another room the old people and younger members of the farmhouse family were eating their supper around the blazing kettle, for the guests always are served alone.

About half past nine the Christians began to come back for an evening of conversation and song, and I bethought me of my Perry pictures of the life of Christ, so I brought them out and oh, what great pleasure they gave!

As those toil-hardened hands picked up one picture after another, and as people saw that life pictured before them for the first time, it was a privilege just to watch their faces and listen to their remarks.

But most of all my attention was drawn to Mr. Hitomi, a man saved from drink to become one of the strong, earnest Christians of the little community. He was holding in his band the picture of Christ in Gethsemane and looking at it with eager eyes; then he laid it down to take up another, only to come back again to that face.

Soon his breast began to heave and tears came into his eyes. Still holding the picture in his hands he wiped his eyes with a big handkerchief and looked and looked, all unconscious of our presence, until finally overcome by his emotions he got up and abruptly left the room.

We could hear him walking up and down outside, but he did not come in; and he was still weeping when one of the other men went to bring him in later to sing that much loved hymn, "Alas, and did my Saviour bleed," which had been suggested to them by the incident.

The burly farmer sat quietly listening until we came to the words, "But drops of grief can ne'er repay the debt of love I owe," and then, his voice shaking with feeling, he joined in the words, so truly his own, "Here, Lord, I give myself away; 'tis all that I can do."

It was after eleven when the little meeting finally broke up and we saw the lanters go bobbing off among the trees and shrubbery of those country roads.—From an article in the Japan Evangelist.

A KOREAN GIRL'S CHOICE.

The Christian young folks out here in the Far East are going to revolutionize some bad, old customs. The trouble is to persuade them to go slowly enough.

We have a young girl whose mother is not a Christian; her father is a helpful Nicodemus. The mother according to good heathen custom had made up her mind to marry her daughter to a well-to-do unbeliever, but Jewel said: "No, that is contrary to the Bible; it says, 'Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers.'" She said it so decidedly that her mother stopped to listen and father came to her relief: "What kind of a husband do you want, then?"

Now, that was a hard question to answer out loud, even though it was already answered in Jewel's heart. Some time ago, she had trouble with her ear and Dr. Purviance's assistant, Sang Yini Yi, had very modestly given it his most skillful attention. But the pain was only transferred from Jewel's ear to her heart and she was secretly wishing, "If father would only marry me to some Christian like Sang Yini Yi, instead of to a heathen!" Now was her chance. "What kind of husband do you want, then?" Quick and quietly came the honest answer: "Someone like Sang Yini Yi." "That's not so bad as it might be," thought the mother, and the father was well satisfied.

About six years ago this young medical assistant was one of two boys who supported their dying father as he wandered homeless into Koi San, thirty miles north of our city, Chong Ju. God guided them to a kind-hearted Christian, Kim the "foreign medicine seller." Kim took them in, fed them and did what he could for the dying man. After the father's death, Kim gave a home to the younger brother, Sang Yini Yi, taught him his drug business and, best of all,brought him to Christ. Sang Yini Yi was a bright boy, with one of the most clear and distinct voices I have heard in Korea. When he laid hold of a man and tried to lead him to Christ, it was pleasant to hear his earnest, clearly enunciated words.

When Dr. Purviance needed an assistant, Sang Yini's application was accepted; and Doctor said the boy had the best head on him of any assistant he had. He has the instincts of a physician.

That is why Jewel said; "Someone like Sang Yini Yi." In time, her father found out Sang Yini's mind and the match was made. They had a quiet little wedding in the church last summer and are making a Christian home with good prospects for useful lives. This is one kind of work Christ is doing in Korea.

F. S. Miller, in Woman's Work.

A DESIRABLE AILMENT.

A poor sailor, almost ruined by drink, was induced to sign the pledge for a year. When the year was out, he went and renewed it for life. He had just received his wages, and had the money in a bag in his inside pocket, when he met the tavern-keeper at whose house he used to drink.

"Well,old fellow," said the tavern-keeper, "how do you do?"

"Pretty well," said the sailor, "only I've got a lump here on my side."

"Oh!" said the other, "it's cold water does that; if you'd drink some good liquor it would soon take the lump away."

"But," said the sailor, "I have just renewed the pledge for life and I can't do it."

"Then mind what I say," said the inkeeper," "that lump will go on increasing, and very likely before another year you'll be burdened with it."

"I hope so," said the sailor, taking out his money bag and shaking it. "It's cold cash."—Ex.

From Pastors and People.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

It has been months since the last Postal Card appeared and quite a number of people have been kind enough to say they have missed it. The editor did not mean to wait so long, but it is so easy to procrastinate when once you begin.

Many things have occurred in the interim and some things have failed to occur which we had very much desired. Two special meetings have been held—at Palestine and Bethel—Revs. A. L. Hunter and G. F. Millaway were our pulpit help and each did good work. Each of these meetings resulted in a revival and some souls were saved and added unto the church. Our third special meeting began at Gideon's Grove first Sunday in this month. Rev. Edward Suits was our helper. He came and preached for two days and then was taken sick and forced to return home. The prospect for a revival was good, but as the pastor was too hoarse to preach the meeting had to close. This we greatly regretted.

Our third quarterly conference was held last of August and Bro. J. B. Ogburn was found to be elected delegate to Annual Conference. Bro. P. H. Angel was elected alternate. Our special meeting for Flat Rock is to embrace the 4th Sunday in this month and Bro. Suits is to help.

Our fourth quarterly conference is to be held at Gideon's Grove Church, on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in November. President Swain will preside. The President's appointments are as follows: Palestine Friday, Nov. 3rd, 11 a. m.; Gideon's Grove, Saturday, Nov. 4th, 11 a. m;—quarterly conference to follow; Bethel, Sunday, Nov. 5th, 11 a. m. and at Flat Rock at 3 P. M.

We have much yet to do in order to close up the year's work, but our people are reliable and we expect them to be true as they have been in the past.

We are sorry to have to note the serious illness of Mrs. Wm. Parish of Flat Rock. She is a most excellent woman. We trust she may be longer spared to her family and her church.

Mrs. Wm. Pegram, our oldest member at Gideon's Grove, has been quite feeble for several months. Bro. Jerre Highfill, the senior member of Flat Rock Circuit, is able to be out again.

Sister Highfill is very feeble in body, but strong in faith and calmly awaits the summons from on high. She has a hope that is sure and steadfast and that anchors to that within the veil. It is a benediction to converse with her.

The tokens of remembrance by our people since the last Postal Card have been too numerous to report at one time. The nice new honey brought us by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Canada must go in, however. We are enjoying it each morning. Mr. and Mrs. J. Wright Pegram have moved into their new home and are busy as bees getting things in shape.

Our Annual Conference will soon come and then we will all "go up to Jerusalem not knowing the things that shall befall us there," One thing however is certain—no people anywhere can surpass our Henderson people in the matter of entertainment and if we do not have a good time while there it will not be their fault.

May the Holy Spirit lead us in the work of the Conference and may the will of the Master be done, in what shall befall us there—especially when the Stationing Committee's report is read.

Asheville.

Last Sunday—110 in Main School. 31 at Woodfin Hill, 27 at Woolsey Hall.

The evening service was unusually well attended.

The grandchild of Rev. J. H. Stowe is slightly improved. Miss Xannie is still nursing it.

Miss Cora Carter of Democrat is training at the Mission Hospital in this city.

Siler City.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, filled his regular appointment Sunday and we were certainly glad to have him back with us again. He seems to have entirely recovered and preached us a splendid sermon. Our fourth quarterly conference will be held with the church at this place at 3 o'clock, Saturday before the 4th Sunday. We hope every church on the circuit will be represented. G. E. M.

BRETHREN IN THE MINISTRY

On Sunday, Oct. 22nd, we will begin a ten days meeting in the First Methodist Protestant Church in High Point. Please join us in daily prayer for a great ingathering. Please ask your congregation to pray for us. Will every one who reads this please pray for us?

A. G. Dixon, Pastor.

Tabernacle Ct.

Remember our fourth quarterly conference meets in Tabernacle Church next Saturday, the 14th. Preaching at 11 a. m. Conference will open at 1:30 p. m. All officials are earnestly requested to be present and ready to report as to the work and progress in his or her department. There are things to be considered and acted upon by this conference that will affect the entire circuit for the coming year and perhaps longer, so you can see the importance of having a good representation from the whole circuit. So I hope those who are greatly interested will encourage those who are not so much so to attend that they may become so and take a more active interest in church affairs.

Let the young and old who are not members of quarterly conference attend and learn to do the church work.

Yours truly,

C. A. Cecil.

Oct. 9, 1911.

Liberty Church.

Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Fogleman, filled his regular appointment here Sunday morning, Oct. 8., but owing to the cool gloomy day, the congregation was much smaller than usual. However, Mr. Fogleman gave us a splendid sermon on the subject of Home building or Character building. After the sermon the communion service was observed and a good number took part in it. After the regular services were over, we held a meeting of Methodist Protestnats and elected church officers for the coming year. Mr. Fogleman announced that he had to leave to assist Mr. Williams in a meeting, and that Rev. W. C. Kennett would fill his appointment here Sunday night.

Some of the members of the various churches here have organized a union C. E. Society, which meets every Sunday afternoon in the school building. We are very glad indeed to have with us in this work, as well as in the graded school, Mrs. R. C. Cox, who was formerly Miss Nora Coble of Greensboro.

Our Sunday school is still pegging away, but the attendance is not as large as we want it to be. Every one is cordially invited to the Tuesday night prayer-meeting which is always helpful.

Mrs. Fogleman, moher of our pastor, has been visiting here for some time.

With best wishes to the Herald,

I am, very cordially yours,

Nannie Hunter Wells.

Reporter.

Liberty, N. C., Oct. 9, 1991.

Haw River Ct.

Dear Brethren:—The fourth and last quarterly conference will be at Midway on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October. Several very important things t ocome up. Some changes are going to be asked for. Salary to be made. Now, brethren, you have been good to attend and this is as important a conference as we have had, also the delegate to advise in regard to pastor, etc.

C. E. M. Raper.

Granville Ct.

Rehoboth. Bro. Bethea was with us last first Sunday with one of his unusually good sermons. A large congregation present. It seems that our attendance has increased somewhat since we've had Bro. Bethea. The people of our sister denominations around Rehoboth seem to like to hear him preach as well as we do, and we are always glad to have them worship with us.

Our Sunday school is still doing well. We have twenty-five new song books for the school. We hope that their use may arouse new interest in the singing. While our Superintendent is away at school, Egbert Kittrell, his assistant, is very ably filling his place.

Brother Egbert is very faithful. We think he has not missed a Sunday yet.

Today we held our monthly prayer-meeting. Miss Hattie Harris led the meeting by reading Matt. 5:1-20. Others were then called upon to read a verse and comment on it. We enjoy our prayermeetings at Rehoboah, and we believe they do us good.

Miss Crystal Bobbitt is teaching our school at Rehoboth Academy this term.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Mrs. J. W. Davis.

Cleveland Ct.

Third quarterly conference was held at Mt. Pleasant on Saturday before the first Sunday in September. Bro. "Billie" Richard, of Lawndale, was elected delegate to conference. Bro. P. S. Gettys, alternate. Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Friendship on Saturday before the third Sunday in November. We are looking forward to a good ending this year. W. D. Reed.

Orange.

Our protracted meeting at Chestnut Ridge church has just closed. We had a good meeting. Rev. C. J. Edwards was our pulpit help, and he proved to be very acceptable.

His sermons were highly complimented and were very effective. We had eight professions and four accessions to the church. The church has been greatly helped and revived. A prayer meeting has been started to be held twice a month and to continue the whole year.

Chestnut Ridge church is improving and her prospect at the present time is very bright.

We are now making preparations for winter. New stove pipes are being purchased and a new flue being built. The new heating apparatus will extend nearly all round the church, thus insuring a warmer church than formerly.

We request the prayers of God's people that the work here may continue to build up. Best wishes to all readers.

Pastor.

Pine Grove, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Our special meeting began first Sunday and closed Wednesday night. Bro. Porter preached the 11 o'clock sermon, Bro. Lowdermilk preached in the evening. Monday Bro. Raper came and did all of the preaching till the close, which he did so helpfully to us all. He seemed to be full of the Spirit. The church was much revived, two confessed Christ, some penitents, a number asked for prayer in their behalf. In the midst of the revival Bro. Raper had to go home. Bro. Lowdermilk being unwell, he thought best to close for the present. Bro. Raper, as other of our ex-pastors, was a welcome visitor in the community; so was Bro. Porter. He was one time pastor.

May the Lord bless the word preached, may it be as bread upon the waters, may it be treasured up many days hence and may the penitent ones find peace and pardon. G. A. Ingram,

Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Yadkin College Ct.

Dear Herald:

It makes us glad to hear of the good work that is being done over the different fields. Our protracted meeting began the first Sunday in October. It was a dark and cloudy day and to add to the gloom, we were disappointed in that Bro. Hutton was kept from coming to assist our pastor on account of sickness in his family; hope that his children are well now. Our pastor called in his appointment at West Lexington and came and began the meeting and preached tiwce each day until Thursday evening, and God blessed his labors in the salvation and reclaiming of 16 precious souls and a gracious revival in the church. Nine were received into the church. May God's richest blessing rest on the young converts and may we as members of the Church of Christ show to each more of the spirit of the Master in our daily life. It was one of the most happy meetings it has been my pleasure to attend in a long time, filled with the Spirit, yet there were some that would not give up sin and accept Jesus as that personal Savior. It seems to me that with the earnest preaching and entreaties of pastor and friends it would have been impossible for any to resist the Spirit of God, yet some seem careless and unconcerned about the soul. May God's Holy Spirit woo them soon. I will close by saying, Pray for us that we may do our Master's will.

Yours in the Master's service,

C. L. Hedrick.

Mt. Pleasant, Uwharrie Ct.

We have a good live Sabbath school; the average attendance is about 45 or 50.

Our special meeting began first Sunday in October, and closed Thursday night. We had a good meeting; not many conversions, several backsliders reclaimed. Bro. Trogdon's help was Rev. John Hulin, of Denton. The sinners were faithfully warned to flee the wrath to come. If they are eternally lost I do not think their blood will be required at the preacher's hands.

I certainly hope our circuit will pay out this year what we promised Bro. Trogdon. He is worthy of it and more, too. I want to insist that stewards do their best to raise all their claims. I hope we may be able to get Bro. Trogdon next year. I would be glad if Uwharrie people would report more than they do.

G. F. Cashatt.

Union Grove, Orange Ct.

This church has not been heard from through the columns of our paper in some time, but we are here and still alive to the defense of our Lord and our church. Our building has been improved some recently and we hope to do more in that line in the future. We have a very good Sunday school conducted by Mr. G. W. Riley.

Mr. Robert Turner and Miss Maud Riley, both members of our church, were married July 5, by Rev. Mr. Ross, of Hillsboro M. E. Church.

Rev. J. D. Williams came Oct. 1 and conducted a series of services for us, which were greatly enjoyed and appreciated by our church. Our church was greatly blessed. I do not know how many souls were blessed. Mr. Williams certainly preached faithfully, but he always does that, and we are always glad for him to come home. Mr. Casto, our pastor for the past two years, was with us on Thursday and preached in the afternoon. It was a great pleasure to have him with us, we are always glad to have our faithful pastors come back and be with us. We do hope his health will be restored and he will be spared many years to our church. Mr. Williams was called home on account of sickness so the meeting had to close Thursday. We had a gracious out pouring of the Holy Spirit at the last service; it was good to be there. Five joined our church on profession: Messrs. Woodson Garrett (a Confederate veteran) and son, Jeter, Luther Dodson, Amick Borland, and Carl Lloyd; others are to join at our next service. Mr. Casto is to preach for us fifth Sabbath, Oct., 11 A. M., Providence permitting.

With best wishes to the Herald and her readers—we like the new name and remember with love the Record.

Mrs. Williams, mother of Rev. J. D., was with us several days during the meeting and is spending a few days in the community to the pleasure of her many friends who are always glad to see her N. B. Lloyd.

Oct. 9, 1911.

La Grange.

Dear Herald:—Our special meeting will begin in La Grange Monday night after the fourth Sunday in this month. Rev. T. M. Johnson will do the preaching. We are glad to have him and hope all who feel any interest will pray for the success of the meetings.

J. H. Abernathy.

Concord.

Our series of evangelistic services are in progress. Bro. Suits, our engaged help, being unable to come, Bro. Thos. E. Davis, of High Point, came to our assistance. Three professed faith in Christ last night. Brother Davis is preaching very acceptably, and we are hoping and praying for a glorious revival.

At Fair View on Oct. 1st., five were received into the church.

A. Oscar Lindley.

Oct. 10, 1911.

Bethel Auxiliary.

It has been quite a while since we had a report from Bethel, I guess because reporter has been busy. Our Sunday school is still progressing nicely. Our special meeting was held the 3rd Sunday in Aug., and week following. Bro. Pike was assisted by Rev. G. L. Curry, of Graham, who did some very earnest preaching which we trust will live in our memory and help us to live more earnest Christian lives. There were nine converts and the church was very much revived.

Miss Novella Foust closed a very successful summer school at Bethel Academy not long ago. Miss Lizzie Foust, who has been teaching at Eureka, is at home now. Two of the young men of Bethel gave us a pleasant surprise recently by bringing home their brides. Mr. Peter Foust was married to Miss Minnie Layton, of near Liberty and Mr. Robt. McPherson to Miss Etta Cheek, of Bethel. We extend to them our most hearty congratulations and hope for them a pleasant, happy life, filled with usefulness to Him of whom cometh all our blessings.

Bethel Foreign Missionary Society met with Aunt Sallie Foust at the home of her son, Mr. J. A. Foust, last Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. We were cordially welcomed by the hostess and our meeting was well attended and interesting. Our Society voted to do also some home mission work and a committee was appointed to get up a box to send to the Denton Orphanage. Our society, though small, has some earnest, faithful workers and is doing a good work. May our Heavenly Fathe direct us.

Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. A. L. Foust, fourth Sunday evening in October at two o'clock. Subject: The suffering of the children in heathen lands.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

Bessemer City.

We have been having a good meeting here in the M. P. Church. The Lord has blessed us with great blessing. We have had 15 conversions and reclamations and Rev. Mr. Loy has done great service; he is loved by all the people.

We have a clear title to our church now.

Our Sunday school is progressing rapidly. We have an average attendance of about 55 or 60. We think that we have about as good a pastor as there is the Conference. M. W. Henderson.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.

Our special meeting closed at Flat Rock Thursday night. Rev. N. G. Bethea was our help, and was with us all the week. He did some of the most earnest preaching I have ever heard. His sermons were so plain and simple that a little child could understand them and that is just the kind of sermons we most need in revivals. While we did not have as many conversions as we would like to have had, yet we feel that great good was done and that we ought to live nearer to God than ever before. We had five to unite with the church; we hope they will not forget their pledges and be faithful members.

There were many earnest prayers sent up for the sinners, and I do hope they will find lodgment with some poor hard-hearted sinner and cause him or her to turn and seek salvation. I don't see how young men can sit back and reject their mother's prayers who are so anxious to see them saved, surely there is a time coming when they will be calling on their mothers to pray with them, but it may be that it will be too late. Life is too short to be wasted in sin when we as Christians could do so much good. Sometimes I feel that the reason we do not have more conversions in our meetings of today is that we as Christians are not prayerful as we should be, are thinking too much of worldly pleasures and the trifles of this world to pay any attention to the eternal realities of the next. Listen to that question of Jesus; meditate on it: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I believe people who seek Christ early in life will enjoy heaven more than those who only give their remnant days to Him. Surely we ought to be willing to do service for Him while active in life. We are still going to pray for the unsaved around Flat Rock. As we look upon the fields of God, whitening unto the harvest, it is our duty as Christians to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers that all may be saved. Can any Christian be indifferent to this great work of saving lost souls? Surely not. It gladdens the Christian's heart to hear of souls being saved. I wish that we could get the sinner to realize what that beautiful hymn means to us: "Will There be any Stars in My Crown?" Will we have any crown at all? Only the individual can answer that question and it is worthy of consideration. We all learned to love Mr. Bethea the short time he was here. We didn't only enjoy his sermons, but it was a pleasure to have him in our home, and he will always be a welcome visitor. We were very much disappointed in not having Mrs. Bethea with us all the week, however, we enjoyed the short time she was with us. The sermon Mr. Bethea preached on Sunday night needs special comment. He used for an illustration the church as a hospital, Christians as nurses, and God as the great physician, and it was the most beautiful illustration I have ever heard. It seems to me it was enough in that one sermon to melt the heart of the vilest sinner.

We wish to thank Mrs. Stubbins for her faithful service at the organ during the week. I am sure it was appreciated by the choir.

I would like to say that the year, 1911, is rapidly passing by, and what have we done? Paid our assessments for the different interests of our church and paid our pastor's salary which is due him at this time? If not, let us all see that this is done at once. What we do must be done quickly for the Annual Conference is drawing near and we would like for our pastor to go to Conference with all assessments paid in full.

Josie Reavis, Reporter.

Henderson, N. C., R. F. D., 3.

NOTICE!

The fourth quarterly conference for Granville charge will convene at Union Chapel, Saturday, October the 21st, 11 A. M. In addition to the regular form as laid down in the discipline the following program will be carried out:

The Need of a Closer Fellowship between the Churches of the Charge, Z. T. Garrett.

How to bring this Closer Fellowship About, Robert Harris.

The Need of a Better Financial Plan, H. A. Finch.

Better Financial Plans and How to Work Them, E. C. Harris.

Let every member of each church be present that can possibly come as these brethren who are to speak will have something interesting for us and we are sure the meeting can be made profitable. Bring your friends with you. Let every official of every church be present that day as there is important business to be transacted that concerns the entire charge.

N. G. Bethea, Pastor.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Bro. Bethea filled his appointment at this place Sunday last. The sermon great and instructive as usual.

Because of much sickness, threatening weather and other hindrances, our Sunday school was small last Sunday.

Regret to report the illness of teacher of Class No. 5, Mrs. W. F. Robertson, and daughter, Miss Lillie May.

The most common alarm with us now is "Don't touch my arm." Vaccination, that's all.

One of our former and beloved pastors, Rev. G. W. Holmes, is expected to preach for us the fourth Sunday of November.

Polk Garrett.

Oct. 10, 1911.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.

This afternoon affords me pleasure of writing a few lines to your valuable paper which always brings the glad news from our sister churches.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Cid Church on Saturday before the second Sunday in November at 1:30. Preaching at eleven, and dinner on the grounds. Now brethren, let every one come and especially every church should be represented, and let everybody see that they have paid the minister their part according as the Lord has blessed them this year and then Bro. Trogden will go up to Conference fully paid up, as we all like our pastor and fully trust he will return to us again next year. Bro. Trogden filled his appointment at Cid yesterday and preached a very able sermon and so much interest was manifested that one sinner was convicted and came up to be prayed for. May the prayers of the Christian people go out for that lost soul, and many others around Cid. The dear brother had his wife and children with him and we had the pleasure of entertaining them in our home and we certainly did enjoy their sweet songs that sister Trogden had trained them up to sing, and we hope to have the pleasure of meeting them again.

We were very glad to have Brother Joshua Morgan, of Piney Grove, with us Sunday. May God's richest blessings rest upon the Herald and its many readers.

Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, Liberty Ct.
Alson Gray Amick.

A. G. Amick was born September 24, 1841; died October 2nd, 1911, aged 70 yrs. and 8 days. He had been afflicted for about three years. He bore his suffering calmly and patiently, as only a true child of God can.

Uncle Alson's name appears first on Mt. Pleasant church register in 1858. Before he became afflicted he was always present at church—at his post of duty.

The funeral services were conducted by his former pastor, Rev. C. J. Edwards, on the afternoon of the day following his death.

The wife, five sons, two daughters, one brother and one sister, twenty-four grand children, and a host of relatives and friends survive to mourn his departure.

The home of which Uncle Alson was the head is poorer, the church and the community are poorer by this dispensation. Our loss is his eternal gain.

May the relatives and friends find comfort and consolation in the fact that they may meet him some sweet day and with him forever enjoy the bliss of life eternal.

Will H. Neese.

Hartshorn, N. C., October 9.

Mrs. Ed. Clark died on October 8, at her home in Concord, N. C., at the age of 19 years, of that fatal disease called consumption. Sister Clark had only been married about eight months. The funeral services were conducted in the home on October 9th, by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. E. Davis, after which the body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Rocky Ridge. There were many present to sympathize with the grief stricken husband. May God sustain him in this hour of sorsow; and help him to live such a life as will prepare him to meet her in glory.

Raymond King Little, the infant child of Brother John Little and wife, died on Oct. 2nd, at the age of 19 months and 22 days after an illness of some length. The body was taken to Fair View church, where the funeral services were held on October 3rd, and the body was laid to rest.

Lester Bunton, infant child of Brother Filmore Bunton and wife, died on October 6, 1911, at the age of 1 year, 11 months, and 24 days. The funeral services were held in the home, on the next day, after which the body was buried in Oak Wood Cemetery.

May God comfort all the sorrowing ones.

A. Oscar Lindley.

Oct. 10, 1911.

MISSIONARY ITEMS.

A Japanese Christian tells how he was won to Jesus: "A missionary lady got twenty-five Japanes boys into a class to tell us of Jesus. We had great curiosity to see this foreign lady, and not caring about Jesus. we did care to see how everything looked—her dress, her books, her furniture, her pictures. But every time she would have us read the Bible. We had the Gospel of Luke. We read till we came to the crucifixion. She could not speak Japanese; she had an English Bible, we had a Bible in Japanese language. When we read the story of the Cross, she got down on her knees and prayed for us. We could not understand what she prayed, but we watched her close. Soon she began to cry. Then she fell on her face, weeping bitterly. Then twenty-five Japanese boys cry too. Then inside of three weeks, all us twenty-five boys give our hearts to Jesus."—Exchange.

The women of Montclair, N. J., are planning a most dleightful series of drawing-room lectures on the study book Light of the World. A committee representing seven denominations is arranging a series of weekly lectures. Each denomination furnishes its biggest and best drawing-room for one meeting, acts as hostess on that day. Tickets for the seven lectures are sold for one dollar, the price to include a copy of the study book. The lecture covering the topic of each chapter is to be given by some expert. So great is the demand for tickets that hundreds have been sold already and it looks as if it might be necessary to hold the lectures in the banquet hall of the hotel. In addition to the study features it is planned to have a guest of honor at each meeting and to close with a social hour. Some such plan is possible in almost any town. One large, popular course like this would undoubtedly result in a number of small, informal classes for closer study of the text-book.—The Helping Hand.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. ELIZA ANN DORCAS GILL.

1820 1911

It once seemed to me that when one lost friends the age of the deceased measured in some degree the poignancy of the survivors' distress. An infant had not grown into one's life—no cataclysmal grief could follow its loss while an aged one had outlived the tender love of friends, perhaps survived all early companions; what logical sequence remained but oblivion?

I learned the bitterness of my false reasoning in both premises. The heart's calendar measures not by months and years. My first tumultous sorrow was for my beloved foster-mother who failed to respond to my wild cry of questioning terror when I saw her in the unresponsive stillness of death.

A tiny white casket once shut from earth a baby face whose light and brightness had made earth radiant for only four short months.

Oh! the heart counts not by passing years, and "the horologe of eternity" records not the hours of our little day.

As time slipped noiselessly past, adding to the years of my friend, Mrs. Eliza Gill, I hoped she would teach us that one could live a century and more, remaining mentally alert and physically competent to bear the lighter burdens of the increasing years. She had entered her tenth decade of years, and her mental vigor was wholly unimpaired, while her physical recuperative powers seemed marvelous; and she could not be taken unawares. She was ready for a family reunion at the home of a dear friend, or for the more extensive reunion in her Father's house of many mansions. In our human selfishness we deplored the call she received to enter the greater glory.

Mrs. Gill was most loyal, most true to friends and to opinions that she had adopted in either church or state. Much of the history of the Methodist Protestant Church in Western North Carolina might be made a part of her biography, for she was one of the charter members of that evangelical body in Buncombe County, North Carolina.

Doubtless there are many who could testify to her "free-hearted hospitality," for I have been told that no one was ever turned hungry from her door or shelterless into the night or storm from her roof-tree. Scores of men and women could testify to the generous and liberal hospitality they have received from her; and students at Weaverville College, under the old regime, could give almost unbelievable accounts of the inexpensive board that could be secured at her home.

Mrs. Gill was born in South Carolina, in 1820, but was brought by her parents to Buncombe County, in this state, when she was less than two years old. The remainder of her life was spent in this county, and for more than eighty-five years she lived on the same farm, surrounded by the majestic mountains and under the alluring skies of a land whose elusive beauty has defied both pen and pencil to transfer its charms to canvass or to translate them into comprehensive phrase. I mention it simply to tell that indescribable beauty surrounded my friend during "the days of the years" of her life, and entered into her soul, preparing her for the glories she has surely found beyond the stars.

Her father, Rev. Andrew Pickens, represented a well-known family of his native state, South Carolina, and her mother, born Weaver, came from a family of prominence in North Carolina. She would have been glad to lay a chaplet on the graves of her beloved dead for she held them in her heart tenderly, unforgotten.

She was the mother of ten children, two of whom, Mr. Isaac Wesley and Dr. James Nelson Gill, survive her. Besides her very own she gave a mother's care and attention to seven others during the extreme helplessness of their infancy or childhood, for helplessness appealed to her with an insistent claim that was never ignored.

O my friend, I call good-bye across the abysmal chasm that separates the present from the past! And when the eternal silence claims me, may we exchange greetings where no baffling experiences are possible in the clear light of the Land where no shadow falls.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

N. B. McDowell.

Weaverville, N. C., Sept., 26 1911.

Loved in Life, Remembered in Death.

On Wednesday morning, October 4th, 1911, at half past two o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Mr. E. B. and Sarah Sprinkle, and took away their little daughter, Nellie Cleo, aged five yrs., 7 months. and 28 days. She had been sick a few days. All that loving hands and constant care of both physician and loved ones could do was done, but none could stay the hand of death. God in his wise providence called her unto himself, where there is no more sickness, sorrow, pain and death, but one eternal day. Her body was laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. The funeral was conducted by the writer. May the Lord bless and comfort them, in their trouble. The family extend thanks to friends and neighbors for their kindness during the sickness and death of their little child.

T. A. Williams.

ORPHAN'S HOME.

We want to thank the following Sunday schools for their first Sunday collections, also the Ladies' Aid Society at Enfield for $12.50 to purchase a washing machine and wringer.

The children join us in thanking those who are remembering us so generously.

Asheville S. S.	$2.50
Hobbs Chapel S. S.	4.10
Star S. S.	1.75
Fair Grove S. S. Why Not Ct.	2.63
Mr. Mattie White, Union Grove,	2.00
Laides' Aid Society, Enfield	12.50
Total	$14.48

Etta Auman.

CALL NO. 11.

Those who have responded to call No. 11 of the Conference Brotherhood an account of the death of Rev. J. H. Turner, are as follows:

Rev. J. H. Stowe	$3.00
Rev. J. F. Dosier	3.00
Rev. D. A. Highfill,	3.00
Rev. W. D. Fogleman	3.00
Rev. J. F. McCulloch	3.00
Rev. W. L. Totten	3.00
Rev. A. O. Lindley	3.00
Rev. J. W. Heath	3.00
Rev. G. W. Holmes	3.00
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk	3.00
Rev. S. W. Taylor	3.00
Rev. A. H. Bryans	3.00
Rev J. H. Moton	3.00
Mrs. S. W. Knight	1.00
Mr. T. L. Whitaker	1.00
Mr. F. C. Pittman	1.00
Total	$42.00

Only about 30 days from this date remain in which to pay. Brethren, please do not put this off until Conference with the thought that you can pay up and be reinstated. If you will only send in the amount at once I can have the books all straightened up and be ready with a report when Conference comes.

Your brother in Christ,

A. G. Dixon, Sec.-Treas.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 10, 1911.

—Durham comes with prompt denial, through its Board of Health, of the great number of pellagra cases erroneously attributed to it, saying "there are only 21 cases of pellagra in the town of Durham and only 32 cases are reported in the whole county."

A GIFT OF A MILLION FOR MISSIONS

The News Bulletin of the American Board has this statement concerning the gift of $1,000,000 at one time to its treasury: "Not long ago two of the officers of the board arrived in Boston, bringing a million dollars in securities, the most notable gift ever made to the American Board, and one of the greatest gifts to foreign missions in all history. It was given as an endowment for the higher educational work in the board's colleges and theological seminaries in its 20 missions. The name of the donor is withheld from public announcement at present, but it is one of America's great names in philanthropy and missions. The committee have for many months been collecting data, and have determined the use of the income for the next year. Critical needs of many years' standing can now be partially met. Practically all of the board's seminaries and colleges will receive substantial aid."

WHAT A CHRISTIAN HYMN DID.

A rich Japanese silk merchant sent for the missionaries in his town, and entertained them most hospitably. He told how, as a child, he had attended a Sabbath school. "Very often," he said, "right in the midst of my business the words of the hymn, 'Jesus loves me, this I know,' come to me, and, try as I may, I can't get them out of my mind." He then repeated the hymn from beginning to end, and added: "Though I've lived my life without religion, I feel that it is the most important thing there is, and I want my little girl to be a Christian; and it is for that purpose," he added, emphatically, " that I have placed her in the mission-school, that she may become a Christian."—Mis. Review.

A PASTOR'S TESTIMONY.

The cause of the poverty of the Church at home, and the small salaries paid to preachers, is not the loyalty of men to Christ or their large-heartedness; the cause is the small caliber of so many Christians that leads them to seek gifts rather than to give them. The following is a testimony from one pastor:

Do not say, "Can God?" Thus Israel in unbelief spake against God (Ps. 78: 19). Rather let us say, "Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power" 2 Chron. 14:11). In these days of great movements in religious matters where there is apt to be more or less leaning upon, and fellowship with, the world lying in the wicked one, unconsciously, there are hundreds of ministers in small parishes who might be used of God to help Him work the field which is the world, beyond their utmost thought, would they but accept His plan for this age, and let Him, through them work out His eternal purpose.

I feel constrained to bear a testimony to such as are willing to hear it. I have been for over thirty-one years an ordained pastor, having in that period three charges. I have never had a large congregation nor a modern church building, always a small building and, comparatively, a mere handful of people; yet I have seen God working, as many others might see Him if they would, but believe Him and live in the comfort of 2 Chron. 16:9.

I have been in my present parish nearly nineteen years, and have a congregation of not over 120 people, yet I have received from those people in that period to help give the Gospel to every creature, so that the Church might be completed, and the kingdom come, over $115,000 without a missionary committee or organization of any kind. For the last six years they have averaged over $8,000 a year for missions, simply by keeping their privileges before them by a few letters from missionaries at every Wednesday evening service, and occasionally one or two at a Sunday service.

Our current expenses are not over $3,000 a year, and these, with the money for missions, all come easily and voluntarily, without a lecture or social entertainment of any kind.

Let every minister in a humble place be of good courage. Preach faithfully that Jesus is God, that the whole Bible is the Word of God, all given by the Holy Spirit; that Jesus Christ saves by His precious blood all who come unto God by Him; that He ever liveth to make intercession for His people; that He is coming again for His Church, and later, with His Church, to judge the nations, bind the devil, convert Israel, as Saul of Tarsus was converted, and set up a kingdom of peace and righteousness on earth; and you will see how God will honor and bless His own truth. D. M. Stearns.

Germantown, Phila., Pa.

Missionary Review.

" I SHALL NOT WANT."

A Study of the Twenty-third Psalm.

The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want."

I shall not want rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

I shall not want drink. "He leadeth me beside the still waters."

I shall not want forgiveness. "He restoreth my soul."

I shall not want guidance. "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake."

I shall not want companionship. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me."

I shall not want comfort. "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

I shall not want food. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

I shall not want joy. "Thou anointest my head with oil."

I shall not want anything. "My cup runneth over."

I shall not want anything in this life. "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

I shall not want for anything in eternity, "And I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

That is what David said he would find in the Good Shepherd. One day it occurred to me to see how this Twenty-third Psalm was fulfilled in Christ. This is what I found in Christ's own words:

"I am the Good Shepherd."

Thou shalt not want rest. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Thou shalt not want drink. "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

Thou shalt not want guidance. "I am the way, the truth and the life."

Thou shalt not want companionship. "Lo, I aw with you all the days."

Thou shalt not want comfort. "The Father . . . . shall give you another Comforter."

Thou shalt not want food. "I am the breod of life; he that cometh to me shall not hunger."

Thou shalt not want joy. "That my joy might remain in you, and that your joy may be full."

Thou shalt not want anything. "If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it."

Thou shalt not want anything in this life. Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Thou shalt not want anything in eternity. "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also."

—Mrs. John R. Mott, in Northfield Echoes.

—It is believed that, when corrections have been made and the official count given out, Maine will still be in the "dry" column by a safe majority.

—Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., whose condition has been reported as very serious, continues to improve and is able now to be up in his room much of the day.

THE LOCKET CORDELIA EARNED.

"Aun-tee! Aun-tee!"

"Here, Cordelia," answered Auntie. She knew by experience that when Cordelia called in that tone it was something very, very important that could not possibly wait two seconds. "Here, in the pantry."

With shining eyes and crimson cheeks, Cordelia balanced herself on the doorsill. "Auntie, Jessie's got a birthday present. I just saw it. It's the prettiest, loveliest gold locket—like a heart, you know—and its on the tiniest little gold chain, and it's got a real pearl. O, Auntie, it just makes me most crazy. Do you s'pose—could I ever"— The wistfulness of Cordelia's eyes finished the sentence.

"I would be as happy as you if you ever could, dear," answered Auntie. "But you know Jessie's father has plenty of money to buy things for his little girl, while Uncle"—

"Yes, I know." Cordelia winked very fast and looked at the toe of her shoe. "But if I earned it"—

"How could you earn it, girlie?"

Cordelia did not answer for a moment. Then she lifted a face that dimpled and sparkled like a whole handful of sunbeams. "I know!" she shouted, spinning on one foot. "I just thought. Blackberries! That place back of the pasture; they must be lovely and ripe. O, Auntie, would you"—

"Yes, I would," replied Auntie. "I'll pay twelve cents a quart if they're very clean and nice, and I think perhaps Grandma Bennett and Mrs. Austin"—

"So do I," laughed Cordelia. "Won't Jessie be surprised? It's a thousand times nicer to earn things. Where's my sunbonnet? Where's a pail? O, I want a big one!" Then she was out of the door like a summer breeze.

It was a long way to the blackberry patch. The sun was very hot. There were stone walls to climb, and in her haste Cordelia fell down half a dozen times, but she always got up laughing. "I shan't mind the briers and things a bit. Why didn't I think of it before? If somebody has picked them—O they haven't! Goody! Goody!"

The black berry patch was not a very large one, but the thorny bushes were bending invitingly with luscious, purple-black fruit.

" 'Most as long as my finger," rejoiced Cordelia. "My! they're sweet." She set to work in earnest, glad of the breeze that cooled her hot cheeks.

Suddenly there came a faint murmur of voices. And—yes, it was the soft thump, thump of berries into pail. Cordelia parted the bushes with a savage little frown. "Well, who ever? The idea of coming here to steal berries! This is Uncle's land. I shall just tell them. O, it's that new little Jenkins boy and girl! They live in the old Tinford house, and their mother does washing. O dear! Prob'ly they're very fond of blackberries. What are they talking about?"

"Do you s'pose we ever can, Jimmie?" Cordelia heard the tiny girl ask the question. She was picking away bravely, and did not seem to mind the cruel digs that the tall bushes gave her.

"Course we can." Jimmie was larger and full of manly assurance. "We've got a whole week before her birthday. An' you know that chair costs only four dollars. Why, yes, it's quite a lot of money, but it's only forty quarts at ten cents a quart. Ain't these berries dandy? Say, when we go home, we'll go round by the furniture store, so we can see the chair again. An' I might tell him to save it for us. We don't want him sellin' it to somebody else."

"S'pose he should? O, we'd better tell him! Won't she be surprised though? When she comes home from washin' at Mrs. Gardner's, we'll have it all ready. An' when she says, 'O, I'm so tired!' then I'll say, 'Here's something to rest you, ma.' An' then you'll bring out the chair, an'—an' "—The little girl stopped, swallowed hard, and laughed.

Jimmie rubbed his eyes very swiftly. "It'll rest her a lot," declared he gruffly. "An, we'll buy it all right if somebody don't drive us out of here. I don't believe, though, that any one cares if we pick 'em."

Then both children started and shrank back as the bushes flew apart to disclose an excited little girl—a girl with sparkling eyes and glowing face. "I heard," she announced breathlessly. "I couldn't help—well, I guess I listened. I was picking berries to earn something, too; but I've changed my mind about it." The berries flew from her pail into the little Jenkins girl's. "You needn't be afraid anybody'll drive you out. This land belongs to Uncle. And you take your berries to Auntie—Mrs. Phillips—and she will pay you twelve cents if they're nice and clean."

"But they're only ten cents," protested the astonished Jimmie.

"Well, you'll take more if you can get it, won't you?" flashed Cordelia. "And you go to Grandma Bennett and Mrs. Austin, too. I'll introduce you. Now, let's pick berries."

"But I thought you said you changed your mind about picking"—

"Jimmie Jenkins," said Cordelia severely, "you are certainly stupid. But then you're a boy. I've changed my mind about what I pick berries for. That's all. Don't you know that three folks can earn a chair easier than two? Now, I'm going to work."

It was a very tired, sunburned Cordelia that finished telling Auntie all about it. "We sold fifteen quarts," said she very proudly. "That's one dollar and eighty cents; and you and grandma and Mrs. Austin all want more. Why, we'll have that chair before we know it, and I'm going to be there when they give it to her."

"Will you work for the locket after that?" asked Auntie softly.

Cordelia shook her head. "There won't be enough. But I'll have a locket," whispered she, with a queer little smile. "It won't show like Jessie's, but I'm going to use Mrs. Jenkins chair for one. I can wear it—inside my heart."—Florence Oliver, in Northern Christian Advocate.

THE PINK STRING.

"Peter," said his mother, "I want you to do a little errand for me."

"Yes, mother, tell me quick, for it's most school-time."

"You will be sure and not forget?"

"O mother, Jack Ray's been telling me that whenever he has an errand to do his mother ties a string round his finger. That keeps him in mind every time he looks at it that he has something to do. Did you ever hear of any one doing that?"

"Yes, many a time. So you would like a string?"

"Yes, here's a string bag, and here's a nice piece of pink string."

"Now then"—As she tied it on his finger, mother told him what she wanted him to do.

"And, Peter," she added, "be sure to speak very politely when you ask it."

"Yes, I'll remember."

"I know you always mean to be polite, dear, but you sometimes forget, as all little boys do. Good-by."

She kissed him, and he hurried away, soon joining some other boys on the way to school.

"What's that on your finger" asked one of them.

"Oh, that's because I have an errand to do so as to make me think of it."

But, as he gazed at it, what was the errand, anyhow? In his interest in watching the string tied on he had only half listened to what his mother had been saying, and now the most he could remember of it was that he was to be very, very polite..

"I can do that, anyway—to everybody. And perhaps, if I do it all the time, I shall get to thinking of the errand—Oh, please excuse me, I didn't mean to."

In his hard thinking he had run against a big girl as he was turning into the school yard.

"Peter," said she, "you're such a polite little fellow that it's easy to excuse you."

"A good thing to say of a boy," said one of the teachers who was passing in. "Keep it up, Peter. Good manners are a great help to a boy in going through life."

"If they'll only help me to remember that errand," said Peter to himself.

He did remember the politeness. He stood up to give a girl his seat on a crowded recitation bench. He said his best "please" and "thank you" when he went to the teacher's desk to ask about an example, all the while thinking:

"If I'm very polite, p'r'aps I shall think of the errand."

At the close of school the teacher said: "Who will carry a book with its marked lesson around to Johnny Parks house: He is sick and could not come to school today."

"I will," said Peter, rising in his seat as he spoke.

"Thank you, Peter. I might have known you are just that kind of a boy."

He had to go several blocks out of his way to do it. No remembrance of his errand came into his head as he left the book at the door with a polite inquiry about Johnny, and he walked on slowly, doing his best thinking.

He passed a yard in which were many beautiful flowers. A lady was inside whom Peter had sometimes seen talking with his mother, so he raised his hat to her with a very polite little bow. She smiled at him and then said:

"I wonder if I couldn't get you to do something for me!"

"Of course, ma'am," said Peter, again taking off his hat. "I shall be very glad to do it."

"I am cutting some flowers to send to a sick woman," went on the lady. "Mrs. Hale told me about her"—

"Oh, that was it!" Peter flung up his hat and capered about for joy.

"That was what?" asked the lady, with a smile.

"My errand. Mrs. Hale's my mother, and you're Mrs. Garde; and my mother told me to come here and ask you, very politely, if you would let her have some of your flowers to take to the sick woman. She tied this pink string around my finger so I wouldn't forget. But I did forget, all but the politeness."

Mrs. Garde laughed as she put a wonderful bunch of flowers on Peter's arm, saying as she did so:

"If you hadn't taken off your hat so politely, I shouldn't have thought of asking you to oblige me."

"Will you please to excuse me for not taking it off to say good-by? You see my hands are full."

"Oh, my dear boy, you did remember, didn't you?" said mother, as he laid the flowers before her. "We will try the string again."

"Mother," said Peter, gravely, "it wasn't the string at all. It was the polieness."—Sydney Dayre, in Christian Register.

BILLY.

At ore of the great packing houses of the West they have trouble unloading the cars of sheep that came in daily. Knowing that the sheep would follow a leader, the man in charge struck upon the following plan: He selected and trained a large ram so that when a plank was run from the ground to the floor of the car he would rush in, mingle with its inmates, then at a call from his master he would gayly trot down the plank to the ground. The others would quickly follow, and soon all would be safely in a fold from which there was no escape until they were led to the slaughter pen.

His owner did not butcher Billy. O no! He was too valuable to be made into mere mutton and sold for a few cents a pound On the contrary, they took good care of him, and he was well fed and protected. Have you ever noticed how the devil takes some men (Church members of position and prominence preferred), whom he trains feeds, and fattens in order that he may use them to lead other men asray? It is a low calling for a Christian, that of being the devil's decoy to lead other men tosupport the saloon or any other slaughter mill, for that matter.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

The world is wide
In time and tide,
And God is guide,
Then do not hurry.
That man is blest
Who does his best
And leaves the rest.
Then do not worry.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth with falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and the light.

Rev. W. C. Lassiter was in our city recently and favored the Herald office with a call. He says this has been a busy year for him.

POST-JUBILEE PLANS.

The Central Committee on United Study of Missions, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, Chairman, Miss Rachel Lowrie, of Philadelphia, Presbyterian Member, has sent out a series of suggestions to all the Women's Boards which participated in the Jubilee last spring. There is a proposition:

1. For a simultaneous campaign for members and magazines to be conducted by all Women's Mission Boards throughout the country during October, 1911.

2. That Boards publish the plan of the campaign with telling illustrated material in September issue of their magazines.

3. That each Board issue a circular letter to every auxiliary, early in September, urging its participation. As this is a simultaneous effort of all denominations, the entire town or city will be reached by this call.

4. That each Board be fully prepared with sample magazines, membership cards, and a bright, attractive leaflet, giving "Reasons" why one should be "a member of our Society."

5. That each Board urge its secretaries to organize new auxiliaries, during the month of October, in churches hitherto without them, and to send immediately reports of such organizations to the Boards.

6. That a careful record be requested of members and subscriptions gained, to be sent to the Boards, both for the denomination and for the grand total of all.

Recommendations to Local Societies.

a. Each auxiliary having been informed by its Board through magazine and circular letter, will arrange to unite with other auxilaries in the town or city, in a prayer service asking God's blessing on the effort.

b. Every church shall have a committee of its ablest women to canvass the entire women membership within a certain definite time, say ten days. One woman to twenty would be a good division.

c. An appeal should be made for membership in the auxiliary, and a subscription to the woman's missionary magazine secured, coin cards, sample magazines and membership cards to be furnished by Boards.

d. At the close of the time specified, let all committees meet for a luncheon, or supper, with reports of success.

e. If there are churches without auxiliaries this would be a good time for them to organize. Any town, village or city may enter the contest.

The Committee, through Mrs. Peabody, also advances a proposition for Federation between all the Boards, of which we shall hear more in the future.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, OCT. 22.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—Lessons from Things. Jer. 13: 1-10; Matt. 22:15-22. (An Object Lesson.)

Daily Readings.

M. Victory of Christ, Matt. 13:31-32.
T. Humility, Rom. 11:17-18.
W. Barrenness, Mark 11:12-14; Jno. 15:6.
T. Fruitfulness, John 15:1-5.
F. Citizenship, Matt. 22:16-21.
S. Redemption, I Cor. 11:23-26.
S. The topic.

Some Object Lessons.

For an object meeting request the Endeavorers one week in advance to bring to the meeting each of them some object which will be shown to the society, and a lesson drawn from it. I suggest a few possible objects.

A fountain pen does not work well when it has only a little ink in it, but flows too rapidly and makes blots. It is like a head with too little sense in it.

A watch is best wound in the morning, because then the springs give their best tension to the working hours of the day. So the morning is the best time for Bible-reading.

A razor shows the value of rest regularity, for if one is used incessantly it loses its power of taking and keeping an edge; but it regains that power after a few days' rest.

If a new book is opened carelessly that back is likely to be broken, the glue and the stitches giving way. It is equally necessary to deal carefully and gently with one who is beginning the Christian life.

An exposed photographic plate must be developed in the dark room before it is brought into the light, or it is ruined. Thus the great thoughts of the Bible are not useful in your life till you have made them your own by solitary meditation.

A medicine case full of useful medicines is worth more to the traveler than a whole drugstore at home. Thus the Bible that is worth most to you is what you commit to memory and carry with you.

A pencil is useless as long as its lead is broken off; and who is to know that a Christian is a Christian if he does not in some way express himself?

An envelope may be directed, but it will not reach its destination without a postage stamp. So also your prayer will not reach heaven without the stamp of faith.

A spyglass, looked through the wrong way, puts objects further away instead of bringing them nearer. It is possible to go to the Bible in such a way, with pride and conceit and obstinacy, that the use of it actually throws heaven farther away from one.

A lump of coal, held in the hand and not placed on the fire, not only does not heat, but soils the hand. It is like a fine emotion that is not transmuted into action.

An alarm clock, if one disregards its summons a few times, ceases to have power to arouse one. It is thus with a conscience that is not heeded.—Daily Companion.

Short Addresses.

The historic fig-tree could not remain a purely negative quantity. There were two charges against it. First, that it bore no fruit, and, second, that it cumbered the ground. It was taking up room that might have been put to profitable use. So there are two charges to be brought against every man who is not living according to God's plan. Because one is not guilty of crime and lawlessness, he can not conclude he is not innocent. The disobedience of barrenness, inaction is real and whoever is permitted to live in that state is a mere subject of the merciful forbearing of God.

We are told in an Eastern allegory that a merchant, going abroad, gave to two of his friends, two sacks of wheat each, to take care of till his return. Years passed; he came back and applied for them again. The first took him into a store house, and showed them to him, but they were mildewed and worthless. The other led him ont into the open country, and pointed out to him field after field of waiving grain, the produce of the two sacks given him. Said the merchant: "You have been a faithful friend. Give me two sacks of wheat; the rest shall be thine."

Illustration.

Mr. MacKay, a missionary in Uganda, has told us in his diary how he dug for water on top of a hill, while the natives declared that water could only be found at the bottom. "When we got too far down to throw up the earth with a shovel," he writes, "I set up a trestle of strong trees; and with a rope and pulley and bucket, much to the astonishment of the natives, we hoisted up the clay, till we reached water just at the depth I predicted. The people had never seen a deep well before. It took more than a week to sink the well; but when I afterward repaired a battered pump which I bought in London, and they saw a copious stream ascend twenty feet high, and flow and flow, as long as one worked the handle, their wonder and amazement knew no bounds. 'MacKay, lubare, lubare, dala!' But I told them that there was only one Great Spirit, that is, God, and I was only a man like themselves."—Tarbell.

The man who would rather be right than happy can never be robbed of his peace.

NOTICE, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS

I want each society—both Young People's and Jr.'s—to give me certain information at the earliest convenience:

1. When you were organized?
2. How many members have you on roll?
3. Has your membership increased this year?
4. Is your Society doing any definite work?
. How many, and what committees do you have?

C. H. Whitaker, Chmn. Conf. C. E. Committee.

Greensboro, N. C., R. 7.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BANNER.

Let those Sunday schools which are competing for the Conference Sunday school banner take note that your report for the year's work is to be in the hands of the Secretary of the Annual Conference by Nov. 10th, 1911. See minutes of last Conference, page 31.

Rev. S. W. Taylor is the Secretary of the Conference, and his address is Littleton, N. C. All reports should be is his hands by Nov. 10th.

When that resolution was passed it was thought that Conference would meet one week earlier than it does, but those wishing a chance at the banner must meet the conditions just the same.

Yours for the Master,
A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 10th, 1911.

A Public Queue-cutting.

A missionary in China sends a description of the great "bloodless revolution" which is today so thoroughly gripping that country. The occasion was a public queue-cutting. On the floor and in the galleries of a large tea-house were crowded some 1,500 at 2,000 people. At one end of the building was a platform occupied by those already "shorn," who earnestly and vigorously exhorted their brethren to "come forward." Out of the audience one man at a time made his way to the front. When he reached the platform a specially appointed operator held the queue out at ful length, while another with a huge pair of shears snipt it off. Rounds of cheers accompanied the operation. In another part of the building 30 barbers were kept busy serving their customers. According to the native newspapers, several hundred men that night took their homeward way with their queues in their hands. Through such innovations as this China is coming into its new era.—Congregationalist and Christian World.

—The Ecumenical Methodist Conference is now in session in Toronto, Canada.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley. M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

—Dr. A. T. Robertson, teacher in the Baptist Seminary at Louisville, is quoted as saying before the Baptist Alliance in Philadelphia: "Given, an open Bible, an open mind, and a conscience in good working order, and we shall have a Baptist." Which implies that Methodists, Presbyterians, Christians, and others haven't an open Bible, an open mind, a conscience in good working order, a statement much easier made them verified, and one sustained neither by logic, by history, nor by facts.

—From The Christian Sun.

—The Beattie family have secured permission, it is reported, to bury Henry Beattie, Jr., the convicted wife murderer, in the Richmond cemetery. Young Beattie of course hopes—the heart hopes even when there is no hope—but his aged father understands that hope is gone and his son's fate is fixed—in all human probability.

—Mr. Charles U. Butler and wife, singing evangelists, are in a great meeting at Columbia, S. C. There are a hundred voices in the choir, great congregations attend and there are conversions at every service. But, and this will be hailed as good news by friends, we may write it "Rev." as Bro. Butler is to be ordained to the gospel ministry at Spartanburg, S. C., next Tuesday, 17th, inst.

—Rock of Ages, that beautiful and inspiring hymn which has been a source of strength and comfort to so many, was written by a leper. The author, Toplody, was visited the day before he died, by a physician who assured him he was better and that his prospects were brighter. "No," said Toplady, "no one can live after such manifestations of God's glory as I have seen." And he died the next day "hidden in the cleft of the Rock of Ages."

—Dr. W. W. Staley says the laundry business is larger in volume and expense than that o fmanufacturing. That is, it costs more to keep goods clean than it does to manufacture them. So cleanliness is as difficult a task, and as costly, as creation. One is reminded of this huge expense item when one reads that in Des Moines last mouth the school children used one thousand cakes of soap, thirty-two hundred roller towels and two thousand hand towels.

ODD COMPARISONS.

Falstaff's soldiers were afraid of nothing but danger.

A drunken man who had slipped down, thought it very singular that water always freezes with the slippery side up.

He is worth a million if a hundred per cent. were taken off for cash.

MUSIC IN THE UNITED STATES.

"The Americans are certainly a music-loving people. At present the musical standard of the American public, taken as a whole, must be pronounced a low one, though we rightly claim for this country a high rank in cultivation.

"We have the musical taste of the people for music, their strong desire to have the best, and their readiness to recognize what is best when it is presented to them.

"Nature has done her part generously; it remains for us to do ours."

WANTED.—A young man who desires to enter the printing business and become a linotype operator may hear of an opportunity by addressing the editor of this paper. Young men of both literary and mechanical turn make the best operators. Applicant must have had considerable school training in the use of the English language and must be willing to work and free from bad habits.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Pedagogy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

NOTES.

—Italian soldiers have entered Tripoli.

—Bro. A. H. Stack, of Grace church, is in with inflammatory rheumatism.

—Miss Lillian Glass is in St. Leo's Hospital, having been operated on for appendicitis. She seems to be recovering.

—Miss Donna Knight has been confined at St. Leo's Hospital for some time, sucering much.

—The Greensboro fair is in progress now. One of the attractions is a flying machine that goes up each day.

—Miss Mary McCulloch recently entered the Art Academy of Cincinnati, Ohio, and reports that she likes the school and the work.

—Wouldn't it be a fine thing if every one of our more than two hundred churches should this year meet all claims and be reported to the Annual Conference on the honor roll?

—The trial of the McNamara brothers for wrecking the Times building in Los Angeles, Cal., is in progress now, and is attracting wide attention because the crime is supposed to have been committed in a war "between labor and capital."

—A Pittsburgh man wanted a city office in the gift of the city council. As the time approached for the election of city council, he drew up an agreement to vote for a certain man on condition that that man if elected, would move to give the coveted office to the seeker, and then asked his fellow church members to sign it!

—Mr. A. F. Moore, a shoemaker and street preacher in Greensboro for years, died recently of paralysis. His death recalls a dialogue. A little negro boy said to one of our mail carriers:

"What do you think of Preacher Moore?"

"Oh, I guess he's crazy," replied the mail man.

"That's what they all said about Noah," said the boy.

HEALTH AS AN INVESTMENT.

As an investent in the health of their members, four large fraternal orders, two international labor unions, and one of the largest insurance companies in the United States have established sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis, according to a statement issued today by the National Association for the study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The Royal League, the first fraternal order to establish a sanatorium, conducts a hospital for its tuberculosis members at Black Mountain. The Modern Woodmen of America conducts on at Colorado Springs, the Workmen's Circle, at Liberty, N. Y., and the Independent Order of Foresters have one at Rainbow Lake, N. Y., and will soon open a second one at San Fernando, Cal. The International Typographical Union has since 1898 conducted a sanatorium at Colorado Springs, and the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of America has recently opened up a new institution at Rogersville, Tenn. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is now erecting a sanatorium at Mt. McGregor, N. Y., which will be the first of its kind to be established by an "old line" insurance company.

In addition to these institutions already established, the Benevolent and Prospective Order of Elks, the Foresters of America, the Knights of Columbus, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and several other orders are considering the advisability of erecting sanatoria for their tuberculosis members. Some of the large fraternal orders and labor unions, like the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World, the International Photo-Engravers Union, and others conduct educational campaigns against tuberculosis, though they do not have the sanatoria of their own. The Equitable Life Assurance Society also has recently established a "Conservation Department" in which the prevention of tuberculosis will be given especial attention. Other insurance companies are considering similar action.

Since the membership of the leading fraternal orders alone is nearly 15,000,000, the National Association estimates that about 30,000 members of these lodges die of tuberculosis alone every year. Since more than half of these lives could be saved at a comparatively small outlay, the Association figures that the fraternal orders are losing millions every years in death claims which might be saved.

—Selected.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1911. NUMBER 47.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.
We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

SOCIALISTS AND CHRISTIANITY.

It is often asserted and perhaps as often denied that Socialism is opposed to Christianity. One writer remarks that the "spirit of Socialism and the spirit of true Christianity have no affinity." He makes quotations from a number of Socialist writers in proof of his statement. Herman Kutter, German Socialist, is credited with the assertion that "the German Social Democracy does in the main profess atheism. * * * * * It does not believe in eternal life; and it regards Christianity as an outgrown faith." Blatchford, an English Socialist, is thus quoted from an article published in 1904:

"I deny the existence of the heavenly Father. I deny the efficacy of prayer. I deny the providence of God. I deny the truth of the Old Testament and the New Testament. I deny the truth of the Gospels. I do not believe that any miracle was ever performed. I do not believe that Christ was divine. I do not believe that he arose from the dead. I am strongly inclined to believe that he never existed at all."

An editor of a Socialist paper published in the United States in April of this year gives out the following:

"For years our readers have bombarded us with thousands of questions relative to our beliefs regarding God, heaven, prayer, the devil, and hell. God, heaven, hell, prayer, and the devil, as orthodoxy has taught us, are silly and abominable rantings of superstitious and medieval minds —rantings of medieval fable merchants."

This Socialist editor further says, "I do not believe that Christ was begotten of mortal woman."

"I do not believe in the orthdox heaven, as heaven means here and not over yonder—nowhere but here."

"Prayer, spoken prayer, makes God an idiotic simpleton."

The editor of the "Appeal to Reason" on Sept. 2, 1911, says: "I believe Christ was a good man, but no more divine than other men."

A society calling itself the "Free Thought Socialists League," publishes a "Socialist series" of pamphlets. No.1, is entitled "Christ the Great Enemy of the Human Race." No. 2 is entitled "The Useless Christ of the New Theology." Both are written by H. S. Wishart, one of Europe's Socialist leaders.

Doubtless many other similar statements might be gleaned from the writings of Socialists—or so-called Socialists. But there are other Socialists that call themselves Christians and profess the highest regard for Christ and for Christianity.

There are men who hate Christ because His life and teachings condemn them. Some of these Christ-haters are calling themselves Socialists because they hope by this means to secure tribute from the discontented masses. They think it a popular thing to rail against Christ and against the Church and even against God.

Others love Christ and love the church who sincerely believe in a different social order or rather a different industrial order from the present. It seems unfortunate that these honest, earnest men and women should be confused in the public mind with the loud-mouthed, profane crowd that are imposing their unbelief and their blasphemy upon the poor working people at so much a line.

But the quotations above given indicate how active is the spirit of anti-Christ in our day and in our country. Christians should be stimulated to a bolder attitude in their proclamation of the Christ. We are too ready to assume that the cause of Christ does not need our testimony. It is true, Christianity will live without us, but we cannot be true men and women and refuse to protest and testify when we hear our Christ denied and impugned.

—In the Ecumenial Conference in Toronto, Bishop Hendrix was telling of the South's effort to maintain the purity of the home life and of the trial and conviction of Beattie. A smart Englishman who had been elected secretary of the conference interrupted the Bishop to ask: "If it had been a white man, would he have been condemned?" This threw the fat into the fire. Many cried out: "It was a white man! It was a white man!" and Bishop Hoss rose and protested against such questions as that—questions reflecting on any part of the Methodist world.

—Bro. Millaway is preaching earnestly and powerfully in Grace Church. He aims at bringing people to an immediate decision of the great question of personal salvation and has very definite directions of procedure. His preaching grows richer as the years pass. He has a fund of personal observations and experiences to draw upon, which add interest and effectiveness to his appeals. There have already been some responses to his appeals, two or three men having yielded to their convictions and come out on the side of Christ.

—The uprising in China against the government is not to be put down easily, if at all. The rebels seem to be gaining ground. It is thought that they are about to capture Nanking. Hankow in already in the hands of the rebels, according to report.

—Judge Harlan of the U. S. Supreme court has passed on to the Higher Court before which all must appear. His was the dissenting voice in the decisions which gave a new interpretation to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. President Taft will be called to fill another vacancy.

—The W. C. T. U. State Convention met here this week and had an interesting time. Mrs. Goodno is the new president.

—The ecumenical conference of Methodists in Toronto closed with a half-hour praise and prayer-service.

AUTUMN LEAVES, HOW THEY WON MRS. CARSON.

By Mrs. P. O. Rhodes.

"Oh, mother, do look! Such beauties, aren't they?" and Elizabeth Brenwood held before her mother's eyes a handful of beautiful autumn leaves. "Such gorgeous colors, too; how I wish I could paint them and catch their exquisite tints! Just look—scarlet, crimson, tan, russet brown, and that bright yellow, then this variegated one that seems to combine all colors, and these with dashes of green!"

"Yes, my dear, they are certainly lovely, and now I want you to go down and give these extra missionary magazines to old Grandma Lane—she enjoys reading them so much."

As Elizabeth sped away, the mother's fond gaze followed her and thought her little daughter of dark hair, dancing eyes, and crimson cheeks, in her tan dress, with dark green coat and scarlet cap, looked herself like a veritable animated autumn leaf fluttering over the ground as if driven by a gale of wind. As she arranged the leaves in the parlor, she grew thoughtful, then all at once she started, a glad look crept into her face, as a new thought came to her, and a slow smile curved her lips as she pondered. Then "I'll do it," she said, "what a wonder I never thought of it before." She went swiftly to the telephone, held a hurried conversation with one of the workers in the missionary society to which she belonged, who gladly promised her co-operation in the plan. She soon had lunch ready, and after the dishes were put away she said to Elizabeth, "How would you like to take me out to see your 'gorgeous' autumn leaves this afternoon and gather a few?"

"Oh, mamma, truly do you mean it? That's too good to be true! I'll run and hitch up Dick right away before you even have time to change your mind."

Soon they were riding along enjoying the exhilarating air and beautiful landscape spread before them. Such a bewildering array of colors! Along the roadside and in the fence-corners were clumps of golden-rod and clusters of purple asters; the dark green of the meaddows, the straw color of the fields of stubble which was long ago yielded up its rich harvest of golden grain, and now lay basking in the bright autumn sunshine; farther away stretched the woods, the trees having recognized their conqueror, the frost, had blushed crimson and donned their brightest gowns to do him honor and now stood arrayed in all the brilliancy of autumn glory. Over all was the deep blue sky and settling around the horizon was a hazy veil of purple. "Mother, wouldn't one be really famous who could paint all these colors true to life?"

"Perhaps, yet such fidelity to nature is rewarded by criticism that is all too glaring and unnatural. None but the great Master Painter can give that indescribable touch to the whole which makes it truly beautiful. The poet calls thes days 'the melancholy days, the saddest of the year,' I suppose because of the thought that soon all this beauty will be destroyed and all will become bare and brown, soon to be covered with the cold white mantle of the snow.

"To me they seem like a glorious sunset, with all the colors of the rainbow blended in perfect harmony.

"The colors were all there in the bright, everyday sunshine, but were not noticeable before until this particular circumstance and position revealed them. I suppose that's like a good life, too, when made beautiful by the frosts of adversity, sorrow, and old age." She went on musingly and was only awakened from her reverie by the exclamation.

"Here we are, mother mine, at the woods! Now we can fill all those baskets, though I can't think what you can want with so many of them. There will be enough to decorate all the houses in our town." They rambled on, happy to hear the rustle of the leaves beneath their feet the sight of gray squirrels scurrying to their trees with nuts for their winter's store, or scolding saucily at them, accompanied by the shrill cry of the bluejay in the tree tops over head.

The baskets were soon filled with the choicest specimens of bright leaves, and in a short time they were home again.

"Now, Bethie," said her mother, "I'll show you how to preserve these beauties, that they may beautify some homes many months to come." Shears, scissors, needles and thread were brought into service, and strong pasteboard was cut into wreaths and fanciful designs. The leaves, when sewed on, entirely covered them, then they were pressed until flat and treated to a light coat of varnish, and they were considered finished. Thus closed a busy afternoon.

Some days later, in another part of the town, a young girl received from the mail man a delicate cream-colored envelope. "This is for you, mamma; some party invitation I suppose." Mrs. Carson took it and carelessly opened it.

"Why, Ruth, dear, look here! Well, did you ever! From a missionary society, too! Whoever heard of such a thing! Look at that, quite unique, isn't it? The affair must be worth attending if their invitations are so artistic." "That" was a leaf shaped cream cardboard invitation with a delicately-painted border of green, inviting the recipient to the Literature Day Meeting at the home of Mrs. Monross, whose beautiful home with its spacious rooms and generous hospitality were widely known."

"Are you going, mamma?"

"Well, I almost believe I shall, just to see what they will do, but I don't care for missionary meetings as a rule, for they are usually dull times at best. But what puzzles me is why they made this in leaf shape. What has a leaf to do with missions to the heathen?"

"I'm sure L couldn't tell, mamma, but I wish they had invited me, too."

"Why, they have on this inner envelope,—I forgot to show you,—so you may accompany me if you wish."

The weather on the afternoon of the meeting was fine. Many were seen wending their way to the Monross home. Partly to please those friends who sent the invitations, partly through curiosity, and some actuated by an earnest desire to know more of the things of the kingdom and to see more clearly their own duty.

Among the former were Mrs. Carson and her daughter. She was a woman of marked ability, and usually carried to a successful issue any project in which she was fully interested; and, although busy with social duties, she was as yet rather indifferent to the claims of her church, and was quite prejudiced against missionary work. But those who knew her capabilities were anxious to enlist her sympathy in the work and capture her as a prize for their King.

As the guests stepped inside the doors, they were met by bright-faced girls who smilingly pinned an autumn leaf on each one. Thus they felt at home at once amid their surroundings, for the house was almost like a forest. Rows of leaves crowned the archways while wreaths of them hung just beneath. Branches decorated the chandeliers. Attractive copies of Life and Light, Mission Day Spring and other missionary magazines, also the new leaflets pertaining to the United Study of Missions decorated the walls. Pictures of missionaries were placed here and there, while missionary books and the new Prayer Calendar for 1912 were to be found on center tables and mantles. In the Library was found quite a collection of missionary literature, and in another room was a table of pictures of missionaries, and mission lands and peoples, and several queer curios. A large map was hung in the front room in which they were seated and a small blackboard beside it.

The meeting opened with appropriate songs sung with spirit and understanding. The Scripture lesson proved less interesting to Mrs. Carson as she listened rather indifferently, but she caught the words, "wisdom," "learning." "knowledge," and at the last, "the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." "Leaves again," she thought. "Ah, yes, I see the play on the word; how stupid of me not have noticed before." The leader briefly and earnestly showed the folly of all worldly wisdom, but emphasized that wisdom whose beginning is the fear of the Lord, and showed the Bible to be the greatest missionary book in the world, and that from the truths contained on its leaves comes the healing of all nations—the remedy for the disease of sin. She touched on the value and influence of missionary literature, and mentioned the many ways in which it helps forward the cause of righteousness. Then followed an earnest, heart-felt prayer.

All through the program was emphasized in various forms the central idea of the value and uses of missionary literature. It was one harmonious whole.

Mrs. Carson was at first attracted by its novelty, then was led on to interested attention and at last her eyes and countenance glowed with feeling and showed that the Spirit had awakened her heart and stirred its depths. After the program came a short business session, made interesting by being conducted with dispatch and with perfect parliamentary procedure. At its close the president gave all visitors a general invitation to join the society, stating that personal invitations would follow before the close of the meeting.

Many new members were gained that day, and Mrs. Brenwood, the literature secretary easily secured their subscriptions to their missionary monthly magazine, as the best aid they could have in their new work.

Among this number was Mrs. Carson, who, after thoughtful consideration, said, "Yes, put my name down, please. I've waited too long already; I see I have neglected my duty."

Guests were shown the pictures and curios and given the most attractive free literature, and scarcely a woman left without taking her little bunch of leaflets purchased from the secretary of literature.

The refreshments were very dainty indeed with the autumn leaf bordered napkins, the crisp leaf sandwiches, leaf- shaped small cakes, and fragrant beverage made from tea leaves.

After all had partaken, the president called them to order, and with bowed heads all repeated a closing prayer.

Mrs. Carson was among the last to leave, and as she thanked the hostess and president for the pleasure of the unique afternoon, she added earnestly: "I was attracted first by the beauty of your invitations, next by the beauty of your decorations, and the novelty and variety of your interesting program, and by the wondrous beauty of the lives of your—no, I mean our,—missionaries and of a life of service in Christian work. So I want to thank you for helping me to see myself and my duty."

As she left, Mrs. Brenwood and her friend watched her depart with hearts full of thankfulness for the rich results of the afternoon and workers gained for the Master; for they had prayed earnestly that through all these things some heart might be touched to respond to the Spirit's call to service.

"It was worth the effort, wasn't it?" said Mrs. Brenwood softly. "Surely there's no success without labor, and I believe there are many like Mrs. Carson who might be won if we would only plan the effort with care. Anyway, I am so glad we had this Literature Day with its autumn leaves."—Adapted from Woman's Evangel, in Life and Light.

OCCUPATION IN HEAVEN.

N. Summerbell said something like the following:

In heaven there will be no idlers. In Rev. 22:3, we read that his "servants shall serve." And who would not be a servant of God in that good [illegible]

Newton will find ten thousand times ten thousand worlds to visit and investigate. Rollin will find more reliable ancient history. Plutarch will find more eminent lives than Greece ever knew. The geologist will find God's footprints in deeper rocks than the old sandstone. Many worlds will give ample room for all to exercise their faculties, and to grow eternally. Some will be kings to govern new empires; some, priests to educate a new creation; some, singers to praise Him who sits on the throne and to adore the Lamb.

Some would perhaps at first desire years to gaze on God and Christ, being moved by intense gratitude for blessings received. For we believe heaven is the place of supreme good, and also of unbroken happiness; where the happiness is not limited by the need of self-denial, where no sin mars. There the body is revived to immortal life, and the soul enjoys the favor of God. The understanding is enlightened, and all faculties enlarged to receive the new treasures of knowledge.

What feelings one must have on entering heaven! One would look first for Jesus and his Father. Then would soon realize his freedom from all anxiety; no fear of pain; no thought of poverty; the cripple healed, with no thougth of the pity felt for him that he must often have imagined on earth, or which was a part of his capital; the beggar made rich; the aged made young, the sickly well, the dead immortal. What a change! The last trouble over.

What wonderful opportunities then for carrying out plans that earthly conditions forbade, or death suspended!

Are you going to that place? Are you serving God here? If not, are you not a hypocrite to suppose you will enjoy heaven, or be God's servant there? Do you want Jesus to confess you? If so, have you confessed him? Should there not be some reciprocity? If you want to be in heavenly society, enter it now; get your name on the Lamb's book of life. While you are on earth get used to doing heavenly business.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

TRUTH WITHIN US.

"A little mug of common delf
Placed handle outward on the shelf
Where eye can see.
A vessel free to use for all,
To fetch or go at beck and call,
Or yet, may be,
Thro' long, long days to only stand—
But ready for the outst etched hand.
Dear Lord,
A little mug, indeed, to be,
Content alway
To let Thy grace through me o'er-flow
To pilgrims passing to and fro,
And day by day
Cool draughts of peace and joy to bring
From Love's deep ever-welling spring.
"In sun and shade, with handle out
All clean and pure within, without
So glad to be
A help in some small, humble way;
Or if Thou say, 'Be still' to stay;
My will for Thee.
And yet, unsought for on the shelf,
A little mug of common delf."

BRO. DIXON AGAIN ASKS PRAYERS.

Sunday morning, October 22nd, we begin our revival service in High Point. Pastors, please pray for us, and please speak of our meeting from your pulpits Sunday morning, and ask your people to pray for us. Will every Christian who reads this please pray for us? We feel that so much depends upon this meeting.

Your brother in Christ,

A. G. Dixon.

THE HAGUE PROHIBITION CONFERENCE.

A Brief Report of Its Proceedings.

Temperance workers and prohibitionists from nearly one-half the countries of the world assembled in response to the call that had been issued by the International Prohibition Confederation for its second world's conference. The Prohibition Conference coincided with the successful thirteenth International Congress against Alcoholism, meeting in the spacious and beautiful Kurhaus at Scheveningen, The Hague, Holland, on September 11-16, 1911, and Prohibition was given frequent and favorable mention in the various sessions of that Congress.

The two special Prohibition Conferences were held at the Kurhaus on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, September 13th, and the prominent announcements which were made of these meetings attracted large attention.

The report of Mr. Edward Page Gaston, F. R. G. S., the honorary secretary, showed the wonderful growth which has been made by the Confederation, through its officials in many climes since the organization of this movement in London two years ago. In a sweeping review of the 39 countries in which the Confederation is actively represented by its vice-presidents, he briefly indicated many signs of progress and much reason for encouragement on the part of Prohibition workers everywhere. When the world as a whole is taken under survey it is simply wonderful what is actually being made. One temperance and prohibition worker, who has traveled in various countries and has had a wide experience, remarked that it was the best report ever presented within the speaker's knowledge.

"We look forward to the day when the scheme of world-wide Prohibition will come to pass," said Mr. Gaston in closing his report. "We live for the time when in a great federation of peace and amity, all peoples will be agreed upon this as the fundamental basis and ultimate goal of every true temperance reform. This, as has been said, is the consummation most devoutly to be wished for. You who believe in it and long for it and work for it are not mere dreamers. You dream of that which is to come!

The Roll Call of the Nations was responded to by the representatives from various countries, including Don Alfred Ecroyd (Spain), Fraulein Ottilie Hoffman (Germany), Dr. Legrain (France), Fraulein Grewingk (Russia), the Messrs. Frank J. Sibley (U. S. A.), Larsen-Ledet (Denmark), P. Van der Meulen (Holland), Leif Jones, M. P. and Ald. Joseph Malins (England), Tom Honeyman (Scotland), and Adolf Hansen (Denmark). Many brief speeches sketched in outline news from afar, with inspiring notes of progress in many latitudes.

Endorsement was given to the Memorial-Resolution which had been passed at the afternoon Conference, to be addressed to all the Governments of the world. The preamble in five paragraphs directs attention to the wide-spread misery and loss in many directions occasioned by the traffic in intoxicants of all kinds, and it closes as follows:

Resolved, that this Conference most respectively but urgently appeals to the properly constituted authorities in every nation to take prompt and effective measures for the suppression of the manufacture, importation, exportation and sale of all intoxicants within their respective jurisdictions, and that in addition to such national action the various Governments be requested to arrange for an International Convention for giving effect to this International Prohibitory Movement."

This resolution will be duly forwarded from the London offices to the rulers of every country of the world, and in some cases to their principal legislative officials.

Taken as a whole, the cause of Prohibition is now considerably more advanced than ever before, and there is no doubt that the workers from many countries who gathered at The Hague have gained a wider knowledge and truer insight into the principles and practical operations of Prohibition by their visit. An example of what may be done in this direction was presented by the impressive two days' convention held by the National Dutch Prohibition Society during the same week. This is one of the oldest temperance organizations in Holland, with 14,000 members and 300 branches. Its official newspaper, De Blauwe Vaan, has a paid circulation of more than 21,000 copies weekly. A wisely aggressive campaign is steadily pursued by the industrial classes largely making up its membership, looking to the time when Holland will be added to the list of prohibitory nations. The Netherlands Prohibitionists officially decided to translate and distribute throughout the Dutch-speaking countries of the world the leaflets of the Confederation on the principles and practical workings of Prohibition.

Eward Page Gaston, Hon. Sec.
International Prohibition Confed.
133-4 Salisbury Square, London, E. C.

GOD'S IMPARTIAL LOVE

There are some professing Christians who appear to think that God loves some Christians a great deal more than He does other Christians. If they themselves make an extreme profession of love for God, they imagine that He loves them much more than He does those who seem to have less love for Him. They deceive themselves. God has no special favorites. While it is true that He loves Christians with a pleasure which He does not have for unconverted ones, He is not partial in His love for Christians. But Satan tempts many a Christian to think that, in times of adversity, God does not love him so much as He does those who are mostly free from affliction and bereavement. The Christian, who has just lost a dear child by death, is tempted to believe that God does not love him or her much, else why did He allow the child to die? But such a temptation should not be entertained by any Christian, for it is an unjust accusation of God. He continues to love the believer, even in the greatest afflictions. His love for us is unchangeable. A leading preacher, in a sermon to his people, says: "We wonder why our children die, and other children live; why other people prosper and we do not; and the jealousy of the human heart leads us to believe that God does not hear, does not see, does not love. We have it stated that God does not care for us, that He giveth not to one any more than to another. He treats every person equitably; gives to us that which is best for us, and His love is just as deep and large for every one of you obscure ones as though on this earth there were no other individual living." That preacher's text was the words of Christ to His disciples: "Even the very hairs of your head are numbered." Those words teach God's particular care for all of His children. They indicated His impartial love for every one who has put his heart in fellowship with Him. Do not imagine that God loves you any less because of your losses and sorrows; nay, He feels especially tender toward you while your own heart is made deeply tender by bereavement. Be reasonable! Consider the fact that all people must die some time—the young as well as the old. If you had no death in your family, you would not weep with others.

C. H. Wetherbe.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

1 Chronicles, first seven chapters.

Questions.

89. What word in the American revision takes the place of the word "duke" in the closing verses of 1 Chronicles, first chapter?

90. What two books of the Bible were originally taken with the two books of Chronicles to make one whole?

91. About what time were these books written?

92. Whose memorable prayer is given in 1 Chronicles?

Question 89 to Mrs. R. R. Ross; 90 to Mrs. W. F. Kennett, 91 to R. A. Swearingen, 92 to Mrs. B. F. Norman.

SUPERANNUATES.

That is a term that always appeals to me. To my mind it calls our attention to those who have passed active life, those who have borne the burden in other days, those whom we love as our fathers in Israel.

These, our fathers, are often called upon to spend their last days on earth, from a financial standpoint, in what is almost want. They live cheerfully, because they are fully trusting in the heavenly Father to supply their every need. But, brethren, the Father is depending upon us to help Him keep His promise to these elder brothers of ours. Living expenses are high, and these brethren have to support themselves as best they can, regardless of the high prices, on the same small amounts that they and others like them received when prices were lower.

Brethren of the ministry, permit me, in this way, to make just one earnest appeal to you to see to it that every cent of this very important assessment is raised.

And, brethren of the laity, let me ask of you that you see to it that your pastor has in hand every cent of this assessment before he goes to Conference.

Every assessment is important, and evevery assessment onght to be paid. Our Conference cannot hope to go forward with the best results unless we do at least measure up to our assessments. But, above all things, we cannot afford to fall behind one penny in what we have promised to these brethren who have given their very best to the Church.

Yours for the Master,

A. G. Dixon.

HISTORY OF THE ORPHANS' HOME.

By Mrs. W. C. Hammer.

(Prepared by request to be read at the October Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies).

At the meeting of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, in Greensboro, May 4, 1910 it was decided that this Branch undertake some special work in the state. Work among the mountains had been suggested by some, but it seemed that this did not present itself just at this time, and the President of the N. C. Conference, knowing how anxious some of the members were to do some work that would be of help to the future generation, asked "Why do you not gather the fatherless and motherless children together and provide a home for them?" This work met with approval from all. Some said it was what they had been praying for some time. We soon received word from Denton saying we might have the use of the nine-room building and the principal of Denton High School, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, said he would give free tuition to all the children we would gather in this Home.

So with this proposition in mind we began to pray and work. At the meeting of the Board in Asheville the matter was presented and was sanctioned by the Board, this Board also gave us permission to retain the monthly auxiliary dues in the State to aid in carrying on this work. It was decided to establish an Orphans' Home at Denton. The first organization of this kind in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church. It was also decided that this Home be opened the 22nd of August, 1910, less than three months from this time. We did not have $50.00 in the treasury but we had great faith in our Lord, who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto me."

Different ladies offered to go out and visit the churches in interest of the work. The people responded readily and we soon had all the rooms furnished in the Home and many pledges and free will offerings.

So that on August 22, 1910 the Orphans' Home was ready to receive children. Two days later three bright little children were sent us from Asheville. Since that time fifteen more young have been brought into the Home from different parts of the State and numbers of others turned away, as we had not the room to accommodate them. We hope ere long to be in a larger and better Home and can care for many more of the poor homeless children.

The progress of the Home has been more than the most hopeful had expected. Some of the Sunday schools give their first Sunday collections to the support of this noble work, different churches make free-will offerings, also individuals. Churches make up boxes containing provisions and clothing for the children. The expenses of the Home are kept down to a minimum as the children are taught to do most all the work in the Home. They are bright, happy little children, and seem to be very fond of each other and to take great pride in their Home. Will not all who read this offer a prayer to God that the coming year may see yet greater progress and that the Home may grow and become an honor to the Methodist Protestant Church.

—President Taft, in a public address last week, predicted that the Panama Canal would be finished during 1913 and the first ship would pass through the big ditch by July 1, of that year. The President declared that the canal is the greatest constructive work since the beginning of the Christian era.

MANIFESTO AGAINST GOD.

In a little Russian village on the Baltic the people have issued a manifesto abolishing the rule not only of the Czar, but also of the Deity.

Poor, ignorant victims of a cruel destiny and still more cruel delusion!

Blinded by false hope of liberty, they madly strike alike at the source of their misery, and at the source of the only true hope.

As the blind and furious Samson tore down the pillars of the temple upon himself, so these poor, frenzied people, wild with their new strength, seek to tear down the most sacred sanctuary of human justice.

The French of the revolution tried the same thing.

They, too, declared God abolished and for a long time it indeed seemed that His countenance was forever hidden from man by the blood that flowed in rivers from the guillotines, and by the flames that laughed from the torture pyres, and that His ear was closed against the curses, the wailings and the shrieks of anguish and despair that turned France into an inferno.

But sanity and God returned together.

There were many ghastly graves to close up, many gaping wounds to heal, many bitter woes to ameliorate in the wrecked nation, for God, who cannot be abolished, can punish and forgive.

The people of the far Arctic village know little of history. The lesson must be written out for them in their own blood.

Alas! Many far more learned, far wiser than they, refuse to read from the open page of life that God cannot be abolished.

The Czar sometime may be abolished—and happy the people that can set up in his stead a government of good order and justice, upon which God may smile.

Churches may be abolished or decay, priests may be abolished or disregarded, creeds and rituals may be abolished or forgotten, but God can no more be abolished by manifesto of men than can the steady march of time or the eternal circling of the stars be stopped by a puny cry in the dark.—New Orleans Times Democrat.

NOTICE!

Dear Brother Pastor:

Please send the name of your delegate to Annual Conference to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Littleton, N. C., as soon as possible. Those who have not already reported please do so at once so the Committees may be fully made up.

W. E. Swain.

MISSIONARY WIVES AND MOTHERS.

In the early days of foreign missions it was a question very much discussed whether or not it was advisable to send out married men as missionaries. Many contended that single men, only, should be chosen, arguing that the cares and encumbrances and expenses of married life would be detrimental to the work of the men. In England and Germany the practice is to send out missionaries unmarried for a certain number of years to try the climate and the work before they are allowed the privilege of marrying. But, fortunately, the American custom has been to do as one missionary suggests, "leave a little for God to attend to, and when God provides a helpmeet for a man he should leave father and mother and cleave to his wife." There are advantages and disadvantages on both sides of the question, but so far as the experience of the American missionaries goes, one of them probably voices the sentiment of all when he says: "Our American women (wives) are first and always missionaries, and their work and their influence are not one whit behind that of the men. We have eight of them in the station where I am, and I am prepared to say that they have had more to do with the great results of the work in that station than the men." Another pays a tribute to the usefulness of his wife by saying: "I believe that, humanly speaking, I would have been dead three times, at least, to use an hibernicism, if I had lived during the last thirty years, were it not for my wife."

One of the first essentials for a man that he may be at his best spiritually, morally, and physically, is a good home, a Christian home. This is especially true in a heathen land, where he is constantly surrounded by debasing influences that weary soul and body. The wife, in making a home for her burdened husband, not only provides for his comfort and enjoyment, but she does something still more important: she gives to the heathen about her an example of what a home ought to be, an object lesson that never fails to make a deep impression. A well educated Japanese gentleman once said, "What we need in my country, more than any other one thing, is the Christian home." That the missionaries might have the advantages of a home and the heathen the example of one, many women lie sleeping in lonely graves in far off lands, some with a babe in her arms.

John G. Paton, in his autobiography, tells the sad story of nursing his sick young wife, and after her death preparing her for burial, digging the grave and burying her all alone. Ought Mrs. Paton to have married when she did, and to have gone to that savage island? Was her life wasted?

Years ago a young minister married and took his wife to the then far distant and wild west to do mission work among the Indians. She was so rarely gifted and beautiful that her friends all objected to her marriage. The hard life she had to live was too much for her frail body, and she only lived about a year. When her death was reported among her friends at home, they said, "Why this waste?" But in her short stay with the Indians they learned to love her, calling her their "White Rose." Her grave was to them an object of veneration, and for years after her death the influence of the White Rose had a salutary effect over the savages who had known her.

In the chapter in our study book we have under consideration at this time, "The women behind the work," Mrs. Montgomery puts missionary wives and mothers first. She says that although they are scarcely given an afterthought, and are looked upon as a class apart from real missionaries, yet all had "some woman who stood shoulder to shoulder with them, sharing weariness, danger, loneliness, sickness, death." Some one has said, "Woman is the eternal sacrifice." If this is true it is exampled nowhere more clearly than in the experiences of missionaries' wives. They not only give up home and friends and the pleasures and advantages of civilized society, things very dear to the feminine heart, but they are often obliged to endure trials that come to no one but missionaries' wives. The children, when they become old enough, must be sent away to be educated, and many mothers are thus separated from their children for years at a time. One sad case was that of the wife of a missionary in Africa. The husband died, leaving the wife with one child, a boy. The widow came home and stayed for a time. But as the station they left had no worker, the call came to her to return and take up her husband's work. After a struggle she consented to go back, leaving the boy behind to be educated with the understanding that she was to come home to see him graduate. The years passed and the time came for her to return. Just as she was preparing to start for home and her boy, word came to her that he had died.

Another and still sadder instance: A missionary with a large family to be educated felt that he must give up his work on the foreign field. So he brought his family home. But his little flock was left without a shepherd, no one could take his place. He was asked by his Board if he would return. He talked with his wife about it and decided that he would go back to his work alone, leaving her to look after the children. She did not want him to go alone, so after much prayer she decided that she would put an advertisement in a paper asking for homes for her children. If answers came within a certain time she would take that as an indication that God wanted her to go. She advertised and many homes were immediately offered. She selected the ones she thought desirable, and taking a child at a time she went with it to the home, where she stayed long enough to be sure it was a good place, then left it. This she did until all were gone. The only requirement she asked of the foster parents, aside from the proper care of the children, was that they should never be allowed to forget their mother. It is said that the mother bore the trying ordeal bravely until she came to leave the last child, the baby. She then broke down and wept. After making preparations the missionary and his wife left for their far-distant home. The wife only lived a few years after her return. She never saw her children again, but true to the promise made her, the children were taught of the noble sacrifice of the mother, and when they were grown to manhood and womanhood they themselves became missionaries, or Christian workers of some kind.

In true heroic bravery missionaries' wives have not been one whit behind their husbands. Before the Boxer trouble in China came to its worst all the missionaries' wives were given the chance to seek places of safety. This many refused to do, preferring to share the fate of their husbands and converts. Thus the roll of Christian martyrs is enriched by the names of many brave women who counted it not loss to give up their lives for the love of duty. And this they did with remarkable courage and self-possession. A letter, written by one of the women to her mother a short time before her death, and while she was a prisoner with her little daughter awaiting she knew not what fate, showed no sign of fear, but was filled with calm resignation to God's will. She and her daughter were both cruelly killed, the child showing the same courage as the mother.

Of the missionary wives who are famous none can surpass Ann Hasseltine Judson. Gay, beautiful, accomplished, the pet of her home and society, she gave up all to become the wife of Adoniram Judson, to go with him to Burma and share with him "exposure to the dangers of the ocean; to the fatal influence of the Southern climate of India; to every kind of want and distress; to degradation, insult, persecution, and perhaps a violent death." The story of her life in Burma is a marvel of patience, endurance, sagacity, courage, and every other quality that goes to the making of a Christian heroine. An experience in the life of Mrs. William Taylor, wife of Bishop Taylor, a noted missionary, shows courage of a high order. It was while she was with her husband in India. He was called at one time to a distant station, leaving Mrs. Taylor with their two children, one a babe not many days old. The Bishop was not gone long before word came to his wife that he had been taken suddenly very ill. Fearing that he would not receive good care, Mrs. Taylor decided to go to him. Hastily making preparations for the journey, taking the children with her, she set out with a few natives as attendants and chair bearers. Nightfall found them in the midst of a jungle; and to add to the horror of the situation, a severe thunderstorm came on, and her attendants all left her and fled. With the wild beasts howling around her she committed herself and children to God's keeping and lay down and slept. In the morning the servants came back, expecting to find her bones picked by the beasts. To their great surprise, they found her and the children unharmed. They then proceeded on their way, and she reached her husband in safety.

Mrs. Hillis, for many years missionary in Burma, was also a remarkable woman. She was so gay and mischievous that when Mr. Hillis married her one of the wedding guests took him aside and asked him if he had not made a mistake. The only answer was, "Wait and see." Mr. Hillis went to Burma as a missionary soon after his marriage, where he died after a few years' service. Mrs. Hillis took up the work he laid down, and conducted it for many years with great efficiency. It was during a period of great unrest in Burma, and her people were often in danger from threatening tribes. It is said that at one time she invited some hostile chiefs to her home, and taking them outside entertained them for some time showing them her fine marksmanship, as she was very skillful in the use of firearms. They gave her no trouble. It is said she also armed her young men and drilled them in military tactics, that they might be ready for self-defense.

As mothers of future missionaries the women who have gone to foreign fields as wives have also rendered great service to mankind. The children born and reared in missionary environment are better fitted for missionary service than are those not so trained. Some of our most efficient missionary workers of today are the children of the pioneer workers of fifty or sixty years ago.

While looking after the details of the home and caring for the children the missionaries' wives have also shared in the actual work of the missions. Many of them have founded schools and aided in the work of teaching and training native girls and women. They have found time for language study, sometimes becoming more efficient linguists than their husbands. They have also furnished rest and refreshment for travelers, and missionaries going to and from their stations. The wife and mother behind the work, while she may not attract the attention of the world to what she is doing as does her husband, yet is an indispensible force in mission.—Woman's Missionary Record.

ON GOING STRAIGHT AHEAD.

Teach me, dear Lord, to be independent not only of others but of myself—of my successes and my failures. I am constantly made weak by thoughts of myself: "Am I doing well?" "Am I getting on?" Make me ashamed and afraid when I cannot see that thou art the doer of my deeds. And if thou has done them, I may peacefully leave them with thee. Yet each day has its lesson for me, I know, to be read out of the temptations and sins, the joys and accomplishments, of all its hours. Teach me this lesson, dear Master, as from a book, that I may not be puffed up by my good deeds, or depressed by the attempts thou hast not thought best to make succeed. O, how much I shall be spared when I am able at length to trust my life to thee—heartburning and fretfulness, disappointments and covetousness, envy and foreboding, the fever of ambition and the chill of despondency. Human rewards are uncertain and often inadequate; thine are sure and abundant. Human recognition is slow and cold; thine is quick and loving. With men my masters, I am a serf; with thee, my Lord, I am a king. I will mark my path as far ahead as I can see, but I will rejoice if thou dost bend otherwise the course I lay down. I will listen earnestly to all voices of men, their commendation, their advice; but one whisper of the still small voice shall drown them all. I will begin this day to live straightforward with thee, taking up my tasks one by one, doing them as best thou dost give me to do them, rejoicing to be used of thee to win some victory; rejoicing also when no victory is won, that I have been used of thee; too loyal to my Leader to claim any triumph, or find fault at any defeat. That is my ideal, but how far short of it I shall fall, dear Lord, if thou do not lift up my life!—Deaconess Advocate.

ON July 4th the Zulu Mission of Natal, South Africa, celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary in a Diamond Jubilee, held in the city of Durban. While the American Board was the pioneer in mission work in Natal, the celebration was called, Seventy-fifth Anniversary of the Coming of the Gospel to Natal, and was interdenominational in character. The meetings were held in the Town Hall, with an attendance of from 4,000 to 5,000, many being turned away and a choir of 345 Zulu young men and women and presided over by Lord Gladstone, Governor General of the Union of South Africa. As a result of the seventy-five years of effort in Natal there are now 60,000 church members enrolled and about 200,000 Zulus who may be called followers of Christ.

A missionary wrote to his home paper portraying the physical needs of his people about him. He did not ask for money but was surprised to receive a very prompt response in the same. In commenting on it afterwards he wrote, "What is the secret that explains this unasked-for help, while to the appeal for aid in view of great missionary needs there is no response? Do physical hardships bulk larger in our thought than other kinds of need?" We see the same in the ready responses made to the need caused by physical suffering such as the recent floods and famine in China, when if call were made for money to help in mission work in the same territory the response would be meager. A suffering body excites sympathy and help, while a suffering soul causes scarcely a thought of pity.

MISS Ellen C. Parsons, who has for 25 years been editor of the Woman's Work, the official organ of the Presbyterian Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, has recently sent her resignation to the publication committee. In taking this step Miss Parsons writes, "This action was not ordered by my doctor, no judicious friend has suggested it for the good of the magazine, my courage to battle with printing difficulties is not dead, my love and zeal for Foreign Missions has not cooled. This is my reason: the sun is in the West and the traveler thinks of home." Miss Parson's literary ability is of a high order, and she has made a most excellent magazine. She also has good business ability and has brought the circulation of Woman's Work up to 26,000 in 1911. The Presbyterian women will be loath to give up Miss Parsons while she seems so capable of continuing the editorial work of the magazine.

From Pastors and People.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle, Ct.

The fourth quarterly Conference convened at Tabernacle church, Saturday, October 14th. There was preaching service at 11 o'clock. Not so many were out, but those who were present heard a very helpful sermon.

o'clock, P. M. More were present than Quaterly Conference convened at 2:00 at the morning service, but still we were not "crowded."

All the churches on the circuit were represented and interesting reports given from the various interests.

I believe Moriah was the only one of the four churches reporting class meeting regularly held and the benefit derived therefrom was emphasized.

Shady Grove was well represented and reported "general interests" all in hand and I believe the pastor's salary also.

Julian reported well up, perhaps not all in hand, but we have no fear but that this faithful little church, which has been and is a real inspiration to her sister churches, will come up with every cent of ev-every claim paid, and even over paid, if she come up to her past record.

Tabernacle nor Moriah could report having all collected of either pastor's salary or General Interests, but are well on the way, and the stewards are busy hoping to have all claims up by pastor's last appointment in November.

A resolution gotten up by Mr Job, of Moriah, and signed by himself and two other members of that church, concerning the raise of pastor's salary was read and adopted. The subject as to what amount the salary should be raised was then put before the Conference for discussion. It was agreed to raise from $631.00 to $675.00, and was apportioned as follows: Shady Grove, $5.00; Julian, $5.00; Tabernacle and Moriah churches, $17.00 each.

It is thought by our pastor that Tabernacle is over assessed for General Interests as compared with other circuits, the assessment being 53 per cent of the pastor's salary. A motion was made and seconded that the pastor and delegate go before the Ways and Means Committee at the Annual Conference and see if this assessment might be reduced some.

Delegates elect asked to be instructed as to pastoral supply for next year. The conference was practically unanimous in instructing for our present pastor back. We think we have one of the best in the person of Rev. C. A. Cecil and see no need to change.

It was decided that on Saturday before the first Sunday in November, at 2 o'clock P. M. that the members of Tabernacle church meet to revise the class book. Pastor desires that as many members as possible be present.

Conference adjourned to meet at Tabernacle again for the 1st quarterly Conference of 1912. Date to be fixed later. It did not adjourn, however, without our pastor's reminding the members of their duty to be present at every Quarterly Conference of the circuit when possible.

He further made this statement, That a church would never be what it might be until the official members attended her quarterly conferences.

There was also an appeal to the church —especially the young people—on whose shoulders the church is soon to rest, to be present at these meetings and learn how to transact the business of the church.

Communion service will be held at Tabernacle the first Sunday in November. On this day also a Collection will be taken for the Denton Orphanage. Don't forget your pocket-books. Remember the Master said—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, yet have done it unto me." And this is such an excellent opportunity to minister unto "one of these."

The S. S. has decided to give each first Sunday's collection to the Orphanage.

Much success to the Herald.

Concord.

Our series of evangelistic services were begun on the second Sunday. Bro. Suits, our engaged help, was unable to come. Brother Davis, of High Point, came to our assistance on a very short notice; and did faithful work till he left us on Saturday morning. Brother J. M. Ridenhour, a local preacher, presented the word on Saturday night; and has given us valuable aid since, in the altar and congregation.

Something over 20 souls have confessed conversion. Many of these are reclamations. The church has been revived, and the meeting is still in progress, Oct. 17, 1911.

At Fair View, on last Sunday afternoon, a large congregation listened attentively to the word as presented by Brother Ridenhour.

A. O. Lindley.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Ct.

Bro. Hunter filled his regular appointment here Sunday. He gave us a splendid sermon, as usual.

Our S. S. is still moving along nicely and keeps up very well in attendance and contribution.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at this church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month. We will be glad if all will attend.

Dr. Swain will preach for us Saturday night before the fifth Sunday in October; let all who can, attend. We thank God for what has been done for us this year and pray that He may continue to bless us through the remainder of the year.

Best wishes to all.

Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Last Suday-school report is as follows: total enrolled, 98; total present, 37; total collections, thirty-six cents and two new scholars.

Still much sickness in our midst, which hinders the attendance.

There are still four that have not been absent since April.

We regretted much to know the serious illness of Miss Lessie Pearle Abbott caused by combined diphtheria and scarlet fever. Wish for her immediate recovery.

Dora Macon, the little daughter of Mr. J. W. Garrett, has recently suffered much because of recent attack of erysipelas, though much improved now.

Polk Garrett.

Oct. 17, 1911.

Bethel, Randolph Circuit.

Our pastor, Brother Lassiter, filled his regular appointment here yesterday. He gave us a good sermon, as he always does; we all like him. He is an earnest Sunday school worker as well as a good preacher. We hope we will get him back another year.

When we learned that we had to give up Brother Ashburn we were afraid we would not like the new preacher as well as we did him, but that is like a spoiled child that wants a certain one to give its medicine or food.

Our Sunday school in getting along nicely. Brother Stout, our faithful superintendent, is always at his post.

Our church has been made sad by death of Sister Mattie, wife of Lorenzo Chamness. She was one of Bethel's best and most faithful members. During protracted meeting she would go out in the congregation, and in her quiet way would talk to sinners. It always did us good to see her go and talk to sinners. We felt sure that they had confidence in her life. A Friend.

Srping Valley Report.

Our Sunday school is growing in number. Several new scholars recently; also our Young People's Meeting. We had a real large attendance tonight, also four new members. Our subject was, "The Church and the World." It was fully discussed by several and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

We are thinking of having a ladies' prayer meeting for the gentlemen of our neighborhood that do not attend church and Sunday school and I ask the readers of the Herald to join us in these prayers.

I am glad to say Brother Andrews, our faithful pastor, has ordered us a library of good useful books for our Sunday school and I am sure every member will enjoy reading them. Pray that our work may grow and great good may be accomplished.

Promising not to be silent so long again and asking the prayers of God's people to help me so live as to lead some souls to Christ, I remain, yours in His name,

Mrs. Lucy J. Baskett.

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.

Rev. C. E. M. Raper filled his regular appointment here the first Sunday in this month. He will preach one more sermon for us before Conference. He has made us an excellent pastor and we will welcome him back another year.

Mrs. W. G. Gill, who has been very sick, is improving.

A number of our young people have left for school since our last report.

Miss Kate Hopkins, of Brown Summit, will teach our public school this winter.

Miss Lalah Stallings will leave the latter part of this month for Cedar Cliff, where she will teach school this winter.

Annie Stallings.

Forshee, N. C., Oct. 16., 1911.

Burlington.

Our work is moving along very nicely here, although we have nothing special to report. Our town has been having special meetings for the past five weeks, and still another is in progress this week. In the meantime we have had two fairs (one for the whites and one for the colored) here, and our street cars have been put in operation. The cars are being well patronized now, especially on Saturdays and Sundays. We think our town is progressing along material lines, and trust it also is in spiritual ways.

Our people were recently favored with excellent sermons by Prof. T. C. Amick, of Elon College, and Rev. C. J. Edwards, of Mebane. We were glad to have them with us.

Last week's issue of "Burlington News" announced the purchase of that paper by Rev. R. M. Andrews, pastor of our church in Henderson. Bro. Andrews will assume control of the paper December 1. We gladly welcome him to our church and town, and trust that he will make the "News" a power for good in our community.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Oct. 18, 1911.

Shoals.

Our protracted meeting began second Sunday in October and closed Friday night. We had one of the best meetings we ever had. Rev. W. C. Lassiter was our pulpit help and proved to be very acceptable. His sermons were very effective. Bro. Lassiter stayed with us until Sunday morning. The church was greatly revived. A number of professions and ten accessions to the church. Miss Alice Harvey, of Winston-Salem, J. T. Jones, of Siloam, and J. F. Whitaker, of Pilot Church, worshiped with us during the meeting. We were glad to have them with us and hope they will come again.

We expect our president to preach for us on Friday night before the 5th Sunday in this month.

Miss Mollie Burns went to Greensboro Saturday.

Bro. Elmer Harvey will conduct the prayer meeting next third Sunday.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. J. P. Owen.

Reporter.

Lebanon, Spring Church Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, filled his regular appointment here the second Sunday. He gave us one of his powerful sermons which I am sure was enjoyed by all.

Our special began the fourth Sunday; closed the following Wednesday afternoon with 8 or 10 conversions and 6 accessions. Had a good meeting; good attention to the Word and a revival in the church. Bro. Ashburn is loved by his people here, and we want the Conference to send him back to us again next year.

Bro. O'Brien, of Roanoke Rapids, will preach for us the fourth Sunday afternoon. Our Sunday school seems to be taking on new life; we hope this new life will continue.

We are preparing to hold a Rally Day service the fifth Sunday. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Yours in His name.

M. Goul Jordan.

Garysburg, N. C., Oct. 16, 1911.

Ivy Circuit.

Remember our fourth quartely conference meets in Democrat church Saturday before the first Sunday in November. Preaching at 11 A. M. Conference will convene in the P. M.. All officials are earnestly requested to be present and ready to report as to the work and progress in his or her department. There are things to be considered and acted upon by this conference that will affect the entire circuit for the coming year and perhaps longer; so you can see the importance of having a good representation from the whole circuit. So I hope those who are greatly interested will encourage those who are not so much so to attend that they may become so and take a more active interest in church affairs. Some of the churches are badly behind with all of the finance; hope the official members will all come prepared to settle up in full all deficiency. The good people of Pleasant Gap have almost completed a new roof on that church and are expecting to paint it on the outside soon, which will add greatly to its appearance.

Fraternally,

D. R. Williams.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

In the absence of the pastor on the fourth Sunday in September, Prof. T. C. Amick, of Elon College, conducted the morning service in Graham Church and Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of the Graham Christian church, preached at night. The people have spoken very favorably of these services, and would be glad for these brethren to come again. The pastor desires to thank them for their much appreciated favors.

The prayer meetings at both Haw River and Graham are improving in interest as well as attendance.

Mrs. Hughes, who spent the summer in Asheville, worshipped with us last Sunday. It seems that Asheville has been a great help to her.

The street car is quite a convenience to our people. But we feel that our churches are fortunately located in that they are just far enough away from the lines not to be disturbed by the passing cars.

Sunday school attendance at Graham was 97 last Sunday.

Geo. L. Curry.

AFTER THE JUBILEE.

A Card-Case Campaign.

Neighbor, neighbor, come with me?
That I will, I thank thee.
And bring the neighbor next to thee?
Idon't know, but I'll go and see.

Many of us had settled down with smug satisfaction to think that Jubilee was over at last. It had been glorious and profitable, but it was time we should have some rest. How nobly we had worked! Didn't we hear there had "never been anything like it" since the foreign missionary movement began? Such tributes were acceptable, but we were glad that, when the next Jubilee should come around in 1960, we should not be required to take part—except possibly as Jubilee Pioneers on the platform, among palms and plaudits.

Some workers were not so easy-going however, and they said under their breath, What is it all going to amount to? This is particularly a Presbyterian attitude of mind, and before we had quite given ourselves over to the dangerous attitude where we "think about thinking and feel about feeling" came a second clarion from the Woman's Boards: After the Jubilee, What?

Mrs. Peabody answers: Not nervous prostration and the sanitarium, as some had feared, but better knowledge and larger ieals of our missionary work. The Committee on United Study and the Women's Boards answer with a Plan. You answer with a "Here am I, send me."

Let every auxiliary find out its numerical standing in the church. Get from your pastor a list of the women communicants. With the help of a map of your town, fence off the different gardens where grow those lilies of the field, the Christian women who toil not nor spin for Foreign Missions. Even if like Solomon they be arrayed in glory, let no timidity keep you from donning your own most becoming clothes and winning manners, while you pay them a call and ask to be allowed to enroll them as members of the auxiliary and subscribers to the magazines. No one expects you to convert them to foreign missions in that one visit,—it would not be tactful to assume they are uninterested—but in most cases you can get them to fulfill the membership requirements of your society, and to subscribe for Woman's work or Over Sea and Land, or both, without either wheedling or scolding. Subsequent meetings, the magazines, and the Spirit of God will do the rest, and you will never cease praying till they are active workers.

Do you say this has all been tried before in your society? Just this has never been tried before. There has never been a strong pull altogether, by every denomination. This time every branch of the Christian Church is going a-visiting, with a holy determination to enroll those eighty out of every hundred women who do not help the twenty now staggering under the blessed burden of foreign missionary service. Every town, village and city that takes up this plan, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be completely canvassed; for Episcopalians, Lutherans, Methodists, Baptists and all, are in the secret, and it is hoped that every garden will be cultivated, every unenrolled Christian woman visited. Shall we Presbyterians not transplant as great a number of flowers as any other body of Christians?

Your own friends are unvisited? Of course. When does any one catch up with the calls she should make? Still, for one week lay all thought of them aside. Afraid of being snubbed, or of boring people? This age shows decadence, not only by its tendency to feel bored, but only by fear of boring. Let us dare even that bugbear. Is there no heroism in our Church today? If you have approached this campaign with definite prayer you may fare forth blithely, fearing nothing. Or, if you prefer the martyr's role, say: "They can but look coldly at me and refuse."

Your own Board has sent you the general plan, and here it is again:

I.—Let missionary workers of all denominations gather for definite prayer for the campaign. Nothing surpasses this in importance.

II.—Each auxiliary, after districting its church, shall prayerfully send out, two by two, able and tactful women who will be responsible for calling on—say twenty non-members to each couple—and inviting them to belong to the missionary society and to subscribe for Woman's Work. Let this be done in October and, if possible, in the one particular week or ten days agreed upon by the other denominations in the locality.

III.—Immediately after completion of their visiting, the visitors will meet at a luncheon or supper, to tell each other of their success and to count up the precious names they have secured. Perhaps new members, thus gained, will have received a ticket admitting them to a thrilling mass-meeting. Perhaps. in connection, there can be a Reception of New Members. It might be possible to hold these in the evening, after the supper. This , too, would be the opportunity for proposing the formation of an interdenominational Study Class.

IV.—Careful records should be kept of names and addresses of new members, and the number of them be immediately forwarded to the Presbyterial Society or the headquarters of your Board, that the grand total for the United States may be swiftly made up and published.

Doubtless every missionary society in your town has received a similar plan from its board. If no one else seems ready to take the lead in this interdenominational campaign, why not you?

There are hundreds of reasons why we should make this swift assault of love, but two will suffice. Jubilee Year caused us to take account of stock, and "after our first fifty years of skirmish work we found anywhere from five to twenty percent of women of the churches enrolled as contributors to Foreign Missions. Only a very few denominations rise to the heights of a twenty percent missionary membership; the great majority flutter around the region of ten per cent. Now, if ten percent of the Methodist women can raise nearly $800,000 annually for foreign missions—to instance the most remarkable among the Women's Boards—what could they do with the other ninety percent enrolled?"

The churches have received a letter from Edinburgh Conference calling attention to the momentous character of the next ten—no, nine years, for one is already past. It says:

"The next ten years will in all probability constitute a turning point in human history, and may be of more critical importance in determining the spiritual evolution of mankind than many centuries of ordinary experience. If these years are wasted, havoc may be wrought that centuries are not able to repair. On the other hand, if they are rightly used they may be among the most glorious in Christian history.

"It has become increasingly clear to us that we need something far greater than can be reached by any economy or reorganization of existing forces. We need supremely a deeper sense of responsibility to Almighty God for the great trust which He has committed to us in the evangelization of the world. That trust is not committed in any peculiar way to our missionaries or to societies. It is committed to all and each within the Christian family; and it is as incumbent on every member of the Church as are the elementary virtues of Christian life—faith, hope, love. That which makes a man a Christian makes him also a sharer in this trust. Just as a great national danger demands a new standard of patriotism and service from every citizen, so the present condition of the world and the missionary task demands from every Christian a change in the existing scale of missionary zeal and service, and the elevation of our spiritual ideal."

It is exhilarating to be alive at this time of the awakening of the East. To have a life to invest either at the Home Base or on the Field, at this critical juncture, is almost exciting. We must persuade others to invest their lives where they are so desperately needed. We used to think that we had ample time for this service; now we see the time is very short indeed. Already priceless opportunities have been let slip—as when, a little over a year ago "the great Chinese founder of modern education in the Empire asked a missionary to provide text-books for the Universities in China." With every mission station undermanned and every missionary overworked, this opportunity could not be taken advantage of, and it passes over to be counted among other tragedies of Christian Missions.

"In the face of facts like these, for Christian women to resign themselves to the ornamental, the purely cultural, the small social activities of life, is not simply to prove inedequate in the day of opportunity; it is to betray the future. So a conception of religion as only a precious personal consolation must give way to that of religion as the great transforming force of life, to be used, to be proclaimed, to be passed on, to be died for." —Rachel Lowrie, in Woman's Work.

WESTERN MARYLAND LETTER.

Perhaps our people in N. C. would like to know something about the North Carolina students here, so I will give the following information. There are sixteen students here from N. C. this year. Those in the Seminary are Messrs. C. W. Bates, L. W. Gerringer, W. A. Ledford, R. A. Swaringen, R. A. Hunter, and the writer; those in the College are Misses Pearl Fishel and Bessie Ogburn, Messrs. D. T. and Fred Surratt, E. F. Mickey, Harry Fishel, Roy Millikan, "Nat" Harrison; those in the preparatory school are Miss Francis Harrison and Mr. S. B. Fishel. So far as I have been able to learn every one of N. C. is well pleased with the place. The scenery around here at this season of the year is splendid and the air is very bracing. I wish that more of our young people in N. C. might be induced to come to this splendid place to take advantages of its opportunities.

A rare treat was in store for us in Baker Chapel last night when Dr. Lewis read to us his paper on "Responsibility of Methodists to Evangelism," recently read at the Ecumenical Conference of Methodists at Toronto, Canada.

Dr. C. E. Forlines is steadily recovering from his illness though he is not yet able to take up his work.

The Seminary has a new member added to its Faculty this year. Dr. Feeman, ex-president of Adrian Theological Seminary, is here and is being kindly received by the student body. Dr. Feeman is a very spiritual minded man and we feel that he is going to be worth a great deal to the students.

After such a long siege of revival work in N. C. the writer does not feel much like getting down to work in the Seminary.

J. E. Pritchard.
Theo. Sem.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 16, 1911.

A Birthday Dinner.

The writer, at the first of this calendar year, noticed that his birthday, Oct. 15, would be on Sunday. So I planned at once to have a big dinner that day and invite my children and grandchildren and sisters, and my wife's brother and sisters, the lame, the halt and the blind. But as the day drew closer to hand and as I took an observation of the surroundings, I saw that there were so many half lame and half blind that it was hard to decide whom to invite, and my children and sisters so badly scattered, and meetings an S. S. so numerous that day that I became discouraged and about a week before my wife was taken sick, and so before the day arrived I was almost compelled to drop the thing. As some of my children and relatives found it out, they went to work in earnest, unknown to me, regardless of cornshuckings, meetings or any other impediment. The writer on Saturday tried to watch every movement about home, visiting the cook room to see if there was any preparation making by daughter and found none. Sunday morning, about eleven o'clock, to my surprise, vehicles of about all kinds began to arrive and many on foot and last of all, one automobile. A table 30 feet long was spread in the shade between the house and barn and soon was heavy laden with the substantials of life. I think about every kind of eatable that could be mentioned. After about fifty had dined, there was a number of baskets of the fragments taken up. After about an hour of social chat the main of the crowd went to S. S. and preaching.

The crowd was composed of the best men and women in the section. In conclusion the writer will say that if the same crowd will unite themselves and work for the Lord with the same zeal and energy and keep what they are doing from the enemy of souls as they did from this writer in regard to the dinner, there would soon be something accomplished for the Lord's glory.

J. H. Spencer.

DIED.

Seagrove, N. C., Oct. 16, 1911.

M. D. Raper, aged 75 years, 7 months, and 15 days was buried at Abbott's Creek, October 14, 1911. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Thomas Carrick, pastor of Abbott's Creek, and Rev. C. E.M. Raper, a nephew of the deceased. He lived near the place of his birth all his life. He was one of the great men of his day, being one of the founders of Davidson High School, and he gave of his time and means to the educational interest of his community. Back in the seventies it was great glory to him to see the great advances along this line. Back before the war, he went into the field advocating temperance question. He also taught school when it meant long, cold walks and into the "log cabin" from early till late, helping to start in motion the great school system we have today. He was well-read, both in medicine and law, and many sought his advice in both, which was always given willingly and free of cost. He was a man that loved his family and home, and but few men have given more time to either. He professed faith in Christ about the age of 30, and but few were better versed in the Bible. He was afflicted for many years and bore it with patience and when death came he seemed only to be waiting the summons and fell asleep with a smile-like departure. Many he has helped have gone on, and many linger who are grateful for the help rendered. He leaves an aged wife, six children, three sisters and a host of friends, many of which attended his funeral.

We feel if he could speak to us now he would say, The half has never yet been told. Come on, make sure your calling and election.

His nephew,
C. E. M. Raper.

Be Still.

Be still! Just now be still!
There comes a presence very mild and sweet;
White are the sandals on His noisless feet.
It is the Comforter, whom Jesus sent
To teach thee what all the words he uttered meant,
The waiting, willing spirit He doth fill
If thou wouldst hear His messages, dear soul, be still!—Selected.

—Maltbie D. Babcock said: "I tell you, my fellow Christians, your love has a broken wing if it cannot fly across the ocean." Christ said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

A CHANGE OF HEART.

"Helen must wait a year or two longer until she is old enough to realize the importance of uniting with the church. She is so light-hearted and gay—in fact, almost frivolous—that I feel sure she does not think seriously about it."

"My dear madam, you cannot expect a girl of fourteen to be as staid and decorous as those who have been following Christ for years, and are now pillars of the church—Father Bradbury, for instance."

There was a slight twinkle in the minister's eye, and Mrs. Grant smiled, too, as she shook her head, but she only said, in a firm voice:

"I am sorry to disagree with you, but I cannot consent. She will be just as eager to join the church a year from this time as she is now."

Dr. Wood looked sadly into her determined face, and inwardly prayed that she would never regret her decision.

As he rose to go, Helen Grant came running through the hall, but, seeing him, she stopped short, and instinctively knowing that she was the subject of their conversation, slipped back into another room before they had observed her.

After the door had closed on the minister, she went quickly to her mother, anxious to hear the decision, for she well knew her mother's disapproval of this step.

"You have told him that I could join with the other girls next Sunday, haven't you, mumsie dear? I want to, so much," and Helen clasped both arms around her mother's neck.

"I do not like to hear you tease, child. I cannot allow you to unite with the church until you are older and wiser than you are now."

"But Dr. Wood says that we grow in Christ, and that it gives us more strength to belong to His church. O mamma, please."

In spite of her pleading she knew what that firm look on Mrs. Grant's face meant, and, bursting into tears, she ran sobbing up the stairs to her own room, not noticing a lady who was just about to enter the room as she left.

"My dear Mrs. Brown, how glad I am to see you!" and Helen's mother went forward with outstretched hand to greet her friend, a tall, gray-haired woman with an extremely sad expression in her eyes.

After a few casual remarks Mrs. Brown inquired for Helen. "I just caught a glimpse of her fleeing up the stairs, evidently in deep trouble. It was nothing serious, I hope?" and she looked anxiously at the mother, for Helen was a great favorite with her.

Mrs. Grant was a little annoyed that Helen's trouble should be exposed to other eyes, so she replied somewhat impatiently.

"Dr. Wood wishes her to join the church next Sunday with the others in her Sunday-school class. I think her too young, however, and so refused to give my consent. Naturally she feels bad about it, especially as she has seldom been crossed in her wishes heretofore."

Mrs. Brown's eyes were full of unshed tears.

"Let her unite with the church, by all means, if you value your peace of mind, dear friend. If you refuse you will regret it all your life. I know from sad experience."

Mrs. Grant was surprised at this vehement response, and her friend answering the unspoken question in her eyes, went on in a sad voice:

"Years ago, I, too, had a daughter. Bright-faced, gay and loving, she was the sunshine of our home. When she was about Helen's age, we lived a year or more in the town where my brother preached. During the winter he conducted a series of revival meetings, and many hearts found Christ. Among these was Gracie, with several other girls of her own age. She begged me to allow her to unite with the church, but I, in my blindness, refused. I thought she was much too young to understand, so I resisted all her pleadings.

"Then the other girls walked up to the altar to be received as probationers. Gracie looked at me so reproachfully. My brother, too, seemed to blame me with his looks of deep sadness whenever he glanced in our direction. Oh, that I had decided differently! But I have been justly punished.

"From that time a change seemed to come over our daughter. Although she was the same sweet, lovable girl, she had lost all desire to follow Christ, seemingly, and threw herself into all the sports and amusements of her particular set with her whole heart, until three years later she was the most popular girl in the town.

"How my brother grieved over it! He remonstrated with her often, and pleaded with her to consecrate her life to Christ, but all to no purpose. Shaking back her curls, she would laugh in his face, calling him her 'dear old uncle,' but she couldn't give up her good times even to please him. In vain he told her that God did not want long faced Christians; His love would bring such joy and gladness with it that there would be no time for long faces. Gracie would not listen.

"One summer day she went away on a three weeks' camping trip. We were reluctant to let her go, but she pleaded so earnestly that finally we consented. I remember the very day she went my brother talked with her about her soul's salvation, but she gave him the same reply: 'I intend to some time but not just yet. There is plenty of time. Why do you bother me so, Uncle Herbert?'

"A week later"—Mrs. Brown's voice broke—"one short week, and they brought her back cold and still. I cannot remember what was done or said in those awful days that followed but one thing stands out clearly. As my brother and I stood before her casket, I heard him say softly under his breath: 'Was it too late, too late?' I could have shrieked aloud in agony as I took the meaning of the words. I fell on my knees and asked God's forgiveness; but for many a long day those words, 'Too late,' rang in my ears. If only I could live that winter over again, how different my answer would be! God forbid that you should suffer as I have, dear friend! That is why I beg you to reconsider and decide right."

Mrs. Grant sat very still for a long time after her friend had left her. At last, with a new light in her eyes, she went upstairs to Helen's door. Opening it, she saw her little daughter lying in a heap on the bed, still sobbing. Going to her side, the mother put her arms around the little trembling form and clasped her close.

"Mother was wrong. My dear little girl may do just as she wishes about uniting with the church. And we will help each other to live wholly for Christ, will we not, dear?"

Helen, with eyes shining through her tears, wondered what possible help a little girl could be to the best mother in all the world; but she only said:

"Do you know, a bad, wicked spirit whispered in my ear as I was lying here that you did not love Jesus, but I just wouldn't listen to it, because I knew you did, darling mumsie," giving her mother a rapturous hug.

As she went down stairs, Mrs. Grant sent up a grateful prayer that the child's confidence and faith in her mother remained unbroken.—Florence H. Walker in Zion's Herald.

—A son of Charles Dickens speaks at the Normal College to-night, giving inside information as to some of his father's stories.

—The great "auditorium" brought to this city from the Jamestown Exposition is being torn down for removal to Columbia, S. C. A portion of it broke a rope and fell yesterday, seriously injuring Tom McGhee. Had it fallen a few seconds earlier, it is said it would certainly have killed five or six men.

—South Africa is ahead of this country in its antagonism to polygamy. A Hindu settled there and sought to bring a second wife. He was refused permission although he proved that the woman was his legal wife in India.

THE NATIONAL ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

We are glad to announce to the prohibition workers throughout the state that the battle is now on for national legislation to stop the interstate liquor traffic. A call for a national conference to consider the growing evils of the interstate liquor traffic, signed by 188 men of prominence in church, state and commerce, is being sent broadcast over this nation. This conference is to held at Washington, D. C., December 12-13-14, and will be composed of governors, ex-governors, attorney generals, ex-attorney generals, members of congress and of the various legislatures, and other officials in national, state, and municipal governments, together with business men, citizens, pastors of churches and others.

You have already doubtless read in some of the church or state papers this "call" with the 188 names signed thereto. We note that the following North Carolinaians are in the list: Hon. W. W. Kitchen, governor; Hon. W. C Newland, lieutenant-governor; Hon. R. B. Glenn, former Governor; Judge W[illegible]r Clark, chief justice supreme court; Hon. T. W. Bickett, attorney general; Hon. J. Y. Joyner, superintendent of public instruction; Mr. C. C. Covington, wholesale merchant and prominent business man of Wilmington; Dr. W. P. Few, president of Trinity College; Dr. Francis P. Venable, president of the University of North Carolina; Dr. Henry Lewis Smith, president of Davidson College and Dr. L. L. Hobbs, president of Guilford College. An examination of these names will show you that men of like prominence of other states have also signed this "call."

We have no doubt that this conference at Washington will be one of the greatest temperance gatherings ever held in this nation, and surely the national legislators must sit up and take notice when bishops, governors, senators, congressmen, attorney generals, supreme court judges and prominent men of every stage and station shall raise their voices againt the present unjust interstate liquor traffic. We must believe that some solution, which will do justice to the various commonwealths of this nation that are fighting the liquor traffic, will be found, and that some law will be enacted that will allow the various state governments to exercise their police powers on all liquor within the bounds of the state, whether brought here under interstate commerce laws or not.

Now, what is your part in bringing about this legislation. No doubt you want to do it, and therefore we suggest a few things that you can do: first, write to your congressman and senator or see them before they go to congress next winter and talk to them about this matter, asking them to get active for this legislation; second, talk to friends about this matter and ask them to write to their congressmen and senators; third, write something to some newspaper about the injustice of this law; fourth, if a pastor, preach along this line; if a layman, ask your pastor to preach about it; fifth, write to the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, giving them your views on this matter and enclose a check to help them fight for this cause; sixth, make up your mind at once to attend this conference if possible at Washington, and also suggest to your church that they pay the expense of a delegate there. Hundreds of pastors would like to go, who are not able to pay their way. What a fine Christmas present it would be for the church to present their pastors with a ticket to make this trip.

We cannot insist too strongly on a large delegation to this conference. If thousands will come together from the four corners of this nation in response to this call (and we believe they will) and generate such enthusiasm and convictions, as great gatherings always do, we believe congress will be inclined to give us the desired legislation. But if a hundred or two shall meet to discuss the matter, almost unobserved in our capitol city, the tendency will be to retard this legislation. Therefore, we beg you, at the point of sacrifice of time and money, to attend this gathering. You need not be sent as a delegate from any church or other organization, as the only credential you need is that you want to see this unjust interstate liquor traffic stopped. All the rights and privileges of this conference will be yours as a self-constituted delegate as much so as if you were a delegate appointed by the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League.

For further information concerning this national conference, write to the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, Wilson, N. C.—R. L. Davis, Supt., N. C. Anti-Saloon League.

Winston Station.

Our people were delighted to have Rev. T. J. Ogburn, of Greensboro, preach for us at the morning service yesterday. Bro. Millaway had gone down to assist Bro. Ogburn in a series of meetings and in his absence Bro. Ogburn came to fill his place. His prayer alone was uplifting, and his sermon was sweet and inspiring to the soul. Outside was the day with its beautiful sunshine, inside the house of God were the sweet songs of Zion, the prayers, the word of God; somehow it was one of the sweetest services we have been in for sometime.

We were glad to have worship with us Mrs. Millaway and Phoenix, of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. Andrews of Greensboro, and Mr. W. H. Pegram, of Bethel M. P. Church.

There was no preaching at night.

The revival at the new M. P. Church in East Winston began last night.

Mrs. Kirkman, one of our number who has been in the hospital here for ten weeks with fever, was able to be carried to her home at Mr. B. F. Norman's yesterday.

Mr. J. D. Newell, another of our number, is at home quite sick. The presence of another who helped to make the service better yesterday was that of Mrs. Mary Bynum, one of the oldest and best members of this church, Mrs. Bynum has been afflicted for many years, and for a long time has not meen able to attend church, but she still has a great interest in the church, and often, leaning on her cane, comes to the window to ask us as we pass by how we are getting on at the church. We pray if it is the Lord's will that she may be spared to attend many more services at this church.

Reporter.

October 16th.

Brown-Gordon.

On Oct. the 16th, Mr. Julian J. Brown, of Efland, and Miss Amelia Pearl Gordon, of Hillsboro, were united in marriage in the parlor of the Guilford Hotel, in Greensboro. Rev. Homer Casto officiating. This young couple are of the best people of Orange County. Mr. Brown is a promising young business man of Efland, and also a good churchman, being at present secretary of the quarterly conference and also of the Sunday school. Miss Gordon is a daughter of Adolphus Gordon, of Hillsboro, and an accomplished young lady.

After the ceremony they were driven to the station and boarded the northbound train for Richmond and other points north. After their return they will reside at Efland. Their many friends will welcome them as residents of this village.

—There are said to be 6,000 lepers in Egypt.

—A number of men were brought to Greensboro from Clay Township yesterday for complicity in the manufacture of whiskey. They were bound over for trial.

The Women Will Vote for Him.—Governor Harmon in his Raleigh speech said he knew how to make farm life attractive. "Give the women more money."

THINK ABOUT YOUR WORK.

Every picture of a great battle that one sees displayed on canvass puts the great general in front of his army. This is done in order to give the hero a prominent place. There is always room for the picture of the general about the middle of the canvass and the artist puts him in at the point. The man who has seen service upon the plains of war knows that the picture is false—the general is the hero and truly entitled to all honor given him, but not because he rode several yards ahead of the firing line and made himself a target for the enemy and put himself in the way of his own men. The general who wins undying fame is the man who sits by day in his tent, and lies awake at night, planning, planning, planning.

The head of a great business house is not the man who can wait on the most customers, who can carry the greatest burdens or write the most ornately of any one in the building. He is the one who has the vision and the ability to organize, to plan, to build up, to extend the business and to judge men.

What I am driving at is this: It is the man who thinks that creates, enlarges, biulds up and strengthens any business or institution. In the church we have too few men who give thought to their work. The president of the Christian Endeavor Society, the superintendent of the Sunday school and the pastor do not think about their work. The pastor gives a great deal of care to his sermons, but thinks little of his charge. The superintendent is at Sunday school 52 Sundays in the year, but he never takes an hour in the quiet of evening to plan—to think about the work. The president may appoint good leaders, but he will not have successful Christian Endeavor meetings unless somebody thinks and plans and prays.

We are too prone to follow the beaten path. The church and the Sunday school have always gone about things in a certain way, therefore, we too readily conclude that if it is not the only way it must be the best way. I have seen Sunday schools that are half a century old and today are following the same plans they did when the school was organized. I say I have seen some, but please do not conclude that because the plan has kept the school alive for fifty years it is a good one. The plan hasn't kept it alive; it has merely been unsuccessful in killing the school. The school just hasn't reached the end of the rut.

If we could get every Sunday school superintendent and teacher, every pastor, every president of a Christian Endeavor Society, in the Southern Christian Convention to give one hour a week to serious thinking and planning for our work, we would witness a revolution in a year. Suppose those officers and teachers would meet once a month and tell of what had occurred to them in those quiet moments.

If we are to succeed we must think more of our work. Try thinking of yours. Let's have a Thinking Hour.

THE ORDER CHANGETH.

Under the above head one of our religious exchanges says something to the honor and glory of the Adult Bible Class Movement. A part of the article is as follows:

"It is not so long since everybody was bewailing the preponderance of women in the churches and Sunday schools. Insensibly the scale has shifted. An exchange remarks on the frequency with which a certain hymn is heard to-day in our churches.

" 'Ye that are men now serve him,' and a well-known editor of many Sunday-school papers writes urgently to a contributor to try to get in touch with organized classes of women, since there doubtless are a good many, although the men's classes largely outnumber them."

The Organized Adult Bible Class Movement has had more to do with bringing about this change of the old order than any other one thing. Not only the Sunday-school but the church as well has profited by the development of this great movement.

A BOY'S FAIR QUESTION.

"Now I'll tell you just what started me in the direction of the Sunday-school and made me a member of this class," said a man during the testimony hour of an Adult Bible Class.

"One Sunday, seeing that it was time for my boy of twelve years to be off for the Sunday school to which his older brother and two sisters had already gone, I said a little sharply to him:

" 'See here, son, why are you not off for Sunday school? You'll be late if you don't hurry.'

"He began to protest, and asked why he had to go. I explained:

" 'Because it is a good thing for a boy to go to church and Sunday school—that's why, and I mean that you shall go.'

" 'If it is such a good thing, father, for a boy to go to church and Sunday-school, why isn't it a good thing for a man?'

"I had no answer ready. What he said gripped me so I simply couldn't get away from it. The very next day a neighbor who is a member of this class, asked me to visit the class next Sunday. I came, and I haven't missed a Sunday since. My boys and I come to the church and school together every Sunday now. The question my boy asked of me is a perfectly fair question for any boy to ask of his father. If it is a good thing for the boy to go to Sunday school, why is it not a good thing for the father to do the same thing?"

There is no more pleasing sight than that of a father and his boys going to Sunday school together, and the Organized Class Movement has made this a common sight in hundreds of places in which the fathers of a decade ago sent their boys to Sunday school while they remained at home.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, OCT. 29.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"European Missions. .Acts 15: 6-15.

Daily Readings.

M. Thessalonica, Acts 17:1-10.
T. Noble hearers, Acts 17:10-12.
W. Among philosophers, Acts 17:22-34.
T. Impure Corinth, Acts 18:1-11.
F. The call of Rome, Rom. 1:9-16.
S. The message, I Cor. 2:1-6.
S. The topic.

Synopsis of Paul's First European Missionary Tour.

I. Phillippi. Acts 16:12-20.
First convert in Europe baptized.
Paul and Silas imprisoned.
The Lord delivereth them.
The jailor became a Christian.

II. Thessalonica. 17:1-9.
Paul preached in synagogue.
Second church in Europe established.
The Jews stir up trouble.
Are you stirring up trouble?

III. Berea. 17:10-13.
The people here listened to truth.
Paul says they were noble.
"Berean" classes are doing great work.
Would Paul call you noble?

IV. Athens. 17:15-34.
Literary center of world in Paul's time.
Paul's preaching was not received.
Four centuries later became Christian.
Are you obeying the gospel?

V. Corinth. 18:1-18.
It was a most wicked city.
Paul preached to them 18 months.
Paul worked as a tent maker.
Are you working and preaching?

Notes on Missions.

The following European mission notes are from the pen of Amos R. Wells:

1. Christian Endeavor is doing great things for Europe. It is found in every European country, though it is strongest in Germany. A great world's Christian Endeavor convention has been held in Geneva, Switzerland. Large national unions are found in Germany, France, and Spain, and many other unions in other

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Ma[illegible]. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley. M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

countries. The last Spanish convention was the greatest Protestant gathering ever held in the kingdom. Christian Endeavor flourishes also in Austria-Hungary, Finland, Sweden and Norway. There are societies in Greece, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Italy, and other lands.

2. Great Britain is, of course, included in our survey, it is to be placed at the head in Christian Endeavor, as it stands second to the land of the society's birth, having 12,000 Christian Endeavor societies, and holding some of the largest conventions ever held in the history of our movement.

3. There are in Europe no fewer than 13,000,000 Mohammedans, 3,295,000 of them making up half of Turkey, and 8,500,000 of them making up 8 per cent of Russia, while the rest are scattered everywhere. A fine chance for missionary work.

4. Mormons from the United States are very active in Europe, and entrap many of the young women and men with their crafty representations. We need to convert the Mormons for the sake of Europe as well as America.

5. Great multitudes in France have drifted away from Roman Catholicism into irreligion. Among these the Protestant colporteurs find a ready sale for the Bible, and they are glad to listen to the simple preaching of the gospel.

6. In Germany, supposed to be the home of harmful criticism of the Bible, the annual purchase of copies of the Word of God has risen from 12 copies to a thousand persons in 1885 to 19 copies to a thousand persons in 1907.

7. The widespread popular discontent which causes so many terrible riots in Spain is very largely a rebellion against Roman Catholicism. In the Barcelonia riots, for example, nearly every Catholic church in the city was destroyed, together with thirty convents and monasteries.

8. It is the estimate of Joseph McCabe that during the last half century Roman Catholicism has lost no fewer than 80,000,000 members by withdrawal to other churches or by falling away into no religion at all.

9. One of the encouraging signs in the religious outlook in Russia is the large number of colonies established there by strong Protestants—Lutherans, Mennonites, and the like.

Short Addresses.

1. While the marching orders into all the world were given from the first, there were reasons why it took some time to reach as far out as Europe. In the first place, the foundation must be laid. A beginning must be made and a foundation built. This was done in Jerusalem. But the Jerusalem church worked too long at the foundation. Indeed, when it did go on, it was from necessity rather than election. While they doubted and debated over the Gentile and the Gospel, they came at last to see the call to the uttermost parts of the earth and to all races of men. Thus the second hindrance to the speedy spread of the Gospel was the slowness of the church to understand its orders.

2. The two faults above mentioned are the common faults of the church of all times past. Slow to see. Did not the Saviour have to deal with this in his own disciples? And worse than that, with them, was the slowness of the populace to grasp his teaching. We should not let this lesson be lost upon us. There are many causes that enter into slowness to understand. The chief cause is not stupidity. It is not dullness. It is prejudice. And this prejudice comes from a failure to inform one's self. Facts and figures and dearth to prejudice and slowness to understand. Missionary facts are what people need. The field and its deplorable condition; the gospel and its remedy for the conditions that ruin men. The second fault—working too long upon the foundation—is a peculiar state of mind to find in a Christian. It is rather a justification of one's self for not fulfilling the world-wide command—to claim, as many do, that a good foundation must be first laid. They abuse the truth of it.

PLAGUE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

In the last fifteen years India has lost 7,500,000 lives from plague. The most afflicted province lost 1 per cent. of its total population in the last ten years. This disease is preventable and never occurs in a population under European supervision, such as he army and jails population of India. The malady depends for existence and propagation upon the infection of rats, from which it is conveyed by fleas to human beings. The eradication of either rats or fleas always puts an end to the plague. The preventability of plague is further demonstrated by the fact that the two outbreaks of the disease in San Francisco in 1900 and 1907, respectively, affected only 293 people, of whom only 85 died. In India, on account of the ignorance, prejudice, habit, and apathy of the natives, it is impossible to save them from this preventable disease that carries them away by the hundreds of thousands.

The Manchurian outbreak of plague last year is still fresh in our minds. We recall with a shudder of horror the loss of fifty thousand lives in that epidemic.

Now, is it not a strange freak of human nature that makes us stand aghast at the plague of Manchuria and India, and permits us to regard as something perfectly natural and as something for which we are in no way responsible the twofold greater loss of our own country from the white plague, consumption, which is as preventable as the black plague? The poor benighted Hindoo loses in the most afflicted part of his country 1 per cent. of the total population from black plague, and the civilized American loses over 2 per cent. of his total population from white plague.

Solomon said something about the eyes of a fool being in the ends of the earth and wisdom being immediately before him that had understanding. Is it not the part of visionary people to be more impressed with something farthest remote from their sphere of responsibility and activity than to find a far greater claim upon their citizenship at their very door? India and Manchuria may need help to eradicate their plague, but your country's need, your State's need, your county's need, is twofold that of India's. Is it not time for him who appreciates the responsibility of citizenship to ask himself in all seriousness, What is my duty to public health, to that broader patriotism that directs itself against the greatest foe of humanity, tuberculosis?

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Pedagogy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

—Another assassination is reported from Russia. In the name of liberty, many a crime is committed.

—Governor Harmon, Ohio, supposed to be a candidate for the presidency, spent a night in Greensboro this week. He visited Guilford battle ground. He went to Raleigh to make an address at the Fair.

—An armistice has been agreed upon between Italy and Turkey, it is reported, and the war between those two nations is practically ended. We have not heard yet of aggressive hostilities and many fatalities on either side.

—Orville and Wilbur Wright, of aeroplane fame, are at Manteo, N. C., constructing a new sort of flying machine. It was from near Manteo that the Wrights made their first flight in 1904 and again in 1908 startled the world by flying eight miles.

—All honor to the modest, faithful minister who declined a fee of $10,000 offered him to unite in marriage Col. Astor and Miss Force recently and then declined later the offer of another $10,000 for having done his duty in declining the first $10,000. Such characters prove that not all the men about us are money mad.

—Hon. Locke Craig, of Asheville, who was such a close competitor of Governor Kitchen three years ago has announced formally that he will be a candidate for the governorship. The press generally seems of the opinion that he will have little opposition and that next year is Craig year. But no man can tell the turn in the political tide twelve months ahead.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1911. NUMBER 48.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can either remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In requesting change of post-office, give the old post-office as well as the new.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

NOTICE TO ALL DELEGATES.

Please send your name and post office address to Mr. A. J. Harris, Henderson, at once, if you intend to attend the Conference. The task of assigning homes is no light one laid upon busy men, so please respond at once. This is important and I hope the pastors will see that their delegates do this. Let all who expect entertainment, whether delegate or preacher or minister, please to send their names and post office address to the above name, and oblige.

R. M. Andrews.

NOTICE TO PASTORS AND DELEGATES.

The following schedule is important to those attending the Conference from west of Greensboro: Trains leave Greensboro 7:30, 9:40, A. M. and 4:20, P. M. Those going on the 7:30 train make connection with the S. A. L. in Durham, leaving there at 11:05 A. M., and arrive at Henderson at 12:50, P. M., or with S. A. L. in Raleigh at 11:35 and arriving in Henderson at 1:06 P. M.

Those going on the 9:40 train will have to wait in Durham for train leaving there at 6 P. M., or in Raleigh for train leaving there at 6:05. The 6 o'clock train out of Durham is a mixed train, due in Henderson at 9 o'clock, but rarely ever gets there before 12 o'clock. The 6:05 train from Raleigh arrives in Henderson at 7:37. The difference in cost is 50 cents more by Raleigh.

Those who leave on the 4:20 train will have to spend the night in Durham or Raleigh or take a mid-night train from Raleigh. Those coming from the East are sufficiently acquainted with the schedules over their roads and will not need any directions here.

It is hardly probable that any reduced rates will be secured as the rail roads require two hundred certificates. But the matter has been taken up with them and report will be made through the Herald as soon as definite information is obtained.

Pastors will observe that there is a space on blank for Financial Report for Minute Fund. Each pastor should take a collection for this purpose to avoid the difficulty of raising this fund at Conference.

(The foregoing came without signature, but appears to be in the handwriting of the Secretary of our Conference, Rev. S. W. Taylor.—Editor.)

ETHICS OF THE DELEGATE'S PROFESSION.

Every other profession has its code of ethics. Why should not delegates have theirs? If it is agreed that they should, how would the following do as a suggestion?

1. A delegate should feel bound to represent his constituency—not himself merely.

2. A delegate should not try to make one preacher think he is going to give him his vote when in fact he is giving it to another.

3. A delegate should be present and take part in the business of the Conference. Ours is a church of mutual rights and mutual obligations.

4. A delegate should attend the devotional services of the Conference.

5. A delegate should be concerned about the ministerial supply of other charges besides his own.

6. A delegate should remain to the close of Conference.

7. A delegate should devote himself to the interests of his charge, express his judgment at the proper time regarding the pastoral supply, but be willing to acquiesce in or submit to the judgment of the whole Conference when that judgment has been matured and expressed.

8. A delegate should vote his own judgment, but he should first carefully inform himself and consider fairly every side of a question.

9. A delegate should be conscious of the dignity of his office and should appreciate the privilege of belonging to a church that so fully recognizes his value in the councils of the church.

10. A delegate should be conscious of the responsibility that rests on ministers and laymen alike for the upbuilding of the church and the spread of the Gospel and the gathering in of every unsaved soul.

CHARACTER AND CASH.

In the business world, credit has two bases—cash and character, and the greater of these is character. No matter how much money a man has, if he is dishonest, if he refuses to pay just debts or is negligent about them, he loses standing in the commercial world. On the other hand, no matter how little cash a man has, if he has made a reputation for paying his debts, his fellowmen will trust him, he has credit. It is better to be honest than rich, even in this world.

—The meeting at Grace church closed last night, Bro. Millaway returning Sunday afternoon and preaching to the close. It was a good meeting. The church was warmed, and there were fifteen professions of faith, four being on the part of persons who had back-slidden. Some have joined the church; others doubtless will.

—Rev. J. H. Abernethy's post-office is now Walstonsburg, N. C. He is teaching a school there which runs through the winter months.

—The funeral of Bro. A. H. Stack was held in Grace Church last Sunday afternoon, conducted by Bro. Ogburn. He spoke highly of the character of Bro. Stack. There was a large attendance in spite of the rain. Bro. Stack leaves a widow and two children, besides his father and brother. He will be missed in our church and Sunday school, for he was a faithful attendant.

THE GENEROUS SIDE OF LIFE.

There is nothing to hinder a regular professed sinner from being generous. He ought to be so; and it will pay him in the good things of earth to be generous. He and his will get better of life by the handling of little wealth with generosity than to blunder on with much "gain" while being destitute of generosity.

These things have been tried out and tested, and we have the evidence. God has arranged and marked out the way of life, and generosity runs parallel with God's established way. The generous side of life is the liberal side, strictly, and is belonging to the economical law of self denial.

We usually know something about what we think about, but we know very little about things that we do not think on. If the generous, those who are strictly generous, plan to gain wealth, a part of their purpose is to be able to help to support the commonwealth. The generous want to be able to be "taxed" to support the government that affords them protection. The generous labor hard to be able to help the commonwealth—to enrich the commonwealth. The finest "riches" in the world is the "store" of the commonwealth—but, by a lack on the part of generosity, etc., many there are who fail to get hold of the facts in the case.

Moses, under God, had a clear insight to all these economical truths. But Abraham, before Moses, was inspired to all this, as we read. Gen. 14:20. "And he gave him tithes of all." And Hebrews 7:4, God in his wisdom laid down obligatory laws to help the people; and the generous people are glad to be bound to social duty by laws and system. God's order of things always proves up for the best—is complete. We make mistakes; God made no mistakes.

A great and generous system is that of tithing, but the majority fail to get hold of these facts. If we had only a mortal to dictate for us, and he able to make no mistakes, we would honor him highly.

Cain went to the great extreme against the generous, and slew his brother, Abel. The ungererous want to cause pain, want to hurt and destroy—want to rule or ruin in some cases—want to tear down. Generosity leads out to the sociable; loves to help to build up; to build up for the commonwealth in church and state, far and near. It is providential to have system, and systems, so that the people all may have safe mutual benefit.

Generosity surely hates war and loves peace. The ungenerous side of our national affairs is so shaped that while we vote or "howl" for prohibition the devil's liquor trafic and the white slave traffic continues on worse and worse.

Tithing pays to God, and liberality promotes the commonwealth. Selfishness and the love of money in every case, tends to make the rich man richer and the poor man poorer, but tithing proposes to make the rich man better, generously, and good all around, and to literally elevate the poor man. Generosity is elevating, even if it moved a man to sell out and "give to the poor."

There is no extravagance by systematic tithing, but the system would be great to curtail the usual extravagances.

Generosity and faith in fellow man belong together.

Help the poor mortal, and thus be virtually enabled to see good in him—but cursing, beast-like, hates. Generosity belongs to the bright side of life. Practical generosity is great to upbuild, to promote the welfare and happiness of the human family. A good man was urging for the wearing of better clothing, and remarked that "it is sometimes worth money to a man to wear good clothing." It is a nice thing to be able to wear good clothing, and it is very desirable, but the generous is far greater among the human family than the ability to wear fine clothes.

The generous is more important than the part of popular civilization, such as consists in fine houses and rich lands and such-like wealth.

Generosity belongs to the best of wealth —is something of the best of moral wealth. There is no reflection by these expressions against these necessities of life—not by any means. The houses and lands, and good clothing, and the necessary food all are needed. However, a cheap shelter with simple food would be preferred by the generous rather than any wealth or luxury that could not be graced with generosity.

A gifted young man was kindly requested to aid in a benevolent enterprise, one that he was reliably related to, and thus obligated, as it seemed; but he declined. He refused entirely to show any respects. He, to all appearance, did not succeed in life—however, he died young. But we mortals have great cause to "fear and tremble" lest we try to judge those who do not succeed as we seem to do. It will be more convenient for us to "work out our salvation with fear and trembling," rather than to censure those who have seemed to fail for life, while appearing to be ungenerous.

If we are religiously generous we will "be patient with all men." The religious, generous will of necessity have to take their part in life with those who are humbly living a life of "self-denial."

Truly, this class are a safe class, and they are not trying to take "gain for godliness." The generous are looking to God for better things than the gain that necessarily comes by the tricks of the oppressor.

The oppressor may have an outward generous show, and may appear gallant, but the religious generosity is of necessity belonging to honesty and a spirit of self-denial.

There is danger of prejudice coming in the way of our generosity. We must be generous towards others who don't think quite as we do. There is more of the "non-essential" mixed in with our religious and social affairs than some of us are willing to give assent to. If this was not the case we could not be right and yet be extremely sectarian. The fact that we are very much assuming on sectarian lines is enough to convince us that there is great need of generosity, and such like graces might be woven into this subject —but the original purpose was to notice the good of generosity.

By being very generous towards those who do not think as we do can get on safely in this social life. One time when the president of our S. S. was inviting a certain school to a convention, the superintendent of the school answered at once by saying, "No, we'll not go; we will not be mixing up with so many things." And the too zealous "sectarian" saw fit to exercise his "generosity(?)".

In the days of John Wesley, people, some who did not quite think as he did, were willing to "mix up with things." At a certain time the brother-in-law of Mr. Wesley (a minister, and one who had married the sister of the great man) approached him by saying, "John, I don't think quite as you do, but when you have occasion to come into this neighborhood the people flock in and fill the churches like inspiration; and when you can do so, you are welcome to preach in my church." Times are such that we of the various persuasions must "mix up," and we can't help it—and in this we must bear and forbear—we must not forget the part of generosity.

A heavier thing in the "consideration" is the final necessity. A well-to-do man often needs the grace of generosity to lift him up from a great weight that might be called the "love of money."

The love of money is crippling generosity more than sectarian prejudices or sectarian lines. Perhaps the peculiar sectarianism is nearly all needed; and however that, we have evidence that the sects are able to meet all their financial obligations, and they would, if every member could be aroused up to the standard of practical generosity.

W. F. Grabbs.

—Dare to do right.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Our Aim: $50,000.00 in Year Ending May 1, 1912.

Our Foreign Missionary enterprise is the highest form of beneficence. It is our response to the need and despair of the heathen world. By it we acknowledge the source of our rich heritage, and our obligation to impart to others the power which wrought for our enrichment and development.

It has no relation to the commercial spirit which asks "What can I get out of it?"

Its noblest incentive is the love of Christ; its greatest reward is the joy of service rendered for Him.

Our attitude towards and our support of this enterprise, therefore, very largely determines our loyalty to the Christ, and our devotion to his church whose one mission finds its best expression through ministrations to the needy of the whole world.

It is self-evident that the success of our enterprise is largely conditioned on the measure of support which our people give to it, for the gratifying results secured would have been greatly increased if more men and improved equipment could have been provided for the Japan work during the last three years.

Even now it seems difficult to arouse the church to a comprehension of the unprecedented crisis which confronts us, and the consequences sure to follow unless prompt and adequate provision is made to avert them.

Our people cannot afford to close their eyes to the situation, because of their inseparable identification with this great work which represents their progress and efforts to obey the command of the Christ, and be true to the ties of a world-embracing brotherhood.

Every conceivable obligation is upon the members of our denomination to sustain and develop our Foreign Missionary enterprise to the extent of their ability, and to deliberately refuse to do so is nothing short of disobedience to positive command, and the breaking of the vows of discipleship.

It is God's blessing upon our efforts in the Japan work which necessitates the present emergency call for special funds with which to provide the extraordinary and quite infrequent demands upon which the very life and extension of the work depend.

Frequently have these demands been enumerated in my Bulletins—see last Bulletin—and the Board has no means available to supply any one of them, hence we must appeal for a special EMERGENCY FUND at once.

As stated heretofore, the Maryland Conference pledged "every reasonable endavor to raise this year for Foreign Missions $5,000 in addition to the Assessment and the Children's Day offering." Our plans are being arranged as rapidly as possible for a campaign throughout the entire church, of which more will be published shortly.

Suffice to say now that every pastor and Sunday school superintendent and C. E. Society will be asked to aid in the prosecution of the plans, which embrace contributions from the churches, a Christmas offering from the schools, and a free-will offering from the societies, and of course, personal gifts.

Of Profit to the Young.

I again appeal to our pastors and superintendents to make an earnest effort to organize Mission Reading Circles and Study Classes. Now that the long evenings are here, I know nothing which would be of more interest and help to the young, and to the local church itself than to have one or more of the Circles or Classes. Send to me for a pamphlet on "How to Organize, etc." It will be sent postpaid. A number of books to select from treating of different foreign countires, etc. 35 cents in paper, 50 cents in cloth binding. Begin at once. The teacher of a class of young people could easily organize a Circle or Class, and meet in one or more homes, one evening a week, and finish in eight weeks.

Fred. C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St.,
Baltimore, Md.

MARTHA ANN'S SONG.

Martha Ann was out in the back yard hanging up the weekly wash of the Brown family. As she toiled she sang loud and clear a merry little song.

The grocer's boy, trudging along in the dusty street, heard it, and whistled the same tune, forgetting that the basket he held was almost too heavy for him to carry.

Mrs. Brown heard it, too. Poor Mrs. Brown! She was always at work in her stuffy little house, and always tired, but the song flew in through an open window, and she smiled at it, because it was a careless, happly little thing; and before she knew it she was singing as she moved about—something she had not done for many a weary day.

Baby May heard the rippling sounds. Her little white teeth were pushing their way up into sight. They hurt the little maid, those hidden teeth, so that she fretted uneasily and cried to be comforted. But the merry song laughed at her, and she listened and cooed and dimpled with delight, and she reached out her pretty arms as if she would catch and hold it fast.

A little girl who had been shut in for several weeks, and was downhearted and blue because she could not go about, also heard the song and unconsciously hummed the merry tune.

Just a little song, such as any one might sing, quickly sung and quickly sinking into silence, but what a pleasant mission it had in the world!

It was worth while to be a Martha Ann, to drop a little oil of gladness on the grinding wheels of life, to make them run a little easier and a little smoother. Even you and I can do that.—Comrade.

The Fatal Street Corner.

In Nova Scotia town lived an old man whose wife had recently died, leaving him in a comfortable house with no one to look after him. He soon began "lookin' round" for a second helpmate, and settled on a widow, whose status as a housekeeper for her spouse was well established. The old man had but one objection to her—she was a Methodist, and h had been a devout Presbyterian all his life.

'It's all right but for one thing,' he confided to his crony, when they fell to discussing this drawback. 'Come week days, she will be fine, I'm thinking. She can keep me tidy, mind the house, and, man, yet she can cook. "But then," and he shook his head doubtfully, "then will come Sunday. We will be starting off to church together, just as husband and wife should be doing on the Sabbath day, and we will come to the corner. Then Mandy, she will be turning to go down the street to the Methodist place, and I will go on to the house of God alone!"—Lippincott's.

The order of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, that its employees shall not use tobacco in any form while on duty sounds a little like an echo from the famous deliverance of the General Assembly, only that the trainmen must obey the order or lose their jobs, while the Presbyterian Church officer can continue the use of his luxury, if it be such, without prosecution or persecution. —The Presbyterian.

Information Bureau.

"Have you anything in the way of a carpet beater?" inquired the department store patron.

"We have," replied the floorwalker "Take the elevator to the seventeenth floor and you'll find some rugs at $29.98 that beat any carpet you ever saw."—Chicago News.

AN AID TO FAMILY WORSHIP.

By Harold E. Wilson.

Perhaps you used to have family prayer in your home in years gone by. Or if not many years have gone by since you established that little home of yours, perhaps you started out bravely and conscientiously in those first blissful days to open each morning with some brief reading from the Word and a prayer for strength and guidance. You did not get out of the habit, if you are like some of the rest of us, because it was irksome or because you found no profit in it. It was a help. It did sweeten the morning hours, and—well, there is truth in the modern slogan: "Be sweet until 9 A. M. and the rest of the day will take care of itself."

Why, then, was the habit broken? Why do we hurry away in the morning to business with the Bible unopened and, if our conscience twinges, console ourselves by repeating:

Work shall be prayer, if all be wrought
As Thou wouldst have it done;
And prayer, by Thee inspired and taught,
Itself with work be one?

Let me see if I could tell you why it is. Perhaps you had difficulty in opening to appropriate readings. The chapters were long for your limited time, or they were not devotional in spirit. After you had read the Psalms through several times and most of the New Testament, it was hard to turn at random to just what you wanted. Possibly you followed for a time the daily readings suggested in the Sunday-school lessons. But you found these often too brief to be of value, and frequently more historical than devotional. You skipped a morning when you had everslept, and another when a neighbor ran in just as you were through breakfast. Several lapses occurred, but each time you brought yourself conscientiously back to the family altar.

At last a wonderful thing happened. A baby boy came into your home straight from the Glory Land. Your home was never the same again. No longer could you say what you would do at a certain hour in the morning—or any other hour in day or night, for that matter. Every habit you had ever formed and many resolutions you had made—all were now trespassed upon. And perhaps other children have come, and other duties arisen, until now it is to sleep as late as you dare in the morning, a hurried rising, a bolted breakfast, and away.

You see I am writing what has been rehearsed to me. "I would like to have morning devotions," said a friend to me the other day. "Is there no book of selected readings for each day of the year, with possibly a hymn and accompanying prayer?" He was a father of five lively children and I fancied what was in his mind. It is not easy to extemporize in prayer with prattlers at your knee who do not always appreciate the value of silence. I was obliged to confess that I had never happened upon such a book, but mentally resolved to look up the matter. The result is that I have before me, and am using each morning in my own home, "The Church at Home," by Bishop John H. Vincent. It is not a new book, but is admirably adapted to its purpose. Each page contains an appropriate Scripture reading, hymn and prayer. Five minutes would be sufficient time to allow for a dignified and reverent service. Surely none of us but can find a way to set apar five minutes of each day to a practice of such value to all the members of our home. As Bishop Vincent says in his "Introduction," "Family prayer is an institution of priceless value where it is kept up conscientiously, seriously, regularly, and where it is indorsed by domestic administration and personal example. Where it is a part of a steady and genuine life, and not performed perfunctorily, it is full of power. The memory of it goes through life, hallowing every thought of home, reminding the wanderer of the days of innocency and devotion, and alluring him again to the Christ who was so long enshrined in the family circle."

Besides the contents of the book already mentioned, Bishop Vincent has included readings for nine special days and memory texts for every day in the year. The book is heartily recommended to those who have a desire to continue a custom sometimes beset with some difficulty, but which, if persistently pursued, brings manifold blessings.—N. Y. Advocate.

THE BOYS OF OLDEN DAYS.

Great were the boys of olden days, who, grown to manhood, opened new regions of the earth to settlement and work.

Few now are the spots of the earth that have not been explored. Take the North and South Poles, a few sections of South America, a little of Africa, and a little of Central Asia, and you have all the world with which man is not yet wholly familiar.

It seems quite probable that within another century the days of opening new countries will have ended—there will be no untraveled spots on the face of the globe.

Exploration is now conducted on scientific lines. Men go on great expiditions equipped with every comfort. But it was not so in the days when MacKenzie found the Artic Ocean and then made his undaunted way to the Pacific.

The story of what was doing in those last days of the eighteenth century is worth twenty tales of bloody battles; a score of fairy nothings. He was working for all humanity—which is real work—and some day it is to be hoped that Canada will set up a great monument to his name.

He found out and proved a lot of things that geographers and stay-at-homes of his time did not know and could not have known if he had not taken a stout heart and a clever mind into the wilds of the north and worked for the honor of true knowledge and his native land. When you are discouraged with a bit of work, read this story of MacKenzie and take a new hold on your undertakings. Learn from his example that you can conquer.

Far to the north, so far north that the thermometer plays hide-and-go-seek much of the time around forty degrees below there is a jumble of lakes and rivers bearing the names, Athabasca, Woldachuck, Yellow Knive, Great Slave, Tache, St. Therese, Good Hope, Great Bear, Peace, Tatlah, Smoky, Fraser, and so on. They lie in the provinces of Canada known as MacKenzie, Yukon and British Columbia. They are so far out of the world of railways, telegraph, printing presses and school houses that they are being opened to active settlement.

But what must they have been in 1789, a hundred and twenty-two years ago? The Athabasca is a wonderful savage river, more mighty and beautiful than our Hudson. It empties into Athabasca Lake, and on this lake in 1789 Alexander Mackenzie, chief fur trader for the Northwest Company had his home. He was a trader with the Crees, Slaves, Chipewyans. So, too, he was a dreamer, a thinker of doings that other men might call impossible. He loved the "sniff" of the wilds, and he was neither afraid of himself nor of nature.

In those days the English government had a standing reward of $100,000 for any man who would discover a northwest passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The reward had been standing for years. Many men had tried to win it, and failed. MacKenzie said to himself:

"The rivers run north from Athabasca, and run west from Athabasca. If I follow the rivers I must land somewhere—perhaps I will master the secret and win the great reward."

One morning in June he put a canoe into the waters of Athabasca. He started north to where the present MacKen River flows out to the lake, making its way to the Polar waters. He had two or three men with him and some provisions. He entered the Mackenzie at a point a mile wide, and its bank rise three and four hundred feet high, banks of rock.

Nine days his canoe drifted in a heavy fog, and then cold and driving rains came upon the party. Forty days after Mackenzie had left Athabasca his canoe entered the Arctic Ocean at what is now called Mackenzie Bay. It required eight weeks for the party to make the return journey. Often they were without food, the weather was deadly cold, the canoe frequently upset in icy waters. Mackenzie never complained. The chronicles of the time which survive speak of his enduring good temper, his immense strength, his fearlessness and his patience.

He did not discover on this voyage the Northwest Passage, because none existed, but he proved tht it did not exist. A. C. Lunt writes:

"He discovered the Mississippi of the north—Mackenzie River."

The following spring Mackenzie hastened to the deadquarters of his company at Grand Portage, on Lake Superior, where he reported his finding of the Mackenzie and asked permission of the directors to explore the Peace River, which rolled and tumbled westward from Athabasca to some then unknown region. His journey southward and back to his trading post occupied a year, but he returned home with the permission of the directors to explore the westward stream.

He built a birch canoe thirty feet long, and stored it with powder and pemmican. He took nine persons with him, and in May, 1793, while all France was torn with Revolution, when Napoleon's star was just on the ascendant, while we were yet a bankrupt and discouraged government, he set himself afloat in the wilderness to find a new way to the sea.

The journeying was frightful. Mr. Lunt describes one incident of this:

"In less than a week snow-capped peaks had crowned the canoe in a narrow canon below a tumbling cascade where the river was one wild sheet of tossing foam. The difficulty was to land. Fastening an eighty-foot tow line to the bow, Mackenzie leaped to a declivity, axe in hand, cut footholds along the face of the steep cliff to a place where he could jump on a level rock, then turning, signalled for his men. The voyagers were paralyzed with fear. They stripped themselves to swim, then one by one vaulted from foothold to foothold where Mackenzie had cut steps, till they came to the final jump across the water. Here Mackenzie caught each on his shoulders. The tow line was then passed around trees, and the canoe tracked up the raging cascade."

Mackenzie's men revolted from the perils before them. They swore they would go no further. Mackenzie gave them a good meal and ordered them to go ahead. They came to windfalls of trees with the thickness of twice the height of a man. Up this Mackenzie climbed, "clothes torn to tatters, boots hacked to pieces, feet gashed with cuts." The going was so bad in one day he only made three miles. His men fell asleep on the bare ground from sheer exhaustion.

Finally a majority of the men deserted the explorer. They left him without food and with but little powder. Barefooted and in a terrffic storm he followed them They were overtaken that night and compelled to go on with the journey. Finally the source of the Peace River was reached. Beyond were peaks and glaciers. The streams were worse than the one they had left. The canoe was upset and all the provisions and powder dumped into the water. The men wept. Makenzie quietly remarked that this would teach them how to run the rapids Men of the north—to turn back? Such a thing had never been known in the history of the Northwest Fur Company. It would disgrace them forever. Then he vowed that he would go ahead whether the men accompanied him or not. They went with him and so he crossed the Great Divide of the Upper Rocky Mountains and started down the western slopes that were to lead him to the Pacific.

The Indians he met told him "the river he was following ran for many moons through the shining mountains before it reached the midday sun." It was barred by rapids and dangerous. Mackenzie kept on. He had only one month's provisions left and his powder was nearly all gone, but he kept moving ahead. On July 4, 1793, he abandoned the canoe. His men were loaded down each with a musket, two pistols and ninety pounds of food. They walked west, barely making twelve miles a day. Their feet bled, and they suffered terribly.

But on July 20, 1793, far ahead they saw the thin, blue line of the Pacific Ocean. Sea lions played on the rocks of the coast. Sea gulls whirled over their heads. Here was the sea that for three hundred years men had been trying to reach by over land and failed, until Mackenzie came to it. He was three months from home, and almost starving, but he had found his goal.

He made a pot of coarse paint, and on a rock which faced the ocean he painted in letters of red:

"Alexander Mackenzie, from Canada, by land, the twenty-second of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three."

He made a safe return to Athabasca. The next winter he left the west forever. The English king made him a knight, but could add nothing to his wonderful and enduring manhood. He died a respected citizen of Scotland, in 1820.—The Montreal Witness.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

1 Chronicles, chapters 8-14.

Questions.

93. Why was God angry with Uzza? (Assigned to Miss Ida Baber).

Answers to Assigned Questions.

Question 90. Ezra and Nehemiah.

Mrs. W. F. Kennett.

We find recorded in the 29th chapter of I Chronicles a most sublime prayer of thanksgiving and praise offered by David, the sweet singer of Israel, after he had caused the princes and people to give liberally for the building of Solomon's Temple. Soon afterwards "he died in good old age full of days, riches and honor."

Mrs. B. F. N.

SOME PORTO RICAN CHARACTERISTICS—PHYSICAL.

The people of Porto Rico are brown skinned with the exception of the pure whites and pure blacks. They are slender and of short stature, graceful in motion, and animated in conversation. The hair is black, and kinky where negro blood predominates. The natives have poor teeth. They possess little muscular strength which is due to lack of nourishing food.

In the country it is said that at least 95 per cent suffer with Uncinariasis. This weakens may of them incapacitating them them for work. Physical debility arising from immorality are widespread.

Tobacco and rum are used extensively. Both boys and girls begin the use at an early age. The growth of boys is impeded by use of same. Sometimes it is said rum and tobacco are used to appease the pangs of hunger. Howsare.

—The end of the first week of the McNamara famous murder case in Los Angeles, California ended without a single juror being chosen. Justice has a tedious and perilous road in the courts. There appears to be so much feeling in this case between capital and labor that the simple case of "guilty or innocent of murder," is almost lost sight of.

—The forty-third annual convention of the American Woman Suffrage Association was held in Louisville, Kentucky, last week.

—China is experiencing a revolution of such proportion as to attract the attention of nations throughout the world. The United States has several war vessels in Chinese waters at Hankow to protect American interests.

From Pastors and People.

NOTICE!

Conference blanks have been sent out. If any pastor fails to get his in due time, please notify the undersigned at once.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

Dear Brother Pastor:

Please write me a card at once telling what you have done this year in building churches, parsonage, schools, etc., and give approximate cost of each. This is important and I will greatly appreciate an early hearing from you. Name the enterprise and state where located.

Very truly,
W. E. Swain.

Dear Brother Pastor:

How would it do for each one of you to take subscriptions for publishing Conference Journal before coming to Conference? Then take collections in all your churches for publishing journal. It would relieve the situation very much. You will find a place in Conference blanks for this and I am sure it would be much less trouble all round. Should you not return to same charge you turn over list of actual subscribers to journal to your successor on that charge and he could distribuate on their arrival.

W. E. Swain.

Yadkin Colleg Ct.

To the official members:

Dear Brethren:

The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Mt. Carmel on Saturday before the first Sunday in November. Preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner, quarterly conference. All officials are expected to be present.

Pastor.

Orange.

The fourth quarterly conference of Orange Circuit will convene at Chestnut Ridge church on Saturday, November 11, 1911.

There will be an important church meeting at 10, A. M., followed by a praise and prayer service. The business session of the conference will begin immediately after dinner.

Every member of the charge is requested to be present on that day. Important business is to be transacted.

Pastor.

Matthew's Chapel, Greenville Ct.

As we have been silent for quite a while, will write a few lines to let the readers of the Herald know we are still alive.

Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, preached for us yesterday for the first time since July, as he has been very busy with the meetings. We were all glad to see him, and also to have him with us again. He will be with us only one more time this year, but hope he will be with us again next year. We are all glad to see him come, as he always wears a smile for all.

Our Sunday school has come to life again, after being silent for quite a while. We are working for a good Sunday school and hope it will continue so through the winter.

I will close with best wishes to all.

Yours for Christ,
Lottie Edwards.

Spring Hill.

Dear Herald:

Quarterly conference was held here Saturday and dinner on the grounds; a large table and a good dinner and enjoyed by all that were there. Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Plyler, President Swain, Rev. Chas. Cecil, were all present and a large number of other brothers and sisters. Our Sunday school is still going on. All pray for us that it may keep growing.

The protracted meeting that was held at our church did great good. By the help of God we think several precious souls were saved. We pray that they continue in the right path.

We ask you all to pray for us.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Minnie Craven,
Reporter.

Forsyth Circuit.

Our special meeting began at Oak Grove the second Sunday in October; closed Thursday night on account of the inclemency of the weather. The meeting was not what we had hoped for, though there very good results. Rev. W. D. Fogleman was pulpit help; his faithful preaching was enjoyed by all.

Our meeting began at Pleasant Hill the third Sunday in October. Rev. J. D Williams as pulpit help. We were again rained out at this point. But those that came out greatly enjoyed the preaching. I need not tell you the preaching was good, you know that. All want him to come again.

On Thursday morning of the meeting at 10 o'clock, Bro. R. E. Briggs and Delenia Hauser were happily married at the parsonage by the writer assisted by Rev. J. D. Williams. We wish them a happy life

T. A. Williams.

P. S. Our fourth quarterly conference was held at Tabernacle Saturday before the third Sunday. The business transacted in the spirit of love. All the churches were represented. T. A. W.

Moriah Church, Tabernacle Circuit.

Although the weather was very unfavorable, forty-five of our number were present for the Sunday school service.

Our last Sunday school collection for the Denton Orphanage amounted to $6.57. The second Sunday of each month is the regular time for taking this collection.

Our pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, gave us another good sermon, using as his text Matthew 6, and a part of the 6th verse. He used as his subject, "Prayer" and dwelt especially on the importance of secret prayer. At the close of the sermon communion service was held.

At our next preaching service (the second Sunday in November) business matters of importance will be attended to and we hope to have a large congregation. This will also be our last appointment for this Conference year. Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD.
W. F. Kennett, Editor.

This number of The Postal Card is devated especially to the interests of the President's visit to Flat Rock circuit and to the fourth quarterly conference.

1st, the President's visit. President Swain will be with us November 3-4-5. He will preach in Palestine Church Friday, November 3rd, at 11, A. M.; in Gideon's Grove Church Saturday, November 4th, at 11 A. M. and the quarterly conference will be held after luncheon on the ground. Sunday, November 5th, the President will preach in Bethel Church at 11 A. M., and in Flat Rock Church at 3 P. M.

The assessments for President's salary are as follows: Flat Rock, $14.00, Bethel, $7.25; Gideon's Grove, $3.00, Palestine, $2.75. Those who have the matter in hand will please see to it that the full amounts are raised by the time of the President's visit.

The fourth quarterly conference. Remember it will be held in Gideon's Grove church, Saturday, November 4th, and that President Swain will preside. Remember also that at this conference the pastor's salary for next year is to be fixed, and the delegate may wish some expression as to who the pastor shall be, and be sure "to remember, and don't forget," that we want a full attendance of the offcial members, every class leader, every steward, every trustee, every Sunday school superintendent, every preacher and every exhorter should be present. Let us have one full quarterly conference and see how it will look and how we will feel.

Don't forget that we want full reports; the stewards especially should get very busy. The year's work is almost done and every faithful, loyal member will wish the pastor to carry up to the Conference a good report and will lend a helping hand toward making it possible for him to do so.

A Rally. Let us have a grand rally at the fourth quarterly conference—all present—all interested. Don't forget the place—Gideon's Grove—nor the time. Sunday, November 4th. Hand this Postal Card to your wife and tell her to see to it that you go to the fourth quarterly conference at Gideon's Grove. Saturday, November 4th. We shall expect you—don't forget that we will expect You.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Circuit.

Bro. Lowdermilk filled his regular appointment last second Sunday; he preached a good sermon to a small congregation; owing to the inclemency of the weather but few were out. I feel sure that all were benefited that heard it. We are sorry that he has but one more appointment here before conference. We hope that he will be returned to Oak Ridge Circuit again.. I think that he has come the nearest giving entire satisfaction of any that have served the Sandy Ridge Church for a number of years and is equally popular with the other churches as far as I know. Bro. Lowdermilk has manifested a great deal of interest in the welfare of the church. It seems that he is just willing to do anything to help the church along. When he came on the circuit four years ago we had no hymn books scarcely to sing out of, but through the efforts of our pastor we have perhaps a dozen famous hymns besides quite a number sold in the community. Also, one dozen M. P. Hymnals, so we are in better shape so far as singing is concerned. The latter were bought with the proceeds of the ice cream supper. Some tried to criticize. I heard of one man, not a church member, who should have said that he would have done so and so if the preacher and the members of the church had met at the church for the purpose to pray for rain. Poor fellow!. He thought that God was going to cut off all temporal blessing, not knowing how to pray and ask God for the needed blessing himself, he wanted the preacher and the members of the church to intercede for him in asking God to give us rain, knowing that God in his mercy sends his rain upon the unjust as well as the just and therefore they share the blessing with the Christian people. I heard of another; this man was cursing the Christian because it did not rain. He swore that there was no Christian in this part of the country, for if there were it would rain. Yes, the poor fellow knows how to curse but did not know how to pray. Oh, how much bette it would have been for that man to fall upon his knees and pray to God to give him a clean heart so that poor parched, thirsty soul of his might have the gentle showers of divine grace that flow from the throne of God that it may rejoice that the drought of many years has been broken and a soul that was dead in trespasses and sins is made alive unto God. It is a sad fact that so many people are unconcerned about the long drought, 50 or sixty years, of the immortal soul. I admit that it looks very distressing to see earth dry and vegetation burning up and perishing for rain, but what is that compared with a soul that is thirsting for the waters of life. Let us look after the welfare of the soul first, it is worth more than all the world. There is not the interest manifested in our Sunday school that should be: the average attendance is 20 for the past three months. It should have been seventy-five at least. I feel that we need the prayers of the Christian people; please pray for us. God bless you all. J. H. Gordon.

Granville.

Our fourth quarterly conference for this charge was held at Union Chapel Saturday, October 21, at 11 A. M. The best turnout of officials since I have been here though Mt. Carmel was not represented at all. Much interest was manifested in the business done.

Lively discussions on subjects arranged. An increase of $100 on pastor's salary for next year. Good reports from the churches in every way. The return of the present pastor was asked for.

We believe that there has been development along many lines this year. The charge is praying more. There have been good revivals. Something over 100 conversions and reclamation and 48 additions to the church. The prospect is encouraging. Bro. Garrett, the genial superintendent Mt. Carmel Sunday school, gave a reception to the school some time ago and nearly every member was there. It was the writer's privilege to be there and we surely had a good time. Ice cream and cake served. Songs by the young people, games by the children, and a general good time by the older people made it indeed a pleasant occasion to every one present.

Truly Bro. Garret and wife made themselves equal to the occasion by entertaining us all in such a splendid manner. A rising vote of thanks, unanimous too, was tendered them the following Sunday by the congregation at Mt. Carmel.

The Ladies' Aid of Rehobeth have paid for another set of chairs in the parsonage Thus furnishing the seating capacity for the preacher's family and company. Thank you, ladies. This society, and the society of Union Chapel have put in about $43.00 worth of furniture this year. Taking the $50.00 range paid for by the entire charge makes an investment of $93.-00 for the parsonage furnishings this year.

Our Sunday school work is encouraging. Much improvement, the leaders claim, is being made. The people are still remembering us with things useful. Bro. Lee Mitchell and wife gave Pauline a pig which is developing into a large hog. Bro. Charley Grissom gave us a large 'possum. Bro. John Floyd and wife, a jug of molasses and a jar of damson preserves. But I can't take time and space to mention useful things that have come to us from Bro. E. E. Edwards, Mrs. Sol. and Miss Agnes Satterwhite, Mrs. William Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Finch, Mrs. Rogers, Eugene and Fannie Pardue, H. A. Finch, James Stone, and John Mundy and Mrs. John Gill. All showed favors that were of cash value and we thank the givers very much. Some names may have been omitted, if so, it is unintentional. We thank the good Lord for his mercies during the year and trust that our coming Annual Conference may be a great spiritual uplift to us all.

Sincerely,
N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, N. C., Oct. 23.

Giles, Richland Ct.

By this time the readers of the Herald are beginning to think I am gone off or dead. Neither of which has happened to the reporter. This scribe, nearly 81, is in bad health. But would say that we had here a most excellent meeting at Giles commencing on the third Sunday in September. The preaching good from start to finish, ending on Friday night. Bro. Joel Trogdon did much of the preaching after Sunday. Three sermons that day: one at 11 o'clock by Bro. Trogdon to a crowded house and one half still out; at 2 P. M., Bro. Greyson preached to a full house and Bro. Hatley to as many out in the grove. Both sermons were excellent. The attendance largest ever at Giles on Sunday since 1876. The meeting was well attended both day and night. The preaching grand, but no converts. Two joined from other churches.

Our Sunday school good for this season of the year. All are doing finely that attend regularly.

Bro. Hatley has done a good work, not only at Giles, but all over the circuit. Had a great meeting at Cedar Falls. Several accessions. Also at Flag Springs; about 35 conversions. Fourteen joined at that place. At Charlotte a good meeting, also several joined there. The circuit greatly revived. We had a live man to help at Giles, Bro. Trogdon. Beat his own record as assistant at Giles. Bro. Hatley also did some soul-stirring preaching here too. To sum it up, oratory in the pulpit was touching in the extreme, every sermon. And it was similar at all the other places on the circuit. I did not attend, but I heard of the success. Every four years is a Presidential. This was an off year on this circuit. Not so great an increase as some years in the past. Summer was very dry, like 1845. It might have had to do with the minds of the people as in the day when Jerusalem fell on account of sin. The people fell out with God because of no rain for a long time. Result, poor crops of corn, hundreds of new wells made in the County. Water famine in general in the State. It cost one city $10,000.

This scribe was fifteen in 1845 and there was a water famine then. Such things should tender the hearts of men, but it is quite the reverse as it was in the days of Moses. Rulers were wicked then, so today. I mean the rulers of 90,000,000. It comes the guilt on down to us of the year, 1911. We, as a nation, not up to a high standard that God would have us be with all the Gospel in almost every corner of this great U. S. Sunday schools all over the land dotted here and there like the stars in the sky at night and also like the railroads, in all the states, a net work. I must say we are so far as I can see on a par with our sister Sunday school on this circuit. We hope to get better and do more in 1912. Success to the Herald. Good will to the editor. If he should fail as editor, I can't think of a second to fill his place. Best wishes to all the Christians all over the field.

As before stated, not feeling well, I close this report, hoping to hear from other reporters in the field. We need more efficient teachers in all our Sunday schools.

Truly yours,
Wm. M. Stevenson.

—Bro. Millaway went to Liberty today to assist in the funeral of Bro. Kimrey.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Sunday school attendance increasing; fifty out of ninety-nine present last Sunday. Sixty-six cents collection. The hundredth one expected to be enrolled next Sunday.

The absence last Sunday of Hamit Powell was caused by a bad cut on the foot with an axe.

Sickness still an impediment in our school.

Suppose people were as eager to go to Sunday school as some are to circus shows and theatres, wouldn't it "take the day?"

Polk Garrett.

Oct. 24, 1911.

Mecklenburg Ct.

Just closed a meeting at Stallingsville. We had 22 conversions. Organized with 31 members of the leading families of the town; the most of them came from the M. E. Church. We also organized a C. E. Society with 18 or 20 members, and we are having a good Sunday school there. We are proud of the outlook at Stallingsville.

We have decided to sell the church and parsonage at Matthews. We have bought a nice lot, two acres, for church and parsonage with a large well-finished six room house on it, and also good outbuildings, for $1,600.00, and Bro. Stallings donated $800.00. We greatly appreciate this of Bro. Stallings, he is one of our new members from the M. E. Church.

We are going to build a nice brick church something like our new church at Denton, only not so large, and also a nice school building for our M. P. Church and people of this circuit.

We are coming up with the best report this year that we have had in a long time, but this charge must be divided in some way, it is too large.

I am favorably struck with the Christian Endeavor work. We have a society at Beulah, and I never saw a greater outcome in any church and people. Our young people need something to do, and why not give them something. They love the church when they have a part in it, but when it is to be dragged along by a few old people they wear everything out and drive the young out.

May God help us to give all something to do in his church.

With best wishes to all.

J. W. Self.

Mrs. L. G. Whittington, of this city, is dead at the age of 84 years.

—A son of George Pritchett was seriously hurt by a runaway horse in our streets.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

Dear Brethren of the N. C. Conference:

Will you please send me the names of all the members of your charge that live in the city of Charlotte, that I may find them? I hope that all the pastors will help me in this way. I want to call all our people together in Charlotte and see if we can get the way open for a church there. Now will you look after the matter at once and send names to J. W. Self, Matthews, N. C.

—Besides being an eminent lawyer, an efficient judge, and an orator of no mean ability, United States Judge Jeter C. Pritchard, of Asheville, N. C., knows how to put a moral proposition also as witness this recent utterance credited to him:

"That you cannot by law make an individual a good man, in one sense of the word, is true; but that you can by law remove such evil agencies as bar rooms, and thereby minimize the temptations that beset young men, is absolutely true. Experience teaches us that, were it not for the law it would be impossible to maintain our government and to protect the lives and property of our people. This has been so in all ages, and with all nations, and the time will never come when any government can exist without the enactment of suitable laws for the enforcement of its decrees and the maintenance of law and order."

Don't Talk Too Much.

Robert C. Ogden, John Wanamaker's partner, says that he has found in his experience that one of the greatest things that keeps young men down is the habit of talking too much. He declares that it is the silent man, the man who thinks a great deal and says very little, who is the deepest, and will succeed the quickest.

—Alfred Tennyson Dickens, son of Charles Dickens, is now in this country. He is a quiet, affable man, of sixty years of age, who is full of reminiscences of his father, and has lectured repeatedly in England, Scotland and Ireland. Mr. Dickens will make a tour of America, visiting all the large cities.

—Rev. H. L. Powell has gone to Denton to help Bro. D. A. Braswell in a series of revival services.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson went on Monday to LaGrange where he is to conduct a special meeting. The absence of the pastor will make the task more difficult, but we hope Brother Johnson will have a good meeting.

—A comet is now visible in the morning.

THE GRACE OF CHURCH GOING.

Church attendance may well be called one of the Christian graces. It is a mark of respect to God and His cause such as is not usually rendered in this age and land by those who did not highly regard him. It is a means of grace to those who observe it, so that those who are found regularly in their places in the house of God are almost sure to be the recipients of special spiritual blessings. It will be with them as it was with Eliezer, Abraham's steward, who had it to say that "I, being in the way, the Lord led me."

Church attendance is not all there is of Christian life and duty. There is no such thing as discharging our whole round of Christian obligation by simply appearing at the church service on the Sabbath. It is not claimed by any properly informed person that this is so. No physical or external performance is sufficient in quantity or quality to comprehend all that is involved in the full-orbed round of doing God's will and in all we do, living to God's glory. But it is a fact that they who neglect attendance upon public worship neither look upon themselves, nor do others look upon them, as living exemplary Christian lives.

The church service affords the opportunity for public and united worship. Those who worship the most sincerely and regularly in private are those who most thoroughly appreciate public worship and most grieve over being deprived of it. Those who are not in the habit of regular private devotion are greatly in need of the guidance and stimulus that comes in the church service. The forms and words of prayer in which they are led are for their instruction and assistance, and, if there were nothing more than this one element, it would be for the enrichment of the spiritual life of all to come and appear before God and be led in prayer by one who knows the form and spirit and words and meaning and power of prayer.

The church service, moreover, affords the opportunnity for the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ. That community is a poverty-stricken community in which the word of God is not proclaimed. Coarse and rude and undisciplined and vicious it is sure to be or to become. Let men say what they will, gospel preaching is the supreme source of refinement and virtue to any people. The pulpit is the seat of power for the spreading abroad of the influences that bless and save a community. The preacher need wish no place of greater influence. If he preaches God's word, he is using the divine means for the saving of human souls. They who listen in reverence are sure to be enriched and transformed, if the preacher gives them the truth of God. They who attend church regularly are learning the best and highest things of earth and heaven. They who neglect wantonly are making themselves their own enemies and are standing in the way of the best things that can come to their families and to their fellowmen. Those who go to church regularly will prove to be in the long run, the leaders of their communities in all that means goodness of life.

Since habit is so large an element with us in the formation of character, we should be sure to form and maintain in ourselves and in our children the habit of steadfast, thoughtful and conscientious attendance upon the means of of Grace as these are provided in the regular services of the church of Christ. Some worldly people say that they do not attend church because they were taken to church so regularly when they were young. This is probably as abject, mean and dishonest a thing as is ever said. It is not true. If they have broken away it is because they are worldly and sinful. Whoever is taken to church and started out right in life by Christian parents has much for which to thank God. If the habit is not formed early, it probably never will be, because the habit of neglecting God and his church has been formed. It is a terrible thing for parents to train their children in so deadly a habit as this. Let them rather say: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Herald and Presbyter.

—President Swain was entertained by a brother Howard not far from Charlotte who was wearing a pair of shoes that he had been wearing for nineteen years. Either those were very good shoes or Brother Howard is very easy on shoes. This reminds me of a story of the man who fell down and stuck a stump into his nose. "He must have a very large nose," said some one. "No, his nose is of ordinary size. It was a small stump," was the explanation.

—W. I. Brame, of this city, opossum hunting, fell from a tree into a stream and on rocks, and was taken up unconscious. He was taken to his home by his companions. His left arm and two ribs were found to be broken. There were also cuts and bruises.

—The Wright brothers are again experimenting with flying-machines in North Carolina. They are trying to solve the problem that the birds solved long ago of staying up without moving on. They seem to be meeting with success.

"COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS."

(The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Psalms 123:3. Golden Text for Sunday, October 29).

The trouble with our busy time is that we do not stop to consider how great things God has done for us, and is doing. There are men, there may be readers of The Christian Sun, who are busy every day enjoying the blessings and benefits God has given them, and yet they do not stop a five minutes in a whole day to reckon these blessings, nor to thank God for them. Merchants will take time to make an inventory of their stock, see how many goods they have on hand, and count their sales of the month or year. Yet if asked to count the blessings that they had received from God they would say they hadn't time.

The Lord hath done great things for us indeed, hath given us health and strength and friends and loved ones and prospered us in our way. But little do we stop to see or consider the infinite abundance of these great things. Like the Israelites, it takes some captivity, some reverses, some hardship, maybe some severe affliction to bring us to our senses and to make our hearts glad and grateful.

I saw a man the other day who had been desperately ill, exceedingly nigh death's door. He was convalescent at last. "O, the Lord has been so good to me. He has raised me up, spared my life and I think I will soon be well," said the man emotionally and gratefully. Well, if that man was thankful that the Lord had spared him and had raised him up from a bed of long and sore affliction, how thankful indeed should I have been who had not even been afflicted, who during the time had enjoyed health and strength and happiness. Count your blessings, reader, for they are many and worth while.

—From The Christian Sun.

—All honor to the modest, faithful minister who declined a fee of $10,000 offered him to unite in marriage Col. Astor and Miss Force recently and then declined later the offer of another $10,000 for having done his duty in declining the first $10,000. Such characters prove that not all the men about us are money mad.

—Nearly the entire senior class and some from other classes, forty or more students in all, of the Colored Agricultural and Mechanical College of North Carolina, at Greensboro, were summarily expelled last Saturday for choosing to do Saturday work for individuals in the city rather than labor on the college farm as directed to do by the faculty.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Memory of Gilmer Hartley Dale, of Yadkin College.

"Gone from home and loved ones who weep,
Happy, he's walking the bright, golden street,
Patiently stands on the heavenly strand,
Gilmer is calling with beckoning hand."

No consolation greater than this can come to those who mourn their dead, but time alone can dry the fallen tear, dull the sharp edge of pain, the wild throb of anguish that greets us everywhere in the sad, silent home. There is nothing but that is connected in some way with the loved one gone out of our lives forever. Crushed with the weight of loss and loneliness, we fain would cry from the depths of despair, Why, O God! Why? May heaven pity the heart so steeped in grief that it fails to hear the melody of the voice of Him who has been called "The man of sorrows, acquainted with grief," when he says, "Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

"I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you."

Greater by far than any human sympathy, "For He has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows"

Death in any form or at any time bears on its sable pinions the chill of darkness and gloom but there is always an added pathos when it comes to the young and to one so full of hopeful desire as was Gilmer Dale for a long life of usefulness as a physician, ministering relief to suffering humanity. But paramount to this disire was the wish to provide royally for his widowed mother. He would say so often, "I've got the best mother in the world. She has done so much for me. I want to live to provide for her every comfort and pleasure." But it was not to be; cut down in his 21st year—in the very flush of his young manhood when "It is so hard, to feel the hand of death arrest one's steps,

Throw a chilling blight o'er all, one's budding hopes."

Gilmer has always been above the average boy in many respects. Even when a child he was a Chesterfield in polite decorum.

Thoughtful, studious, serious-minded, but liked fun as well as any boy if it was the right kind. He professed religion and joined the M. P. Church at the age of 16, was a true Methodist Protestant, loved his church and was faithful in his attendance at Sunday school as long as he was able. His pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, says he never failed to come to him after preaching and express his appreciation of his sermon. This means much to a minister, coming from old or young. Prof. Totten, who has taught him since he was quite a child, often remarked of the strength of character he was developing. He compared his life to the queen of flowers, the rose, said he had watched him grow from a tiny bud gradually growing and expanding but ere it was full blown it began to fade. Yes, budded and bloomed on earth to be perfected in heaven.

Gilmer graduated with the class of 1910. His health was then failing fast and he was advised to give up his studies, but this would have been a death knell to all his hopes, and he felt he could not, he felt he must not only finish with his class but must write his own oration and so put forth every effort to that one end which he gained with honor to himself and the school, showing then the willpower and determination that God had seen fit to have spared him, would have ultimately won for him the higher education he so much desired and he would have reached the heights of fame, his proud, ambitious nature had mapped out for him. He fought bravely to regain his health during vacation so as to enter the University at Chapel Hill, but with bitter disappointment he had to see his classmates leave without him. He was hopeful then that year's rest would restore his strength, but long ere that time had expired he realized that God had other plans for him. Everything that was possible for loving hands to do was done for him, but he continued to droop and fade till the end came. October 5th. We would not say the end, for "Death is dawn."

The waking from a weary night of fever unto truth and light.
Death cannot come untimely to him who is fit to die.
The less of this cold world, the more of heaven.
The briefer life, the entire immortality."

Gilmer had many relatives and very many friends who grieve to know they will see his face no more till they see it transfigured and glorified awaiting them in that beautiful land beyond. No one has a better assurance of this than the grief-stricken mother, bereft of her only son and baby boy, and by his only sister, Mrs. Herman Craver, who for weeks left her home and by her devoted sacrifice of many things made it possible for the mother to be constantly at his bedside.

He was perfectly resigned to die and would speak of it to his mother as calmly as he would discuss a pleasure trip. He was very anxious that Rev. S. W. Taylor, whom he had always known and loved, preach his funeral, and regretted that his classmates could not be his pall bearers. Just before his spirit took its heavenly flight he quoted several verses of Scripture and turning to his mother, said: "Don't grieve for me, mama, for I am going to heaven."

"Let us be patient, we who mourn with weeping some vanished face:
The Lord has taken but to add more beauty, and a diviner grace.
When through the storm and tempest safely anchored just on the other side,
We shall see that dear face through death's deep shadows.
Not changed, but glorified."

A Friend.

Resolutions of Respect.

Life is uncertain; death is certain; and who shall show us the length of our days what it is? So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

God, in His wise providence, saw fit to call from our Sunday-school one of its members, Frederick H. May, Sept. 13, 1911, aged 11 years, 9 months and 29 days.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That while we mourn one lost to us, we meekly bow in submission to Him that doeth all things well.

Second, That we, the members of Hickory Grove Sunday school, wish to record our sincere appreciation of his presence in our school.

Third, That we extend our heart felt sympathy to the bereaved family.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Sunday school, and that a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

Then in the loving God we'll trust
Who doeth all things well;
The body shall return to dust.
The soul in heaven shall dwell.

Mrs. E. C. Oakley,
A. R. Little,
E. S. Jones,
Committee.

On October 18, 1911, at 3 P. M., Mr. Alps Van Dyke and Miss Clyde Newton were united in marriage at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Stephen Newton, the writer officiating.

May their journey together through life be as happy as the beginning, and may their prospects always be as bright as the day on which they were made one, heaven's richest blessings always theirs.

N. G. Bethea.

Grace Maybelle, the infant daughter of Luther and Myrtle Stone, was taken into the arms of Jesus Tuesday, October 17. Aged 15 months, 20 days.

Everything that could be done by the physicians and parents and grandmother proved of noavail. It was God's will to take her to draw the loved ones nearer their heavenly home.

W elaid her little body to rest in the Union Chapel cemetery Wednesday afternoon. October 18, at 4:30. May the Lo.d comfort the bereaved ones in this dark hour. "My grace is sufficient for thee."

N. G. Bethea.

THE OLD SCOTCHMAN'S PRAYER.

I was pleased the other day with a story which an aged Scotch minister told me about an old Scotchman who, many years ago, was on his way to a meeting of the people of God held in a tent, or some such temporary structure.

The old pilgrim was poor and ill-clad, and partly deaf, but he trusted in the Lord, whom he served, and rejoiced in His kind providence. On the way to the meeting he fell in with another Christian brother, a younger man, bound on the same errand, and they traveled on together.

When they had nearly reached the place of meeting, it was proposed that they should turn aside behind the hedge and have a little prayer before they entered the meeting. They did so, and the old man, who had learned "in everything to let his requests be made known unto God," presented his case in language like the following:

"Lord, ye ken weel enough that I'm deaf, and I want a seat on the first bench, if you can let me have it, so that I can hear Thy Word. And ye see that my toes are sticking through my shoes and I don't think it is much to your credit to have your children's toes sticking through their shoes, and therefore I want ye to get me a pair of new ones. And ye ken I have nae siller, and I want to stay there during the meeting, and therefore I want you to get me a place to stay."

When the old man had finished his quaint petition, and they had started on, his younger brother gently suggested to him that he thought his prayer was rather free in its forms of expression, and hardly as reverential as seemed proper to him in approaching the Supreme Being. But the old man did not accept the imputation of irreverence.

"He's my Father," said he, "I'm weel acquainted with Him, and He's weel acquainted with me, and I take great liberties with Him."

So they went on to the meeting together. The old man stood for a while in the rear of the congregation, making an ear trumpet of his hand to catch words, until someone near the pulpit noticed him, and, beckoning forward, gave him a good seat upon the front bench.

During the prayer the old man knelt down, and after he arose, a lady, who had noticed his shoes, said to him:

"Are they the best you have?"

"Yes," said he, "but I expect my Father will give me a new pair very soon."

"Come with me after the meeting," said the lady, "and I will get you a new pair."

The service closed, and he went with her to her house.

"Shall you stay during the meeting?" said the good woman, as they went along.

"I would, but I am a stranger in the place, and have nae siller."

"Well," she said, "you will be perfectly welcome to make your home at our house during the meeting."

The old man thanked the Lord that He had given him all the three things he had asked for. The younger brother's reverence for the Lord was right and proper, but there is a reverence which reaches higher than the forms and conventionalities.—Selected.

THE CHRIST OF THE GOSPELS.

There is a fourfold picture, or a fourfold view, of Christ in the four Gospels, and each Gospel gives us a different aspect of the Great Manifestation. In Saint Matthew He is the Son of Abraham, He is Heir of the Kingdom, King of the Kingdom of Heaven. In this Gospel alone we read of One "born King of the Jews." "The Kingdom of Heaven" is preached, and the laws of the Kingdom are laid down in the Sermon on the Mount. This Gospel reveals to us the Kingdom, not as an earthly kingdom, nor as the Kingdom of God, but as the Kingdom of Heaven.

In Saint Mark He is the servant of God. He stands as the patient Servant and Sacrifice for others.

In Saint Luke He is the Son of Man. Here is man according to the mind of God—the pattern Man, perfect Manhood. As Man He is the Priest, "for every high priest is taken from among men." As Man He is Prophet, or Apostle, sent from God. As Prophet He is God's Messenger to Man, as High Priest He is man's Messenger to God.

In Saint John He is the Son of God. John omits all reference to the birth of Jesus as the Son of Man, and at once begins with these deep and strong words: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by Him, and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men." Men beheld "His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

Thus the four Gospels give us a fourfold view of Christ, and each emphasizes a different aspect of His life and of His work. In the Gospels we discover the claims of Jesus, His sinless life, His surprisingly simple sayings on profound subjects, His perfect system of moral ethics, His broad humanity, His vicarious death, and His resurrection and ascension. The death of Christ has a very special place assigned to it in the New Testament, and Professor James Denny asserts, and we fear with truth, that it has not the same place either in preaching or theology which it has in the New Testament, and yet the Cross is the supreme power over humanity.

But why the Christ of today? Is He not the unchangeable One? Is the Christ of today different from the Christ of yesterday? Yes and no. Things become greater to us as we know them better. Christ is the same, but knowledge has increased. He grows with the growth of our spiritual knowledge. We may have Christ and yet not know what we have in Him. The cry has been. "Back to Christ," and there has been and there is a "new feeling for Christ." To quote Principal A. M. Fairbairn, "He is today more studied and better known as He was and as He lived than at any period between now and the first of the Church." God may have other words for other worlds,

But for this world the Word of God is Christ.

—The Rev. T. Moore-Smith, in the New York Observer.

Every soul must be alone and ought to be. One only degrades his friendships when he measures them by the number of liberties he takes, the number of privacies he rides over roughshod. In all friendship, one is to ask, not demand; the door can be opened from within, it must not be forced from without. The secrets of friendship—like those of the Lord—are always with those who fear. Those reverent of personality shall alone see either God or the best in man.—Henry Churchill King.

THE FURNACE OF GOLD.

"I would like to see what I could really do, for all that. This work in the laboratory is all right, of course, but what I want is something real. I am sick of plodding! I want to get right into the race!"

"Walking comes before running, though, old fellow! I like this practice. It does us good. What kind of work would you and I do now if we should be brought face to face with the actual case? For my part, I would rather you would practice on something else than on me, Dick, just at present. Let me know when you are going to begin, and I'll take a vacation."

The young men both laughed, and walked away to an open window, where they stood for some time looking out. It nettled Dick Wheeler that his friend should have so little faith in him, although he was wise enough not to show it. He thought he had the coolest nerves of any man in the college. Nothing he had yet come to in his course he had ever moved him out of the calm he believed he possessed to a remarkable degree. His nerve would, as he was wont to declare, carry him through anything, no matter how hard it might be.

Mark Stone never said much about his "nerve." He knew that was his weak place. The very sight of pain had given him trouble ever since he was a boy; and when he was considering the subject of what should be his life-work, the one thing which had stood in his way was that his grit might fail. Now the two had reached their last year in college, and were looking out upon the world from different eyes from any which had ever been given them before. Dick was all assurance; Mark rather doubting, so far as the surgical part of the work he was to do in the days to come was concerned.

"Maybe you think I couldn't do a good job if I had a chance, old fellow! You never saw me turn pale, did you, when we have had hard things to do? Be honest now, Mark!"

Mark laughed, and put his arm over the shoulder of his friend. "Don't take that to heart, Dick! I guess I was just estimating your nerve by mine. I am not sure about myself, and I wondered how you would feel if you really had anything to do. But we'll be out in a little while now, and have a chance to know all about it."

"Well, I know I shall be glad to get into the harness. The surgical part is what I like best of all. I sometimes think I will try to get a place as surgeon for some railroad. They have the very worst cases I know; that's just what I like most of all."

For an hour they talked it over, all the time busily at work over their long table.

That evening, after their day's work was done, the two young men swung out upon the road which led along the river-bank. It was a favorite run for them. Most of the way the road wound close to the water's edge, with low, overhanging rocks jutting fairly out into the highway. In some places there was scarcely room for teams to meet and pass.

The shadows were beginning to drop, and sometimes it was almost impossible for them to see more than a few rods in advance.

Suddenly the silence was broken by the steady "thud, thud" of a powerful automobile. The lamps had not been lighted, and Mark and his friend did not fairly know what was happening until they were almost alongside the machine.

Dick sprang swiftly toward the river side of the road, while Mark, scarcely realizing what the machine was doing, turned the other way. Before he knew it he felt himself crowded closely against the unyielding wall of rock on the left-hand side of the road.

The next he knew he was down on the ground, whirling over and over like a wisp of straw, beneath the merciless wheels of the automobile.

A cry broke from the lips of Dick as he saw the body of his companion thus hurled down, bruised and torn. His face grew deadly pale. The sweat broke out all over him. He could not help knowing that a fearful thing was happening to Mark. The driver of the machine had by this time learned what he had done, and came back, full of regret that is his effort to leave the road clear to one he had unconsiously driven another upon the rocks.

"This is fearful!" he said, in a low, subdued voice, full of trouble. "My first accident, too. You see, it was getting so dark that I did not see both of you. I must have seen you, but not this poor fellow. What can we do with him? Shall we take him in the car back to town?"

By this time Mark had gathered himself together a little from the first shock, and through his white lips said bravely: "Don't feel so badly about it. It may not be as bad as you fear. Just lift me out on the grass a little, and let's see how it is. I think it is this leg—it feels so numb I can hardly tell, but I feel that most of anything."

The two men put their hands under Mark, and half carried, half dragged him across to the green grass by the river's bank. Dick did little of the work—he knew that. He was conscious of a strange weakness coming over him, and as soon as they had put Mark's body down, he staggered backward, and would have fallen if the driver of the car had not caught him.

Mark was quick to see the weakness of his chum, and rallying all his strength he called up to Dick cheerily: "Dick, Dick, old fellow. I'm your first case after all. You know what I said this afternoon about not wanting you to practice on me; but now I'm ready to place myself in your hands. I know you'll do your best!"

Something about the ring in Mark's voice brought back Dick's courage. He sprang down the bank to the river, and bathed his face in the cool water until he was calmer once more; then he came back.

"I shall have to give it up, Mark; you're the braver man of us! It just seems to me now I never can do this job. If it were anybody else but you—"

"That's all right, Dick; I'd trust you with my life. Could I do more than that?"

Mark reached up and caught the hand of his friend, but it was rather a weak grasp after all. He was faint, in spite of all his attempts at bravery.

"You'll make a surgeon of me yet, Mark, old chap! Pretty show I would make of it down in the yards with those poor fellows who have been ground under the wheels!"

"You're all right—pure gold, Dick; but don't you know, even gold needs the furnace. Just go ahead and see what you can do for me. Get out your knife and cut the leg of these trousers. I'm sure it's down there. Get a good grip on yourself first. I don't know how it will look!"

The first weakness swept away, and left Richard Wheeler as calm as ever he was in his life. He had crossed the line between the experimental work of the laboratory to the real business of everyday life. Following the suggestion of his companion, he drew his knife, and cut a long gash in the torn and tattered cloth which covered the leg of his friend. It was indeed a terrible thing which met his sight. Mark's leg had been crushed fearfully. The red blood was dripping from many a point where the jagged rocks had torn him. As tenderly as he could he went on to examine the limb for signs of fracture.

"I don't believe it is broken, Mark! Isn't that fine? We'll fix it up in a little while all right. What we need now is some kind of a cloth to wrap it in. What will we do? I know!"

He stripped off his coat and tore the linings out of both sleeves, and gently wound them about the bruised member. Outside of these he bound the coat itself closely. Then in his own arms he lifted

Mark, and carried him over to the car, holding him in his arms all the way back to the city.

The weakness was all gone now. He felt the thrill which he had believed he would feel when it came to actual experience. The calm of victory was upon him, and after they were back at their rooms, with the bravery of a veteran he washed the crushed limb, put fresh cloths on it, and dressed it as thoroughly as the most skilled surgeon might have done.

Then he called one of the professors of surgery, and told him all he had done.

"Is it all right, professor? You know it is my first case, and I want it right."

"You have done an excellent piece of work, Dick!" came back the encouraging word. "I have nothing to suggest!"

"I knew you would do it, Dick. It was in you. Didn't I tell you I would trust you?"

"That was what brought me through, too, Mark! I needed just that to bring me to myself. I shall always owe it to you, if I ever win down in the woods."

"Gold always comes out of the furnace right, Dick, and you are pure gold!"—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

How the Elephant Cried Oh-h-h!

One of the big elephants with the Barnum and Bailey circus, which exhibited here today and tonight, stuck a nail in foot during the parade today. The great pachyderm gave a yell that caused those near by to fall over each other in their efforts to get out of the way, and it was said that the noise was an improvement over the original trumpets in the jungles of Africa. The trainers lined the other 18 elephants up, drove the wounded animal in the center of the circle, had him to lie down and extracted the nail. This done, the big fellow joined the parade as if nothing had happened. One of the big show wagons came near going through the dry bridge when it gave way, but little damage was done.—Report from Raleigh.

Peary, Please Write.

The new boarder at a "swell" place on the upper west side had made something of a hit during dinner by his familiar discussion of Arctic exploration and its history. He was regarded with special admiration by a young woman who sat opposite, and who suddenly got into the talkfest about the time the coffee arrived.

"I can quite understand," said she, "how it is possible to exist in the intense cold of a North Pole expedition—with an abundance of furs, the most warming foods, etc. But take these Antartic expeditions they are talking about now. I really don't see how any one could stand the heat of the South Pole."—N. Y. Evening Globe.

"Well," said an Irish attorney, "if it plaze the court, if I am wrong in this, I have another point that is equally conclusive."—Sel.

My little lady had a severe cold one day and, holding a rose up to my nose, asked, "Does it smell sweet, mother?"

"Yes, dear," I replied, "can't you smell it?"

"No, mother," he answered, "my nose is deaf."—Selected.

"Well, Rastus, I hear you are working again. What kind of business are you engaged in?"

"I'se done be engaged in the mining business, sah."

"What kind of mining are you doing—gold, silver, or diamonds?"

"I'se doing kalsomining, sah."—Selected.

Marjorie is a day pupil at a private school. Her mother disapproved of her drinking from the common drinking cup, and bought her an aluminum collapsing cup of her own.

The next day Marjorie came running home, and, with a kiss, exclaimed:

"O mother, all the other little birls at school, like me so specially much, and we have the most fun with my new cup. They all stand in a line and take turns drinking with it!"—Interior.

Conundrums.

When is it easy to read in the woods? When Dame Nature turns the leaves.

Which is the largest room in the world? The room for improvement.

Why are the Western prairies flat? Because the sun sets on them every evening.

Why are the laws like the ocean? Because the most trouble is caused by the breakers.—Journal and Messenger.

—We have often wondered how many "greatest shows on earth" there really were in the world.

—Did one man ever shoot another down in North Carolina except for self-defense? We have often wondered if the fellow who got killed would not also have claimed self-defense if perchance he had killed the other fellow, and had not been killed himself. Years ago antagonists had duels and confessed it. Now men have duels and the one who survives denies it.

—From The Christian Sun.

—Dr. Chas. W. Mosely had his arm broken Monday night while cranking his automobile. It did not keep him from his office next day, however.

THE UNNECESSARY OATH.

We think it is about time to say something in advice and warning against the growing use of profanity by ambitious writers of fiction. From editors and publishers everywhere we are hearing the same story. We like to think that in actual life the use of strong language is on the wane, that the man addicted to it is regarded not only as a violater of good taste, but as a bore. Yet in the vast amount of fiction that is proffered to magazines and publishing houses, he seems to be at his apogee. Apparently there a great many persons of literary aspirations who think that to write a Rex Beach style of story all that is necessary is to be sufficiently lavish with highly-colored oaths. Now, against this sort of thing we have every right to protest on the grounds of good manners and decency. We shall, however, confine ourselves to the purely literary aspect of the case. The profuse use of profanity is not merely inartistic; it stamps unmistakably the beginner and the ineffectual workman.—The Bookman.

HIGH EXPERIENCES.

There are moments when the grace of God stirs sensibly in the human heart; when the soul seems to rise upon the eagle wings of hope and prayer into the heaven of heavens; when caught up, as it were, into God's very presence, * * * we seem to know Him and be known of Him; and if it were possible for any man at such a moment to see into our souls, he would know all that is greatest and most immortal in our beings. * * * That such solitary musing—such penetrating, even in this life, "behind the veil," such sudden kindlings of celestial lightning which seem to have fused all that is basest and meanest within us in an instant and forever—that these supreme crises are among the recorded experiences of the Christian life, rests upon indisputable testimony of evidence and of fact.—Canon Farrar.

Some times a man, having recovered from a long illness or disappointment, finds his affairs all gone to pieces, his store or farm neglected, his business a mere shadow of its former self. Yet how glad he is that he may go about again, maybe at the house of worship once more, may meet and mingle with his neighbors again. His heart is made glad despite the neglected conditions about him. The heart rises above these and sings praises to God for His goodness. "Oh! that men everywhere would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men."

NOTES ON C. E. LESSON—NOV. 15.

By Charles A. Hines.

Topic—Lessons From Great Lives, XI.

John 21:20-25.

Oct. 30. Sympathy with Jesus. Mark 5: 35-43.

Oct. 31. The mount of vision. Mat. 17: 1-9.

Nov. 1. Near the Master. John 13: 23-26.

Nov. 2. Pillar of the church. Gal. 2: 9, 10.

Nov. 3. The counsellor. 1 John 2: 1-7.

Nov. 4. The martyr. Rev. 1:9.

Nov. 5. Topic.

Four Short Addresses.

1. At one time John wished Christ to call down fire from heaven to consume a Samaritan village that had rejected Him, but came to understand that such fire comes from the bottomless pit, instead of heaven. On another occasion he sought a place of honor next to Christ in His kingdom. This honor was refused to ambition, but accorded to love.

2. John sat next to Jesus at the last supper, his head resting against the Savior's bosom. This was suggestive of the nearness to Christ of the remainder of his life. John was one of the three whom Jesus honored by allowing them to be present when He raised Jairus' daughter, the transfiguration, and the struggle in Gethsemane. And we are told that during two of these scenes he was half the time asleep.

3. John ran away with all the other apostles when Jesus was arrested, man of love and loyalty that he was. Later this apostle followed Jesus to the high priest's office, and to the cross. He received Christ's forgiveness when Jesus placed His mother in John's care. "It is said that John lived to be a hundred years old, bishop of Ephesus, and an exile on Patmos for the faith. When he was too weak to preach, it is said he was borne to the church and uttered these favorite words, "Little children, love one another."

4. Our topic, "Life Lessons for Me from the Life of John," affords us a good opportunity to study a character that is almost ideal. When we consider the apostles of Jesus, we find some personal characteristics peculiar to each one. For instance, Simon Peter was impulsive—ready to say too much and always ready to ask forgiveness. John, the beloved disciple as he is called, was just the opposite. His disposition was more that of a woman than of a man. There never was anything harsh in the utterances that he dropped. It is said that in all his writings he never used the word "hell." He was the one who leaned upon the Lord. He outlived all the other apostles of the Lord. For years he was the leading light in the church at Ephesus. It is said that he was banished from the church at Ephesus to the Isle of Patmos.

In John's Life.

John was probably the youngest of the apostles, and he showed the impetuosity of youth as well as youth's fine enthusiasm.

An outdoor calling is no small aid to the inner life. John made the better fisher of men because he was a fisher of fish.

John was a follower of John the Baptist before he was a follower of Jesus. He took the light he had, and so was given more light.

James and John were called by Jesus "Boanerges," that is, "Sons of thunder." They were vigorous, headstrong, imperious characters. This quality in James may have led to his being the first martyr. In John it was afterwards tamed into the most loyal and lowly service of Christ.

Luke tells us that John rebuked one who was found casting out demons in Christ's name, yet was not one of the disciples. John came to have a more catholic spirit, and to see that all who were not against Christ were for Him.

A CRISIS IN A LIFE.

I shall never drink again; but one night in a New England train, and very ill, I met a stranger who pitied me, and gave me a quick, powerful drug out of a small vial, and my pain was gone in a minute or two—but alcohol was licking up my very blood with tongues of flame!

I should have got drunk that night, if I could.

I thought of everything—of my two years of clean life; of the meeting I was going to, vouched for by my friend and brother, D. L. Moody; of the bright little home in New York; of Mary and the boys; I tried to pray, and my lips framed oaths.

I reached up for God, and he was gone; and the fiercest fiend of hell had me by the throat and shouted, "Drink, drink, drink!"

I said, "But Mary—but the boys." It said: "To —— with Mary! Come on to the saloon!"

It was not yet daylight Sunday morning when I stood on the platform at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, alone.

I flew from saloon to saloon; they were shut up; so were the drug stores; and all that day, locked in my room at the hotel, I fought my fight, and won it in the evening by the grace of God; but the people of Pawtucket never knew that the man who spoke to them that night had been in hell all day.

What would you take in cash to have that put into your life?

That is to be my portion until my dying day; but if merciful, patient time shall cauterize and heal the old dishonorable wounds, and cover them with repulsive but impervious cicatrices, yet because I had those wounds I am to be through my whole life considered a moral cliff-dweller, a creature of precipices where one false step ends all, and so denied full confidence of my fellow men—the highest grace of life to strive for, in this world; and I am told I have a Christian enemy or two who wait on tiptoe of expectancy and cheerful prophecy the sure, near coming of my final plunge back into the Dead Sea of drink.

Several years ago, at another time, after a long lecture tour in the west, I telegraphed my wife in Boston, "I will arrive home tonight at eleven."

The train was late, and long after midnight I came under her window.

The light was burning and I knew she was waiting for me.

I let myself in; there were two flights of stairs, but twenty would have been nothing to me; my heart was hauling away like a great balloon.

She stood in the middle of our room as pale and motionless as a woman of snow, and I knew at a glance that the sweet, brave life was in torture.

"What is it?" I cried; "what is the matter?"

And in my arms she sobbed out the everlasting tragedy of her wedded life: "Nothing—at any rate, nothing ought to be the matter. I do believe in you: I knew you would come home; but I have listened for you so many years that I seem to be just one great ear when you are away beyond your time; I seemed to have lost all sense but that of hearing when you are absent unexplained; and every sound on the street startles me, and every step on the stairs is a threat and a pain, and the stillness chokes me, and the darkness smothers me. And all the old unhappy homecomings troop through my mind, without quitting one detail, and tonight I heard the children sighing in their sleep, and I thought I should die when I thought of you having to walk in your weariness and in this midnight through Kneeland Street alone."

She thinks that I will never fall, and would deny today that she knows any fear; but yet until the undertaker screws her sweet face out of my sight forever, that ghastly, unformed, nameless thing will walk the chambers of her heart whenever I am unaccounted for.

By the mercy of God, which has given to you the unshaken and unshakable confidence of her you love, I beseech you to make a fight for the women who wait tonight until the saloon spews out their husbands and their sons, and sends them maudlin, brutish, devilish, vomiting, stinking, to their arms.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Ma[illegible]. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

And you, happy wives, whose hearts have never wavered, nor had occasion to waver, and who, when your husbands fail to come on time can go to bed without a fear, and go to sleep with smiles on your lips, and sleep the long night through too peacefully even to dream, by the mercy of God, which gives you that, I beseech you, band yourselves to help, at least to cheer, the wives who, their whole lives through, must walk the rotten lava crust of burnt-out confidence—their very love a terror and a pain.

And you, good, calm, untempted men who never fell, who never tasted death for any man, and never mean to. I beseech you, cast a vote the next time for the sake of the drunkard, and try to make the stations on life's highway safe for storm-tossed men to stop at any day or night.—John G. Woolley.

UNTO THE HILLS.

By Benjamin F. Leggett.

Look up to the mountain-land,
Imperial peaks that stand
Wrinkled and gray with time,
In strength of the hills sublime:
To molten billows that rolled
And cooled in the ages of old,
In the dim primeval morn
Ere the race of man was born.

Uplifted in misty air
What garments of light they wear!
On shadowless crowns and cones
The purple of royal thrones;
Patience, endurance, and song
They bear through the ages long,
In peace and repose they stand,
The peaks of the mountain-land.
And down through the gorges old
What melodies sung and told!
The babble of quiet streams
That murmur through woodland dreams,
Or brawl of rivers and rills,
The songs God set in the hills
To give to His praise a tongue
When the gray old world was young.

Lift up thine eyes to the hills
Where the dew of life distils:
When the dawn or sunset shine
Enkindles with blazon fine
On peaks of purple or snow
The altars of God aglow,
Unto Him lift up thy song
Unto whom the hills belong.

—In C. E. World.

WOMAN'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GARMENT.

Honor, fame, public applause, may be sought by man; but, as for woman, let knowledge be her garment, virtue her girdle, and piety a crown about her head. This is to her appropriate panoply; and, thus equipped, she will claim no station above that which Heaven designed for her, nor will she hesitate to lend her hand, in cheerfulness, to the various household duties which are emphatically assigned to her. Graceful she may be, in the mazy dance; lovely, when her hand flings upon the air sweet notes of music; fair, when the bay entwines her brow; but lovelier, fairer, and more graceful, far, is she, when, with meek eye and cheerful heart, she plies the homely task, desiring no reward save an approving conscience,—no praise, save the smiles that beam from her own fireside.

She: "I thought you told me that your friend had very little to say."

He: "I did."

She: "But he hasn't stopped talking since he came here an hour ago!"

He: "True. But he hasn't said anything."—Judge.

A HARVARD LETTER.

The cities of Washington, Philadelphia, and New York have so many great places, a poor scribe is confused as to what is of most interest to his readers. It seemed to me that from the time I got to Washington until I arrived at Boston everybody was going my way. Great crowds followed me for more than a week and at times it was about all I could do to keep from being run over by the throng that pursued me.

A stranger in America, I believe, after visiting a number of cities, and then going to Washington, would recognize it as our Capitol City, if he were acquainted with American ideas, because of its cleanliness and the manner in which it is kept. There is a kind of desire, in the heart of every American, after a visit to Washington, to the end that if conditions and circumstances were favorable, he would like to live there. It is extremely attractive, to say the least of it, and the social atmosphere is different from elsewhere and it is positively inviting.

Philadelphia has a population of about a billion and a half and resembles New York in towering buildings, the arrangement of the streets and the movement of its people more closely than any other eastern city. It is a city of historical renown, having once been the capital of the United States. But perhaps the single thing above all others that distinguishes Philadelphia is that it is the place where the convention assembled which later wrote the Declaration of Independence. Old Independence Hall still stands there in its antiquated form and almost all visitors go to see it. John Wanamaker has given Philadelphia additional glory because of his wonderful success both in business and in Sunday-school work. He owns a whole block in the main part of town which is the most beautiful square in the city.

But on to New York. There one soon finds oneself lost in the midst of a teeming population. Street cars, automobiles, elevated trains and subway cars dashing by in all directions, make human life cheap in that great metropolis. Of course much might be written about the massive structures, monuments, libraries and art galleries in New York. But all those great things do not interest the average spectator like the moving multitudes. It is quite obvious that there is a certain sort of unrest and dissatisfaction among the surging masses that is gradually wearing their lives away. Nearly every hour the newsboys are crying, "Extra, all about the latest murder." On Sunday morning I asked several parties if they could tell me the way to the church of the famous Dr. Jowett and none knew. One even smiled and said, "I have not been to preaching in seven years and know nothing about where the churches are." One hardly wonders, after a few days' stay in a large city, that the scores of people there are unconcerned about religion and the life after death. A spectator is certainly impressed with the great number of evil influences, as the bar rooms, newspapers, gambling dens, and theaters that are daily pulling humanity downward.

I visited the cotton exchange and I never before saw or heard anything like that. Long before one gets there one can hear men yelling and crying at the top of their voices. And as one approaches one soon sees men almost fighting each other for the next chance to gamble. The loud cries and yells remind one of an insane asylum. These are wild, mad men. I believe it is an insanity, but of a different sort from that in our State asylums. These men are mad in the ghoulish greed for gold. They are money mad, and in this madness make or lose a fortune in a few brief moments.

Many things have been written and said about the advantages and disadvantages of cities, but I believe they are now nourishing or will yet nourish the germs that will prove the ruin of this Republic. If cities breed civilization, they also breed a barbarism of their own more dangerous than the barbarism of remote fields and wild forests. Rome in the end fostered a barbarism more dangerous to the human spirit than that which shattered and then rebuilt her. Barbarism in rural districts is of a wholesome type, out of which civilization grows. It is to be hoped that the people, by a sort of blind instinct, will yet drift back to farms, and free themselves from the unrestful spirit of city life. Maecenas once asked, "What is that, O Virgil, with which man is not satisfied?" And the immortal poet replied: "Either monotony or multitude of anything produces nausea, excepting knowledge." Everything that assails the senses tires, ideas refresh and restore, and the farm offers the quiet and the solitude in which ideas find safe footing, take form and grow. The city may be the breeding place of money; but the country is the breeding place of men. And certainly the best type of manhood and of womanhood on this earth is that found in the quiet country districts, where men respect each other, esteem the State and worship the living God.

S. M. Atkinson.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1911. NUMBER 49.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

DEATH OF O. R. COX.

Last Saturday morning the daily press bore the startling intelligence that Bro. O. R. Cox, of Asheboro, had suddenly died the day before. He had been in for a few days with what seemed to be a deep cold, but he continued to attend to his business, signing a number of papers on Friday morning. But Friday afternoon a collapse came and he sank to rally no more. What a great vacancy he leaves behind! He filled a large place, but his home will, of course most keenly feel the loss. He leaves a wife and eight children, including a married daughter and a grown son in the far West. Some of his children are still small.

He was sixty-seven years old and had had an ususually successful business career. He for years managed the cotton mills at Cedar Falls, and probably shortened his days by his steady devotion to the affairs of the mills for many years.

He was a prominent citizen in his county, having served as sheriff in his young manhood, and having been a member of the last legislature. He also had a number of business interests and connections besides those already indicated.

He was one of our most prominent laymen in the State. He had been a member of the Annual Conference a number of times, had been chosen as a representative to the General Conference, and was the chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Publishing House, also of Denton High School, and was a member of the Denton Orphanage Committee. His liberality helped largely in the building of the Publishing House. He also helped in the education of young men preparing for the ministry. His interest in education did not stop with the limits of his own church, but he made liberal offerings outside.

We shall miss him.

May the Lord comfort the widow and be a Father to the children.

The funeral was conducted in the absence of his pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, by Rev. T. J. Ogburn. Interment was in the cemetery at Cedar Falls where his first wife and a number of his children lie buried.

HIS FIRST CONFERENCE.

John Alexander had not been a member of the Annual Conference before. In fact, he had never attended a session of the Annual Conference, and did not know exactly what to expect. But this year he had been nominated and elected by his charge, and the opening day of Conference found him at Henderson, ready to take his place and do his work—if he could find out what it was.

He decided before he left home that he would go slowly, and not make a fool of himself. He heard his name read out as a member of a committee and was called to sign with others a paper that had been prepared, setting forth certain views. He did not know whether the views were correct or not, but he presumed they were, and put his name to the paper.

When the paper came before the Conference, he found that exception was taken to some of its statements, and there was a vigorousdiscussion which convinced him that the statements in the paper were out of order, if not untrue. Still he had signed the report, his name stood against his present convictions. What was he to do when the matter came to a vote? Should he vote for the paper because he had signed it or vote against it because he believed it ought not to be adopted? He had come to a place where he found it difficult to avoid making a fool of himself.

Then another exigency arose for which he was unprepared. He came expecting that his pastor would be returned. He had no other thought. There was universal satisfaction with Rev. Mr. Brown, and everybody expected Mr. Brown to return. But the Stationing Committee found that Mr. Brown was the only man that was exactly suited to another and more important charge, and informed Bro. John Alexander that they would have to make a change of pastors in the case of his charge and asked his advice as to the new man for his field. John knew himself to be a good judge of horses, but when it came to deciding between preachers, he did not feel that his judgment was to be trusted. What if he should ask for a man that should prove to be unacceptable to his people? How would they ever forgive him? Of course they would never send him as delegate again, but that thought did not cause him much uneasiness. He was beginning to feel that he would be quite as comfortable at home on his farm, while some other brother was enjoying the honor of representing the charge at Conference. But he had been asked for his advice, and must give some kind of an answer, and he had resolved not to make a fool of himself. He decided to say and did say: "I'll leave that entirely with you." He was afraid afterward that he had made a fool of himself in this reply.

When it came to the election of delegates to General Conference, he found himself at his wit's end again. He did not have so much difficulty in voting for the ministerial members. The preachers were there before him. He could see for himself. And though he couldn't trust his own judgment in choosing a pastor, this was different. Who would ever find it out if he made mistakes in voting for ministerial members of the General Conference? Indeed, how could the General Conference help itself if he sent the wrong man? And could there be any wrong man to represent the church in General Conference? He easily made out his ballot for ministerial members by voting for the ten preachers that sat nearest him at the time. But when it came to voting for lay dalegates, he was told that he might vote for any layman anywhere in the North Carolina District, and that it would be better to choose men prominent for their intelligence and interest in the church. John had not been a great reader of the church papers, but he had heard his pastors speak of leading laymen over the state, and he resolved that instead of voting for the ten laymen sitting nearest him, he would be guided by his general intelligence, and would choose more broadly. When his ballot was found by the tellers—his handwriting was recognized by one of them—it was found to contain ten names. Four of the ten named had been in Heaven for years, there were prominent characters in fiction, one was a politician, not a member of any church, one was a Baptist, and one was a Roman Catholic.

WAITING.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
When the days are dark and long,
When the hands that would work must be idle
And the plans that I make go wrong.
Teach me to wait and have courage,
Teach me to wait and be strong.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
When my hope seems all in vain,
When my hands with work grow weary,
And life is pull of pain.
Teach me to wait with endurance,
To wait and not complain.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
For the joys that slip away
From the hands stretched out to grasp them,
Entreating them to stay.
Teach me to wait and have patience
To wait and hope each day.

—Caroline H. Burgess, in Christian Register.

THE JEWISH PRACTICE OF TITHING.

That the Church is confused in her theories and utterly chaotic in her practice of giving, and that the salvation of the world lags because of these facts not many present-day students will deny. The term "Christian giving" is a misnomer, for men cannot give to God that which is already his by right and theirs by tenure merely. As men connot act rightly until they they think correctly, it becomes the duty of the present-day pastor to clarify the minds of the people and to lay the truth on the conscience and heart of the Church. Especially is this needful in respect to tithing, lest we run from one error into another.

Even before the days of Abraham men tithed, offering the tenth of the flocks, fruits, varied possessions, spoils of war as a sacrifice to their gods. The Jewish practice was a great advance on the heathen custom, advancing as far beyond the heathen practice as the Christian standard advances beyond the Jewish.

It is an error to suppose that tithing, as practiced among the Jews, was the giving of the tenth of one's income. It had that meaning among the heathen, but never among the Jews. The recognition of this fact will stop much contention over the question, tithing. The advocates of tithing are right in the intent but wrong in the extent of their theory. In their effort to remedy our present distress they are for carrying us from one error into another. Under the Mosaic law the gifts of the Jew were of two kinds—compulsory and voluntary. The law demanded one tenth annually for the support of the Levite or the ministry. If this were not paid in kind, he must add one-fifth of one-tenth. The law demanded a second tenth for the yearly religious festivals or Church worship. Every third year he had to bring an additional tenth and share it with the Levite, the poor, and the stranger. This was his charity demanded by law. Thus he averaged two and one-third tenths annually. But these were only a portion of his gifts. After these came the freewill or voluntary offerings, which were measured only by the giver's liberality and largeness of purse. These latter often exceeded the tithes. His compulsory gifts annually amounted to seven-thirteenths or about one-fourth, to which must be added his voluntary gifts. In addition, fully half of his time was taken up in religious worship, and he was commanded that every seventh or Sabbatic year his land should "rest and lie fallow; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beast of the field shall eat." In like manner was he to do with his vineyards and orchards. Nor must we forget that the tenth was levied on his gross and not his net income. To confuse this fact in the Jewish mind would have meant the minimizing of his gift by many multiples. In the light of these facts, the giving of one-tenth is as f in arrears of the New Tesetament standard. In fact, the tithing of the tenth has no precedent in the Scriptures.

Now its advocates claim that: (1) Tithing is the simplest and most efficient financial system ever devised. Mathematically this is true, but surely God does not ask the same ratio from a mill operative whose income for family support is one dollar per diem as he does from the captain of industry whose salary is in the thousands. (2) Tithing would be an economy on the present plan of the Church, saving us money now spent in printing, postage, etc., and would relieve us of troops of peripatetic beggars who ought to be preaching. (3). Tithing would increase the income of the Church sevenfold. (4) It would solve the problem of preaching in weak pastoral charges and poor communities; for ten families, giving the tenth of their income, could support a minister and his family in a condition of equality with their own. (5) Tithing would save the Church from making a pitiable spectacle of herself by begging, appealing to charity, and resorting to methods and means of money-getting which are disgraceful. (6) Tithing has the authority and practice of many good men to commend it. (7) Tithing would greatly enrich the spiritual life of the Church. These are excellent arguments, but the trouble with them is that they do not hold for tithing any more than for any other system of giving. Without doubt tithing would be a great improvement over our present haphazard practice of giving as to both the manner of giving and the amount given. It would increase our income, relieve us from many embarrassments, and hasten the salvation of the world. It is businesslike, systematic, periodic, and mathematical in its working; but it is insufficient. It does not come up to the Christian standard set by our Lord. It is only the half of the Gospel as to giving. Tithing is as far behind the Christian standard of using worldly goods as our present loose practice lags behind the practice of tithing. Besides, every argument offered in favor of tithing may be applied with even greater force in favor of the New Testament standard of using worldly goods. Tithing cannot be defended, let me repeat, because it falls short of the New Testament ideal set forth by our Lord, and therefore cannot be preached by men intent on declaring the whole counsel of God. Tithing stands just midday between the present businesslike and unchristian practice of giving and the New Testament ideal of divine ownership and human stewardship as taught by Christ.—Rev. T. R. Reeves, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

OUR RIGHT TO LIVE.

There is a general biological law that animals live to five time the number of years required to attain adult growth. For example, a horse is adult at 3 years of age; he lives to an average of 15 years. According to this law all adult people hsould live to be about 100 years of age. It is a well-known fact that the average span of human life now falls far short of this standard, and this fact in turn brings up one of the most important questions now before the Nation—that of public health. The annual loss to our own State from preventable diseases is not less than 14,000 lives. This represents the needless deaths—deaths, the greater number of which would not have occurred had these people been well informed on even the simple means of warding off disease and preserving their general health and efficiency.

It is the usual practice to estimate the value of the average human life at $5,000. This is a conservative estimate, and represents only the productive value of the average person, and not his real or intrinsic value to his family and friends: a value which cannot be represented in cold dollars and cents. But even at the above figure, the annual loss to our State is approximately $70,000,000.

This figure for the average man is too large to be comprehended. Furthermore, the average man is liable to take for granted that this is a matter of public health, and does not concern him as an individual. But is does concern him as an individual. As a matter of arithmetic, if the loss of life to our State for the past year amounted to $70,000,000 among a population of two and one-quarter millions, the ave age loss to every citizen from these needless deaths was a little over $30. A rather heavy tax for our sanitary ignorance! Perhaps your family has been fortunate and has not contributed to this awful toll, but be sure some one else did. While your family may have escaped paying its part of this loss, yet the probabilities are that you yourself, as well as every other member of your family, lost as much, or perhaps even more, by inefficiency—by not being and feeling at your best all the time. Inefficiency in the school room due to poor ventilation, improper lighting and heating, defective eyes, adenoids, hookworms, and many other preventable diseases among children alone, cost our tax payers annually vastly more than they expended on public health. Of the people who are of average health at work, it is a conservative estimate that under perfect health conditions their efficiency could be raised 25 per cent.

At the present time about one-tenth of the babies born die before they reach one year of age. Approximately one-third of all the deaths are deaths of small children. One-half the adult deaths are due to consumption, pneumonia, and "colds." The best health authorities are now of the opinion that all deaths due to bacteria and to other than accidents can be prevented.

This matter of prolonging human life and increasing the health, happiness, and efficiency thereof is the burden of public health work in our State. In view of what has already been said, the question now is, What are we going to do about it? It has been well said that "The only reason public health has not more men and more money is that the people do not believe in it yet. They think disease and ill-health are more or less inevitable. They still muddle medicine and mystery, drugs and the dispensation of Providence. They have to be shown. Once shown, the result will be accomplished, and accomplished quickly."

These results can be and are being accomplished right here in our State, and it will be the object of succeeding articles to show our readers where and how such work is being done; and by these means we hope to show how to attain some of the aims of public health.

A HERO OF THE AUSTIN FLOOD.

A special staff correspondent of the Cleveland Press of October 4 sent his pap this incident connected with the bursting of the dam:

Maude, a powerful black mare, deserves a hero medal for life-saving at the Austin deluge, and Lewis Ryan, sixty-five, her dirver, whose life she saved, is going to pin it on her, figuratively, by making the rest of her life ease and luxury.

When the dam broke, Ryan was loading his two-wheeled truck, to which Maude was hitched. He raced for the hills, but halted when Maude whinnied for help as clearly, Ryan says, as if she had been gifted with speech. He hurried back, cut her harness, and together they made for the hills.

Ryan stumbled and fell just as the huge mass of water and pulp wood was bearing down on him. Maude missed him, ran back to his side, and Ryan mounted her. She carred his safely above the water-line.

"I would have deserted my old pal in a mighty sneaky way," Ryan said, with tears in his eyes. I guess she thought that the old man was getting old and sort of forgetting all about her, so she just up and whinnies to remind me I was deserting her.

"I can never forget the look that horse gave me when I heard her whinny and turned. It was the most reproachful look I ever saw, not barring human beings.

"And if I have to work until I croak, that horse is never going to do any more work. She saved my life, and a vacation for life is going to be her reward."

DELEGATES AT CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor:—I was much pleased with Ethics of the Delegates published last week in your paper. I cannot commend too highly all of the articles, but it is about article four that I have a few words to say. A delegate should attend the devotional exercises of the Conference. It is almost unbelievable, so great is the difficulty in getting a few delegates and ministers too, to be present at this service. One is forced to believe that either the delegates and those ministers who stay out have no interest in such matters, or that they are sure the one who has charge has none. I have been asked by the presiding officer to go out and get the men to come in when after many appeals, many would turn and walk away from the church at that loitering, unconcerned gate that indicates they have neither interest nor business there at that hour.

It is to be sincerely hoped that at the approaching session of our Conference there will be no need to have a Sergeant at Arms to hustle in the members to attend prayers or to vote upon the matters of usual routine. A Minister.

—Obadiah Gardner, Democrat, has been appointed U. S. senator from Maine to fill the place left vacant by the death of Senator Frye. This reduces the Republican margin in the senate to small proportions. Senator Gardner will be the first farmer to sit in the senate from New England in generations.

—President Taft, in a proclamation, has given a monopoly to the American Red Cross Society as the only organization which will be recognized by the government for giving aid to our land and sea forces in time of war.

—Alamance County has a dark tragedy. A negro man shot and killed a white boy, aged 18, over a game of cards. Drink often leads to such results.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

As follower of the Christ we are all under "the binding power of a pledge or promise" to live a consistent Christian life, and to aid in propagating the gospel throughout the world.

Moreover, we are under lasting indebtedness for the inexplicable mercy and the unmerited gifts of God which entail proper recognition expressed in our gratitude, our service and our offerings.

The Christ, in His life, His teachings and by the kingdom he established, is the authoritative source and the inspiring incentive of the unselfish beneficence which encompasses the whole world in its helpful ministrations.

That any one who bears His name, with all involved thereby, should deliberately deny himself the glorious privilege and the holy joy, irrespective of weighty considerations, of sharing in the work of Foreign Missions which adds greatly to human freedom, happiness and progress, evidences the ignoring of the vows of a disciple of Him "who went about doing good," and affirmed the scriptural principle "freely ye have been received, freely give," and that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

The lack of means cannot be claimed as an excuse, because the obligation is limited to one's ability, and hence all can and all ought to participate in carrying out the mission of the church.

Nor can the want of opportunities be set forth as a reason, because the operations of the church and the calls for help were never so numerous and insistent as now when the heathen world is awakening and accepting the agencies of Christian civilization.

The success achieved under God in our Japan work imperatively demands special funds with which to conserve what has been accomplished, and to provide for the extension of our force and labors at this time when the most can be done for that nation's evangelization.

The necessary funds can only be secured by a special means, because the Board's regular income from the assessment, the Children's Day offering and special gifts does not yet permit us to meet all obligations, although the large monthly payments have been forwarded to Japan.

We are, therefore, appealing to all our members to help by contributing to an EMERGENCY FUND with which to supply the present extraordinary needs of our Japan enterprise.

The presidents of a number of Annual Conferences have been requested to designate a Sunday suited to local conditions for a simultaneous effort in all the churches to raise $25,000.00 in the campaign to be conducted until May 1st, 1912.

According to this plan the Maryland Conference will have Sunday, November 26th to redeem its pledge of using "every reasonable endeavor to raise for Foreign Missions this year $5,000,00 apart from the assessment and the Children's Day offering."

The Muskingum Conference will have Sunday, December 3rd, and the Indiana Conference will have December 24th, for their special efforts to heartily co-operate in carrying out the plan. The dates of other Conferences will be announced later.

Pastors will be supplied with illustrated matter and subscription cards, and will be requested to preach a sermon on Foreign Missions on their special day, explain the conditions and the EMERGENCY PLAN as a distinct, separate affair, and not to be confused with, or lessen the regular contributions to the assessment. More will be explained later. Let us earnestly pray for God's blessing upon our united efforts.

Fred. C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

WHERE THE INDIANS MAY TEACH US.

Charles Alexander Eastman in "The Soul of the Indian," throws light on the character and life of the native American Indians. White men may learn a valuable lesson from them, as the following extract will indicate:

If a child was inclined to be grasping, or to cling to any of his little possessions, he was told legends that dwelt upon the contempt and disgrace that fall on the ungenerous and mean man.

Among the Indians, public giving is a part of every important ceremony. It properly belongs to the celebration of birth, of marriage and of death, and is practised whenever the Indian wishes to do special honor to any person or to celebrate any event. On such occasions it is not uncommon to give to the point of utter impoverishment. In his simplicity, the Indian literally gives away all that he has, not only to relatives and to guests of another tribe or clan, but also and especially to the poor and the aged, from whom he can hope for no return.

The man who is a skilful hunter makes many feasts, to which he is careful to invite the older men of his clan, for he knows that having passed the years of greatest activity, they now like nothing so well as to eat in good company and to live over again the deeds of their youth. On their part, the old men do their best to requite his liberality with little speeches, in which they are apt to relate the brave and generous deeds of his ancestors, and to compliment him on being the worthy successor of an honorable line.

The young Indian girl is under the guardianship chiefly of the grandmother, who is considered the most dignified protector for a maiden. Indeed, the distinctive work of all grandparents is acquainting the youth of the tribe with the national traditions and beliefs. It is reserved for them to repeat the time-hallowed tales with dignity and authority, so as to lead the boy into his inheritance of the stored-up wisdom and experience of the race. The old are dedicated to the service of the young, as their teachers and advisers, and the young in turn regard the old with love and reverence.

Among the Indians old age is in some respects the happiest period of life. Advancing years bring with them much freedom, not only from the burden of laborious and dangerous tasks, but also from those restrictions of custom and etiquette which are religiously observed by all others. Only in the aged, for example, are permitted some playful familiarities with children and grandchildren. Only to the aged again is given the right to speak plainly. Old men and women are privileged to say what they please and say it as they please, without contradiction.

ARE "DRY" TOWNS DEAD TOWNS?

Hear this fresh and recent testimony from the Reverend George Storner, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Franklinville, New York, extracted from a recent letter to Mr. Cowles, at Buffalo, New York:

"One fact which makes for no license here is the activity and position of the church people in the matter. The sentiment is strong against the saloon. We do not want it and so we keep it out. We have demonstrated that we are better without it. Our knife factory located here mainly on the ground that we had no saloons and it could therefore be free from drunken help. The factory employs 200 people. We have no extreme poverty such as one finds in saloon towns; most people here own their own homes and comfortable and material prosperity is a feature of the community. Morally and religiously, I think this town ranks high, largely because of no license.

—Bro. J. D. Payne and wife, of Burlington, started on Tuesday to their winter home in Lemon City, Florida. We almost envy them the privilege of living for a time in the Land of Flowers. Still North Carolina is so much better than some other places of abode that we can easily satisfy ourselves with its advantages.

—Editor Caldwell of the Charlotte Observer, long sick, is in a critical condition.

ANNE LUCY'S LESSON.

"Oh, mother, you haven't sewed the buttons on my brown dress yet, and I asked you, too, ever so long ago," complained Anne Lucy petulantly.

"Yes, I am sorry to say I forgot about it but bring it here now, dear. It will take but a minute," replied her mother.

"Sew on buttons? Can't Anne Lucy sew on buttons?"

"Dear me, no! She couldn't sew them on so that they would stay until they were buttoned! When does the child have time to learn to sew, with her school work, music and club meetings?"

It was grandmother who had asked the question, and Anne Lucy blushed as she overheard the question and her mother's ready excuse in answer.

Grandmother wisely refrained from making any further remarks as Anne Lucy brought her dress to her mother and hurried out of the room again.

Anne Lucy often felt that grandmother did not always approve of her, although she never said anything in criticism. This was the grandmother for whom she was named Lucy, and, as Anne was for her other grand mother, the two names could never be separated, much to their bearer's disgust. It was Grandmother Lucy's first visit to her son's home, and Anne Lucy was particularly desirous of making a good impression upon her, as she had been promised that she might return with her for part of her summer vacation.

Fortunately the good behavior lasted and the promise was kept, so that at last Anne Lucy reveled in the queer, old house so filled with curious things. She was allowed to roam at will as long as she always put everything back in its place, and was careful not to break anything.

The bright days were spent out in the orchard, where a detachment of British soldiers had once camped, or down by the spring, which marked the signing of the Indian treaty, while the rainy days were spent in exploring the house from attic to cellar.

What countless treasures were to be discovered, enough to satisfy any girl's desires! Out from the darkest corners of the attic she dragged spinning wheels, a queer little, old, wooden cradle, powder flasks, funny, high and uncomfortably hard helmets, and a hair trunk. From the rafters hung poke bonnets and hoop skirts, while the most beautiful old-fashioned dresses, in which one might dress up, could be found in the cedar chest. Then, when one grew hungry, there was a bag of butternuts, and an old cannon ball with which to crack them, in a bushel basket under grandfather's workbench.

Downstairs, as well, Anne Lucy found much to interest her. There was the cool, damp smelling cellar, where the row of milk pans stood, and when the butter was made Anne Lucy was allowed to assist in the churning and refresh herself at the end of the process with a glass of buttermilk and a doughnut from the stone crock in the pantry. The pantry itself was such an interesting room, for it had been a kitchen. There was a fireplace in it, with a crane for roasting and a hole in the floor for baking. Grandmother could remember when it was used, and told how she used to have to watch the turkeys or geese that were hung before the fire.

Then how pleasant it was when an unusually cold, stormy afternoon would prevent any prowlings in orchard or attic, and grandmother and grandchild would draw up to the open fire in the living room, the former with her knitting and the latter with—questions.

There was a large cabinet in this room filled with a great collection of curios; coral, agate and star-fishes; moss that the reindeer live on in Alaska; cups, fans, and silks from China; shoes from Japan; hideous idols from India; old parchments, samplers and bits of embroidery handed down from generation to generation. It was about the contents of this cabinet that Anne Lucy found so many questions to ask, and grand mother kindly answered them with stories of where this or that came from, or how she acquired it.

One afternoon Anne Lucy, in looking through a box of odds and ends, came across a small piece of embroidery not more than three or four inches long.. It was mounted on black satin and below it were written the words, "Worked by Lucy Underwood, aged seven years, 1830."

"Oh, what is this, grandmother?" inquired Anne Lucy, eagerly. "Who was Lucy Underwood, and did she really sew this when she was only seven years old? Why, I am almost seven years old and I can't sew anything!"

"That," replied grandmother, looking over her glasses at the object referred to and then resumed her knitting, "that is the crown of baby's bonnet made for my mother by her sister, who was Lucy Underwood, my aunt and your great-great aunt, for whom we are both named. It is indeed a wonderful piece of work for a little girl, but in those days children were taught to sew almost before they were taught to read. They did not have so many other things to fill up their time, and from earliest childhood they were trained to be housekeepers. My aunt was always considered a very fine needlewoman, but I think it was due, in large measure, to the fact that her mother died when she was about your age and left her with several small brothers and sisters, whose clothes gave her much practice in sewing."

"I wish I knew how to sew, but mother always says it is easier to do it herself than to teach me," lamented Anne Lucy.

"It does seem to me that you ought to learn. I remember one day, whlie I was visiting you, that you asked your mother to sew some buttons on for you."

"Oh, yes, I remember," confessed Anne Lucy, shamefacedly, "and perhaps if my great-great aunt could sew like that when she was only seven I would better learn to sew buttons on at least! Will you teach me, grandmother, please?"

"Gladly, my dear, and suppose while you are here that we set aside an hour every afternoon for sewing, and possibly while we work I may be able to think of some more stories which you have not already heard."

Of course such a plan proved most delightful, and before the holiday drew to a close Anne Lucy's accomplishments not only included ability to sew on buttons, darn stockings and patch a hole, but when she returned home she took, as a present to her mother, a dozen dish towels which she herself had hemmed. Besides that, instead of her clothes being buttonless and torn, as was usually the case when she returned from a visit, this time everything was in beautiful order. And better still, they were kept so after that, for on the wall of Lucy's room now hung the bit of embroidery from which she had learned her lesson.—Mary Richards Berry, in The Pilgrim Visitor.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

First Chronicles, chapters 15-21.

Questions.

94. What personal name is applied to more than twenty different men in the Bible? (Assigned to all the class.)

Answers to Assigned Questions.

91. The date is obscure, but the majority of modern scholars hold the opinion that the books referred to could not have been written earlier than 350 B. C. However, others hold that one of these books was written in 457 B. C., and the other one in 413 B. C.

R. A. Swaringen.

—Rev. W. D. Fogleman returned yesterday from Union Ridge, East Winston Mission, where he conducted a special meeting with good results. He brought three new subscriptions to the Herald, which we regarded as a favorable omen.

From Pastors and People.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

Dear Brethren:

Having been appointed by the President as chairman of the Committe on Official Character, I desire to call your attention to the fact that each minister and preacher, according to action of the Annual Conference at its last session, will be expected to make a synopsis report of his wo k as pastor, and to have it ready for presentation when called for in the order of Conference. C. A. Cecil.

Notice Concerning Delegates to Henderson.

Your correspondent failed to mention a most important schedule, which is for those leaving Greensboro at 9:40 A. M. for Durham, they can leave Durham at 1.55 for Henderson, over the Southern, arriving in Henderson at 4.15, the fare the same as over the S. A. L.

Siler City.

We were glad to have with us on 5th Sunday morning Rev. D. A. Highfill, who preached for us. He gave us a good sermon. We hope he can come our way again. The 4th Quarterly Conference was held Saturday before the 4th Sunday in October with representatives from all the churches

The pastor's report was encouraging.

Sunday schools at all the churches but one, and they all seem to be doing good work. Bro. Bowman has one more appointment here before Conference.

G. E. M.

Spring Church.

Our work is moving on very nicely, although I have nothing special to report, but as we have been silent for two months, so far as reports are concerned, I hope you Herald readers will not think that we are idle. The last quarterly conference for this year was held here last fourth Saturday. We are yet behind on our pastor's salary and general collections, but I think, possibly we can collect it all before Conference. We want our same pastor back again for another year, and we think the surest way to get him is to pay up his salary. Mr. G. W. Massey is our delegate to Conference.

Bro. Ashburn preached for us last 4th Sunday for the first time since August, as he has been very busy with the meetings. We are all glad to see him come, as he always wears a smile for us. He was also with last Sunday afternoon, and delivered an excellent sermon; seems it was one of the best he ever delivered here.

Our Sunday school is yet alive, although the attendance is rather small, but we hope to keep it alive through the winter months. We have at last gotten a new Bible for our church. Much credit is due Miss Cinderella Stanley for taking so much interest in collecting money for it.

Mrs. E. C. Dimick, who has been very ill for several weeks, I am glad to say, is improving rapidly.

Yours for Christ,
Nannie Massey.

October 30, 1911.

Haw River Circuit.

Bro. W. E. Swain: We held our fourth quarterly conference at Midway church last Saturday, October 22nd. Every church well represented except one. It was uplifting to see so many out. It is a very busy time with the farmers and they laid away their affairs for the day. It was one of the most pleasant services I ever attended. The business was transacted in a business-like way. The salary was raised to $600.00 for next year. Some of the members have investigated the matter of the assessments for missions, and found that Haw River Circuit and ne others were paying 50 per cent of pastor's salary, while others were paying 20 per cent. They passed a resolution opposing this and asked the pastor and delegate to go before the committee on ways and means and enter their protest. They can not see the justice in this, they say. The circuit is right much behind on finances and are making an effort to pay the pastor and we think three churches will pay in full. If the mission assessments were exactly in proportion to others or were a certain percent of pastor's salary on all fields they would pay in full I believe. The circuit is in the best shape it has been for a good while, so the members say. We have had good revivals, good Sunday schools at each church except Fair Grove, and the smallpox caused them to suspend. If agreeable all around the request for the present pastor was asked for.

Brown Summit, desiring to be detached from Haw River Circuit, and attached to St. Paul, at Revolution; by vote of the conference it was unanimously granted. Brown Summit has paid the pastor in full and say they will pay quite, if not all, the missions. We held a special meeting the third Sunday. There was a large congregation on Sunday. Bro. Goodman, of Greensboro, and Bro. Matthews of the Randleman charge were with me. It rained us out one day and night. There was a revival in the church. We have one more special meeting to hold—at Sandy Cross, next Sunday. I have missed three appointments this year on account of rain. I hope to make one more round and will revise the class books as follows: Sanday Cross, 5th Sunday; Mispah, 1st Sunday, 11 A. M.; Friendship, 2nd Sunday, 11 A. M.; Fair Grove, 3rd Sunday 3 P. M.; Brown Summit, 3rd Sunday, 7:30 P M.; Bethany, Nove. 8th, 3 P. M.; Midway, November 8th, 7:00 P. M.

One more thing that I must speak of and that is the fine dinner at the quarterly conference. The good women are so thoughtful and helpful. Bro. Sam Walker and wife gave us some nice turnips. Bro. Jack Porter and wife, 2 chickens, 2 lbs. of butter. Sister Kernodle, 2 chickens. Sister Carrell, of Reidsville, 1 Rhode Island Red pullet. For all this we are truly thankful. The people here say so many good things and are so kind to us. Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was "Baraca Day" in our Sunday school. The Baraca Class had arranged a nice program and it was well carried out. The class was unable to secure a speaker from out of town, so Bro. J. H. Boon, the President of the Class, made an excellent talk on Baraca Work. He was followed by Bros. J. G. Rogers, and our pastor, both of whom spoke encouraging words to the class. There were 203 present in the school and forty-one in the Baraca Class. The weather was a little unfavorable, or we would have probably had more. In the Baraca Class all offering was taken to be put aside for the purpose of building a Baraca Class Room. The offering amounted to $13.05, and pledges were taken amounting to $117.15, payable by March 1, 1912. It was a good day.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet next Monday evening, Nov. 6, at seven-thirty. The election of church officers will be held on next Sunday morning immediately after the eleven o'clock service.

These officers will be enrolled on the quarterly Conference register on the following night. The pastor wants every member of the Conference present, and also any other members of the church who desire to attend.

Bro. Williams is conducting a meeting at Carolina this week, but we have not yet heard what success is being had.

Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Nov. 1, 1911.

Flat Rock.

Our special meeting closed on Friday evening. Nine or eleven conversions, the most of these accessions. Rev. T. J. Ogburn preached on Friday afternoon a sermon of deep thought and that called forth much favorable comment, on Conversion. Rev. Mr. Suits, of Thomasville, preaching in indescribable earnestness, being the remaining help. One that appealed to us also, The Divine Forgiveness, or God's complete forgiveness.

To say the meeting was good does not half describe it, though fully six young men who came only at night, were left in the audience unsaved. Eleven with the Christ within, leavening through the years in seemingly interminable and innumerable avenues. Till the eternal years. We would that Mr. Suits' mantle of zeal and earnestness might fall upon and enfold our entire ministry of sixty or seventy members. Doing their best, or in his own language, "Their dead level best," surely there would be a great awakening. May he be spared long to his chosen profession.

Mrs. William Parrish is still sick and Miss Jennie Brittain quite ill. Mrs. T. J. Ogburn accompanied her husband here on a visit of two days.

Miss Pearl Williams has returned to Salem Female Academy after spending a few days with her parents.

Reporter.

Oct. 30, 1911.

Bethel Auxiliary, N. C. Branch.

Calendar plan was adopted by our society to help increase the funds as suggested by Mrs. A. G. Dixon, and we have collected and sent to Mrs. A. G. Dixon $7.20; from Bethel Auxiliary and church. $4.80, and $2.40 from the following members of Center Church: Mrs. J. W. Whitehead, Mrs. Amos Richardson, Mrs. Ed. Lindley, Mrs. Egbert Lindley, Mrs. Arlendo Lindley, Mrs. I a Guthrie, Mrs. William Braxton, Miss Nan. Curl, 30 cents each. We thank these good people very much for the help they so kindly gave us in our collection. This money, as I understand it, goes to help pay debts incurred by the erection of necessary buildings in Japan. God will reward each and every one who helps in this and other ways to send His Gospel to all nations, for, inasmuch as we do these things unto the least of one of God's children, we do it unto Him.

We are glad to hear that the people of Center are going to organize an auxiliary. We feel sure they will never regret it and that God's blessings will be with them, for, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end." Why not also Mt. Hermon and Rock Creek, our neighbor churches we love so much? This is God's work in which He uses us to help forward His Kingdom on earth. The more mission work we do the more we love it. Bethel Foreign and Home Missionary Society met last Sunday evening at the home of Mrs. A. L. Foust and although the weather was bad, there were several present, all of whom took part in the exercises and our meeting was quite a success. Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Foust, the 4th Sunday in November at 2:30 P. M.

Please all members of our society and as many others as can, come out, and take part.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Cor Sec.

Reidsville Church.

We have our lot and eleven hundred dollars, provided the church extension can do what they said After my meetings were over, we met and decided to enclose our building and finish the front which is 25 x 30 feet, and then we could hold Sunday school and services. We could not get men in Reidsville to do it, so I went to Greensboro and could not get them there. We have decided to hold till early spring. The Episcopals have offered us their house twice a month, so we can have preaching once or twice a month. If Brown Summit goes to St. Paul, that will give the pastor of Haw River circuit a little better show, if Haw River circuit will agree and the pastor will undertake it. I have been on the go about all of my time. This has been on of the most busy years of my life. At this time some things have developed lately that are very encouraging, which I need not mention.

I have been out east of Reidsville and find our people there very anxious for it. There are nine families of Methodist Protestants beyond Reidsville, who seldom get to their home church, and we have from 15 to 20 families living in Reidsville. It is a clear case we need a church here. If we could only make Reidsville and Sandy Cross a station and put a man here I believe we could finish and pay for the church next year, and build up two good churches. I feel that this point will have due consideration at Conference. I have at last got a man to give us an estimate on the plan and it will cost us $1600.00. That will put us in a position to have a place of worship and then collect and finish and pay as we go. If I do not come back, or if I do, we want to hold a ten days' meeting in December or January. If we lose our church here, we will lose several members and be a shame on the M. P. Conference but I feel the Lord is behind and before the move, and I see the church, Pro. 29:18.

Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

Orphans' Home.

We want to thank the Editor of the Herald for a subscription to same, Miss Alice Conway, of Ohio, for a year's subscription to The American Boy, Mr. G. D. Allred, Flag Springs church, for a nice wool blanket; the good people of Star for a box containing various articles; Bro. Allen Morris, Denton, for a lot of nice pumpkins. All of the above named articles help to make life more pleasant in the Home.

My brother, who is a student in the Denton High School, and has been staying in the Home, has had to return home on account of ill health. I want to ask you to pray that he may soon be recovered to his usual health and to his work.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Star, S. S.	$1.40
Moriah, S. S.	6.47
Bethesda, S. S., Yadkin Col. Ct.,	2.59
Friendship . S., Yadkin Col. Ct.	1.30
W. Lexington S. S., Yadkin Col. Ct..	.81
Mt. Carmel S. S., Yadkin Col. Ct	1.10
Shiloh S. S., Yadkin Col. Ct.	2.89
Yadkin College S . S.	.50
Spring Valley S. S.	2.32
Beginners' Class, Harmony S. S.	3.00
Liberty Hill church, Anderson Ct.	3.40
Piney Grove S. S.	5.00
Giles' Chapel S. S., Richland Ct.	3.70
Total	$40.73

Etta Auman, Treas.

MT. CARMEL, GRANVILLE CT.

Last Sunday-school report as follows: total enrollment, one hundred; total present, forty-six; total collections, forty-three cents and one new scholar.

As the sick ones are improving, the attendance is expected to increase.

The continued absence of Mrs. Ida Clark and children was caused by the sickness and death of the husband and father, Mr. Rufus Clark. Mr. Clark was an exceptionally good and clever man.

Misses Mary Finch, Jessie Powell, Maggie Finch and Lillie Robertson and others pleasantly spent the afternoon of last Sunday with Miss Myrtle Grissom.

Our organist, Miss Maggie Finch, has taken position as teacher of the Amos' school in this county. Wish for her much success and little "flogging." The general question with us is, "What do you want—a Christmas tree?" Polk Garrett.

Oct. 31, 1911.

LA GRANGE.

Dear Herald:

Our special evangelistic services conducted by Rev. T. M. Johnson in La Grange Church closed Sunday night, having begun Monday night preceding. Bro. Johnson did splendid preaching and the people enjoyed it. The church was helped, several not in the church were touched by the services, some converted, and others impressed by the truths presented.

Six united with the church, namely: Mrs. Annie Creech, Mrs. Bertha Whaley, and Misses Minnie May Taylor, Luvenia Creech, Libby Sutton, and Amy Louise Graham.

My school board released me from teaching on Friday, consequently was with Bro. Jonnson Friday, Saturday and Sunday. We appreciate his coming and feel that good has been done and hope that more may result from his earnest appeals.

Sincerely,

J. H. Abernethy.

FRIENDSHIP, YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

On the 4th Sunday we had no preaching at our church as it rained all day; our pastor came but no one went out to hear him. We were very sorry the day was so bad, as this was the last time our pastor is to be with us for this year, but we hope he will return to us, for we believe all love him. Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely; all seem to take an interest it it, but it is not so large as it was in the summer, as some of our girls have left us to teach school. Success to the Herald and its readers. Reporter.

CONCORD.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Concord on Saturday evening, Nov. 4th, at 7:30. Pastor.

Our services on last Sunday were well attended. One member was received into our church from the M. E. Church, South, on Sunday night.

Bro. "Tom" Alexxander is quite sick; and has been for the past few days. We trust a kind Providence with soon restore him to his usual health —The new Lutheran Church in this city has been opened. It is a pretty, substantial brick building, on Ashe St.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS AT LAST ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

We, your Committee on Ways and Means, beg to say that we have recommended different plans at different times, and finding that the brethren have their different plans and times for collections, we therefore recommend the prosecution of such plans on the different fields as are the most effective in teaching the people liberality and also teaching them the importance of supporting the different causes to which we are asked to pay.

We recommend that the assessments be as follows:

President's salary	$1,200
Church Extension	3,274
Foreign Missions	2,080
Home Missions	2,000
Superannuates	750
Ministerial Education	446
Theological Seminary	403
American Bible Society	65

CHARGE	President	Church Extension	Foreign Missions	Home Missions	Superannuates	Ministerial Ed.	Theological Sem.	Bible Society	TOTAL
Alamance	34	75	60	56	18	13	8	1	265
Albemarle	20	25	20	11	10	7	7	1	101
Anderson	17	40	20	19	10	6	5	1	118
Asheboro	17	65	35	36	11	8	6	1	179
Asheville	10	25	20	21	5	2	3	1	87
Buncombe	12	30	17	21	7	6	5	1	99
Burlington	17	85	40	38	8	9	6	1	204
Caldwell	3	11	7	5	1	2	1	1	31
Caroleen	5	10	7	8	3	5	3	1	42
Chatham	12	30	21	27	13	5	7	2	116
Cleveland	35	90	61	67	22	13	12	1	301
Concord	10	40	36	30	12	1	1	1	132
Davidson	17	60	41	40	5	3	4	1	171
Denton	6	11	10	12	7	4	2	1	53
Efland	6	10	15	15	4	2	2	1	55
Fairview	12	45	25	35	5	6	4	1	133
Flat Rock	27	70	56	50	22	10	8	1	241
Forsyth	25	54	35	45	8	3	3	1	175
Gaston	6	24	20	12	10	1	1	1	75
Gilburg	5	10	10	8	2	2	2	1	40
Gra. & Haw R.	12	25	21	12	8	2	2	1	83
Granville	27	81	51	38	17	8	3	1	225
Greensboro	27	*	66	50	25	17	25	1	351
Greensville	13	46	25	28	7	7	6	1	133
Guilford	24	51	42	53	5	4	3	1	183
Halifax	23	70	51	39	19	9	7	1	219
Haw River	35	95	51	65	20	15	11	1	293
Henderson	35		76	75	25	20	14	1	280
High Point	17	95	56	60	25	12	14	1	280
Ivy	17	26	12	10	7	6	4	1	83
La Grange	17	29	20	17	10	5	4	1	103
Lebanon	6	26	9	20	5	4	2	1	74
Liberty	32	97	57	53	16	15	10	1	281
Lincoln	32	75	45	60	11	6	3	1	233
Littleton	28	92	42	57	16	12	8	1	255
Mebane	17	41	25	20	19	17	15	1	148
Mecklenburg	17	24	13	11	5	4	3	1	78
Monroe	7	28	17	16	6	2	2	1	79
Mt. Hermon	32	76	55	59	18	8	6	2	255
Oak Ridge	27	86	45	40	13	12	6	1	134
Orange	17	36	25	15	7	6	7	1	125
Pin. & Mt. Zion	22	56	45	35	12	7	6	1	189
Randolph	32	66	53	45	18	10	9	1	234
Richland	24	60	45	41	12	6	5	1	234
Roanoke	33	82	60	40	20	10	9	1	255
Rockingham	6	20	7	11	9	2	10	1	66
Rocky Mount	5	25	1	2	1	1	1	1	37
Harmony	5	6	5	5	11	3	1	1	36
Saxapahaw	20	46	34	35	13	9	5	2	163
Spring Ch.	12	51	21	27	10	4	8	1	134
St. Paul	6	21	15	7	5	1	1	1	57
Stanley	25	65	37	46	22	8	11	1	214
Tabernacle	35	96	85	62	25	15	12	1	331
Thomasville	6	16	10	10	5	4	5	1	57
Uwharrie	16	17	15	25	3	3	2	1	82
Vance	35	51	47	37	11	11	13	1	204
Welch	5	9	8	5	4	2	3	1	37
Why Not	27	65	56	61	16	13	15	1	253
Winston	17	80	50	45	11	12	3	1	219
E. W. & U. R.	12	20	10	15	13	5	4	1	80
Yarboro	17	42	30	38	14	5	8	1	155
Yad. Col.	30	50	38	52	21	4	8	1	204

*$140 185.

Scarcity of Men.—There seem to be people enough in the world; you see them thronging about the streets and highways on special occasions, but when you are looking for a man for a special place, how hard it is to find one that fits. But this is only another way of saying that most capable men are engaged; and, looked at this way, it is not so bad.

—Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, of Cambridge, Mass., has been indicted for the murder of a young woman who expected to marry him. The indictment was returned October 31, the day set for his marriage to another. Pale and haggard, he was remanded to jail to await his trial in January. A most shocking crime, if he is really guilty.

—The rebellion in China is extorting concessions from the emperor. He has consented to constitutional government.

—Rev. J. R. Hutton and family are in grief. The youngest child, Edward, aged eleven months, after a long illness, died on Monday. The funeral took place at Tabernacle Church on Tuesday.

—Mrs. J. M. Stone's mother is visiting Mrs. Stone at her home in this city.

—Mrs. O. L. Huff, of Gibsonville, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. T. J. Ogburn.

—Mrs. Dr. Bullock, of Washington, after visiting her sister, Mrs. Joyner in this city, has gone to Rocky Mount and Whitakers to visit other relatives. At the women's nissionary jubilee in this city she assumed the support of a Bible woman.

WHEN MOTHER GROWS OLD.

Not long ago a handsome, elegantly- dressed lady, who could not have been more than forty-one or two, and who looked still younger, was overheard saying to her eighteen-year old daughter: "I want you to observe, Mabel, the way in which Grace treats her mother. That is just the way I want you to treat me when I am old."

"O mother. the girl cried in distress, "Grace is ten years older than I am, and her mother seems twice as old as you are. You can never be so feeble and homely and queer as she is. Why, she asked me the same question three times over."

"Indeed, I may be much homelier and queerer," laughed her mother; "and I have seen daughters treat their mothers so strangely, that I want you to be making up your mind, from this time forward, just how you will treat me when I begin, as the saying is, to 'break.'

"For instance, there is Fanny. How impatient she is with her prosy, long-winded old mother! And you may not have noticed how condescending and patronizing Clara is to hers. That sort of conduct would be most offensive to me.

"Then there is Elizabeth, who seems to ignore her mother altogether. When I call there I can hardly get in a word with the old lady, though she is really an interesting talker when she is away from the effacing influences of her daughter."

Mabel could not believe that her own mother could ever grow so uninteresting and trying as some of the old mothers whom she saw now and then in the homes of her friends, but most of us have seen astonishing changes made by time in the minds and persons of both men and women. Old age can do almost anything. We cannot too early teach that truth to our children.

In a certain large town, some years ago, there lived a mother and her only daughter. Like many other only children, this Teresa Ormsby had been indulged until she had become thoroughly selfish. Her mother was a beautiful and gifted woman—far more attractive, even in her late seventies, than her peevish, dissatisfied daughter—but it was impossible to enjoy a comfortable visit with her in Teresa's presence.

No sooner did the old lady, who was a trifle deaf, ask to have a remark repeated, than Theresa would say in a positively malignant tone: "Mother, if you would only pay attention, you would not have to ask to hear things over. It is awfully trying. Why don't you listen when you are spoken to?"

One day a visitor was present when the poor lady asked, gently: "Who is going by with that queer white hat on? It must be some stranger."

To the consternation of the caller Teresa burst into a perfect tirade.

"Mother, you know that is old Tim Murphy. I've told you fifty times if I have once. Why can't you remember a simple thing like that? I'm never going to tell you again."

The poor, helpless victim was naturally mortified to have an outsider see this distressing exhibition of temper, but she simply caught her breath, paused a moment and then said: "Never mind, dear, I will not ask again."

And yet Teresa at this time must have been over forty years old, and everybody in the neighborhood knew that, though she provided properly for her mother's physical wants, she talked to her shamefully.

Poor Mrs. Ormsby may have reflected that she herself was partly to blame for her daughter's conduct. Certainly she had never tried to teach her the proper treatment of an aged mother. Very likely it would not have done much good if she had.

All the people staying at a certain small seashore hotel one season were filled with admiration for the daughter of an eccentric cross-grained old woman. The two were spending the entire summer there, and were constantly together.

It seemed as though they never started on any sort of an excursion but that Florence Gray had to go back to their room for something which her mother had forgotten, yet never once was she heard to complain or to utter an impatient word.

Mrs. Gray was not yet out of her sixties, but she considered herself as entitled to all the privileges of great age. Poorly educated, she had yet the utmost conceit of opinion, and was always rushing in to correct and inform those who knew much more than she did. Her daughter was a college graduate, and must often have been ashamed to her very soul of her mother's silly remarks, but she never once varied from her attitude of loving reverence toward her.

One day a lady who had shown great kindness to them both, entirely for the daughter's sake, ventured to say to her when they were alone together and having a confidential talk: "Your mother will age rapidly if you wait upon her too much. Your devotion is lovely, but you must think of her good—and then, too, you must not wear yourself out too soon.'

Florence Gray colored. For an instant she said nothing. Then she murmured: "My mother has done more for me than most mothers do for their children, and I can never do enough to show my gratitude She grows, oh! so different, as she grows older, but I would not for worlds have her suspect how she is changing. I hope always to keep it from her.'

The troubles and changes sure to come to those of declining years sometimes sour instead of sweetening the disposition. This problem is probably as old as the race, or else it would not have been dignified by a special place in the Decalogue. That it is the subject of "the first commandment with promise," indicates that it might be thought a hard one to keep.

"I have no fault to find with my daughter," said a strong and handsome old lady of seventy-five, "except that she insists upon helping me so solicitously out of and into carriages and cars. As yet I need no assistance. She hinders more than she helps me." One has to be careful not to do too much for one's elderly friends.

It is to the daughters oftener than to the sons that the care of aged parents usually falls. Most of our girls are loving and faithful and do not need counsel concerning this matter: but even affectionate daughters may make mistakes of judgment.

Particularly difficult will it be for the daughter-in-law to give this wise and unselfish care. For it is often said, merely humorously, perhaps, that however "queer" our own relatives may be, husbands' relatives are very, very much "queerer," and the husbands probably find the converse to be equally true.—Kate Upson Clark in Congregationalist.

RELIGION IN THE FAMILY.

Begin, my friends, with your children. Speak cheerfully, but reverently, and solemnly, to them of the righteousness of God. Tell them that He is their Father, and tell them He is their Judge. Show them His face of compassion; show them His throne of tribulation. Teach them that He loves the good; teach them that He hates the lying, and lust, and iniquity. Take care, yourselves, to touch not the unclean thing, that your counsel to your sons and daughters be not a mockery. Shake off the first dishonest penny from your fingers, as the apostle shook of the venomous viper into the fire.

Stand in awe of your conscience; stand in awe of the King of kings. Expect and welcome from the ministry of Christ searching messages. Pray for prophets, who will rebuke you, as their ancient predecessors did Israel, for robbing man by any fraud, for robbing God by keeping back the offerings at His altar which He requireth at your hands.—Exchange.

When we are faithfully and earnestly trying to do our best with life, keeping heart amid discouragements, looking ever for the bright sky behind the cloud, we are making souls fit for advancement in the Father's realm of service.—George A. Thayer.

A HAPPY GATHERING.

The past week has been one of great rejoicing in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Amos F. Johnson, at Ingold, N. C., when the mother, sisters and brothers of Mrs. Johnson all gathered together from various parts of the world to participate in a grand reunion.

It has been some twenty years since mother and all the children were around the same fireside. Only those in like position as we can imagine this grand, sweet time we all had together. There was only one thing to mar our happiness—the absence of our oldest brother, S. J. Pittman, wife and two children, of Baltimore, Md. Our hearts would ache when we mentioned them.

The mother, Mrs. Pittman, of Onslow County, came first to be in prime shape to meet her children. Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Woolfolk, of Cristobal, C. Z. Panama, came next. Then Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble, of Greensboro, and Mr. J. N. Pittman, of Oxford, but who is now at Greensboro taking a course in pharmacy. The week was spent in talking of old times when we were children, in laughing, frolicking, swimming, riding, visiting and receiving visitors; it was indeed a week of mirth and pleasure. Last, but not least, the sisters and brothers enjoyed the fine melons, canteloupes, and fried chicken the country affords. Monday morning as the sun was shining with all its radiance the loved ones with the exception of the mother (who will spend a while with Mrs. Johnson) said goodbye to each other, and sure there was a great downpour of tears as they drove away, but we parted hoping and praying we would all, and Buddie too, meet again soon in the same old home. Would say here, some of the party drove over to the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lamb Sunday night. Mr. A. N. Johnson (father), now past his 91st mile post, chaperoned us. As we were taking our leave, he asked sister Maude to play and all sing, "We'll never say goodbye in Heaven." It was almost more than we could bear. Mr. Woolfolk took pictures of the whole family the last thing before leaving. They will contain so many sacred memories. The white haired grandfather leaning on his cane and three little grandchildren in front. Their little hearts, though young, were almost broken when they said goodbye to aunts and uncles. It was pitiful. I could write on, but space forbids. Wishing each one a safe return home and hoping to see them all again next year.

"Sister Bessie."

The home of Bro. W. M. Osborne was made very sad on the 17th of October, when the death angel took from their midst a fond, loving wife and mother. She was 53 years old and had been a faithful Christian, member of Zoar Church for a number of years. She leaves to mourn for her, six sons and three daughters and a host of friends and relatives. In the absence of our pastor, Rev. J. W. Self, Rev. Mr. Hair, of the Baptist Church performed the last sad rites and we laid her to rest in Zoar churchyard to await the resurrection morn. We weep not as those who have no hope.

Yours in Christ,

W. Henry Jones.

THE PREVENTION OF COLDS.

The first few days of autumn—not necessarily of the autumn of the calendar, but of the autumnal weather—are likely to be marked by an outbreak of colds. Then many who have been free from this disagreeable ailment, and therefore have dismissed all thought of it from their minds, are suddenly forced to recognize that they have noses and mucous membranes.

It is indeed discouraging to find that living all summer virtually in the open air has not apparently made us more resistant to the influences that produce a cold. We have lived in drafts—natural drafts, through open windows and on porches, and artificial drafts made by the electric fan—and never so much as sneezed. Now, with the first drop in the temperature below the point of comfort, we look angrily for the source of air playing around our heads, pull down the windows, close the doors, and begin to wonder if the weather-strips do not need renewing. Then in a day or two comes the cold, and we blame the air for it. The real cause is the lack of air, or rather the stagnation and impurity of it.

The bacteria which cause colds—there are several varieties of them—are always close by, if not actually in our noses, but they can do us no harm as long as the system, fortified with fresh air and exercise, is able to repress their growth. The balance, however, between the resisting and attacking forces is so nearly even that it takes but little to disturb it, with the result that the system may become the weaker of the two. Working for a few days in the office or the shop, or the schoolroom, with windows sealed to keep out the cold air; or worse yet, sleeping for a few nights in a bedroom with windows closed, because the blankets have been put away and it is too chilly to sleep without them, is quite sufficient to overthrow the balance and give the microbes the upper hand. Then a draft really is harmful—at least the little draft that creeps round the sash of the closed window or through the crack under the door. The way to make it innocuous is to increase the size of it, to open the windows and door, and let the fresh air in great volume, as is did in the summer. If the autumn air is too crisp, put on an overcoat, but do not shut the windows until you are forced to do so by snow or hard frost; and then do not shut them completely, or keep them shut all the time.—Youth's Companion.

THE SPIRIT OF THE MASTER.

In Copenhagen there stands on the Gothersgade, a large, old-fashioned building, which is worthy of a visit from any stranger who wishes to know the spirit of that brave little northern country, Denmark.

Although it is not named among the notable sights of the city, and is not dedicated to art or genius or heroism, it is, in the opinion of many, one of the noblest and most significant of Danish institutions. The inscription that it bears is this: "Winter Quarters for Old People, Whom Danish Students Cordially Invite to Enter."

Throughout the long winter the old building is full of light and music. On entering, the visitor finds many old people, all of whom, though poorly dressed and evidently acquainted with hard times, are cheerful and happy; for the students do far more than simply supply their guests with warm rooms comfortable seats and hot coffee. They give themselves. They sing and play to their aged guests; they give them lectures and talks; they mingle with them and learn to know them. They are hosts in the best sense; they make the aged poor of Conpenhagen their honored guests.

By the law of friendship that Jesus Christ came to preach, all social barriers were to disappear. Rich and poor, employer and employed, strong and weak, were to be brothers. That still another barrier—that which uphappily so often exists between youth and age—yields easily to the great law of friendship, the students of Copenhagen are proving. It is doubtful if, in all their university course, these Danish students learn a greater truth than this which they have found out for themselves.

Every nation honors its dead soldiers and heroes; in honoring the aged toilers in the heavy battle with poverty, the students of Copenhagen have shown a clear sense of the values of life, and that is one of the signs of a new age.

—The marriage of Prof. Chamness Davidson, of Fayetteville is announced.

THE R. F. D.

By Amos R. Wells

Of all the works of Uncle Sam,
Benfiecent and wise—
The mighty irrigation dam,
The conquest of the skies,
The money coined sound and true,
The seeds he scatters free—
There's none that holds a candle to
The R. F. D.!

The R.F. D., with lengthened arms,
Extends its kindly sway
To little isolated farms
From cities far away.
Through country lanes it reaches out,
Beyond the upland lea;
And ah, its travel-feet are stout—
The R. F. D.

The blessed little box of tin
Beside the winding road,
What treasures may be stored therein
From out the postman's load!
The barefoot children caper down
And crowd about to see,
Ah, better than the joys of town—
The R. F. D.!

The long and lonely country days
Are lightened by the mail,
And cheery hopes and better ways
Spring in the postman's trail.
And farm and city, understood,
More happily agree.
God bless the bond of brotherhood,
The R. F. D.

In Youth's Companion.

DOING ONE'S DUTY.

I slept and dreamed that life was Beauty;
I woke and found that life was Duty.

Perhaps the majority of people in the world have some guiding principle in life, something which lies back of most of their actions and thoughts—in short, a compass by which their lives are directed. With many this guiding principle or compass is ambition; with others it is wealth; with others it is the accomplishment of some definite life task; and with others it is pleasure or something equally transitory and worthless except for the passing hour. But, happily for the world, there are many in it who have duty as their guide in both temporal and spiritual matters. The question with them is not, "Will I make a good profit on it or reap some temporal benefit?" but, "Is it my duty?" If their consciences tell them that it is their duty, then that is the thing to do, whatever the result or whatever obstacles present themselves. These are the people who make life worth living, who keep the world in the paths of peace and progress and prosperity, and whose lives are worthy of all honor and emulation. They are the people who are allied with the Creator of all; for, as has been said, "God helps us when we do our duty."

An inspiring story is told of a boy who joined the Confederate ranks early in the great Civil War of our nation. He was under age, slender, small, and sickly looking; and yet his comrades who survived have said that never did a battle-scarred veteran fight with greater bravery or with more determination. Once a comrade asked him why he was not afraid when the enemy was in front and bullets were flying and friends falling about him. "A Power greater than the bullets or the enemy, either, is watching over me when I do my duty," was his quiet reply. The soldier, telling it afterwards, said: "I respected that boy with my whole heart, although at that period of my life I did not believe that there was such a thing as a God. His belief made a Christian of me." One day "the boy" was ordered out, along with the others of his squad, to hold a ford across which a small band of the enemy was to pass. The enemy gathered upon the opposite bank in larger numbers than the scouts reported. In a few minutes after the firing began the officer was killed and the men commenced to talk of retreating and letting the enemy across. "The boy" was asked his opinion. He replied: "We were ordered to hold this ford. It is our duty, and I expect to stay, whatever you do." Not a man left, nor did the enemy get across.

The person who does his duty is the one who will accomplish most in life. Duty is not always the pleasant thing to do nor the easiest thing, but it is the only thing. It is no easy thing to sacrifice to duty ourselves or what we have or want; it is no easy thing to face the enemy squarely and determinedly when safe retreat is possible; but the one who does it is the one to whom the rewards will go. And "he who is false to present duty," said the famous preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, "breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause."

The doing of one's duty is one of the foundations of strong character. "The reward of one duty," said George Eliot, "is the power to fulfil another." No one can do his duty firmly and conscientiously and not have character back of his actions. The first duty done, whether from impulse or from principle, is the foundation in one's character for the next duty, which may be harder than the first. It is building character day by day, one duty after another, each day making the structure more and more complete and beautiful.—The New York Observer.

—Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the New York World, is dead.

HIS OWN HARVEST.

He was too old a man for the place, some said; even those who loved him for his long years of faithful service could not help noticing that when he mounted the pulpit stairs his step was a little unsteady, and that toward the end of the sermon his voice broke now and then.

One Sunday he read the hymn over again after he had given out the notices, and Elder Fenwick frowned at the flutter of fans and the slight titter in the choir-loft.

Elder Fenwick, who had given a hundred dollars toward the new pipe-organ thought that it did not have a fair chance. The young people, he said, were "drifting off," especially in the evenings; many of the older ones had "lost interest"; the attendance was not what it should be, and, all things considered, the church needed a change of pastors.

Not a few agreed with Elder Fenwick, but no one liked to speak to the minister. He had been long among them, this old man with the gray hair and the faltering step. He had baptized children who were now fathers and mothers; he had blessed many of the men and the women of the parish at the marriage altar; he had prayed by the sick beds of some who sat weekly in the high-backed pews, and of many more who rested in peace under the green turf of the churchyard near by.

It was a delicate matter to speak about, but it was "managed"—no matter how. As the old minister stood up for his last service in the church where the best years of his manhood had been spent, his voice quavered more than ever. By his request, it had been made a communion Sunday. At such a service, it seemed to him, he could have the tenderest parting with the people whom he loved so well.

A strange thing happened that day. There was a moment's pause after the sermon and the prayer, for the minister's eyes were too misty to find at once the number in the hymn-book. In the pause a young man in one of the center pews rose to his feet.

"I hope you will let—let me speak a word," he said, abashed, for the eyes of the whole congregation were upon him, and he was hardly more than a boy.

"I've been thinking since I sat here that—that, when the new minister comes and holds his first communion, a good many will join the church. It is always so. I had intended to be one of them, but—but it doesn't seem fair, when it's Mr. Borden's influence and preaching and the kind of life he's lived that's brought me to decide that way, if it could be arranged so that I could as late as it is now—I'd like to join to-day."

The young man's voice died into a dead silence. Then the minister called his session together in tones that were subdued and tremulous. There was a stir here and there, as one after another rose and followed the elders to the room above.

Fourteen young people had in their hearts decided upon the step which must mean so much to them in the future; and stirred by the generous thought of the youth who had spoken first, they, too, chose to give the sheaves into the faithful hand that had scattered the seed.

The gray head of the pastor was bowed reverently, while he read the names, as if to receive this baptism of a great joy.

Other hearts grew tender under the influences of the day. When the service was over, a hundred hands grasped the hand of the old pastor, not with the regret that marks a final parting, but with the gladness that belongs to a new welcome.—The Youth's Companion.

ENCOUNTER WITH A LION.

Duke Adolphus Frederick in his book, "In the Heart of Africa," gives one of his exciting experiences as follows:

Suddenly I heard successive shots behind me in the distance. As I had an understanding with Wintgens that no game except buffaloes and lions was to be fired at, I knew that the shots must mean the presence of one or the other. So I turned back, and soon caught sight of Wintgens accompanied by two Askari coming toward me with rifles at the ready.

"The herr lieutenant has shot a lion!" shouted one.

"Where is he hiding?" I asked.

"I do not know; we have lost him here by the mountain."

There could be no doubt that the lion was lying between Wintgens and me. It seemed almost as if his pursuers had passed over him as he was crouching in the grass. Suddenly one of the Askari at my side stopped sharply, and, with characteristic gesture, pointed his index finger toward the tall reed-grass by the river, and yelled out, "Look, bana sultani, many, many lions."

Indeed, I actually beheld five lions hurrying to the protecting river with that heavy, slouching gait peculiar to their kind. With one shot Wintgens finished the earthly career of a lioness. One of the others vanished into the reeds.

One of the Askari, a Masai, who was not enamored of peaceful pursuits, a splendid, grand-looking fellow, like all his warlike race, approached the scrub in most fearless fashion. On a sudden the blood-curdling roar of a lion resounded three times in quick succession, and the beast sprang out with flattened ears and gaping jaws right among us.

We all fell back except the Masai, who was a few paces off on my left. Shouting aloud and mad with excitement, he stretched out his left arm, in which he held his rifle, against the lion. But the beast seized him in the twinkling of an eye. The next moment they were rolling together like a ball on the ground. At the same instant I raised my gun to my shoulder and gave the lion a bullet at five paces; but the aim was bad, and the beast, with two great bounds, fled back, growling, into the scrub before I could think of a second shot.

The Masai lay on the ground streaming blood, but had sustained no really serious injuries. I hastened to bandage the nearly senseless man as best I could, to stanch the flow of blood. A draft of water, coupled with his incredible stoicism, enabled him to recuperate so quickly that he sustained the five-hour return journey to the camp without collapsing.

GRANDPA'S WAY.

My grandpa is the strangest man!
Of course I love him dearly;
But really it does seem to me
He looks at things so queerly.

He always thinks that every day
Is right, no matter whether
It rains or snows, or shines or blows,
Or what the kind of weather.

When outdoor fun is ruined by
A heavy shower provoking,
He pats my head, and says: "You see,
The dry earth needs a soaking."

And when I think the day too warm
For any kind of pleasure,
He says: "The corn has grown an inch—
I see without a measure."

And when I fret because the wind
Has set my things all whirring,
He looks at me, and says: "Tut! tut!
This close air needs a stirring."

He says, when drifts are piling high,
And fence posts scarcely peeping:
"How warm beneath their blanket white
The little flowers are keeping!"

Sometimes I think, when on his face
His sweet smile shines so clearly,
It would be nice if every one
Could see things just as queerly!

FRED AND THE MICE.

Fred was a little five year old boy. In the evening, when he went to bed, he was obliged to go through an unused room, where the mice seemed to hold possession. When he heard them gnawing, he would cry, in a cowardly way, for his mother to come to him.

One evening his mother was sick, and his nurse was away from home. There was no one there but his papa, who was in the sitting-room reading his paper. He told Fred it was time for him to go to bed.

"O papa, will you not take me to bed? I do not like to go through that room alone."

"What do you fear?" asked his father.

"I am afraid of the mice, and I believe there are rats, too."

"If that is all," answered his father, "I can soon help you."

He took pen, ink, and paper, and quickly wrote the following:

"To all the rats and mice in this house: I hereby command you to let my little son go through all the rooms of this house unmolested. Any rat or mouse that does not obey will be dealt with according to law."

The father signed and then read the paper to his son. Fred took it, thanked him, said "good night" very prettily, and went to bed. He was no longer afraid.

When he came to the door of the room, he stopped, and said in a loud voice, "Rats and mice, you cannot hurt me; for here is my pass." And so he did every night afterward, until he became a large boy, and was no longer afraid of rats and mice.—From the German.

A NEW MULTIPLICATION TABLE.

"Oh, I'm going to have such a good time this afternoon!" cried Myra, as she danced through the room where her Aunt Rachel was at work.

"It is so lovely to be out of school at last, Auntie!" she went on. "So good to be done with lessons, and to think of having a good time!"

"I hope you are not leaving all your lessons behind you, dear," said Aunt Rachel, with a smile at the light-hearted lassie.

"Every one of them. Not to give them a thought until vacation is over. But," turning at the door with an inquiring look, "do you mean I ought to keep up my lessons, Auntie? Mother thinks that, as I had a good deal of headache the last few weeks, I had better not use my eyes much."

"She is right, dear. I was only thinking that if you could multiply your good times a little"—

"The very thing I'm going to do all these weeks. Trust me for that!"

"That is right, dear| Take the multiplication table into your pleasures."

"But, do you mean to study it? You are puzzling, Auntie. But you often are, and then I find you always mean something."

"Puzzle it out, my bird. If you multiply well you will find it a rich vacation. I mean just that—hold on to the multiplication table. You will be surprised to find how easy it is, and how very delightful."

Later in the day, Myra came again, her face this time more thoughtful, but not less happy.

"I've thought it out, Auntie—yes, and worked it out."

"And does it work well, my dearie?"

"Oh, so well! Though," with a grave shake of the head, "I had to tackle it pretty hard to make out what you could be meaning. Multiply—multiply pleasures. That seemed easy at first. Just to keep on the lookout for all the pleasures I could possibly get hold of. That is what I had planned for the whole vacation. Then I began to think it couldn't be that, or you wouldn't have said what you did. So I had to try in some other way. And I hit it. More pleasure—multiply, multiply—but not all for me. The only other way was to get more folks into it."

The small chatterer stopped to look inquiringly at Aunt Rachel, but the latter only smiled and nodded for her to go on.

"I had ten cents to spend for candy. I was going to take my dolls out into the grove, and eat it there. And I had the new St. Nicholas, and I was going to read it. If any of the girls were with me they would expect some of the candy, you see, and I couldn't have a nice quiet time with the St. Nicholas."

"I see you had laid out a very nice afternoon for yourself, dear."

"Yes. Well, as I went for the candy I met the Crane girls. They had walked clear out of the way to try to find some wild flowers, and asked me if I knew where they were. They live in a flat, you know, and don't often get out so far. I had gone up the hill for columbine and mandrakes only yesterday, and I didn't feel much like going again, but they looked so glad and anxious when I tried to tell them where they were that I said I'd go, and we had such a jolly time. That was a real four times one, wasn't it?"

"It really was."

"When we came back, Jane called me to the kitchen and said, 'I see you have company, so you will want some cookies.' So with those and the candy we had a regular little feast. Then Delia Crane read one of the St. Nicholas stories. That was keeping on with the four times you see, and don't you think I might call it a little bit of multiplication—just say about two times one?"

"Oh, yes, my dear littl egirl," and Aunt Rachel put a tender arm about Myra; "for you are certainly learning the new multiplication table!" —Sydney Dayre, in Young Christian Soldier.

MAN'S FOSSIL REMAINS

Dr. W. D. Matthew, Curator of the American Museum of Natural History, has given the following information to the editor of the New York Times in answer to a curious correspondent, who asked: "How do scientists account for the fact that so very few fossil human bones are found, while those of animals, that seem to have lived in the same period, are plentiful?"

"Human remains," says Dr. Matthew, "are found only in the latest geological formations. No authenticated remains are older than the Pleistocene epoch (ice age). In North America they are all very late Pleistocene. They are not especially rare as compared with the remains of lower animals, but most of the finds are due to interments of one kind or another. "In the older formations (Tertiary and preceding periods) the bones of extinct animals are found, sometimes in abundance, but no remains certainly attributable to man or any direct ancestor of man have been found. All reports to the contrary are based on questionable or insufficient evidence. These facts are true of the regions which have been extensively explored for fossil remains, viz., the greater part of Europe, a large part of the United States, and minor areas in other parts of the world.

"The obvious inferences are that man probably did not inhabit these parts of the world until during or after the great ice age; that he did not evolve from lower animals in these regions, and that the practice of interring the dead, instead of leaving them to the mercy of wild beasts, was a very ancient and universal custom among primitive races of man.

"The regions explored are a small fraction—possibly five per cent—of the area of Tertiary formations of the same nature known or believed to exist in different parts of the world. There are vast areas of promising "badlands" in every continent, which have been little or not at all searched by fossil hunters (these specimens are very rarely noticed or recognized by others). Even in the Western States, fifty years of exploration are so far from exhausting the field that every summer some expedition reports finding extinct animals hitherto unknown to science. Nevertheless, we know enough to make it very improbable that the ancestry of man will be found in the Tertiary of North America. There is a great deal of indirect evidence, in the present distribution of the races of mankind, and what is known of the history of their migration, and from other sources, all pointing toward Asia, and especially Central Asia, as the original home of the race, and the theater of its evolution during the Tertiary period. This is unexplored territory to the paleontologists, and too difficult and dangerous for systematic search even today. But if it is opened up to exploration during the next half century as the Western States have been in the past fifty years, we may look to find there the remains of Tertiary ancestors of man along with those of various lower races of animals which are believed to have originated in that region. If, after a thorough search, this belief is not substantiated, explanations will be in order, and it will be necessary for us to modify or reconsider our present views as to where and how man originated."

A PRAYER.

Speak to me, Lord, in the calm and early morning,
As, fresh from my slumbers, Thy presence I seek.
Teach me to walk 'mid life's cares and temptations,
And pure and unspotted my spirit to keep.

Speak to me, Lord, in the glare of the noonday,
When, weary and fainting, I stumble and fall.
Oh, speak to me then, lest in stress of temptation
The world and it baubles my soul shall enthrall.

Speak to me, Lord, in the hush of the evening,
When the hills echo back the sweet Angelus chime;
And up from the vale in the paths homeward wending
The sheep and the shepherd in quietness climb.

Speak to me, Lord, when the night shades have fallen,
And far overhead the stars twinkle and shine.
Speak "Pardon" and "Peace" ere I sink into slumber,
And light up my couch with Thy radiance divine.

Gertrude M. Watson.

A Good Recommendation.

"Sir," said a lad, coming down to one of the wharves in Boston, and addressing a well-known merchant, "Sir, have you any berth for me on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to," answered the boy.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, NOV. 12.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—The War Against the Saloon. Isa. 5: 11-25. (Temperance Meeting).

Daily Readings.

M. Waste of food, Isa. 55:2.
T. Waste of money, Luke 15:13.
W. Waste of life, Dan. 5: 22-30.
T. Waste of nations, Isa. 28:1-13.
F. Waste of families, Hab. 2:15.
S. Waste of spiritual power, Prov. 31:4-5.
S. The topic.

Suggestions for the Leader.

This meeting should be conducted by the temperance or good citizenship committee. Sing temperance songs, have temperance recitations, pray fervent prayers. Arrange a strong program. Advertise the meeting. The following and kindred topics may be assigned in advance to members.

1. Does prohibition decrease crime?
2. Does prohibition decrease drunkenness?
3. Why is moderate drinking unsafe?
4. Does the Bible justify moderate drinking?
5. Are officers as vigilant in enforcing the laws in prohibition territory as they should be?

Have some member give the history of temperance legislation in the state, county, or city in which you live. Have another contrast conditions under saloons give statistics as to amount of money spent for whiskey, and compare with that spent for education and articles of necessity in the home.

News From the Battle Line.

The saloon must go! There is no question about this fact; the only element of uncertainty is as to when it will go. It will be accomplished whenever public sentiment against the saloon is stronger than sentiment in favor of it. Each year sees the territory in which whiskey is legally sold lessen. The progress is by stages—first, local option, until most of the state is dry; then state-wide prohibition. Until two years ago there was only one state that had a constitutional provision against the sale of whiskey in the state; now there are several. Others have prohibition by legislative enactment.

About one fourth of the states of the union are wholly dry. In another half whiskey is sold in only a few countines and cities. In the remaining one-fourth of the states strong drink is sold in a considerable part of the state. About 75 per cent. of the territory of the United Staes is "dry" territory. More than 60 per cent. of the people of the United States live in districts or cities in which whiskey is not sold. One may travel for days and days in the south without being in a single city where there is an open saloon.

Figures show that prohibition brings a decrease of 50 per cent. in crime. Property values increase rapidly in prohibition territory. People are more industrious; they save more money and work more regularly.

Statistics show that crimes caused by whiskey cost the governments of nation, state and city more than the several governments derive in revenue from excises and taxes on strong drink. The whiskey sellers are bold enough to make the statement that they pay one-third of the nation's tax and but for them the government would be bankrupt. Such a statement is known by them to be false, for if it were not for their business the expenses of the government would be reduced more than a third. Answering such argument as is made by the saloon men, the Philadelphia North American recently said:

"This statement is at once an insolence and an insult. The sancturies of the nation are not built upon pillars made of kegs and barrels. Something besides the bottle stands betweent America and bankruptcy."

Temperance Facts.

The total consumption of liquors in the United States in 1909 amounted to 21.86 gallons for each man, woman and child, costing the unimaginable sum of $2,106,476,850. That is $23.92 for each person, or $110.03 for each family in the country. Think how much good might be done with the money that is now far worse than wasted!

Governor Hoch of Kansas, reviewing the immense advantage of prohibition to his state, points to $100 per capita in the banks, one-third of the counties with no prisoners in the jails and no paupers in the poor houses, and one-half of the prisoners that have not lived in Kansas long enough to gain a residence.

Prohibition prohibits in Maine. In Boston there are 426 arrests for each 10,000 population; in Portland, Me., there are 84. Maine has more school teachers and newspapers in proportion to population than any other state. While Maine has 120 prisoners for drunkenness, Massachusetts had 2,010, or four times as many, in proportion to population.

A Recitation.

Let the following lines from Whittier's poem, "The Moral Warfare," be committed to memory and recited in the meeting:

Our fathers to their graves have gone;
Their strife is past, their triumph won;
But sterner trials wait the race
Which rises in their honored place,—
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.
So let it be. In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight,
And, strong in Him whose cause is ours,
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons He has given.
The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.

THE CATS OF MANXLAND.

"You see, there's one place in the world, at least, where the small boy does not often have the fun of pulling the cat's tail," laughed one of the islanders in the little fifteen-by-thirty-mile Isle of Man in the Irish Sea.

We were watching some Manx kittens frolicking and tumbling about on the lawn. "And, by the way," he continued, "have you ever seen a Manx cat try to run around a corner? You see, it hasn't even the apology for a tail. The tail acts as a rudder with the ordinary cat in any such performance as that and steers it safely. A Manx cat will seldom try this 'stunt,' instinct telling it that it's an almost impossible feat; but occasionally such a thing happens, and it usually ends in a ludicrous tumble."

The longer I stayed in the Island, the more I saw of these charming little pets. One sees them everywhere—sometimes jumping like rabbits from the gorse and fuchsia hedges, leisurely walking the streets of the little fishing towns, or stretched lazily in the sun outside the tiny whitewashed cottages, or in the beautiful gardens of the more pretentious villas.

Sometimes one comes upon an odd-looking group, as I did one day when passing a charming home almost buried in a glory of rose and fuchsia bushes. This group comprised a fierce-looking black cat with a full-length tail, a half-breed Manx cat with half a tail, a full-breed cat with no tail and a long-tailed smoke-colored cat from the Shetland Isles. The latter are at present very popular in the Isle of Man.

The Manx cat has a smaller head, longer hind legs and shorter body than the ordinary cat. They run and jump much like rabbits, and have a fox's queer way of looking at you as if reading your thoughts.

"I think there are as many Manx cats in Cleveland, Ohio, or San Francisco, as in the Island," said one of the Islanders to me." Large numbers have been brought to those cities." Many are also brought to England as gifts. Half a crown is often charged for these pets and sometimes a much higher price. The cat-shows of the Island present a fine showing.

Long ago, when the Isle of Man was ruled by the Cambrian princes, the value of a cat was set by law. One of the old Manx laws reads as follows. "The price of a kitten before it can see is one penny. After it can see and before

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service,

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping car, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Ma n. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

it catches a mouse, two pence; and after it catches a mouse, four pence."

We are also told that if the kitten proved not perfect in sight or hearing, or if dull of claws, the seller must forfeit to the buyer one-third of its value.

In Pierre Loti's "Book of Pity and of Death" we are told of the supreme trustfulness which a cat places in one it loves. This is especially true of the Manx cat. It is more suspicious than other cats, but once it becomes attached to a person, its whole heart is given unreservedly.

The Isle of Man, like all countries with an ancient history, abounds in fascinating legends. There are several legends in regard to the origin of the Manx cat. One of these I have woven into a little rhyme:

'Twas time to close the ark's great door
And Noah said, "Now, let me see!
Are they all in?—the tiger, bear,
The panther, dog and chimpanzee—
"Lion and wolf and elephant,
Leopard and fox! Are they all in?
If so, I'll shut the door at last
And our long journey we'll begin."
But just as Noah slammed the door,
Preparing for the ocean-sail,
The cat from mousing came in late.
Alas! the door cut off her tail!
Puss from the window jumped and ran,
Was rescued, loudly purred her thanks.
She landed on the Isle of Man
And ever after was called Manx!

—Alice Jean Cleator, in Farm and Fireside.

MARRIED.

VARNER-SEARS.

At the home of the bride's mother in Concord, N. C., on Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, Miss Ruth Varner became the happy bride of Mr. John Sears, in the presence of quite a number of friends of both bride and groom. The ceremony was performed by the writer.

Miss Ruth is one of Concord's best young ladies; and a faithful member of our church. The groom is a member of the Baptist church. We bespeak for them a happy voyage down the stream of life.

A. Oscar Lindley.

Hight-Finch.

Henderson, Oct. 25th.—That was a most beautiful marriage celebrated when Mr. Charles M. Hight led to the hymeneal altar Miss Cassie E. Finch, the attractive daughter of Mr and Mrs. E. G. Finch. The parlor was beautifully decorated with ferns, palms and lovely cut flowers. The beauty was greatly enhanced as the light streamed through the pink festoons upon the electric chandelier.

The bride was gowned in a traveling suit of blue cloth and carried bride's roses. The wedding march was rendered by Miss Clara Finch, sister of the bride, the vows were spoken by Rev. R. M. Andrews.

Miss Finch is a beautiful and lovely young lady, a fine Christian girl, and the groom is a most splendid young man. He holds a responsible position with Burroughs-Alston Co. They have a host of friends who wish them a long, happy and useful married life. They left on the north-bound train for Washington, Baltimore and other northern cities; upon their return they will reside on Burwell Ave., where Mr. Hight, in his thoughtfulness has already prepared a home.

WHO KEEPS BACK REFORM?

Who is keeping temperance reform back? Not the abstainers, no! Not the victims of drink, I know some well; most of them would sign for prohibition to-morrow. Then who blocks the way?

As Robert Burns says in another connection—"with reverence be it spoken"—It's the moderate drinker.

I don't want to sit in judgment on my fellow men, but I have often sat in judgment on myself, and said— Your position is neither honest nor honorable. You see the evil strong drink is doing, and yet you patronize it, and your example may be leading many astray. Besides you are giving an air of respectability to a deadly evil which has none—a curse that has blighted humanity since the flood."

I have been challenged by University men, that temperance was a far higher platform than total abstinence. I never denied that. Indeed that was the reason why I left it; it was too high for me.

Some of my dearest friends got giddy up there and lost their balance, and some of them lost a great deal more than their balance, and fell.

Blondin was a great success on a high platform, and danced across Niagara on a tight-rope. How many of his audience would follow him with impunity? A dear old friend used to say, "Temperance in all things good, but total abstinence from that which has the appearance of evil."—Ex-Provost Eadie, J. P., in Everybody's Monthly.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

MAN FOR MAN.

This is God's plan for carrying on His work. So far as we can see, it is God's plan to convert the world through man's effort for men. He said: "As the Father has sent me, even so I send you."

There once was a man who came to Christ possessed of an unclean spirit. Christ cast out the evil spirit and restored him to his right mind. Then, in his gratitude, the man prayed that he might go with Christ. The wish seemed natural and right, but Christ said, "I have blessed thee, now be thou a blessing—go home to thy friends and tell them how great thing the Lord has done for thee." Two of John's disciples were pointed to Christ. They asked Him, "Master, where dwellest thou?" And He said, "Come and see." They spent the day with Him. But the blessing they received had all the force of a command "Now, John, I have blest thee; be thou a blessing. Go find your brother and bring him to me." Or turning to Andrew, "Andrew, you have been with me today; now that I have blessed thee, be thou a blessing to thy brother Simon."—Ex.

HEALTHGRAMS.

Dirty air is death.

Good air means good work.

Too much fresh air is just enough.

Fresh air is the best life insurance agency.

To prevent a cold, liberate the foul air in your room.

Taking in fresh air is better than putting on fresh airs.

Good ventilation is the first essential to the purity of the home.

Pure air makes pure blood, and pure blood makes you disease resisting.

There are thousands of cases of air starvation to every case of food starvation.

Bad air and a high temperature in the schoolroom are certain to produce a low grade of scholarship in the pupils.

Plenty of good fresh air will make the fires of life and health burn brightly; therefore, don't hibernate; ventilate!

Every life is a garden of flowers or weeds or mostly stones. Cultivate it. Cultivate love, truth, and all the virtues if you wish to be beautiful.

What ever the present moment may bring, your knowledge that it is His will, and that your future heavenly life will be influenced by it, will make all not only tolerable, but welcome to you, while no vicissitudes can affect you greatly, knowing that He who holds you in His powerful hand cannot change, but abideth forever.—Nicholas Grou.

NOTICE TO ALL DELEGATES.

Please send your name and post office address to Mr. A. J. Harris, Henderson, at once, if you intend to attend the Conference. The task of assigning homes is no light one laid upon busy men, so please respond at once. This is important and I hope the pastors will see that their delegates do this. Let all who expect entertainment, whether delegate or preacher or minister, please to send their names and post office address to the above name, and oblige.

R. M. Andrews.

—President Swain called for a little while to-day. He is on his way to Flat Rock Ct.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1911. NUMBER 50.

HENDERSON METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH, WHERE THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE WILL MEET NOV. 22.

NOTICE TO PASTORS AND DELEGATES.

Do not expect any reduced rates to Conference. The railroads require two hundred certificates, which is more than we would be able to produce.

Am glad attention has been called to Southern train leaving Durham at 1:55 P. M. for Henderson. This will be a convenient train for those leaving Greensboro at 9:40 A. M.

A few pastors have not yet reported delegate to Conference. We would be glad to have these so the roll may be completed. S. W. Taylor.

Nov. 6, 1911.

—The Scientific American asks but does not answer the following question: Why is the flesh of the watermelon red? Can you tell?

—The Western N. C. Conference, M. E. Church, South, is in session in Statesville, Bishop Hoss presiding.

REV. R. M. ANDREWS,
Pastor of Henderson M. P. Church.

—The so-called scientific theory that flowers are beautiful simply to serve a purpose in the life of the plant by attracting insects to scatter pollen is narrow. This may be true, but do they not also minister to the pleasure of men? What scientist has a right to say that this was not also in the mind of the Creator? Many of God's contrivances have a two-fold or a manifold purpose. The tongue, for instance, is the organ of taste, but it is also an organ of speech. Shall we say that this latter is only an accidental use, and was not thought of by the Creator?

—The game of politics abounds in surprises and reverses. New York legislature becomes Republican, also New Jersey's, Maryland elects a Republican governor, while Kentucky and Massachusetts elect Democratic governors.

—Miss Lena Campbell, trained nurse, returned to Charlotte yesterday, after a two weeks' visit with Guilford friends.

THE ATTRACTION OF THE CROSS.

By Rev. B. S. Crosby.

Text: John 12:32.

There can be no uplift to moral beings but by attraction. A child may be taught to obey by constraint, but you cannot trust him. It is a happy day for the parents when obedience flows from a consenting will. Then, and not till then, can you risk him away from parental authority. And this spring of action must be found in human minds, or the atonement is unavailing and Christ hath died in vain. And there can be no elevation for moral being whom Jesus died to draw but by the power of attraction.

Jesus ate with, and dressed like the peasantry of Judea and Galilee, and the common people heard Him gladly.

But in the work of attracting unto himself the world, it was necessary to find one common ground of sympathy, possessed by all everywhere for all time. Jesus struck that one only universal and responsive note when he said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The reason why everyone is not awakened and inspired toward conversion, is because we fail to present Jesus in this altogether lovely character. No nation with a literature has been found whose hearers do not possess, in some degree, this characteristic of self abnegation. While the world lives, its poets will not cease to sing into sympathetic ears the story of "Leonidas," and his three hundred at the pass of Thermopylae and Horatius at the bridge.

The permanency of attraction depends upon the extensiveness of the plan, and worthiness of the aim. I mean that it must be comprehensive, including all the instinctive conditions to be universal and perpetual in its effect. There is not attraction in failure. There must be absolute courage. But many a forgotten hero has possessed and displayed this alone. It must have the marks of absolute self-abnegation, of a purpose as comprehensive as the woes of the race, the success of which admits of a demanstration. And there are in every human soul, mortices which can only be fitted with these tenons, a hunger which this supply can alone satisfy.

Many events excite a passing interest, int rest which soon ceases to effect us. A remarkable touch-down in foot ball, that brings victory to a team by the suffering of a player, excites applause and deepens temporarily the respect felt for the victim who sacrificed himself for his team. But the effect wears away from the mind as the days go by. The plan was not large enough, the benefit was not great enough and comprehensive to be universal and eternal in its influence.

Jesus furnishes the highest attraction in the universe because of the noble purpose and the complete success, and the perfection of his self-abenegation. There was nothing in it for him, "God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. He draws all men to Him by His "Attracting Power," because it appeals to a common and noble instinct in humanity, and because of the adequacy of the purpose for which he was lifted, because of the practicability of salvation Little by little, yet more and more, as they comprehended Him in His sacrifice, do the nations become assimilated unto Him. Think of "Pasteur" running his virus of hydrophobia through the blood of four hundred rabbits until the disease, attenuated, ceases to be poison, and becomes an antidote for the very disease itself.

Think of every generation attracted by "His" sacrifice to become assimilated to the same spirit, and attracted as He attracted upon the basis of this common ground. Think of Dr. Livingston staying in the midst of Africa and its dark awful life, killing no one, hurting no one, helping every one, sacrificing for every one, until the wild tribes of the dark continent, and the still more brutal Mohammedans came to know the self-abnegation of the man. And converts will be easier made to Christianity for the next thousand years because of the life of Livingston lived out among them. We lift when we are uplifted. We draw when drawn to the example of Christ.

The bar of steel has no drawing toward the poles, and no affiinity for other products of iron ore. But take a modern mallet and pound on the end of the bar, and lo, it is transformed into a magnet forever seeking to fly to the poles and to draw unto itself every particle of iron in the universe. The blows of the Cross upon the body of Jesus have put every mind in the universe that understands him, en rapport with him. Every mind that by knowledge comes within His magnetic influence is drawn toward Him.

I want to feel the drawing of Jesus until perfectly assimilated to His Holy character. I remember, when a boy, rubbing the blade of my unmagnetized knife upon a bit of magnetic iron. And then I could go around and lift nails, and particles of iron, by the magnetism of my own blade. Let us so touch Jesus that something of his own drawing power shall be be communicated unto us, until others shall be lifted through the imparted Christly power we possess.

THE CHRISTIAN MERCHANT.

Many people sneer at the idea that a man can be a Christian and at the same time be a thoroughly successful merchant. It is assumed that religion and business do not work well together. Never was there a greater fallacy. The truth is, the man who is a genuine Christian, and therefore is honest and thoroughly truthful, will have God with him in his business, and this means the best kind of prosperity. A Christian merchant may not succeed in becoming rich in money, but he does grow rich in the highest esteem of all who have dealings with him, and is wealthy in a reputation which extends far beyond his patronizing territory. He is rich in character and this is the best kind of riches. The man who supposes that he can be dishonest in business, and at the same time have the confidence and good regard of those who really know him, is a fool. What he gains by dishonesty will never remain a permanent possession. Such a man, when he meets any serious loss, has no sympathizers, even among other dishonest people. They feel that he is merely reaping what he deserves.

The brilliant editor of a religious paper says: "The earnest and faithful Christian merchant would no more think of permitting deception in regard to the goods sent out from his store or warehouse than he would think of betraying the Master he professes to serve. The Golden Rule would be the guiding principle in all his business conduct. He would himself suffer loss rather than that a customer should, in any respect, be defrauded in a purchase to the value of a single penny."

That is a true description of a true Christian merchant. Even unscrupulous people rather deal with such a man than to trade with a trickster. One of the most contemptible things that one can be guilty of is professing to be a Christian, and then in his business cheat his customers. Such ones should never be patronized. C. H. Wetherbe.

CHRISTIANITY.

Christianity is an every-day religion. Christian's mind, and distinctly illustrated in his life. If it takes a thorough grip on his soul, it will be his every-day concern to have it sway his every thought and word and deed. These sentences from the Christian Guardian are well put and to the point: "Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and consolations, its guidance and its inspiration are for the commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has every day religion in good. wholesome quantity can easily afford to be without a good many other things."—Christian Intelligencer.

EVERY SECRET THING.

(God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Eccl. 12:14. Golden Text for Sunday, November 12).

Belshazzar went too far. His indulgence swept him out beyond his depths He became as a ship without a rudder, on a tempestuous sea. He was a migty king and so could, without impunity, bid defiance to his fellowman. But he went beyond this. He bade defiance to Almighty God. And no man can do that with impunity. Now this is the sin and the curse of indulgence, of excess, of intemperance. It sweeps a man out beyond his moorings. It gets him beyond his depths. It takes away his anchorage and, ere he is aware, removes from his all safety and security.

No man expects to come to excess and indulgence. Every man who sins expects to be and remain, and in his own judgment, is moderate. But there is another judgment than his own in the matter, and he has not reckoned with that judgment. In ariably the man who sins thinks he sins some secretly, and that these secret sins are covered and will not count. But they do count. Every sin counts against a man, whether the sin be open or secret.

The great Jefferson in his representation of Rip Vanwinkle, frequently "swore off" from drinking. In a few days "a friend" would come along and offer Rip a drink. "I have swore off," would be the invariable reply, "but I will drink with you and not let it count." Rip may not have counted it, but it counted all the same against Rip, and always to his undoing. The sin we don't count is the one that works our ruin. The indulgence we cover up is the one that ultimately uncovers us. We may think to conceal our sins, but our sins don't conceal us; they fling us into the open and flaunt us there.

Neither the monarch upon his throne, nor the peasant in his cottage can sin and secretly conceal his sin. The eye of God never sleeps, the mind of God never slumbers. God will bring every secret thing into judgment. God has spoken it, and it will be so to the end.

—From The Christian Sun.

TO A MAPLE LEAF IN AUTUMN.

("We all do fade as a leaf.")

How like to Man art thou!
Canst thou thy change forsee—
What leaf upon the bough,
What bough upon the tree?

It was but yestere'en
Thou wert a loyal part
Of Summer's solid green
That stirred the grateful heart.

But Night upon thee blew
With pale and frosty breath,
And left thy natural hue
Aflame in glorious death.

Or was there from thy birth
An ichor in thy blood,
Transmuting the dull earth
To Autumn's golden flood?

Thy going is not grief:
Thy splendor shall but make
Soil for another leaf
That follows in thy wake.

I in my Autumn hour
Do envy thee in thine:
Thy joy-diffusing power,
The year's consummate wine.

The light of yonder tree
My keenest hurt doth salve;
Better the gold we see
Than all the gold we have.

When my green strength be stayed,
And frost shall summon me,
If like a leaf I fade,
O let me fade like thee!

—R. U. Johnson, in the Outlook.

Gifts.

Give! Though thy gifts be small,
Still be a giver;
Out of the little founts
Proceeds the river;
Out of the river's gifts
Gulfs soon will be
Pouring their waters out,
Making a sea.

Out of the sea again,
Heaven draws its showers,
And to the fount imparts
All its new powers.
Thus in a cycle borne
Gifts roll around.
And in the blessing given
Blessing is found.

—Selected.

"I sent my soul through the invisible,
Some problems of future life to spell,
And by and by my soul returned to me,
And answered, I myself am heaven and hell."

THE BEAUTY OF CHARACTER.

Spiritual beauty comes from the heart. A character may be strong, and even noble and grand, when its chief element is duty, the loyalty of the will to conscience, but in order that we may be beautiful, it must have both freedom and feeling; it must have sympathy and spontaneousness. The virtue of Jesus was always beautiful. It was not hard for Him to be good, and His goodness was never hard. His truth, His purity, His fortitude, His justice, were all filled with love. His royalty was humility. His moral strength was also human tenderness. He did not crush the bruised reed. His supreme goodness was ideal loveliness.

To be clothed upon with His beauty is greatly to be desired. Christians should not be content to be unlovely. No pruning away of infirmities can make us spiritually beautiful. No moral gymnastics can make our goodness graceful. The essential thing is that the loveliness of Christ be created within us by His Spirit; then something of His beauty will appear in our lives. The raiment of holiness is like that of flowers. In order to it being put on, it must be within. Then it develops into manifestation. Sanctimoniousness is a very crude counterfeit of spiritual beauty. No formal obedience can copy its grace. No moral cosmetics can confer its charm. It is the manifestation of abundant spiritual health. It is the fruit of the Spirit. "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." It is the result of being "rooted and grounded in love," of being "filled with all the fullness of God."—Northwestern Christian Advocate

Radiant Christians.

Some faces are like the midnight. Clouds of scorn, hate and despair overhang them. They are darkened by an evil heart. Other faces are radiant with peace, joy and hope. The Bible speaks of the light of God's countenance. The same light is seen also in the countenance of His people. A pure heart makes a shining face, a cheerful voice, and a radiant life. Such people are welcome in the church, in the home and in every place. They bring comfort, envouragement and good cheer. They scatter sunshine everywhere. "Let your face be like the morning."—Ex.

It is a fashion of these days to live in a hurry. So many things claim a share of our time. But there are a few things which hurry should not overlook—politeness, kindness, mercy, accuracy, reverence. Without these hurry may travel far and fast, yet gain no worthy goal.—Selected.

OUR MINISTERIAL ROLL.

Rev. T. M. Johnson sends the following roll of ministers and preachers of our Conference, which he expects to offer for publication in the Conference Journal. He asks for corrections or for fuller information from those who know. It is an interesting list and Bro. Johnson has done a good service in getting the facts together.

Joined Conference	Name	Date of Death.
1828	James Hunter	1831
1828	William Price	July 7, 1832
1828	Albritton Jones	January 23, 1845
1828	Eli B. Whitaker	Not given
1828	Asa Steeley	Not given
1828	Thomas Steeley	Not given
1828	William Bellamy	1846
1828	William W. Hill	Not given
1829	Swain Swift	1831
1829	Henry Bradford	1833
1829	Alexander Albright,	Aug. 18, '43
1829	Richard Davidson	July 28, 1845
1829	Joshua Swift	Not given
1829	John Coe	September 13, 1852
1829	Isaac Coe	Not given
1829	Jesse H. Cobb	Not given
1829	Caswell Drake	April 16, 1861
1829	Alson Gray	Sep. 25, 1880
1831	John Moore	Jan. 20, 1840
1831	William Blair	Not given
1832	James Hunt	Oct. 1, 1848
1832	Travis Jones	Not given
1832	Thomas Y. Cook	Not given
1832	Chestine Allen	Not given
1833	Samuel J. Harris	1839
1833	John F. Speight,	June 28, 1860
1833	Alexander Robbins	November, 1863
1833	W. H. Wills	June 22, 1889
1835	Joseph Holmes	Not given
1836	H. A. Buraon	Not given
1837	Thomas L. Carter	Not given
1840	Arrington Gray	September, 1846
1840	James Deans	Sep. 13, 1887
1842	John Lambeth	1846
1842	Ira E. Norman	1857
1842	Robert R. Prather	1881
1843	John Hinshaw	1868
1843	John Paris	October 6, 1883
1843	C. F. Harris	Jan. 6, 1896
1844	B. L. Hoskins	1860
1845	A. C. Harris	Sep. 18, 1889
1846	J. L. Michaux	July 6, 1898
1848	W. J. Ogburn	November 23, 1860
1849	A. W. Lineberry	Feb. 14, 1899
1851	Andrew Pickens	Mar. 9, 1850
1852	Joseph Causey	1880
1852	R. R. Michaux,	Nov. 20, 1899
1852	J. W. Heath	Living
1853	John Gordon	Aug. 23, 1862
1857	John C. Forbis	Oct. 20, 1862
1858	R. W. Pegram	1855
1858	R. H. Wills	November 5, 1891
1859	J. C. Deans	June 9, 1890
1860	J. R. Ball	June 14, 1893
1861	W. C. Kennett	Living
1862	W. McB. Roberts	1867
1864	N. R. Fail	1866
1864	C. A. Pickens	March 3, 1908
1864	H. W. Peebles,	November, 24, 1892
1865	John L. Swain	1880
1865	J. S. Dunn	August, 1908
1866	A. U. Laughlin,	Aug. 29, 1886
1866	George E. Hunt	Living.
1867	T. J. Ogburn	Living
1868	W. C. Hammer	Sep. 6, 1909
1869	Henry Lewallen
1870	Jordan Rominger	Oct. 18, 1872
1871	D. A. Highfill	Living
1872	W. G. Hamilton
1873	John G. Whitfield,	Aug. 28, 1879
1873	T. T. Ferree	March 20, 1904
1874	W. W. Amick	Jan. 23, 1907
1876	R. R. Hanner	Oct. 23, 1899
1877	S. Simpson	Living
1878	T. F. McCulloch	Living
1878	G. W. Bowman	Aug. 3, 1908
1879	D. A. Fishel	Living
1879	I. I. York	Living
1879	J. H. Totten	Aug. 23, 1905
1879	W. P. Martin	Living
1879	J. M. Wood	1881
1880	J. E. Hartsell	Living
1882	John N. Garrett	Living
1883	John N. Garrett	g
1883	W. F. Kennett	Living
1883	J. H. Moton	Living
1883	W. F. McDowell	Living
1883	William M. Pike	Living
1883	W. L. Harris	1911
1884	W. E. Swain	Living
1885	H. D. Garmon	Living
1885	W. T. Totten	Living
1885	J. F. Dosier	Living
1885	E. A. Plyler	Living
1886	W. A. Bunch	Aug. 27, 1907
1887	C. L. Whitaker	Living
1887	S. A. Cecil
1887	C. A. Cecil	Living
1889	W. R. Lowdermilk	Living
1889	J. H. Stowe	Living
1889	W. C. Lewis	1894
1889	A. L. Hunter	Living
1890	G. F. Millaway	Living
1890	C. E. M. Raper	Living
1890	W. F. Ashburn	Living
1891	W. C. Lassiter	Living
1891	W. F. Ohrum	Oct. 19, 1892
1891	J. D. Williams	Living
1891	C. C. Stuart	November 26, 1892
1892	J. R. Hutton	Living
1892	W. D. Fogleman	Living
1892	C. H. Whitaker	Living
1892	J. L. Giles	Living
1893	H. S. B. Thompson	Living
1893	D. A. Braswell	Living
1893	J. R. Walton
1893	J. S. Williams	Living
1893	T. M. Johnson	Living
1894	J. F. McCulloch	Living
1895	William Porter	Living
1895	G. H. Austin	Living
1896	R. M. Andrews	Living
1896	N. G. Bethea	Living
1896	E. G. Lowdermilk	Living
1897	J. H. Bowman	Living
1897	C. E. Forlines	Living
1898	H. L. Powell	Living
1900	J. H. Gilbreath (Restored)
1901	G. L. Reynolds	Living
1901	J. H. Turner	1911
1901	Edward Suits	Living
1901	A. G. Dixon	Living
1901	G. W. Holmes	Living
1902	J. A. Burgess	Living
1902	T. C. Amick	Living
1902	J. A. Ledbetter	Living
1903	C. J. Edwards	Living
1903	J. W. Self	Living
1904	W. D. Reed	Living
1905	H. W. Braswell	Living
1905	T. H. Matthews	Living
1905	J. E. McSwain	Living
1905	T. A. Plyler	Living
1906	A. O. Lindley	Living
1906	S. W. Taylor	Living
1906	G. L. Curry	Living
1906	W. A. Lamar	Living
1906	J. H. Abernathy	Living
1907	J. W. Hulin	Living
1908	A. H. Bryans	Living
1908	R. C. Stubbins	Living
1908	Homer Casto	Living
1908	T. A. Williams	Living
1908	O. D. Stacey	Living
1909	L. H. Hatley	Living
1909	Thomas E. Davis	Living
1910	D. R. Williams	Living
1910	Joel Trogdon	Living
1910	D. M. Loy	Living
1910	Robert L. Troxler	Living
1910	W. R. Blackwelder	Living
1910	J. B. Bivens	Living

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

I Chronicles, chapters 22-29.

—Mme. Curie has been awarded the Nobel prize for work in chemistry.

—The war in China is assuming dreadful proportions. It is the result of an effort of years, and will probably terminate in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty and perhaps in the establishment of a republic.

—Rev. H. L. Powell was here yesterday having Dr. Hartsell to do some dental work. He says he recently split a tooth wide open on a piece of chicken. It must either have been a very tender tooth or a very tough chicken.

—Bro. J. G. Rogers, of Burlington, was on our streets yesterday.

FRONM A GOOD LADY.

We copy the following verses from the Methodist Protestant. They forcibly recall to the minds of all thinking men and women how they have in their past lives so cruelly and thoughtlessly sinned against their fellow creatures. We hope the Editor will reproduce this most impressive warning and that young people who look at this true picture of the awakened soul may take earnest heed to all they do, remembering always that "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me."

I am soul sore and bended and weary,
And my being is ancient and gray,
And the heart in my bosom is dreary,
And I long to be up and away.
I want to respend what I've squandered,
I seek but one chance to repay,
For last night my soul waked and wandered,
O'er the road to the gone yesterday.
Oh, the wrongs that can never be righted,
And the wounds that can never be healed;
The darkness that could have been lighted,
The truths that too late were revealed.
The burdens readily shifted,
And the thorns I should have withdrawn,
The anguish that might have been lifted
From a heart that was thoughlessly torn,
The clean things my foolish feet muddled,
The innocent ones I judged wrong,
The home that with sorrow I flooded,
The deaf ear I turned to life's song,
The struggle so easily aided,
The reckless one I might have checked,
The heartlessness that I paraded,
The dear ones I hurt with neglect.
The flower I robbed of its beauty,
And tossed in a day to the slime,
The hour I faltered in duty,
The whim whose indulgence was crime.
Oh God! though I face Thee repentant,
I ask not Thy mercy as yet,
I seek not to find Thee relentant,
Until the tomorrow is met.
I thank thee that thou hast unshuttered
The blindness that darkened my soul;
My prayer to thee now is not uttered
In hope to defeat conscience's toll.
I ask Thee to see me in sorrow,
And grant me the prayer that I pray
That I may make right on the morrow
The wrongs that I wrought yesterday.

"Whoever with an earnest soul,
Strives for some end from this low world afar,
Still upward travels though he miss the goal,
And strays—but toward a star."

THE MOTHER'S OPPORTUNITY.

God and mother have the children first. Before the world has a chance to mar the purity and innocence of the little one in the cradle, the mother may lead the child by the hand straight to the feet of the Master. The earliest impressions are indelible and in the first three years of life a child receives and retains them with amazing quickness. Before children are old enough to go to Sunday School, the mother at home may teach them to pray, tell them about the Saviour and make them familiar with the dear stories of the Bible. Here too, the father may lend assistance. A woman who is herself a grandmother recalls with vivid delight the days when she sat as a small child on her father's knee with his arm around her, while in the gathering twilight of a Sunday evening he told her about Jacob and the visin of angels, about Joseph sold into Egypt, about Samuel,Elijah, David and Daniel, so that the heroes of Bible history were familiar figures to her before she ever took her seat in a Sunday School class. Those who are afraid to tell children that sweet story of old because they fear the immature mind will not understand it, have not themselves received the Saviour into their hearts with the simplicity of childhood.

LABOR UNIONS APPROVE RED CROSS SEAL.

Workingmen in Fight Against Tuberculosis, Endorse Sale of Holiday Stickers.

Direct approval of the campaign for the sale of Red Cross Seals has been given by the American Federation of Labor, according to an announcement made today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

At the last annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, a resolution was adopted calling on all the members of the Federation to further the sale as much as possible. The resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has in every possible way aided the movement for the study and prevention of tuberculosis throughout the United States and Canada, and

"Whereas, The American National Red Cross has been in the past and is now making an especial effort, through the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals, to secure funds to carry on the war against tuberculosis, and by means of the funds raised in this manner has been able to do much effective work in this direction, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the American Federation of labor give its endorsement to the movement of the American National Red Cross, and encourage its members to further in every reasonable way the sale of these seals in their respective communities."

There are now four special methods by which consumptive workingmen in the United States are being cared for. In such cities as Albany, Elmira and Binghampton, N. Y., the unions support a separate pavilion or hospital. In cities like Hartford, New Britain and South Manchester, Conn., the workmen contribute towards the maintenance of a fund for the care of consumptives. The employees also contribute to these funds. There are also two national sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis owned and operated by labor unions; one by the International Typographical Union, and the other by the Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. In Massachusetts, Illinois, and elsewhere, large corporations and manufacturers have agreed voluntarily to care for all their consumptive employees for a limited length of time.

"But as long as consumption kills one in every three workingmen between the ages of fifteen and forty-five," says The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, "more education, better shop and home conditions, and more hospitals needed. Red Cross Seals provide these things."

BANISTER HILL.

Up Banister Hill did you ever go?
Sometimes I go fast, sometimes I go slow,
But whether I like it or not each night
I have surely to go, at candle light,
Up Banister Hill.

At the top stands nurse with impatient face,
She always waits in the very same place,
And never a chance she gives me to look
At the long, long way my little feet took
Up Banister Hill.

Oh, how can a little boy like to go
Up Banister Hill? But it's fine, I know,
When morning comes, and I'm washed and dressed,
To play I'm on horseback and riding my best
Down Banister Hill!

I stand by the side of my shining horse,
Take one look ahead at the long straight course—
And then up I jump! I slip and I slide
And off like a flash of lightning I glide
Down Banister Hill!

—Lilla Thomas Elder, in Children's Magazine.

From Pastors and People.

High Point.

Our revival services lasted just eleven days. Rev. S. W. Taylor was with us and did all the preaching, and he did it well, as was shown by the large congregations that came every evening up to the very last service. Even the day services were well attended, and we believe we have as busy a people as can be found anywhere. People of all denominations in High Point speak well of Bro. Taylor's preaching and want him to come again.

The meeting was a great success. There were about 28 conversions and reclamations, and 22 accessions to the church up to date. Four or five others ought to join, and, we hope, will join soon. The meeting also proved a wonderful uplift to our church members, both old and young.

If I know anything about the spiritual condition of a church, this church is in good condition. Not perfect by any means, but it is pressing forward in the Master's service.

During the last three years there have been 110 received into this church. Five certificates have been granted, five have died, and eleven whom we could not locate have been dropped, making a loss of 21 during the three years. That makes a total increase for the three years of 89. Much more ought to have been done, but we praise God for the privilege of being His agents in the accomplishment of this much. It has all been brought about under the blessings of God because the church had a mind to work.

In His name,

A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C., Nov. 7th, 1911.

Stanly Circuit.

Some things that have been done since I was assigned to this work near three years ago.

The parsonage has been recovered. A partition has been run making what has been both kitchen and dining room separate. The front room and the dining room have each been painted on the inside. A well has been drilled and a pump put in. A wood and wash house has been arranged. A poultry lot has been enclosed. A church has been built in Albemarle worth $1,500. Love's Grove and Mill Grove churches have been recovered. There have been 174 conversions, and 100 accessions. There have been twenty infant baptisms.

Many thanks to all the good people of this circuit who have co-operated with me and made it possible to accomplish these things. E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

Lincoln Circuit.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Hebron the 4th. The sisters provided a dinner that could have been called a royal banquet. There was a good attendance; all the churches were represented. The conference was pleasant and harmonious. It voted to increase the pastor's salary next year $100.00.

T. F. McCulloch.

Piney Grove, Chatham Ct.

Since my last report, our good pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, has been perfectly restored to his usual health, after an illness of several weeks and has filled his two last appointments at Piney Grove, the first Sunday in October and the first Sunday in November. Words are inadequate to express how glad we are to have him back and to see him looking so unusually well. The congregation last Sunday was no so large, as the weather was so unfavorable, though that did not hinder Bro. Bowman from preaching a very interest-sermon from the 126th Psalm and the 6th verse, after which we had the administration of the Lord's supper.

Mrs. Bowman accompanied her husband the first Sunday in October. We were pleased to have her come. Now, we are hoping and trusting that our good delegate, Mr. Matthews, and the Conference will see fit to send Bro. Bowman back to us another year and will say that I do not believe Bro. Bowman will seriously object to coming. I believe much good has been accomplished this year through Mr. Bowman and am sure that the future has a great work in store for us all.

The general interest has all been raised at our church. The pastor's salary is some behind, but will all be paid by Conference. We still run our Sunday school, though the attendance is rather small since the weather is somewhat cooler. I close with much love and best wishes to the Herald readers..

Mrs. J. A. Cooper, Rep.

Nov. 7, 1911.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Because of bad weath, the attendance was not so good Sunday last. Though an interesting number.

The decision was, that a Christmas tree service be had. Of course this filled the children with glee, and older people too.

Wednesday evening, November 1st, found gratification when Miss Myrtle Grissom entertained a number of good friends at her home. All were invited into the parlor, which was beautifully decorated with ferns and cut flowers. Games were played to match the occasion. At nine, luncheon was served in the parlor, and at nine-thirty, fruits. At ten-thirty the number parted, expressing their appreciaton to Mr. and Mrs. Grissom and Miss Myrtle.

Polk Garrett.

Nov. 7, 1911.

Mt. Pleasant, Uwharrie Ct.

We have all our debts paid up, except a little to Bro. Trogdon. I hope all the churches will pay up in full. Brother Trogdon has served us faithfully this year in the ministry and he has been first in many respects; the first preacher that ever rode our circuit that drove a mule, owned 200 acres of land, and raised 150 bushels of wheat, good crop of corn for the season. He stands before his people as our Saviour did before Pilate—without fault. In my humble opinion there are not many greater than Joel B. Trogdon. May the sunshine of heaven rest in his home and on his pathway till he shall reach the golden shore. Our Sunday school has run down in number on account of the singing, but we are not discouraged. I truly hope Brother Trogdon will be sent back another year.

G. F. Cashatt.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

First Sunday of October was our "Children's Day." Had all day service. Bro. Taylor preached in the afternoon. Collection for Foreign Missions, about eight dollars.

Quarterly conference met in Littleton M. P. church, Saturday. They declare they want Brother Taylor returned to this work. We are much behind on salary and general interests, but of course, will hustle and get it before Conference. Some of Brother Taylor's members are hoping to attend Annual Conference as it is near this time. Before service yesterday a re-election of officers was held. The old board of trustees, stewards, and class leader were elected again. After service a committee was appointed to assist Bro. Taylor in revising class book.

Miss Emma Pitman and brother, Allen, of Whitakers, were guests of Miss Julia Carter last Saturday and Sunday. Were glad to have them worship with us yesterday.

Mr. William Hayes, of Newport News, and Miss Marjorie Glasgow, near here, were married lastThursday in Littleton, Rev. Francis Joyner officiating. Bro. Taylor being absent. More wedding bells may ring soon. Who knows?

We are having Miss Mabel Clyde, of Shelby, who is teaching school near here, to help us in Sunday school. We are going to spend some time each Sunday after school practicing new hymns . She seems so glad to help us. "Volunteer workers are choice workers; the heart is engaged." Mis Clyde is one of that kind. Fannie Barnes, Reporter.

November 6, 1911.

Pageland, S. C.

Dear Brother Swain:

We held our fourth quarterly conference Saturday, November 4th. For the first time in four years all the churches were represented. The business was all done in a spirit of love. Two marked features characteristic of development was the salary is about paid; 2nd, the salary for 1912 was raised so as to give the pastor a living salary. I never witnessed such a marked improvement along all lines. A high complement was shown the humble pastor in that all the churches except one voted for his return. Though our President has not visited us his salary will be paid in full. With one year's prosperity like this, Monroe will rank with our best circuits. The parsonage debt is the only trouble and but for bad crops that could have been met.

As we shall meet in Conference may God's richest blessing be upon us and may the Holy Spirit guide us in every act.

W. P. Martin.

Pilot Church.

Here I come again, as through the goodness and mercies of God, I am not yet dead, neither asleep.

Our prayer meeting that we organized some little time ago is doing very well so far. Most that have joined are young people, but it seems that every service some of them take more interest.

Our pastor, Bro. A. L. Hunter, filled his last appointment here yesterday till after Conference. He certainly preached a fine sermon to a small congregation, it being an unfavorable day for services. We certainly hope he will come back another year, as it seems the longer he stays the better we like him, and the better he can preach.

We re-elected for another year the same "class leader," same "board of stewards," same "trustees," also the same reporter for the Herald, as follows:

Class leader, Bro. J. S. Dezarn; Board of stewards, Bro. Lustro Whitaker, Sammie Marion, Jr., Floyd Lawson, Manford Dezarn, Oscar Fowler, and Solomon Powell. Trustees, Bro. J. F. Whitaker, J. S. Dezarn, A. G. Powell, and S. H. Marion.

On Sunday morning, November 5, 1911, at 5 o'clock, the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Watson, and took from them their darling little girl, Beulah Lillian. She died from that dreadful disease, diphtheria. She was sick only a short time. All that loving hands and skilled physician could do was done to prolong her life, but of no avail, for God needed her to complete His angel band, and called her home. Her remains were laid to rest in the graveyard at Pilot church. Her parents, two little sisters, and one little brother, a host of friends and relatives mourn their loss. Little Beulah was a sweet and affectionate child and will be greatly missed in the home circle. We know it was hard to give her up, but the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. She was only a flower sent to bud on earth and to bloom in heaven. The home is sad without her, but since she could no longer stay to cheer us with her love, we hope to meet her when we are done serving our time here on earth.

Etta Whitaker, Rep.

Unionville

Our church at Mount Moriah has been benefited very much by the preaching of Bro. Eli H. Mullis.

On his last regular time for service at our church we held a business meeting and elected Lonnie Braswell as delegate to the Annual Conference and John F. Little, alternate. Bro. Mullis' last round will embrace the second Sunday in November. Our fourth business meeting will be in this round. We hope to come up with a very good salary for brother Mullis.

I love to read the Herald.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers, Yours in Christ,

John F. Little.

Unionville, N. C.

Lineberry Church, Davidson Ct.

Our protracted meeting embraced the fifth Sunday in October. Bro. Hulin, the pastor, had Bro Braswell of Denton charge to do the preaching; he held the congregations as spell-bound. The meeting was a success, several conversions, 14 joined the church. A general revival of the Christians. The fourth Quarterly Conference convened last Saturday. The pastor's salary paid, or vouched for. Pastor reports the work in harmony with pastor and each other so far as he could tell. All the churches represented. . Bro. Hulin is first choice for another year. The delegate was so instructed.

N. F. Morgan.

Saxapahaw, Saxapahaw Ct.

Dear Editor:

Our special meeting began the second Sunday evening, and continued until the following Sunday. Bro. Curry of Graham preached for us on Tuesday evening from the text, "What so ever he saith unto you, do it." (John 2:5), and gave us an excellent sermon. With this exception, Brother Holmes, our pastor, did the rest of the preaching until Sunday evening, when Brother Vick of the M. E. Church, preached for us. Both did good preaching, and we had a good meeting—one long to be remembered.

The graded school opened the 16th with about a hundred on roll. Bro. Holmes has charge of the school, with Misses Annie Morrow and Lillian Lindley as assistants.

With best wishes for the Herald and its readers. C. C. Lindley.

—Brother and Sister Martin Furr, who are now making their home at Matthews, are sick. Both are good, faithful members of Stanly Circuit. May the Lord greatly bless and comfort them, and if it be His will, early restore them to their former health. Pastor.

— W.J. Teague, daughter, and little grandson were recent visitors to our city. They came from Asheboro in their auto.

—It has been officially announced that prohibition won in Maine by a majority of a few hundred. The Lord can save by many or by few.

—Now we are counting what we have done during the year, looking back over the past and reviewing our year's work. How about the figures? Are they greater or smaller? If your church has made progress during the year, it should be encouraging for you to set your sails for larger ports than ever before. If your church has failed to reach last year's figures, your ambition should be to make up this deficiency and broaden out into fields of service and prosperity for His kingdom. What is the object of your church for the coming year?

—Rev. J. F. Morgan preached the annual sermon of The Singer's Convention of Guilford, Alamance and Randolph Counties at Pleasant Garden last Sunday.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
We cannot supply back numbers.
Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

"GOD'S OATH"—A NEW PREMILLENNIAL BOOK.

It is amazing how much interest has been awakened by the question of the time of Christ's second coming. It has divided Christians into two great schools known as premillenarians and postmillenarians. The controversy between them began in the early centuries of the Christian era and has perhaps never entirely ceased to agitate the minds of men. Today, while perhaps postmillenarians outnumber premillenarians, the latter are active in propagating their belief. Moody was a premillenirian and his followers are active in teaching what he taught regarding Christ's second coming.

The premillenarians have the advantage in the greater definiteness of their conceptions, although they are not agreed among themselves on all points. Their teachings bring an imposing appeal to imagination, and therefore are better adapted to affect the popular mind. But the first question regarding any doctrine should be—not is it teachable, not will it strike the popular imagination with great force, but is it true?

The premillenarians appear to us to be so strongly possessed with the one idea that they see it cropping out in the Scriptures where others not similarly possessed can see no indication of it.

I have before me a new book published by the George H. Doran Company, of New York, and written by Dr. Fred C. Ottman, entitled "God's Oath: A Study of an Unfulfilled Promise of God," in which the author makes God's promise to David—"Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever," (2 Sam. 7: 16)—the foundation of a premillennial exposition.

All readers of the Bible we presume would agree that God's oath to David was a propheey of the reign of Christ, who after the flesh was descended from David. But Dr. Ottman insists that the prophecy is to be interpreted literally, and that Christ is to come and set up a physical throne and reign visibly over the Jews to be gathered together in the land promised to the children of Abraham.

Dr. Ottman has written an intensely interesting book. We doubt whether premillenarianism has ever had a stronger presentation. His school of interpreters may be right; but we are not convinced that they are. We feel that God's prophecies mean larger things for the world than they find in them. The manner of Christ's first coming was misconceived by those who had the prophecies, and it is possible for us to misconceive the manner of Christ's second coming.

A matter that God has left in such obscurity does not seem to have the practical importance given to it. The important fact is that He will come and the Scriptures clearly teach that He will come. The premillenarians are helping to keep the fact of His coming before the church, even if they should be wrong as to the form of His Kingdom.

A PREACHER'S PREDICAMENT.

One cold Sunday morning in January, Rev. Samuel Brown was to preach at Mt. Gerizim Church. He lived four miles away and traveled in a buggy. This morning the family had not risen early, breakfast was late, and Mr. Brown was much hurried. But he at last had everything in readiness, and he had only to go to the barn and harness Joe, his good horse, for the journey. According to his usual custom, he laid off his clerical coat and put on his barn coat for the service as hostler. When he had Joe and the buggy properly connected, he returned to the house for his overcoat. In his haste, he forgot that he had on his barn coat, and Mrs. Brown, happening to be out of the room, did not observe the fact until he had left the house. She then saw his pulpit coat, realized what he had done, and snatching the coat hurried out, hoping to stop him. But he was just turning the corner and was too far away to hear her voice. With his overcoat closely buttoned, he rode on all unconscious of any error in dress. In fact, he felt that he was faultlessly attired, as he always wished to be. If Mr. Brown had any faults, his principal one was an excessive devotion to the matter of personal appearance. He couldn't bear the thought of trousers baggy at the knees or shoes run down at the heels.

He found a good congregation awaiting him, and as it was time for preaching, he went at once to the pulpit. Realizing that he was a few minutes late, he quickly removed his overcoat, when he was surprised to hear a titter run through the congregation. He stood before them in a coat tattered and torn, elbow linings peering out, with large rents in the shoulder seams, and a huge slice of one skirt missing.

But Mr. Brown was ready witted, and he said: "The Bible says there is a time to laugh, and that time is now.". While the congregation was indulging in a hearty laugh, he slipped off the old coat and put his overcoat on; and then he proceeded with the service as if nothing had happened.

YOUR PLACE IN THE RANKS.

No matter what the weakness of the Christian Church, you cannot afford to die without having joined the ranks of theweakest disciples who are fighting Christ's battle. It is not enough for you to say that you will fight a guerrilla warfare. It is an unworthy thing for you to add: "I sympathize with his church and his cause." Can you afford not to be found with the old guard? If you fight none of Christ's battles, if you have never marched under his leadership, if you have never suffered unto blood, striving against sin, the time will come when you will go up and down the streets of a lost universe, advertising that you will give everything you have save life itself, if only you can find some one who will say that some time, some where, under cover of night, you did make a confession of your faith in God and his loving providence and in Christ your Saviour. And when that hour comes, and the Great Assize draws nigh, and the heroes and the martyrs, the patriots and the poets, and your own fathers and mothers are assembled, and the all-searching eyes of God and Conscience pass in review the events of your career, the very thought that you did not join Christ's Old Guard, and lead his hosts, and die at the front of the ranks will bring to you such immeasurable shame that you will call on the rocks to fall upon you, to conceal your loss and humiliation.—Extracts of a sermon by Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis.

Old nurse (to newly married couple, after viewing the wedding presents): "Well, my dears, you ought to be very 'appy. There ain't a thing amongst 'em as a pawnbroker wouldn't be pleased to 'andle."—Punch.

ENDOWMENT BUILDING.

As previously announced the lot purchased has been transferred to the trustees of the Publishing House, who assumed the trust in place of the original trustees. We give here the list of donors. If there are any errors, please inform the editor of the Herald.

	Pledged	Paid
Rev. J. H. Totten Fund	$100.00	$100.00
J. Norman Wills	100.00	50.00
R. H. Brooks	100.00	25.00
J. F. McCulloch	100.00	25.00
J. M. Millikan	100.00	5.00
T. A. Hunter	100.00	100.00
Geo. B. Harris	100.00	100.00
Dr. F. R. Harris	100.00	100.00
S. R. Harris	100.00	100.00
W. N. Brown	100.00	100.00
Capt. A. M. Rankin	100.00	50.00
L. R. Gooch	50.00	50.00
Littleton Circuit	25.00	10.00
Rev. Geo. W. Holmes	50.00	50.00
Prof. T. C. Amick	50.00	15.00
R. F. Williams	25.00	25.00
Rev. N. G. Bethea	25.00	25.00
Rev. D. A. Fishel	25.00	25.00
Wm. N. Pegram	25.00	25.00
C. E. McCulloch	25.00	25.00
Rev. A. O. Lindley	25.00	25.00
Rev. J. H. Bowman	25.00	25.00
Rev. G. F. Millaway	25.00	25.00
Rev. W. D. Fogleman	25.00	25.00
Rev. T. M. Johnson	25.00	17.00
S. M. Kellam	15.00	15.00
Littleton Church	15.00
Chas. B. Auman	10.00	5.00
M. F. Vuncannon	10.00	10.00
Rev. J. W. Frank	10.00	10.00
Rev. H. L. Powell	10.00
W. D. Hardin	8.00	5.00
W. A. Speer	3.00	3.00
J. H. Sharp	25.00	25.00
Rev. T. F. McCulloch	25.00	25.00
J. F. Hunter	20.00	20.00
J. H. Redding	10.00	10.00
W. S. Jobe	10.00	10.00
Rev. H. W. Braswell	10.00
J. A. Sharp	5.00	5.00
D. M. Glass	5.00	5.00
J. F. Gerringer	5.00
Wm. Wiley	5.00	5.00
W. F. Grabbs	5.00	5.00
L. W. Holt	5.00
J. D. Payne	5.00	5.00
Levi Watson	2.00	2.00
Jno. W. Moore	1.00	1.00
H. A. Garrett	50.00
J. S. Diviney	10.00	10.00
J. E. Diviney	10.00	10.00
Rev. G. L. Reynolds	10.00
Clark H. Kirkman	5.00	5.00
Angeline Causey	5.00	5.00
J. F. Coble	5.00
Samuel Diviney	5.00	5.00
Chas. F. Fox	5.00	5.00
Mrs. Martha J. Freeman	1.00	1.00
John Glass	1.00	1.00
J. E. Stafford	5.00	5.00
————	25.00	25.00
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk	5.00	5.00
Mrs. Rebecca S. Ogburn	25.00	25.00
L. L. Wrenn	25.00	25.00
John A. Coble	10.00	10.00
Chas. Ross	10.00
Geo. W. Coble	10.00	10.00
J. A. Stout	5.00	5.00
L. C. Hine	25.00	25.00
Rev. W. E. Swain	15.00
Rev. T. J. Ogburn	10.00	10.00
M. K. Surratt	2.00	2.00
O. W. Hanner	10.00	10.00
Rev. R. M. Andrews	10.00	10.00
Rev. J. D. Williams	10.00
J. H. Snotherly	5.00
J. B. O'Bryant	5.00
J. M. Hunter	25.00	25.00
Rev. D. A. Braswell	10.00
Walter Hardin	10.00
Rev. J. H. Stowe	5.00	5.00
Rev. J. R. Hutton	25.00	25.00
Rev. H. L. Elderdice	10.00	10.00
W. L. Spoon	10.00	10.00
Madison Brown	10.00	10.00
W. A. Bowman	5.00	5.00
Mrs. M. S. Ray	15.00	15.00
G. B. Johnson	10.00	10.00
J. M. Simpson	1.00
Garland Daniels	1.00
D. M. Holliday	1.00	1.00
Dr. E. R. Michaux	1.00
A Friend	25.00
Dr. W. K. Hartsell	5.00
Mrs. J. F. McCulloch	4.00
M. A. Coble	20.00	20.00
Brother West	5.00	5.00
A Friend	5.00	5.00
S. V. Pickens	75.00	75.00
J. M. Stone	25.00	5.00
J. R. Stockard	5.00	5.00
Rev. G. L. Curry	25.00	5.00
J. C. Sharp	10.00
B. M. Cates	10.00	10.00
Mrs. Sarah A. Huffines	2.00	2.00
Miss Sobenia W. Wilson	2.50	2.50
Miss Mamie Plunkett	15.00	15.00
A Friend	1.00	1.00
Rev. L. A. Hatley	5.00	5.00
Lawrence Martin	10.00
Rev. W. F. Ashburn	5.00	5.00
Jesse Allred	2.50	2.50
Miss Lucy Hardin	1.00	1.00

THE SECURITY OF CHRISTIANITY.

The ark of God was never taken till it was surrounded by the arms of earthly defenders. In captivity its sanctity was sufficient to vindicate it from insult, and to lay the hostile fiend prostrate on the threshold of its own temple. The real security of Christianity is to be found in its benevolent morality, in its exquisite adaptation to human hearts, in the facility with which its scheme accommodates itself to the capacity of every human intellect, in the consolation which it bears to every house of mourning, in the light with which it brightens the great mystery of the grave. To such a system it can bring no addition of dignity or strength, that it is part and parcel of the common law. It is now for the first time to rely on the force of its own beauty. Its sublime theology confounded the great Grecian schools in the fair conflict of reason with reason. The bravest and wisest of the Caesars found their arms and their policy unavailing, when opposed to the kingdom that was not of this world. The victory which Porphyry and Diocletian failed to gain is not, to all appearance, reserved for any of those who have in this age directed their attacks against the last restraint of the powerful, and the last hope of the wretched. The whole history of Christianity shows that she is in far greater danger of being corrupted by the alliance of power than of being crushed by its opposition. Those who thrust soverignty upon her, treat her as their prototypes treated her author. They bow the knee, and spit upon her; they cry, "Hail!" and smite her on the cheek; they put a sceptre in her hand, and it is a fragile reed; they crown her, but it is with thorns; they cover with purple the wounds which their own hands have inflicted on her and inscribe magnificent titles over the Cross on which they have fixed her to perish in ignomany and pain. —Lord Macauley.

Lost Its Song.

During the summer a man hung his canary's cage outside the window. Every day a number of sparrows congregated near the cage. Before the summer had passed away, the canary had lost all his song, and would only chirp like the sparrows. The canary had gotten into bad company. Many Christians associate so much with worldly people that they lose the song of God's children, and get the miserable chirp of men and women of the world.

Election is over, and some of us are wondering whether we voted wisely. Voting is something of a hazard at times, if we do not happen to have the plain guidance of the old darky janitor in Princeton. Erastus, being asked how he voted, said: "In the mahning', sah, I was inclined to de Republican cause, for they gave me three dollahs; but in the afternoon de Democrats gave me two dollahs. So, sah, I voted the Democratic ticket straight, because dey was leas' corrup' sah—de leas' corrup,' sah."—Success Magazine.

DIED.

Bro. John J. Kimrey was born March 11th, 1844, and died in Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore, where he had gone for treatment, October 23rd, 1911, aged 67 year, 7 months and 12 days.

He was married to Miss E. A. Ledbetter May 12th, 1870. Four children blessed their union, three sons and one daughter. One son died in the distant west several years ago, and was buried there, later his father went and brought the body and buried it here, in Liberty Cemetery. And so, he leaves in sadness, his widowed wife, and two sons and one daughter, and several grandchildren, and two brothers and three sisters, and many other relatives, and a large number of sympathizing friends. His sons and their families were here at his burial, but his daughter, whose home is in Seattle, Washington, could not be here.

Bro. Kimrey professed religion and joined the M. P. church in 1869, 42 years ago, and continued a faithful member to the end of his life. At the time of his death he was a member of Liberty Grove M. P. Church on Liberty Circuit.

Bro. Kimrey was a loyal, brave, Confederate soldier for three years.

After the close of the Civil War, he came home, and in the depressed, wrecked condition of the country, he entered actively into the noble, dignified business of a farmer, and by industry, good judgment and honesty, he made a splendid living, gave his children a liberal education, and left a competency for his widow. He was a noble, thoughtful, and almost ideal husband, and as a father, he was kind, tender, and indulgent, but yet firm and positive in discipline. As a neighbor, ever ready to accommodate, and be helpful.

But his real life, the basis and foundation of all his success, was his Christian and Church life. He loved and trusted his Savior, and loved his church, his pastor and the people generally, and the people loved and respected him. For a large part of his church life, he was a faithful member of the quarterly conference. At the time of his death, and for some time past, he was superintendent of Liberty Grove M. P. Sunday school; and during the past year he would frequently walk one and one half miles to Liberty Sunday school at 10:00 A. M. and then to his own Sunday school at 3 P. M. It was an inspiration to have him in my class, and I feel that his faithful work should be an object lesson to those elderly people who live almost in sight of the Sunday school and rarely, or never attend.

The funeral service was held in Liberty M. P. Church, and, (in the absence of his pastor, Bro. Fogleman, who was away assisting in a meeting) was conducted by the writer, assisted by Bros. D. A. Highfill, and G. F. Millaway. The esteem in which Bro. Kimrey was held, was proved by the large number who attended the service, and was a tribute to a life true and faithful. He will be greatly missed in the community, the church the Sunday school, but more especially in his home. But, dear sister, and brethren, be of good cheer, for you have one more treasure in heaven. Let us be faithful, remembering His grace is sufficient. Some day we will meet up yonder, and parting will be no more. W. C. Kennett.

Mrs. R. H. Staley.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. R. H. Staley, departed this life September 28 1911, being 49 years of age. In last May she received a stroke of paralysis, which rendered her almost helpless and in a state of severe suffering until death came. While the afflictions of the deceased were many, God has delivered her from them all.

The writer occasionally visited the home of the departed mother, who always extended to me a hearty welcome to participate freely of the blessings of her home. In conversation with her at one time, about her long sickness and her peculiar disease and as to why this was true, she, in so many words, said: "That all things work together for good to them that love God, and that her afflictions had caused her to look (by faith) at eternal things. I asked her then if she could say in her heart what the Psalmist said of his afflictions; and in a soft, low, gentle tone she said: "It is good for me that I have been afflicted: the Lord will soon deliver me." Sanctified afflictions wean us from the world and worldly-mindedness and work in us a spirit of submission and humility and conform us to the divine image.

The deceased has left behind a husband and two sons to mourn their loss. We extend to the bereaved ones our heartfelt sympathy and recall to them a precious promise and benediction of our Savior and Redeemer: "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." I would say to the husband, look up to Him who said: "What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know in the hereafter;" and mourn and weep not as those who have no hope, for we believe she has passed the floods and storms of life and won a crown of glory in the beyond. Let the loss of your beloved wife and companion be an incentive to invite and constrain you heavenward and rejoice in anticipation of that glorious day when loved ones—husbands and wives, brothers and sisters—shall be reunited forever and ever. I would say to the boys: Your mother has put down the work of life, feeling she could hardly be spared from you and home for a day, but is gone forever. Mother, having lived a life of Christian consistency by faith in Christ, ever busy with kindness, anxiety and solicitude for you, has taken her place amid that great cloud of witnesses that hover about the throne.

Sister Staley was converted in early life and joined the M. P. church at Gray's Chapel and was still a member there at [illegible]th. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of Rehoboth M E. Church, in Randolph County. H. F. L.

Report From Spring Valley.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, growing in interest and numbers. Owing to sickness there were not quite as many present today as were here last Sunday. Next Sunday will be our regular preaching Sunday and will be Brother R. M. Andrews' farewell sermon. We regret so much to give him up as we have all learned to love him and have enjoyed having him in our homes for the last three years. May God bless him and family in their new home. Our young peoples' society met tonight with about twenty members present and several visitors. Our subject was, Working, Watching and Praying. Two beautiful discussions on the subject were read by Mrs. L. M. Harris and Mrs. W. P. Parham and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Rev. C. N. Marshall, of Durham, was also with us tonight. He preached for us last Sunday a very helpful sermon. We are always glad to have Brother Marshall with us.

It is nearing Thanksgiving, and let all the Sunday schools remember the dear little orphans and send them something to make their little hearts happy.

Pray that our church and Sunday school may grow in interest and many may be led to Christ through its influence and teachings. Also pray for our faithful Superintendent that is ever at his post of duty, also our faithful teachers that are rarely ever absent. One feature in our school we enjoy so much is Brother H. F. Britt's explanation of the lesson every Sunday. He is the Bible Class teacher and a good one, I can assure you. His class consists of 21; the most of them are young men and young ladies. Sincerely do I hope that all of his class that are not Christians may be brought to Christ through his influence as their teacher. Not wishing to tire you with too long a letter, I will close, asking the prayers of all to give us more wisdom and strength to do more for the Master, I am, yours in His name, Mrs. Lucy Baskett.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

God's Clear Call.

God is calling for His own entrusted to his children. Not for an accounting, as that awaits the final judgment, but for use according to his command in recognition of world-embracing ties and obligations.

God specifically calls for His money, because it represents man's thought, skill, energy, his entire self. His earning power, centering in his brain, muscle, gifts, is from God, hence "He giveth thee power to get wealth." "A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven." "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?"

The ancient Jew tilled God's land, for "the earth is the Lord's, "and was required to tithe, pay God one-tenth. We, under "a better covenant" and conditions, have given ourselves, including earning power and possessions, unto God, and must hold self and all subject to His demands, and that means we must expend money by the rule, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

God calls for money, because the work of saving the world requires it. No enterprise can be prosecuted without money. This is the greatest work on earth, covering the widest territory, reaching the greatest number, doing the greatest good with the least expenditure of men and means, and yet it depends upon the offerings of God's people. If they would give even as did the Jews, the evangelization of the nations would be wonderfully hastened, and the home churches would be enriched with spiritual vitality and untold blessings.

God calls for money, because by being withheld it is paralyzing the church, leading many to not "follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." hampering the great enterprises working for the peace, happiness and progress of the human race, and imperiling our spiritual heritage and civil liberties by lowering our ideals, repudiating God's authority and ignoring the world's unrelieved needs.

Surely God can say of us, "Ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring all the tithes into the storehouse."

It is quite clear that our denomination has not fully responded to God's calls which have been coming for two or three years through the needs of His work under our care in Japan.

The offerings have not been enough to meet all obligations, much less provide absolute necessities incident to the growth of the work, and it ought to bring us all to our knees before God with our gifts to lay at His feet.

When our people realize that what they have belongs to God, and that as His stewards they only have the use of it, and must give an account thereof to Him, our treasuries will be replenished, and all our enterprises will take on new life.

Here is a splendid opportunity to get right with God in this matter by making a special contribution to the Emergency Fund of the Board of Foreign Missions with which to provide the overshadowing needs of our Japan work which have been so often enumerated in my Bulletins.

We are trying to have a day selected by our Conferences for a special effort to be made for contributions apart from the regular Assessment. The churches of the Maryland Conference will be asked to make their contributions on November 26th, the church of the Muskingum and the Onondaga Conferences will be asked to make theirs on Dec. 3rd, and those of the Indiana and the Kansas Conferences on December 24th, as agreed to by their presidents. Other Conferences will be published later. Attractive printed matter and subscription cards will be sent to pastors. I call upon the entire church to pray for the success of this effort, and to respond to this urgent appeal.

Fred. C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.-Treas.

316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

GOD AND THE HUMAN EYE.

Not many years ago one of the leading physicists of the world declared that if his optician had sent him an instrument with as many defects in it as the human eye he would have refused it on the ground of poor workmanship. Thus did proud man scoff at the work of the Creator. It is refreshing to learn in view of this, at the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science above mentioned, Professor J. S. MacDonald, of the Section of Physiology, stated that "the eye is as perfect an optical instrument as could be made with the full knowledge of the part played by matter and special arrangements of matter in reflecting, refracting and absorbing light." The Professor argued that this perfect optical mechanism has been formed either by light itself or by an "external agency cognizant of light." He then proceeeds to show that the eye cannot be formed by light itself, since it develops in the embryo in the absence of light. This brings his argument to the point of showing the necessity for this "external agency cognizant of light," and that the eye must have been formed by this "agency." No power or person can fit this definition but God Himself.—and God as a person. In view of such things the Independent, in a recent editorial, says, "Formerly it was customary to assume that all vital phenomena could be explained by the motion of the molecules. * * * *But it is beginning to be perceived that another point of view is also possible, equally legitimate and in some respects more valuable." All these are cautiously written or spoken, but they signify much, coming as they do from the world's leaders of thought and research. God is compelling Natural Science to recognize Him. But it is a hard and humiliating thing for Natural Science to do.—The Alliance Weekly.

When you think of what it is to be a Christian, you must thing of a plan as vast as a military campaign, as marvelous as the settlement of a new province, as difficult as the building of a new city. God is abroad, slowly bringing the vast machinery of nature, invention, science, industry and government under the control of law and the spirit of good will. The Christian is one who seeks to do God's will and forward Christ's plans, in Christ's way and in company with Christ's disciples. Upon each eager disciple, therefore, he imposes the yoke of law. By divers restraints the Christian spirit curbs the appetites, the motives, where the young is over strong. By divers stimulants it leads forth to a fuller strength those powers that are too weak, and the entire career of the disciple represents a series of sacrifices. The Christian life is a life of battle, where the weapons are thoughts and passions, and the enemies are invisible and spiritual. But once the victory is won, strange rewards appear.

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can bear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil that is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe. Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—George Eliot.

Be ashamed to die until you have gained some victory for humanity.—Horace Mann.

"The man who is satisfied with himself has got to be satisfied with mighty little."

One of the great lessons of life is to learn not to do what one likes, but to like what one does.—Hugh Black.

—Squire (engaging coachman): "Are you married?" Coachman: "No, sir. These 'ere scratches came from a cat."

MY LITTLE GIRL.

There's one little girl that you don't know,
She's ever, always, on the go,—
My! how she cries when she stubs her toe!
And she's my little girl.

Her nose is stub, and her hair is red;
She gets real cross when she's not fed;
She would sit up when she should go to bed,—
For she's my little girl.

But when she sails to "By-a-Way" land,
And her eyes grow dim from the sandy man.
My heart's held fast in her chubby brown hand.
Since she's my little girl.

Old Father Time's a-traveling fast;
His stride is long as the days run past,
I pray he'll spare me my sweet little lass
For she's my little girl.

Give folks their houses, and men their wealth.
Fine ladies their dogs,—and hats large as a shelf—
If you'll only grant me my dear little elf,
For she's my own little girl.

—Carlyle Summerbell.

THE MEMORY BOOK.

Marjorie was cross. She liked new dresses, but it was hard to try them on.

"I have walked off, and turned around, and held up my arms," she told grandmother, "until I would rather never have a dress.'

"Don't let that feeling get into your memory book," said her grand mother, gently. "If you are to keep a record of all your gowns, you want the record to be a pleasant one."

"A record of my gowns?" asked Marjorie, in surprise. "Why, I never thought of that!"

"Your mother and I have thought of it and we have begun your book. When your mother can spare you, come up to my room."

When she was dismissed from the trying on period, Marjorie lost no time in hastening up stairs. Grandmother was sitting before an old trunk, with books and packages strewn around her. She held up a bulging and worn leather book, and told Marjorie she could take it to the window seat and read it.

"Why, it is patchwork!" cried Marjorie, as she opened it. "Just bits of pretty silk and wool—oh, what pretty, old-fashioned things!"

"Read what is underneath the squares," said grandmother, leaning over her shoulder.

"'The — first — day — at — school,'" spelled Majorie, slowly, and then below a bit of soft, embroidered muslin she read: "My first party." She turned to her grandmother and asked: "Why, whose dresses were these?"

"These were mine," said grandmother, "and my mother pasted them in the book when I was a little girl; and, when I was a little older, I liked to keep a bit of every pretty garment I had, and to write underneath something about the place I wore it first."

"I am going to do that, too!" said Marjorie. "How I wish I had begun a long time ago!"

"You did," said grandmother, laughing, "only you did not know it. Your mother and I have saved a little of all your pretty dresses."

Her grandmother went into the next room and came out with a number of envelopes. On opening them Marjorie found the brightest and prettiest bits of muslin, gingham, and lace and many strips of ribbon. Best of all, to each was pinned a little description of the dress. "You see you have only to paste these in your new book and copy what has been written. From this time on you can keep the record yourself." Then grandmother passed her a package, and Marjorie found that it was a big scrap book all ready for her samples.

She kissed her grandmother warmly, and said, "I am going to begin it today; but first I want to run down and tell mother I am sorry that I was so cross about trying on the dress."—Youth's Companion.

"THE BOY FOR ME."

A gentleman advertised for a boy, and nearly fifty came to see him. Out of the whole number he chose one, and dissmissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend. "why you picked out that boy, who had not a single recommendation?"

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman; "he had a great many. He wiped his feet off when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful.

"He gave his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was thoughtful and kind. He took off his cap, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was gentlemanly.

"He picked up a book I had purposely laid on the floor, and replaced it upon the table; and he waited quietly for his turn instead of pushing and crowding, showing that he was honorable and orderly.

"When I talked to him I noticed that his clothes were brushed and his hair in order; when he wrote his name, I noticed that his finger-nails were clean.

"Don't you call those little things recommendations? I do; and I would give more for what I can tell about a boy by using my eyes than for all the letters he can bring."—Apples of Gold.

MAKING FRIENDS WITH THE STARS

I was walking in the early evening not very long ago with a friend who suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, there is Arcturus! It's the first time I've seen it this year!" She said with the same thrill of pleasure in her voice with which one might say, "I have just heard the first robin!" or "The crocuses are really in blossom!" She paused on the sidewalk, quite oblivious of any observers, and pointed out to my indiscriminating eyes the brilliant star shining in the east.

"Isn't it beautiful?" she said. "Is it your first glimpse this year, too?"

I laughed. "I presume so," I replied; "but I may have seen it every night for a month. I don't know one star from another."

"You poor thing!" she exclaimed. "Why, how much you have missed! It's lucky one doesn't have to choose, but it seems to me that I could give up my acquaintance with flowers and birds as easily as my sense of companionship with the stars.

"Why," she continued enthusiastically. "I watch for the stars and welcome them year after year exactly as I do the birds and flowers. When I see the first bit of arbutus, I know that violets and apple blossoms and roses are all coming soon; and the first robin means orioles and song sparrows and bobolinks, and all the dear sights and sounds and odors that summer will bring. So when I see Arcturus, I know that Vega and Altair are not far behind, that Cygnus will soon be flying down the Milky Way, across the summer nights, and that Scorpio will be grandly sweeping through the southern sky, where perhaps I shall see it over wide stretches of sea; at least, I often have, and whether I may this year or not, it brings it all back to me.

Then in the fall I always look for the cunning little triangle of Aries, which I welcome after the summer has gone as I do the fruits and bright leaves; they all belong together. And I like to think what is next on the way. After Aries the little Pleiades will soon come twinkling up in the east, and then, when the snapping cold nights some on, when the stars sparkle so beautifully and one's blood is all a-tingle, great Orion shines in splendor, and Sirius, so blue and beautiful; and Procyon will not be far away—that always seems like the little dog trotting after the big one.''

''Well, the stars have certainly marked individualities to you,'' I said. ''When did you begin to be so much interested in them?''

She laughed and answered: ''Ask me when I first began to be interested in daisies and dandelions. My mother taught me to study the stars so early that I have no recollection of the time when I didn't know them.

''I remember with what a sense of expansion I watched Orion's stately march across the winter sky when I was a child; and the Pleiades seemed to me to be real little plaything stars, such a cunning, twinkling little group. The steadiness of the North Star gave me a strong feeling of security. I liked to know that it is always just in the same place, even though the moving panorama of the rest of the sky was the very thing that gave it its charm.

''My mother told me all the mythological stories connected with the constellations, and the quaint figures of beasts and men which appeared in the old star atlases still seem to me dimly stamped on the sky, at times, when I look up.

''Why, I can't imagine what it would mean not to have a personal feeling for the stars.'' And then she smiled, half apologetically. ''I shall be delivering a lecture on sentimental astronomy, if I don't look out.''

''Go on,'' I begged.

''I was thinking just then,'' she continued, ''of how my acquaintance with the stars helped me to enjoy references in poetry when I get old enough to begin to come across them. I especially remember with what delight I first read in 'Locksley Hall:'

'' 'Many a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,
Did I look on great Orion sloping slowly to the west.
Many a night I saw the Pleiades, rising through the mellow shade,
Glitter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.'

''Longfellow's 'And the retreating sun the sign of Scorpion enters,' I understood, and I enjoyed Lowell's lines:

'' 'The Bear that prowled all night about the fold
Of North Star hath sunk into his den,
Scared by the blithesome footseps of the dawn.'

''I recall, too, what elation I felt over a rhymed translation from Manlius, beginning,

'' 'First, next the Twins, see great Orion rise,
His arms extended stretch o'er half the skies,' and ending after an elaborate description of his figure and armor,

'' 'Thus graced and armed, he leads the starry host.'

There was something very splendid about that to me.

''These old stories are worth telling to children, for they mean so much to them, and probably serve, as nothing else would, to give individuality to the constellations.

''The pleasure that I get now, however, from watching the stars is of course of a different kind. They stand as symbols of the great compelling and controlling and beneficent power that regulates all the beauty and the mystery of the changing seasons; and then, wherever one goes there they are—east or west, it doesn't matter.

''You may be so shut up in a city that you won't catch a whiff of apple blossoms nor hear the note of a song sparrow, but you can manage to get a glimpse of the southeastern sky, if it is through a vista of narrow streets, and there is Spica shining down at you, just as she is over the old orchard. And if you travel alone to a country where the people and the customs and the flowers and the birds are not familiar, you will have a comfortable, homey feeling at night, for it will be the same glowing Antares as of old that you will see, or Arcturus, or some other well-known friend. More than once when I have been alone and far away from home and ready to sink with homesickness, a sudden glimpse of a dear, familiar star group shining in at my window has saved the day for me—or the night, which is worse.

''I don't believe I ever could live on the other side of the equator, where I should have to lose my old acquaintances among the stars and make new ones. I met a lady once who had been born and brought up in South Africa and who came to New England to be educated. She, too had had just such a familiar childhood knowledge and love of the stars as I had, and I knew what she meant when she said: 'Oh, I was so homesick when the Southern Cross sank below the horizon!'

''Antares, the great red star in the heart of Scorpio, is very dear to me. I used to watch for it when I was a child through a particular opening among the pear trees, from our back door at home. My birthday was in July and the glorious Fourth, of course, and it was the beginning of the long vacation, so Antares stood for happy times. Later I have watched the splendid sweep of the whole constellation—there is nothing quite equal to that—in wide expanses of sky, seen over the ocean, and it all comes back with every year and binds the past and the present and promises for the future.''

''You make me positively envious,'' I said. ''I wish I had had such an education as yours when I was young.''

''Why, it isn't too late to begin now,'' she said.

''Oh, yes, it is,'' I replied, ''I'm nearly forty years old!''

''Nearly forty!'' she exclaimed impulsively. ''What of that? You may have half your life before you yet. Begin right away to learn your stars and the associations will pile up of themselves. Now there is no reason for your not learning Arcturus this very night—isn't it a glorious one to begin with? Ten years from now you will suddenly see it some spring evening and you will remember this hour and about all the pleasant living of this particular season and of others that have come before then.

''It's easy—just get a star atlas and I will show you how to use it. You haven't got to learn every star in the sky, you know, to get lots of comfort out of it; neither have you got to study mathematical astronomy. You don't have to be an ornithologist to love a robin, do you?

''Promise me you will do it!!'' she said, as she left me at my door, her eyes shining like the stars themselves in her eagerness.

''I'll think about it!'' I said.

I have been thinking about it since, and I have bought one of the little discs at the bookstore that serves as a sky map, and I have myself discovered Vega, shining in the northeast, and Spica and Deuebola are easy to group with Arcturus, and I am enthusiastically waiting for Scorpio. I have taken years of comfort in the companionship of flowers and birds, and I begin to believe that I can't afford any longer to miss the companionship of the stars—and they are not half so reserved and difficult to become acquainted with as I had supposed they would be!—Ella M. Hart.

—Bro. J. M. Millikan is enjoying a visit from an elder brother who went west at the age of 22 and has grown up with the country. He was for a long period register of deeds in Kansas and is now in the service of the U. S. Government. He worshiped in Grace Church last Sunday and seemed to enjoy the service. He is a Methodist.

—Thanksgiving day, November 30th, this year.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC. NOV. 19.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—Missions in South America.

Acts 10: 13-30.

Daily Readings.

M. Ceremonial religion ..... Matt. 6: 1-5
T. The true priest ..... Mal. 2: 5-9
W. Gospel freedom ..... Gal. 5: 1-6
T. Personal religion I John 1: 7-10; 2: 1,2
F. A world in darkness ....I Jno. 5: 19-21
S. A world in night .....I Jno. 2: 7-11
S. The topic.

Hints for This Meeting.

1. An effective prayer meeting is one that starts out with a definite result in view, then accomplishes it.

2. The missionary committee or mission study class should conduct this meeting. Have a clear idea what you are going to do.

3. Plan to have special music, recitations, songs and prayers to interest the audience. But above all, plan to do something besides an interesting program. If you have no mission study class, begin one, small or large. Arrange an offering for missions or something.

South America is one of the largest and most important mission fields in the world. The next decade will witness great changes in the social and religious organizations of these people. Catholicism is the dominant religion. It may be asked why we shall send missionaries to nations that believe in Christ. But so far have the leaders of the Catholic church in the continent gotten away from the true doctrines of the Bible that the state of things in the countries of the southern continent of this hemisphere approach those of heathendom. Those who have studied the religions of the world know something of the faults of the Roman Catholic church, but here these faults are seen in their worst and most demoralizing forms.

As a rule, the priests in the Catholic church of South America are the most licentious and depraved of men. Men of intelligence will not permit their wives and daughters to attend church in some of the places. The priests do not allow the Bible to be read by the people. One of the tasks of the missionaries to South America is to scatter Bibles throughout the land.

Images and relics are worshiped in some of the countries. Illiteracy is far too general, and education must be one of the first steps in the evangelization of this country. The protestant churches of this continent should make the building of colleges and establishment of schools one of the first things to be done there. Education is a great enlightener and it will lift the veil that covers this people like a pall.

South America has twice as much inhabitable territory as North America. It is destined to be the greatest and richest continent of the entire world. Religion, education, capital and energy must go into the making of this great country. More people are going from Europe to South America every year than are coming to North America.

The governments of South America are modeled on that of the United States, but none of them are stable. Despite the proximity of the United States, European ideas prevail in South American countries. The countries savor of Latin and Spanish.

The people of South America come of fine stock. They are people capable of great progress. It will not take centuries an edenturies to make them appreciate our religion, but instead it is the work of a few years. All that is needed is schools, distribution of Bibles and such instruction from missionaries as will set the men to thinking.

Little missionary work has been done in South America. The field is practically untouched. "It is ripe unto the harvest," but there are not the laborers, the money and the means to carry forward the work. There is a great opportunity for any denomination.

Poem for the Meeting.

"From snow-capped Andes mountains
And their Pacific strand,
Where the Inca empire's fountains
Roll down their golden sand
From earth's most mighty river,
And loftiest peopled plains,
They call us to deliver
Their lands from priestcraft's chains.
"Cape Horn will hail the story
Whose echoes southward roll,
Alaska share the glory
That spreads from pole to pole.
[illegible], centered on the equator,
The New World's loftiest strain
Proclaims Christ Liberator,
O'er all the world to reign."

The strongest timber stands on Norwegian rocks, where tempests rage, and long, hard winters reign. The muscles are seen most fully developed in the brawny arm that plies the hammer. Even so, the most vigorous and healthy piety is ever active in a busy world, which has difficulties to battle with, which has its hands full of good works, which has neither time nor room for evil, but, aiming at great things for God and man, promptly dismisses temptation with Nehemiah's answer: "I have a great work to do, therefore, I cannot come down."—Bishop McIlvain.

DEATH IS LIFE.

Familiarize your mind with the inevitable event of death. Think of it as life! Gloomy though the portal seems, death is the gate of life to a good and pious man. Think of it, therefore, not as death, but as glory—going to heaven and to your Father. Regard it in the same light as the good man who said, when I expressed my sorrow to see him sinking into the grave, "I am going home." If you think of it as death, then let it be the death of sin, the death of pain, the death of fear, the death of care, the death of Death. Regard its pangs and struggles as the battle that goes before victory; its troubles as the swell of the sea on heaven's happy shore; and yon gloomy passage as the cypress shaded avenue that shall conduct your steps to heaven. It is life through Christ and life in Christ; life most blissful, and life evermore.

How much happier and holier we should be if we could look on death in that light. I have heard people say that we should think each morning that we may be dead before night, and each night that we may be dead before morning. True; yet how much better to think every morning, I may be in the heavenly city before night; and every single night that the head is laid on the pillow, and the eyes are closed for sleep, to think, next time I open them it may be to look on Jesus, and the land where there is no night, nor morning; nor sunset, nor cloud; nor grave, nor grief; nor sin; nor death, nor sorrow; nor toil, nor trouble; where "they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."
—Dr. Guthrie.

TEACHER TRAINING.

The successful teacher knows the feelings in himself which will harmonize with those of his class, just as well as the pianist knows the keys on the piano, which will harmonize. Did you ever become highly enthusiastic over something, and discover that you were the only one interested? It's only a step from the individual to the universal, but if you cannot make that step, you are duty bound to give over the idea of teaching a class. One often hears some such remark as this: "That fellow is an interesting character." It takes an interesting character for a teacher of any sort. If you are an interesting person, you are a teacher already. The only thing left to be done is to make an acquaintance with the things to be taught. The teacher needs to know a great deal in four respects: first, in respect to the teachings of God given to us through his word; secondly, as regards himself; thirdly, in reference to each member

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

of his class; and, lastly, he must know his lesson. As to the manner in which this knowledge may be obtained, I think that the would-be teacher may depend upon his own initiative for that.

Let me say in concluding, to any who aspire to this transcendent calling, if you have the marks of one who may be successful in the teacher's profession, get all the preparation you can.

To you who cannot teach, be the next best thing to a good teacher,—a good scholar. Don't try to be something for which you are not adapted, and which would not be satisfactory to you or your fellow man.

E. T. H.

AFFLICTION AND TROUBLE.

It is universally recognized that sin is man's worst enemy. Excepting sin, there is nothing that brings more unhappiness to man than affliction and trouble.

A few days ago you, perhaps, walked into your flower garden, and there you noticed a tiny little bud, just beginning to unfold itself into a beautiful and fragrant flower. On the following night a cold and chilling frost fell upon that tender bud. The next time you viewed your unfolding flower was after the warm rays of the sun had fallen upon it, and you beheld it withering, drooping, dying. You may look out in God's garden of humanity, and see young men and young women who give evidence of wonderful possibilities. Affliction and trouble falls upon many of them and they wither, droop and die; and never unfold into lives of fragrance, beauty and service.

Not only are the young afflicted and troubled, but all men or every age, regardless of race, color or condition. The king on his throne, the rich man in his palace, the man clothed in rags—all alike, as Job says, are "born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward."

A glorious consolation is offered the troubled—"fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer." A gracious reward is also offered the troubled—"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Will. H. Neese.

INTO THE FOREVER.

What may we take unto the vast forever?
That marble door
Admits no fruit of all our long endeavor.
No fawn-wreathed crown we wore,
No garnered lore.
What can we bear beyond the unknown portal?
No gold, no gains
Of all our toiling; in the life immortal
No hoarded wealth remains,
Nor guilt, nor stains.
Naked from out the far abyss behind us
We entered here;
No word came with our coming to remind us
What wondrous world was near,
No hope, no fear.
Into the silent, starless night before us,
Naked we glide,
No hand has mapped the constellations o'er us,
No comrade at our side,
No chart, no guide.
Yet fearless toward that midnight black and hollow,
Our footsteps fare;
The beckoning of a Father's hand we follow—
His love alone is there;
No curse, no care. —E. R. Sill.

SOUTH CAROLINA FARM FIGURES.

Interesting statistics on the agricultural conditions in the State of South Carolina have recently been issued and indicate most pleasing results for the past year as well as promise to the future.

To begin with, the State jumped from twenty-first to thirteenth in the ranks of the agricultural States by the announcement of the agricultural figures. Value of farm products increased by 28.4 per cent. from 1909 to 1910. In 1910 value of crops was $140,000,000, an increase of nearly 100 per cent. in a decade.

As to value of crops per square mile of area, South Carolina ranked second of all the States, with $4,518. Illinois led with a value per square mile of $5,122.

In 1910 there were in South Carolina 176-180 farms, an increase of 13 per cent. over the number in 1909. Value of lands and buildings increased 162 per cent.; implements and machinery, 112 percentage; lands 169 per cent.; labor bill 76 per cent. Owners of farms increased from less than 59,000 to over 64,000, and tenants were shown to have increased at a lower rate than in the preceding decade.

Another fact brought out by these figures is that in 1910 a bale of cotton was valued at $87.15, while in 1898 the average value of a bale was $30.22. Cost of production has also increased, but not nearly in so great a proportion.—The Southern Field.

DASHEENS IN THE SOUTH.

The dasheen, one of a family of root crops grown extensively in Japan and China, is being introduced into the South with good success. The vegetable grows to perfection in the low-lying and overflow lands of the Southern States, finding there conditions of moisture and climate almost ideal for its growth.

The dasheen is a tuber very much resembling a potato, with a shaggy exterior, due to innumerable little fibrous roots extending from the jacket. Its interior is soft and makes a most tasty and edible table vegetable. The plant, which is called the Helianti by botanists, grows to a height of some 10 feet under the best conditions, with a plume like luxuriant foliage which will make an excellent forage. It is planted in the early spring and matures within five months after planting.

Dasheens are used in the East for making candied confects and it is likely that their introduction into this country will bring about a similar development here. There are many acres of overflow lands along the Southern coast which are unsuited for any other crop and which could be made most profitable by growing the dasheen. Those who have taken up the new vegetable predict large profits within a short time.—The Southern Field.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

GOD MEANS US TO BE HAPPY.

God means us to be happy;
He fills the short-lived years
With loving, tender mercies—
With smiles as well as tears.

Flowers blossom by the pathway,
Or, withering, they shed
Their sweetest fragrance over
The bosoms of our dead.

God filled the earth with beauty,
He touched the hills with light;
He crowned the waving forest
With living verdure bright:

He taught the bird its carol,
He gave the wind its voice,
And to the smallest insect
Its moment to rejoice.

What life hath not its blessing?
Who hath not songs to sing,
Or grateful words to utter
Or wealth of love to bring?

Tried in affliction's furnace
The gold becomes more pure—
So strong doth sorrow make us,
So patient to endure.

No way is dark and dreary
If God be with us there;
No danger can befall us
When sheltered by His care.

Why should our eyes be blinded
To all earth's glorious bloom?
Why sit we in the shadow
That falls upon the tomb?

Look up and catch the sunbeams!
See how the day doth dawn!
Gather the scented roses
That grow beside the thorn!

God's pitying doth seek us;
He leads us to His rest;
And from a thousands pathways
He chooses what is best.

—Exchange.

A lad was standing with his donkey and barrow selling vegetables in London one day, when a smartly dressed young man came up and asked:

"I say, boy, would you like to drive me to the Mansion House?"

The boy thought for a moment and then replied:

"Yes, guv'nor; but I don't think the 'arness would fit you."—Selected.

—The piano was invented early in the eighteenth century.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY.
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1911. NUMBER 51.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

HIGH EXPECTATIONS OF THE COMING CONFERENCE.

Henderson.

We are thinking of the Conference: longing, longing, longing for its blessing; praying that it may somehow work our road to heaven and make it a little smoother for pedestrians as well as vehicles and autoists—or, at all events, show us how to avoid the rough places.

We have heard preaching and heard preaching, read the Bible and good books, listened and listened to exhortations.

Year in and year out we have listened, thought, read, tried. Now we try to feel that somebody at this Conference will show us a new light; that every minister and every delegate in every home will drop a thought that will make life's load lighter, religion more desirable, sin more hideous. And we wonder if the combined thought, wish, prayer of the church sent to our great Creator will not incline Him to us, and draw us to Him. Somehow make our faith stronger and our hopes brighter. Dr. Eliot says the religion of the future can not offer certainty as to a future state of happiness. We want this Conference to make it a certainty to us. We long for that. And if not, that it may show us how to make of this earth a heaven—how to be happy here. We will have our faces washed, our hair brushed, the yards swept, and our hearts full of love for our church and its leaders. And we shall be full of faith and hope that God will meet with us, and that we shall see Him more clearly, and know Him better on account of this Conference with His men.

We will be ready and in expectation.

T. T. Hicks.

11|11|11.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

A Reminder to Pastors.

At Conference last year the committee on Orphans' Home recommended the following: "That each pastor see to it that each church hold a Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving Day, or as near Thanksgiving as possible, at which time the claims of Orphans' Home shall be presented and an offering taken for its support. This is a reminder and a request that this service be held. There are seventeen children in the Home and two of the number now have fever. Funds are very much needed, so are prayers, interest and co-operation in this great undertaking. Let us observe Thanksgiving Day as did the people of olden times who gave, for gratitude. This is a good time for people in the country to pack boxes of provisions and send—say have a Thanksgiving box (send articles of food, etc., to a convenient place, and neighbors meet and pack the box. Beans, peas, pumpkins, potatoes, meat, dried fruit, and in fact everything that can be used in a home will be used at the Orphans' Home. Efforts are now being made to get freight off of goods sent to the Orphans' Home. Notice will be given however if this is done in The Herald. The Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina has reasons to be proud of the Orphans' Home and should leave no stones unturned in giving it loyal support. The moulding of human characters is a great, good work and too much cannot be said of the young women who have undertaken to do this. In conclusion may I ask that each pastor be prepared to give number of Sunday school scholars on his charge at Conference?

Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer,
Pres. N. C. Br. W. H. Mis.

Asheboro, N. C., Nov. 13th, '11.

—In another column, Rev. R. M. Andrews declares his purpose to withdraw from the work of the regular ministry at the close of this Conference year. From a private source we learn that he is led to this step largely by consideration for his mother and an invalid brother who he thinks need more attention from him than he can give at a distance. As they live in Burlington, he will locate at that point and engage in newspaper work as editor of the Burlington News. The ministerial brethren generally and many others will regret that Bro. Andrews has found it needful to take a step which removes him for the time being from the pulpit. But we doubt not that he has carefully and prayerfully considered the matter, and we trust that his usefulness will not be diminished, though he labors in a different way. We need Christian men in journalism. There is too much of the expectation that political papers shall engage in mud-slinging and muck-raking. We need clean politics and a clean press, and there is no way to bring it about but through clean-minded men. May Bro. Andrews have good success in his new vocation.

—People may become too noisy for their neighbors. The Standard Boiler and Machine Works of this city have been compelled to desist in the use of air drill hammers by Judge Allen because a neighbor has made complaint that the noise is unbearable. The matter is not finally settled. The noise is described as "piercing, discordant, grinding, terrific, and detrimental to health and hearing."

—Rev. E. A. Plyler goes home today in very poor health. He had been suffering intensely from pleurisy. The brethren will regret that he cannot attend Conference. He has done a good and faithful year's work, we believe, and we were glad to know that his people had fully paid him what they promised.

—We are pained to read of the serious illness of Bro. O. W. Hanner, of our Winston Church. Let there be prayer for his recovery.

—Rev. J. A. Ledbetter is in Greensboro on business to day.

—The interesting account of Raphael printed on another page was written by Mrs. President Harper, of Elon College.

RAPHAEL.

Concerning him who was to art what Shakespeare was to literature.

Raphael, of Urbino, was born at Colboedolo, a small town in the Duchy of Urbino, April 6th, 1843. His father, Giovanni Santi, was a painter of considerable merit and was possessed also of poetic ability. The mother of Raphael, Magia Ciarlo, was a woman of unusual sweetness of disposition and beauty of character. Unfortunately she died when Raphael was 8 years old. Those years must have been happy ones to the gentle, loving child. Their home was in the midst of the snowy peaks of the Apennines, looking toward the blue Adriatic. It is not strange that he became a worshiper of the beautiful; nature soon grows to be an inspiring companion to those who love her.

His father died when he was only eleven years old. However, it was soon after arranged that the lad, who had worked some in his father's studio, should be placed under the eminent painter, Pietro Perugino. It is said when he examined the sketches of the boy, he exclaimed, "Let him be my pupil; he will soon become my master." For nine years Raphael worked under Perugino, winning the love of both master and pupils. When he was 17 the young artist painted his first works, a church banner and a "Crucifixion."

For a friend of his first master, Perugino, he painted the beautiful "Connestabile Madonna." "The mother of the Savior," says Passavant "a figure of virginal sweetness, is walking the country in early spring, when the trees are still bare and the distant mountains are covered with snow. She is walking along pensively reading in a little book in which the child in her arms also looks attentively. Nothing could be more exquisite. Everything in it shows that Raphael must have devoted himself to it with especial ardor." This picture, only six and three-fourths inches square, was sold in 1871 to the emperor of Russia for $6,600.

Before he was 21 he painted "The Marriage of the Virgin," now chief ornament of the Brera Gallery at Milan.

Full of ambition, and, having heard of the works of Da Vinci and Michael Angelo at Florence, he was extremely anxious to go to that city. When he entered the city, he was a youth of 21, slight of figure, five feet, 8 inches tall, with dark brown eyes and hair, perfect teeth, and the kindest of hearts. He was received into the homes of the patricians and asked to paint pictures for them. Meantime, he used every spare moment in study. Especially did the works of Leonardo da Vinci reveal to Raphael his own wonderful powers, until then almost concealed. Awakened suddenly and excited with the inspiration that seemed all at once to flow in on him from every side, he pushed forward at once toward the perfection he was so soon to attain.

His enthusiasm inspired every artist, and his modest deference to the opinions of others, won him countless friends. "The only very distinguished man," says Mrs. Jameson, "of whom we read who lived and died without an enemy of detractor."

Raphael returned to the court of Urbino, always winning to himself the most educated and the noblest among the distinguished men and women. Something besides genius drew to Raphael. Vasari says, "Every base and vile thought departed from the mind before his influence."

"La Belle Jardinere in the Louvre, considered one of the best and most beautiful of Raphael's works, represents the virgin in the midst of rich landscape, the ground covered with grass and flowers, while the infant Christ looks up to her with great tenderness. It is said that model was a lovely flower girl to whom the painter was much attached. While finishing this picture he was called to Rome by the famous Pope Julius II and went to the eternal city with great hope and delight. He was 25, and the most important work of his life lay before him. Michael Angelo was already at work on the great monument for Pope Julius II. Now the Pope desired to enlarge and beautify the Vatican and make that his monument as well. He received Raphael with the greatest cordiality. It is said that when Raphael knelt before him, his chestnut locks falling upon his shoulders, the pope exclaimed, "He is an innocent angel. I will give him Cardinal Bembo for a teacher, and he shall fill my walls with historical pictures." Julius commissioned him to fresco the hall of the judicial assembly. The first fresco was "La Disputa," one of those great theological pictures which illustrates both the scholarship and sweep of Raphael's mind. In "La Disputa" appears the sublimnity of heaven and the holiest passions of earth. A panorama view of all time is given, in which appear Jehovah, Christ, the Virgin, prophets, priests, kings, apostles, and the fathers of the Roman Catholic Church —saints, Jerome, Ambrose, Augustine and Gregory—all animated—Heaven with the events of revelation and earth with the progress of redemption. The Pope was so everjoyed on the completion of this picture that he is said to have thrown himself on the ground exclaiming with uplifted hands, I thank thee, great God, thou hast sent me so great a painter.

Among the well known works of Raphael is "St. Cecilia," listening to the singing of a choir of angels above, her eyes raised to heaven in ecstacy. A musical instrument is slipping from her hands while she listens, entranced, to playing so much more wonderful than her own. On her right is St. Paul and St. John; on her left, Mary Magdalene, with St. Augustine. Cecilia was a rich and noble Roman lady, who lived in the 3rd century. She was married at sixteen to Valerian, who, with his brother, Tiburtius, was converted to Christianity, and beheaded because they refused to sacrifice to idols. Raphael's Sistine Madonna soars above us as our ideal of womanly beauty and yet strange to say she gives to each individual the impression that owing to some special affinity has the privilege of wholly understanding her. It was purchased in 1754 by Augustus III, elector of Saxony for $40,000. It was received at Dresden with great joy, the throne of Saxony being displaced in order to give this divine product of a genius a fitting home. It was the last virgin created by the genius of Raphael; as if he had foreseen that this Madonna would be his last, he made it an apotheosis. It is interesting to sit in the Dresden Gallery alone, before the Sistine Madonna, which has the face of the beloved Margherita, of whom I will tell you later. and note the hush that comes over the threshold. They seems to enter into the feelings of the artist and it is said many a poor and lonely woman, bent with years has wept before this painting. The eyes of the virgin look at you but they do not see you. The eyes are thinking—looking back into her past life, perchance into a veiled but significant future. These eyes once seen are never forgotten and you go again and again to see them.

Among Raphael's famous Madonnas is the "The Madonna of the Choir," of which I will tell you a little later.

While Raphael was painting "La Disputa" tradition says he fell in love with Margherita, the daughter of a soda manufacturer. Raphael is said to have seen her for the first time as she was bathing her feet in a little fountain in her father's garden. Struck by her perfect beauty, he fell deeply in love with her, and after having made acquaintance with her, and discovered that her mind was as beautiful as her body, he became so much attached to her as to be unable to live without her. She has been called "Fornari-na." On the rough studies made for La Disputa now preserved, three love sonnets have been found in the artist's handwriting, showing that while he mused over heavenly subjects, with the faces of Peter and John before him, he had another face more dear and beautiful than either in his mind. To this love he was probably constant through life. The famous artist had become wealthy and had built for himself a tasteful and elegant home not far from the Vatican. His friends were urging him to bring a wife into this home. Cardinal Bibbiena, who had been his intimate friend when he lived in Urbino, had long been desirous that he should marry Maria, the daughter of his nephew. Evidently Raphael was engaged to her, for he writes to his Uncle, Simone, "I cannot withdraw my word, we are nearer than ever to the conclusion." As the matter was deferred year by year, as many writers believe because Raphael, loving Margherita, was unwilling to marry another. He was saved from the seeming necessity of keeping his promise by Maria's death sometime previous to his own. She was buried in Raphael's Chapel in the Pantheon not far from his grave. He had met and loved Margherita six years earlier and possibly after his engagement to Maria. Margherita was in his home when he died and to her he left an adequate portion of his property.

The Madonna della Sedia is now in the Pitti Palace. The virgin with an uncommonly sweet and beautiful face is seated in a chair with both arms resting around her babe, His head resting against her own. Grimm says Mary has been painted by Raphael in different degrees of earthly rank; the Madonna della Sedia approaches the aristocratic, but only in outward show, for the poorest mother might sit there as she does. There is an interesting legend about this picture. There was an aged hermit whose life was saved by a vine dresser's daughter, Mary; and in his gratitude the pious old hermit predicted that in some way Mary would be honored above other women. Years after, Raphael. accompanied by a band of his students, was wandering through the country in search of a model for a Madonna and found his way into the secluded valley where Mary and her husband and children lived. When they came upon the scene, Mary was sitting in a chair on the porch of the little vine grown cottage, tenderly nursing her second child while the eldest played with some sticks at her side. The child had just fastened two sticks together in the shape of a cross and was showing it to his mother. At the very first sight, Raphael perceived the beauty and grace of the group and exclaimed that there was the model he had so long sought in vain. As there was no sketching material at hand he drew the picture on the head of a barrel, to the wonder and admiration of his pupils. He paid Mary's husband liberally for the barrel head and carried it away. And thus the hermit's prayer was answered, for Mary had sat as a model for one of the loveliest Madonnas the world has ever seen.

Raphael's Madonnas have the peculiarity that they are not distinctly national. They are not Italians whom he paints, but women raised above what is national. Raphael alone could give to his Madonnas that universal human loveliness common to the European nations compared with other races.

Raphael died on the night of a good Firday, April 6, 1520, at the age of 37. While at work on the "Transfiguration," he was seized by a violent fever. Vasari says that among the many works executed by his hand, this, by the common consent of all artists, is declared to be the most worthily renowned. He seems to have realized at once that his labors were finished. He made his will, giving his works of art to his pupils, his beautiful home to Cardinal Bibviena. A thousand crowns to purchase a home whose rental should defray the expense of twelve masses monthly at the altar of his chapel in the pantheon which he had long before made ready for his body. The rest of his property to his relatives and his beloved Margherita. All Rome was bent with grief at the death of its idol. He lay in state in his beautiful home, the unfinished Transfiguration behind the casket. An immense crowd followed the body to the Pantheon; his last beautiful picture, its colors yet damp, being carried in the procession. Dead at 37 and yet how vast the amount of work accomplished. He left 287 pictures and 567 drawings and studies. Throughout all his works, there is not an expression of face, or a contour whether of muscle or drapery which is not exactly suited to its end.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The secretary of the Annual Conference informs me that only one Sunday school has sent in a report of the year's work yet.

The Conference last year ruled that all reports must be sent in by November 10th, to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Littleton, N. C. I suppose, however that Conference will be lenient in the matter as the time for meeting was put off one week after that Committee's report was adopted. See page 31, Conference Minutes.

Please send your report to Brother Taylor at once and risk a chance at the banner. A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C., Nov. 14th, 1911.

TO THE PASTORS AND CHURCH OFFICIALS.

You have in the past month no doubt seen many notices of the National Conference, which is called to meet at Washington, D. C., on December 14, 1911, for the purpose of securing legislation to stop the inter-state liquor traffic, or at least to give every State authority to protect themselves against this traffic that comes from beyond its borders. The influence of this conference will be measured more largely by the number of people who attend then any other way, and it is of prime importance that thousands of church folks and temperance folks, who are anxious to secure this legislation, attend this meeting. North Carolina is not far from Washington and is easily accessible, therefore the expense of going is not a great item.

I want to beg you to bring this matter before your church by an announcement from the pulpit or some other way, and see if your church will not send some one to this Conference. The representatives in Congress will believe that the temperance folks are demanding this legislation in proportion to their attendance on this conference, and I hope that North Carolina will emphasize the fact that we are sick and tired of the three million gallons of liquor now coming into our borders from Virginia and other states.

The various brauches of the Christian church in the last twelve months, through reports and resolutions, have entered very emphatic protests against this jug trade and called upon Conference for relief. Now let the church send their representatives to Washington to emphasize these resolutions and persuade the Congressmen, and I believe that Congress will find a solution to this pro' lem. I cannot urge you too strongly, my brother, to bring this matter before your congregation.

R. L. Davis, Supt.

P. S. Let any delegates or pastors who are going write us at Wilson, N. C.

An Unsolicited Testimonial.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper since its first copy; and I enjoy reading its pages so much that it seems as if I can not do without it. So please continue sending it to me.

With much love to the Herald and all its readers. Mrs. Frank Pugh.

(We thank Mrs. Pugh for her kindly expression of her love for the Herald.—Editor).

THE DESECRATION OF SACRED THINGS.

By Rev. C. H. Rowland.

The general impression prevails that God created the universe on such a vast scale for the display of His power and the glory of His grace in man's redemption. But we know it was purposed in the heart of God that created things should blend their music in one harmonious voice. Many, by sin, are now out of harmony with heavenly music, and God is using many means to bring man into harmony.

It is believed by many that the means used to accomplish moral reform are not effective. We know that the forces are working slowly, but they are working surely, for we read, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." While we know that there is a great work being done, yet there is a greater work to be done. This work of reform must be done, "precept upon precept, precept upon precept: line upon line, line upon line: here a little, and there a little."

The corruption in the hearts of men makes them desecrate sacred things. The evil of strong drink will make a man ignore all the circumstances of his position, and sacrifice his own dignity. He will jest about sacred things, and violate common decency. We have an example in Belshazzar, the king. He drank to drunkenness before his subjects, and brought the harem into the banqueting hall. He insulted and defied god, while he and the motley crowd drank from vessels sacred to God, and in their revelry praised other gods. His doom was written by the Divine finger on the wall where the light made it clear to the king. The king was slain that very night, and the curtain falls, and he must account for the desecration of sacred things.

It is, perhaps, the most obvious fact of human existence that the majority of men and women live in and for the physical part of their being, and think that they have a right to abuse their bodies in any way they choose. We know that this is the wrong conception, for we read, "and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." God would not have man injure himself in any way. Between stoicism and epicureanism stands the Lord accepting neither, rejecting both. As against the epicureans He stands for the rule of the Spirit over man's body, and not the rule of the body over the Spirit. The ministry of Christ began to the bodies of men. Disease, a physical consequence of sin in the world, was healed by His touch and word.

Dr. Scofield says, "And the body of man is what sin has made it. The home and servant of the spirit and the soul, it has obeyed sin in the lusts thereof. Doomed to die, though the spirit and soul cannot. The body is filled with the seeds of disease, the heritage of weakness, suffering, and decay. Jesus Christ begins by making this problem of man's degradation of spirit, soul, and body through sin His own especial and exclusive problem He entered humanity as a pure stream enters a foul pool, clearing it, but also renewing it. He put honor upon all the primal instincts and passions of man while insisting that their only true development lay along the lines of purity and holiness. And his redemption brings the whole being into balanced symmetry and beauty."

There are many sacred things that we thoughtlessly desecrate besides the body. We shall mention only a few. The Church, which is the Sanctuary of the Lord, may be desecrated by irreverance, frivolity, and secularizing it. We ought to be reverent when we are in God's house. Yet, in saying that, we do not signify that we are to come up to Church under any sense of dread or restraint. But we are to come remembering that we are not coming to a neighbor's house, or friend's, but to God's house, and therefore we ought to be devout and reverent.

There is a pressing need for reminding young people of their obligations to their homes. The home is sacred, and the old commandment to honor father and mother should be remembered. The Bible, which we accept as the word of God, must be revered. We may desecrate the Book by jesting about it; by distorting its meaning. It is easy to neglect it, but it is dangerous. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

There is the Lord's day, or the Christian Sabbath, which is given as a day of worship and rest. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work. But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." We so often desecrate the Lord's day by Sunday visiting; by attending to unnecessary secular things; by spending the day in revelry. We know that the humble and reverent attitude of the soul puts us right, not only with the Sabbath, but with everything that is good and true in this broad universe.

One of the crying needs is a public conscience. One who has a public conscience is loyal to his fellow-countrymen. We do not plead for more love for our country, but more love for our cuntrymen. It is easy to scream ourselves hoarse about our country, and then not love our countrymen. We find a great deal of love for the country, and church, but no particular interest in humanity. Many professed Christians are not willing to bear their part of the public responsibility. There is a want of truthfulness in listing taxable property. He has a public conscience who is always loyal to them, so that in no loves his fellow-countrymen, and seeks their welfare in every way possible: who case will he take advantage of them, or serve himself at their expense.

We need moral reform in order that we may get rid of political parasites. Political power is often used for treacherous and selfish ends. Knowledge of the law is sometimes used to fill the pocket, just as the mean bank clerk uses his knowledge of the combination to get at the treasure. To have a public conscience and be religious is, in God's name, to be good to our fellow men.

Some one has said, "Time is the broad bed of a great river. Public sentiment is its muddy stream running over the low flats of human nature, with its mean passions and its selfish ideals. But Christians are the gracious tributaries whose waters, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb, and by the sunshine of the hills of heaven, and kissked by the freshening flowers of grace and life, pour in their rivulets of Christ-like thought and feeling and save the world's public opinion from rottenness and death."

REPRESENTATIVE TO CONFERENCE

There have been some timely articles in the Herald with reference to attending Conference.

This writer wishes to say amen to the article in the Herald for November 2, page 3. Whether you are a preacher or a delegate you will do well to read it and heed it. If any pastor in the Conference were to go into the most back woods district in the State to hold revival services, and the roughest men in the entire community were to stand outside and chew tobacco and talk as some preachers and some delegates do at Conference such a pastor would be ready to use the law on them. Let us recognize the fact that it is a discredit to any man, be he preacher or layman, to go to Conference to represent his charge and then not attend the sessions. Let every man of us make this Conference one of the best and one of the most pleasant by attending every session possible from the devotional services in the morning to the closing services at night. If we cannot be in our place, then let us courteously get excused by the Conference.

Another Observer.

TENTATIVE PROGRAM FOR CONFERENCE.

Tuesday.

7:30 p. m. Address of welcome,—Mr. A. J. Harris. Response, some one selected by the president.

Wednesday.

10 a. m. Devotional—Conducted by President Swain. Reading of president's report, roll call and routine business.

2:30 Business session.

3:00. Election of officers.

7:30. Missionary addresses—Drs. Klein and Beck.

Thursday.

9:30. Devotional—Conducted by Rev. C. A. Cecil. Business session.

2:30. Business session.

3:30. Meeting of committees, etc.

7:30. Young People's Rally, address by Dr. Hubbell, followed by the following speakers. The Organized Bible Class, Rev J. S. Williams. The Work of the Baracas and Philatheas, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Teacher Training, A Necessity, Rev. T. M. Johnson. The Intermediate Department, Rev. A. G. Dixon.

Friday.

9:30. Devotional—Conducted by Rev. D. A. Highfill. Business session.

2:00. Examining Board meets. Various other committees holding sessions.

3:30. Church Extension—Addresses by members of the Board and others.

7:30. Our Orphanage—Miss Auman. The Woman's Work—Mrs. W. C. Hammer.

Saturday.

9:30. Devotional—Conducted by Rev. C. H. Whitaker. Business session.

2:30. Business session.

3:30. Oratorio, "The Holy City"—By special choir..

7:30. To be arranged for.

Sunday.

9:45. Sunday School.

11:00. Conference sermon—Rev. S. W. Taylor.

2:30. Memorial exercises. Revs. W. L. Harris, J. H. Turner, the deceased.

Monday.

9:30. Devotional—Conducted by Rev. W. D. Reed.

This program may be changed, of course, but we believe it will save time to adopt it. The committee may find it necessary to change it in many items, but we shall do our best to have the evening sessions as they now appear.

Observe the times for Faculty and Committees to meet. Not day before Conference as heretofore, for the faculty.

Special Request—All who come from west on Tuesday, please arrive here over Southern train at 4:15 p. m. To do this leave Durham at 1:55 and change at Oxford. This will greatly help the Committee on Entertainment.

All invited guests and those who have business with Conference will be gladly entertained, but we are sorry not to be able to provide homes for others who might desire to come.

R. M. ANDREWS.

ATTENTION, W. F. M. S.

The N. C. Branch has sent Miss Mallett to Japan, and she is dependent on us for her support. On December 1st the next quarterly payment of $150.00 on her salary is due, and we must have at least $100.00 in order to meet our obligations on that date.

Will not all our auxiliary treasurers send in what money that have on hand and will not those who have not paid their treasurers do so at once. This is a very important matter. Please do not overlook it.

Yours in the work,
Velna McCulloch, Treas. N. C. Br.

Patient Service.

An old painter of Siena, after standing for a long time in silent meditation before his canvass, with hands crossed meekly on his breast and head bent reverently low, turned away, saying: "May God forgive me that I did not do it better!" We may all say that of our past service; not despondently, but hopefully, believing that he will not only forgive us, but enable us to do better the things that remain to be done. He calls us to no strange, impracticable tasks, but to the steady tread of the patient servant, the faithful doer of daily good. "Patient continuance in well-doing," that is all. That is not too much for any of us. Let us step out strongly, bravely, steadily. Look no longer with sad eyes at the failures of the time gone by.

"Go, sin no more"—these are the Saviour's words.
The past is past. True life is here and now.
With zeal of God's forgiveness on thy brow,
Greet life's new morning, happy as the birds
That lift their songs when sunshine fills the air.
For God is Love, and love is everywhere.

The happiness of a home is the concern of everybody within its doors. Much more than we fancy depends on gentle speech, self-restraint and genial manners. These are as incumbent, so far as responsibility goes, on young people as on their parents. A busy physician carries in his pocket a bit of verse written for children, and once in a while reads it to a patient, young or old.

"I wouldn't be cross, dear, 'tis never worth while;
Disarm the vexation by wearing a smile.
'Tis a thousand times better to laugh than to cry.
What is tangled today will be smooth by and by.
"I wouldn't be cross, dear, with people at home,
They love you so fondly, whatever may come.
And since the fine gold far outweigheth the dross,
I'd always be cheerful, I'd never be cross."

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Second Chronicles, chapters 1-7.

A member of the class suggests that we assign a lesson from the New Testament each week also. Would it not be better to let each one choose his own place in the New Testament until we reach it in course? We submit the case to the class.

THE LARGER PRAYER.

At first I prayed for Light:
Could I but see the way,
How grandly, swiftly, would I walk
To everlasting day!

And next I prayed for Strength,
That I might tread the road
With firm, unfaltering feet, and win
The heavens' serene abode.

And then I asked for Faith:
Could I but trust my God,
I'd live enfolded in His peace.
Though foes were all abroad.

But now I pray for Love,
Deep love to God and man:
A living love that will not fail,
However dark His plan;

And Light and Strength and Faith
Are opening everywhere;
God only waited for me till
I prayed the larger prayer.

—Edna Dean Cheney.

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can bear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil that is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe. Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—George Eliot.

From Pastors and People.

LIBERTY CIRCUIT.

Pastor's Report to the Fourth Quarterly Conference, Liberty Church, November Eleventh.

Dear Brethren:—Time in its onward march has brought to the terminus another year's labor in the Master's Vineyard, and we are here assembled to review and make a final report of the year's endeavor, and plan for the coming year. As each one reviews his work of the year he will doubtless feel that he has done well, but that there has been much left undone that ought to have been done.

Your pastor has a share in this feeling, and is humbled because no more has been accomplished, yet he rejoices in what has been done and resolves to begin the new year with renewed zeal and courage.

The spiritual condition on the charge is far from ideal, but there are some noble Christian men and women on Liberty circuit, who have a high and exalted conception of what it takes to constitute a true Christian. They are doing what they can to bring about an ideal environment and thereby help to hasten the coming of the Master's Kingdom. We trust that this number has been increased this year, and that it will continue to increase until each and every member of Liberty circuit has been filled with the fullness of God.

There have been this year thirty-eight conversions and thirty-two accessions. Eleven have died, seven have been discontinued, and there have been granted certificates, making a loss of twenty-one. This leaves a net gain of eleven. The total number of members now on the roll is 613.

There is a prayer-meeting held each Tuesday night in the Liberty church, that is being fairly well attended, and can be made a great help to the church if all its members would take more interest in it. There is also held in Mt. Pleasant church a prayer-meeting two Sundays in the month. If there are others I have not been informed of the fact. In my judgment no church can develop spiritual life in its members without a good prayer-meeting, and no church can live and prosper long without a Spirit-filled membership. I therefore urge you to see to it that a good prayer-meeting is kept up in the several churches on the charge.

Sunday-schools are being run in all the four churches constituting the charge, and in the Liberty church it is as good as the best. Here again let me urge faithful work, for a church that neglects its young people will soon be a dead church—yea, is already dead.

Early in the year the Pleasant Union church voted to build a new church, and the board of trustees elected the pastor a building committee, and he has now standing a neat little church 45X30 with recess pulpit, Sunday-school annex 26X12 with folding doors which can be opened, making this annex a part of the auditorium when needed. The tower is 8X8X45. There are two large memorial windows in it (or will be when they come, there has been delay in making), one for the late Rev. G. W. Bowman, and the other for the late N. Ruffin Bowman. These windows are donated by the children of these two fathers in Israel exclusive of their contributions to the building fund. This new church cost about $1,500. This has all been paid except about two hundred dollars, and this is pledged.

This is a splendid achievement for this church and is worthy of the highest commendation.

The finances are somewhat behind, but we are still expecting them to come up in full. To date the following amounts have been paid:

On Pastor's Salary.

Mt. Pleasant, $254.09; bal. due, $69.51.
Pleasant Union, $70.00; bal. due, $62.00.
Liberty, $97.25, full amt. assessed.
Liberty Grove, $36.90; bal. due, $9.85.

General Interests.

Mt. Pleasant, $116.74; bal. due, $43.10.
Pleasant Union, $38.09; bal. due, $20.21.
Liberty, $47.98, full amt. assessed.
Liberty Grove, $6.87; bal. due, $8.19.

In order to a better and more satisfactory adjustment of conditions pertaining to the welfare of our church in this vicinity I suggest the following:

1. That the demands of this quarterly conference as to the pastor living in the parsonage or being permitted to rent it for his own benefit be made definite.

2. That this quarterly conference recommend to the Annual Conference and to the circuits mentioned some change in boundaries, something like the following: Make a charge of Julian, Liberty and Siler City; attach Pleasant Union to Tabernacle to compensate for the loss of the Julian church; attach Mt. Pleasant to Rock Creek, Flint Ridge and Hickory Grove, making a charge, calling it Alamance; attach Bethel, Center, and Sapling Ridge to Chatham. This would create no more charges nor call for any enlargement of an appropriation by the Board of Church Extension, *and be more workable and satisfactory than the present arrangement.

3. Liberty circuit should increase its salary for the pastor. The circuit does not pay enough to enable its membership to realize the blessings of true benevolence.

With thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for His blessings during the year, and to you my brethren who have been faithful and true, I am your humble servant,

W. D. Fogleman.

*This suggestion has found a responsive cord here, and I am assured that if the circuits affected will agree to it, that Siler City, Liberty and Julian will take care of themselves without any help from the board. Think about it. W. D. F.

HENDERSON STATION.

We are closing up our third year here. We have not done all we had hoped to do, but we believe some progress has been made. The special meeting was in many respects very good, although the results to our church were small. We believe that the spiritual condition of the church has improved and we wish for our successor many returns from what we have tried to do these past years. This is the fifteenth year since we were admitted into the conference class, thirteen of these have been spent in the pastorate; two working under the direction of the Board of Church extension. They have been years of happiness, we have given ourselves unstintedly to the work and are glad that we did. And now that we have decided to drop out of the pastorate for at least one year, we want to say this word; we have the best of feeling for all the brethren, many of them we love fondly. We have received every consideration at the hands of our church. Our first charge paid just $193.75, but it was a happy year and from then till now we have gotten a little more than a support. We are not quitting the church nor the ministry, we want to hold our Credentials till death.. But for the present we shall leave the pastorate, entering an untried field, but with faith and a clear conscience.

Looking forward to having the Conference with us with pleasure,

I am very truly yours,

R. M. Andrews.

NEWS ITEMS.

FLAT ROCK, VANCE CT.

The last quarterly conference was held at Flat Rock Saturday before the first Sunday in this month at 11 o'clock. All the churches were represented. Finances not all in yet, but think it will be paid in before Conference. Pastor's salary raised one hundred dollars on Vance Ct. It was the unanimous desire of the conference for the return of the pastor. Work during the year has been very good, improvements along several lines. Our pastor will fill his last appointment at Flat Rock next Sunday for the Conference year 1911. We hope to have our pastor return to us, for we feel that his place could not be easily filled. Bro. Stubbins has won the hearts of the people on Vance Ct. during the two years he has been with us. We have heard many favorable comments about his work. He is enthusiastic in every movement pertaining to the upbuilding of God's kingdom and our hearts would be made to feel sad to see him leave our midst, but we feel that God knows best how to supply our fields, so we are willing to leave it with Him to say who is best suited for our work.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Satterwhite spent last Sunday with Mrs. J. P. Satterwhite. Mrs S. H. Satterwhite will leave Tuesday for Durham to visit her sister, Mrs. Aibright. Mr. G. H. Pegram visited Mr. J. W. Reavis last week. He left Sunday for Lexington, Ky. Miss Gussie Finch went home Friday to spend Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Finch.

Mr. John Satterwhite spent Sunday at home. Mr. Perry Rose of Henderson spent several days with Mr. Lewis Reavis last week.

Josie Reavis, Rep.

Henderson, N. C., R F D 3

Yarborough Ct.

Another year almost gone. We are closing our pleasant year's work on Yarborough's Ct. We are glad our lot has been cast among such a good people. Brother and Sister Jane Yarborough have put in another faithful year's work for the Master. May the Lord comfort them as the days go by. Sister Knox, the well-known, devoted Sunday school worker, is still in the battle. Bro. and Sister L. H. Wilson have certainly made it pleasant for us by their continued kindness in remembering us in substantial gifts. Sister Wilson's words of appreciation of our efforts have been greatly appreciated and helped us to strive harder.

Brother and Sister Tensley's faithfulness to the church is worthy of note.

Many others of course that are loyal and true, but space won't allow one to mention. Pastor's eyes have been giving him trouble of late. Couldn't do the work that was planned, but have tried to fill the appointments.

Our last appointment at Harmony was enjoyed very much. A surprise birthday dinner was given to Mrs. M. J. Medlock, Wednesday, October 26th. It was a very happy day after Sister Medlock understood she didn't have to feed them all herself.

When pastor and family arrived she was out searching for chickens as a good number had already made their appearance. But soon she was informed it was only a surprise birthday dinner. Twenty-eight present; eight children; the most of the rest were sons-in-law, grandchildren and two great grand children. There were two great grandmothers there; Sister Clio Valentine, and Sister Medlock bearing the distinction. Sister Medlock is 74 years old, enjoys splendid health. She seldom ever misses a preaching service at Harmony church, night or day. Her daily Christian walk is a light in this community. We have three saintly mothers in Harmony to be proud of: Sister Kate Reeves, Sister Medlock, and Sister Clio Valentine, all of whom have lived out most of their days on earth, and are going to be missed when they are gone. We have a strong church here, not in money or number, but is loyalty and purity. I consider this church figures largely in the molding of character in this community.

The Medlock family have done their part to make this church what it is.

We held our fourth quarterly conference November 9th. All claims will be met on this charge. W. A. Lamar.

Orange.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

Our fourth quarterly conference was held at Chestnut Ridge Church on Saturday last. The attendance was good considering the coldness of the weather plus a stoveless church.

Prof. J. C. Pender was declared elected as delegate to Annual Conference. The reports were fairly good with the exception of Union Grove. Only one member from that church present and he did not bring any report. We are a little behind on pastor's salary, as the following will disclose.

Pastor received from Chestnut Ridge to date, $339.55. Amount still due, $86.45. Union Grove paid on pastor's salary to date, 25.35. Amount still due, $34.65.

We hope our Union Ridge friends have not forgotten their pledge, but will make a special effort to meet their obligations. Our General Interests account is not very promising at present at Chestnut Ridge, but we are working and expecting, hoping to come clear by the 22nd.

We are looking forward now to Annual Conference and are praying for a good soulstirring and inspiring Conference. May we each one help to make it so.

We are sorry to hear this evening of the death of Bro. Robt. Turner of Union Grove Church. Bro. Turner was a bright and promising young man, and one who took an interest in the work of the church at Union Grove. We deeply sympathize with those who are left to mourn their loss, and trust they will find in "Jesus the Man of Sorrows" the needed strength and support in such a trying hour.

Pastor.

Granville.

Everything is nearly up on Granville and unless something unforeseen takes place, we are expecting to come up with a clean sheet. Mt. Carmel has paid in full and the other churches have everything in sight I understand and they tell me there has been less "chipping in" than for some time. Good progress has been made in several ways. Everything is encouraging.

There are no kinder people to serve and none that I have known whose response is more hearty and generous than these, when an appeal is made to go forward in any good cause.

We have been remembered by the following brethren and sisters with such things as make the madam of the parsonage smile, the children happy, and the parson feel that he's eating away from home: Bro. G. N. Hicks and wife; Sisters Lizzie Barnes, E. T. Bobbitt, Whitly and Rogers, also, Bro. Alonzo Woodlief. Thank you, friends; it was all good.

May the Lord's presence be with us in great power in our approaching Annual Conference.

Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, N. C., Nov 12.

Caroleen.

Our fourth quarterly Conference was held at Caroleen November 11, 1911, with good reports from Shelby, Caroleen and Lincolnton, though there was no one from Lincolnton but Bro. Braswell has given a good report from there.

The churches will all have good reports to carry in. There has been something like from fifteen to eighteen hundred dollars raised by this work this year.

The quarterly conference fixed the pastor's salary on this work next year at $500.00, and Bro. Braswell said if he came back here he would not take any less than that for the pledge. Caroleen will pay $250.00, Lincolnton, $100.00, and Shelby, $150.00.

The conference voted for Bro. Braswell to come back next year. We shall be glad for the Conference to send him back.

Our church seems to be in the best condition it has been in since its foundation. We have had three good revivals this year. Bro. Braswell has held two of them by his faithful preaching and bringing members into the church, and we had another one today by letting members down and out at the back door. Fifteen were let out by the church Sunday while there were two who joined at the same service.

Our attendance Sunday was 83 in Sunday school, and the collection $2.36. We were glad to have with us Bro. Davis, Superintendent of S. S. at Shelby, and Bro. J. A. McKinney, who is Superintendant of S. S. at Gastonia.

After Sunday school Bro. Braswell preached an able sermon on "Our duty as members of the church."

We hope and pray that God may direct the Conference in every thing they do and the quarterly conference of the work asks the boards to help Brother Braswell on his salary and on the churches at Shelby and Lincolnton.

This church at Caroleen promised to pay $175.00 and paid $208.61 on salary and has paid up the claims and we want to pay more claims next year.

So we are expecting better work and more of it next year at our church here.

H. E. Waldrop.

Hobbs' Chapel, Greensville Ct.

Brother Ashburn preached for us again last Sunday afternoon; using for his text Isaiah 35:8: "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called a way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it is shall be for those: the way faring men, though fools , shall not err therein."

Bro. Ashburn always preaches good and interesting sermons. We like Bro. Ashburn, and we want Conference to send him back to us next year. We enjoy his presence in our homes.

After preaching Mrs. Sallie Tudor, wife of deceased Mr. J. T. Tudor, and Mr. Tom Mitchell were united in matrimony. Hope them a happy time here and a happier one when life's voyage is over.

Our S. S. attendance is improving and we hope it will continue so.

Dora Pair, Reporter.

November 10, 1911.

Uwharrie Circuit.

Bro. W. E. Swain:

We held our fourth quarterly conference at Cid Church last Saturday, November 11th. Every church well represented except two, and it was a very unlikely day. But quite a number came and it was one of the most instructive services I ever attended and other representatives remarked the same. The business was transacted in a business-like way. The salary was raised some for next year. The circuit is but little behind and I believe that before the minister starts to Conference that all will be paid up, as part of the churches have paid up and the rest is almost insured. The circuit is in the best shape it has been for a good while, spiritually and financially. There were very good revivals on the work and good Sunday schools and we instructed our delegate to bring back Brother Trogdon without fail, as he has got this work we believe in such a shape as there will be great things in store for him and the people too. The people have become so attached to Bro. Trogdon that I believe it will be a throw back to this work not to get him back again. So now, Bro. Swain, do your best and send him back to us again if the Lord is willing. We had the pleasure of having Bro. G. F. Cashatt, of Mt. Pleasant, in our home Saturday night and it was a pleasure to us to have such a spiritual talker with us. So come again.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Briles and son, of Mt. Zion, attended the Conference Saturday.

Brother Moses Morgan makes us a faithful secretary. The first quarterly conference was appointed to be held at Jerusalem.

The Pastor's report was most excellent.

Bro. William Cecil accompanied Bro. Trogdon to Denton, where he went to assist Bro. Hulin at Alleghany is a protracted meeting. I must say in conclusion that our pastor has been faithful to fill his appointments, and he has our prayers and if we never meet again on earth, we have a hope by the grace of God to meet in heaven. May God's richest blessings rest upon the Conference and all of God's people everywhere.

Yours for Christ,

N. W. L.

Mt Carmel, Granville Ct.

Rev. Mr. Bethea filled his regular appointment with us last Sunday, it being his last appointment with us till Conference. Bro. Bethea and the members were "made to smile" because of "Carmel coming up in full," financially (as she usually and always does).

The Sunday school is in good condition. Have succeeded in enrolling the hundredth one.

Rev. G. W. Holmes, a former and appreciated pastor of this church, will preach for us the fourth Sunday of this month. A large congregation is expected.

Polk Garrett.

Nov. 14, 1911.

LIBERTY CHURCH.

Dear Herald:

Our church is still alive although the weather has been disagreeable. Mr. Fogleman gave us a splendid sermon Sunday morning on "The Church," from the text, "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Acts 27: 31. Preaching at night also.

The fourth quarterly conference was held in this church on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 11th, and there was a good number present. Every church represented except Liberty Grove.

Dr. Swain, president of our Conference, will preach here next Saturday night. Everybody is cordially invited to be present.

I understand that all of the assessments for this church have been paid. We wish to commend Mrs. Shelly Pickett for her faithfulness in furnishing flowers for the church services. She is so thoughtful of this, and we all know that flowers add to the service.

We had a good number out at the prayer meeting last week. Mr. Fogleman announced as his subject for this week, "Repentance," and asked that we would prepare something on the subject and take our Bibles to the service.

Mr. John Kimrey of Liberty Grove church has recently died. He was a faithful S. S. and church worker and will be sadly missed.

On the fifth Sunday in October, Rev. "Billie" Kennett preached for us. He is always ready to help and to fill the vacancies.

Wishing much success to the Herald, I am yours in the work,

Nannie Hunter Wells.

Liberty, N. C., Nov. 13 1911.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Bro. Raper filled his regular appointment Sunday, and preached us a good sermon, as he always does. Everybody seemed to enjoy his sermon so much.

Oh, Bro. Raper is so in earnest, and we all love him so much. This was his last appointment for this Conference year. May the Lord send him back to us next year, as we think that he is the man for this circuit, as he has done such good work since he has been with us.

We have not had any Sunday school for several Sundays, on account of rain and diphtheria. We hope to start again next Sunday. We were to have had children's day the fifth Sunday in last month. On account of diphtheria we could not have it. I will close by saying we will gladly welcome Brother Raper back next year.

Blanche Weatherly, Rep.

Tabernacle Ct., Moriah Church.

Our regular Sunday school service was held Sunday afternoon, as usual. We only had seventy-six present at this service, owng to the fact that the weather was very inclement. Our collection for the Denton Orphanage amounted to $6.89.

At the close of the Sunday school service, Mr. Cecil gave us another good sermon, using as his text Psalms 133-1, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." This discourse was enjoyed by all who were permitted to hear it.

At the close of the sermon, Mr. Cleo Burgess was receeived into full membership. We are very glad indeed, to welcome him into our church.

As this was the last appointment for this Conference year, officers for the ensuing year were elected. Rep.

Denton.

In the name of the Methodist Protestant Church, I beg of you, dear readers, that you come to the rescue of our Orphans' Home. Cold weather is here, the children are not properly clothed, funds are low and it is hard on those who have charge, they can hardly buy the bare necessities, much less little comforts that make home life sweet to a child.

We, as a church, have taken seventeen little lives and souls to train for the Master; are we going to forget them?

If you ever expect to help the Home, let me beg of you, for Christ's sake, help now. Don't put it off another day. These children are ours, we will be held responsible. Please do not read this and let it pass, send something, no matter how small, if it is the best you can do. God will bless it and you according to the spirit and not the amount.

One who has the interest of the work at heart. M. W. R.

Caldwell Ct.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Shady Grove, the 11th of November with a very good attendance considering the rainy day. We held services at 11 a. m., and after a suitable intermission the business of the conference was transacted. Reports not as good as they ought to have been. Burke's Chapel has let class meeting Sunday school die, during the last quarter. Shady Grove reports no class meeting, but an interesting Sunday school. Pleasant Grove, no reports at all.. The new church at Shady Grove is getting on very well. We have a building 28 x 40, 14 ft. high, up and weatherboarded all but just a very little, and all covered but a few courses of shingles on the top, and expect to soon put them on. I think that when this building is done it will be a credit to the community. It is located on a very nice elevated place and on a public road where it can be seen from a very long way off and in a thickly settled community, one mile from the town of Connelly Springs.

Yours fraternally,

J. B. Bivens.

Henry, N. C.

Orphans' Home.

We want to thank all who have sent us contributions. We have received a dozen nice pumpkins from Mr. Taylor, also a package from the Ladies' Aid at Clark's Chapel containing two quilts, 2 sheets, 1 pr. pillows, 1 pr, pillow cases and one union suit.

We rec'd a pr. of shoes minus the name of the giver. We supposed they were from Burlington judging from the wrapper. Mr. Trotter, a hardware salesman, has given a nice water cooler. Mr. J. R. Peace, one load of wood, and others have been kind to us and cheered our hearts by kind words and acts. May the Lord bless each one.

The time has now come when we must provide winter shoes and clothing. This means extra expenses. Some have written for sizes of different children, saying they would send clothing. Others have said they were going to get up Thanksgiving boxes, might I suggest that you enclose some peas and beans in these boxes. Our children are very fond of these. We have gathered our sweet potatoes, and although we only had fifteen bushels, yet it looks large to the children.

My brother continues very ill of typhiod fever. We are trusting that God will restore him to health. We have two sick ones in the Home. Pray for the sick ones and for the Orphans' Home.

We are glad to have Mrs. Fannie Page assistiing in the Home now.

Yours in the work,

Etta Auman.

Treas. Report.

Bethel S. S.	1.00
Fairview	.68
W. F. M. S. Bethel Church	2.15
Alamance Ct.
Mispah Church	6.05
Brown Summit	4.00
Enfield S. S.	3.00
Pensacola S. S.	1.05
Asheboro Church	12.10
Chestnut Ridge S. S.	3.00
Mrs. J. E. Diviney	1.00
Asheville S. S.	3.00
Fair Grove S. S., Why Not Ct.	1.00
Mrs. Dixon, Mt. Hermon Ct.	.50
Mr. R. A. Coble	.10
Mr. Jas. P. Sharp	.25
Mrs. Green A. Nicholson	.25
Mr. H. G. Nicholson	.50
Mrs. H. G. Nicholson	.25
Mrs. Jane Sharp	1.00
Mrs. Callie Hawk	.50
Tabernacle S. S.	2.76
Tabernacle S. S. Baraca Class	1.16
Tabernacle Church	5.00
Total	$50.40

In a recent S. S. lesson in our Winston church as we sat in the senior Bible class we were much impressed with the emphasis that our excellent teacher, Brother W. L. Spoon, gave the subject of Haman's conduct towards Mordecai, the Jew, and the fatal consequences attending Haman's hatred and the great effort he made to overthrow Mordecal, resulting in his own fearful doom. Our teacher himself seemed deeply impressed at the thought of us poor mortals trying to assert ourselves, and how when some one has offended our dignity either by accident or on purpose how prone we are to harbor the insult and try by various expedients to get even with such an one thereby risking the displeasure of a sin avenging God who knows the thoughts and intents of every heart and will surely reward us according to our deeds. My brother, my sister, our dignity, much as we may value it, is of immeasurably little consequence when pitted against the commands of Jehovah who has declared that if we forgive not men their trespasses neither will our heavenly Father forgive our trespasses. Are we willing to risk eternal death and banishment from the presence of a just and merciful God by trying to resent every fancied insult, and like the wicked Haman bring destruction to our own souls. Some day in the light of eternity we must review every thought, word, and act of our lives. Does it not behove us to watch and pray lest we enter into temptation.

—Bro. W. H. Neese, our capable Mt. Pleasant correspondent, entered school at Elon College this week.

—The Southern had a derailment near Benaja a few days ago in which Engineer Kenny lost his life. Now another is reported between Dry Fork and Chatham involving the serious injury of a number of freight cars, but no loss of life.

WESTERN MARYLAND LETTER.

The North Carolina Club held its first meeting of the year in the Seminary Library Nov. 9 at 4 P. M. and was called to order by the president, Mr. W. A. Ledford. All of the North Carolina students were present except two. Dr. Forlines of the Seminary Faculty and Miss Lease of the College Faculty were present. An interesting program consisting of recitations, music, and extemporaneous discussion was carried out after which cream and cake were served. Every one seemed to enjoy the occasion very much. It seemed to be the opinion of all that the N. C. Club was a great factor in promoting a closer fellowship among the N. C. students.

On Friday evening, Nov. 24, Misses Fishel and Ogburn will appear in a musical recital at the College. These recitals which take place every year are looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure by all except the participants.

Dr. C. E. Forlines is sufficiently restored to health to take up his work in Seminary again.

Conference is approaching! Several of the boys here are very anxious to attend, however, none of them will go so far as the writer knows.

Rev. C. W. Bates and the writer, both of the senior class, will apply for permanent work and Revs. L. W. Gerringer and W. Ledford, both of the middle class, will no doubt, apply for work during the summer.

Jesse E. Pritchard.

Seminary, Westminster, Md., Nov. 13.

WESTMINSTER SEMINARY NOTES.

Believing that the Methodist Protestant church is interested in her educational institutions and particularly in the one which has for its sole object the fitting of her sons for the service of the churches, a correspondent has been appointed to furnish items for the church papers. The purpose of this is not only to satisfy a desire for information, but to stimulate more interest in the Seminary on the part of the church and especially on the part of any of her young men who are contemplating the gospel ministry.

The Methodist Protestant Church was founded by trained men and it is needless to say that one of her greatest drawbacks has been the lack of such men to fill her pulpits. She has always had a goodly proportion of representative and efficient men but how much greater would have been her progress had that proportion been larger! Education and special training are no longer luxuries but necessities. In every field of activity the one who is prepared is the one who has the advantage and the greatest opportunity and is usually the most efficient. Many, because of native talent and untiring industry, are very successful without the special preparation—that is, in spite of the lack and not because of it. But where one thus succeeds scores fail. In order that the Methodist Protestant Church might have an educated ministry she established her colleges. In order that she might have trained men capable of filling her more responsible pulpits, or any other position to which she might call them, she took another step in advance and established Westminster Theological Seminary. For twenty-nine years this school has been trying to "keep the faith" once delivered unto her that the young men who go from her halls might be "thoroughly furnished unto every good work".

The Seminary was organized in 1882 with Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., as principal. He served till 1886 when he was succeeded by Rev. J. T. Ward, D. D. Dr. Ward died in March, 1897, and in April of the same year Rev. H. L. Elderdice, D. D., was chosen president which position he has held ever since.

During the early years of the Seminary the attendance was not very large nor were many of the Conferences of the church represented, but under the leadership of such men as those who have been its presidents and professors those conditions could not long prevail. The attendance has not only been increasing, as well as the number of the Conferences represented, but the proportion of college men has been gaining. During the first eighteen years the Seminary granted sixteen men the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Since that time, or during the last eleven years, thirty-six have received the degree and sixty per cent. of the present student body are college men.

The increase of the number of students necessitated the enlargement of the Seminary building which was done in 1907. The number of the volumes in the library has been increasing so rapidly of late years that last year new cases were put in which now amply accommodate and protect the books. It is worth remarking that the Seminary now possesses a very valuable library. To one contemplating taking a Seminary course that is something worth considering.

Another addition has also been necessary, but this time it was in the faculty. Rev. Harlan L. Feeman, D. D., who was for two years president of the Adrian Seminary and till its consolidation with Westminster last spring has accepted the chair of Practical and Biblical Theology. It is hardly necessary to say that he is filling this position with credit to himself and the entire satisfaction of all. He is loved by all the students and it is their earnest prayer that he may be granted that degree of health which will enable him to spend many years in a position of such great usefulness to the church and the Kingdom. His presence adds more strength and efficiency to that which was already strong and difficult to improve upon, for the Seminary faculty is composed of men the character and ability of whom the church may well be proud and may rest assured that when young men are entrusted to their care they are in safe hands.

It is interesting to note that the Seminary has been making progress along other lines. Until three years ago a student was required to spend but two years in the Seminary, providing he were a college graduate, before he would be granted the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. At that time the course was enlarged and greatly improved and now extends over a period of three years. Other improvements also have been made from time to time until now the work done will compare favorably with that of any Seminary in the country.

One of the pleasant features of the Seminary life is the strong Christian fellowship existing among the students and between the students and faculty. The result is that brotherly love prevails and discord and contention are unknown. This spirit is cultivated and strengthened by the strong devotional atmosphere which pervades the school in all its varied activities. In the class-room, the chapel exercises and the prayer-meeting there is kept ever before the minds of all a clear vision of Him whom we love, of Him who is the head of the Church, of Him for whose service the most thorough preparation is needed.

THE LOCAL PREACHER.

We could wish, of course, that the people all would take our paper—or their paper, but all do not take the paper—and thus, so many fail to read. However, I again want to write in behalf of the local preacher. I could have put the subject in shape by writing about a local preacher, but I venture as above. I failed in a former article to do as well for the local preacher as I could have wished, and I feel to come again.

I wish that those who are well able to help according to this "ideal" for the case could be prevailed on to do so. The plea that I would make (the amount of money in view) would stagger some, perhaps, but I do not hesitate to say that my proposition is very reasonable.

If the local preacher had an abundance of money he could not hire a hand to do his individual work—nor could you itinerants. Men that must have plowing, etc., done could, with the money, hire their work done, but you must do your own work—and of course you are glad of the honor of having such a peculiar work that you must attend to it in person. I often wish that my local preacher was well able to hire the boys to do his secular work, so that he could be free enough to wait on us better in spiritual things—but he has been hampered, up to the present time. He would be very helpful to us if those who are so well able on their "line of life" would help him.

I do not have to ask any man about the ability of our local preacher to help us, nor do I have to ask about the financial ability of the class who should help him, but he is able and so are they. There are others, of course, to be respected, but the above has a subject at issue in view, and those who read will please allow this cal'

By the other call several weeks ago, there was not much money asked for, but the "standard," the "ideal" has gone up much higher, and will stay up on the side of justice however the success or not; and, in this world, in many cases, success is not the evidence of righteousness.

I wish that we could, at once, raise the amount of four or five hundred dollars for the benefit of our local preachers, and I am sure that it could be done, and I take the responsibility to say that it would be gain for those who are responsible to do so. I have been thinking right closely on the "generous side of life," as those who have been reading up know, and I am also thinking closely about the responsible side of life—and inside of all this I venture to urge the above. I, as the local preachers and others of you, as you may perceive, could not hire, with the money, any "work hand" to do my main work, such as the above, but the work must be done in person. If I had the money in bank I would not be obligated for it, (not for the little amount of ten dollars) because there are enough to meet the claim, the obligation, whose work is in shape to be done by the "hired servant." The local preacher, and you preachers who may read this with some interest, and this scribe, are not belonging to the class that have the liberty to employ "the other fellow" to do their work.

The "well-to-do class," whose work is in shape for the "hired man," are the ones that this appeal is being made to.

The gospel is so full, and salvation is so free, that there are men and women who can't stand in the state of regeneration if they just simply stop at some standard that belong to "tithing," or "living and letting live," any "sinner" could do all that. If one or two, or more, of the well-to-do, those who are so shaped as to "hire their work done." could do so "strongly" as to raise the amount of $500. for our local preacher, they would succeed to throw light on the above subject, and such of "the true light" as some have never seen. As for the "needy one," he is not hid out, but is at work, and can be found.

Some there are, who are not able to understand the seventh and eight chapters of Romans—or they had as well make the confession. However, if they will help to round up the above claim, much of the needed light will come to their h arts. The above case is very urging, and those who should respond are more in need of the grace that must of necessity come by such acts or routes of self-denial, than is the needs of our local preacher. But under the wise providence of God, all are able to perform the duties in reach.

This is a real case, and one urging, but we are at liberty to act out our convictions. W. F. Grabs.

P. S. Our local preacher may be plowing, or doing secular work these days, such as the "boys" could and should do —and such as they are called to, if they were industrious enough to look up to their calling. Plowing is a high and honorable calling for those who should be called to it, but it is not the calling really for my local preacher and because of being bowed down to that which he should not do the object of this "object lesson" will quite likely never be liberated enough to read this article. He may really need two or three religious papers, but is not able to take one.

CALL NO. 11.

Previously reported	$42.00
Rev. S. Simpson, D. D.	3.00
Rev. N. G. Bethea	3.00
Rev. J. A. Burgess	3.00
R v. C. L. Whitaker	3.00
Rev. E. A. Plyler	3.00
Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D.	3.00
Rev. W. C. Kennett	3.00
Rev. Geo. E. Hunt	3.00
Rev. C. A. C eil	3.00
Rev. J. D. Williams	3.00
Rev. R. M. Andrews	3.00
Rev. G. F. Millaway	3.00
Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk	3.00
Rev. J. E. Hartsell	3.00
Rev. G. L. Curry	3.00
Rev. J. H. Bowman	3.00
Rev. C. E. Forlines	3.00
Rev. C. J. Edwards	3.00
Rev. W. M. Pike	3.00
Rev. J. N. Garrett	3.00
Mr. S. V. Pickens	1.00
Mr. J. E. Stafford	1.00
Mr. L. C. Hine	1.00
Mrs. H. G. Kime	1.00
Mrs. W. C. Whitaker	1.00
Dr. W. R. Goley	1.00
Mr. Geo. B. Harris	1.00
Mr. J. W. Gibson	1.00
Total	$110.00

If any other brother expects to pay his assessment on account of the death of Rev. J. H. Turner please let him send it in at once so I can make out full report before starting to Conference.

A. G. Dixon, Sec. Treas.

High Point Nov. 14th, 1911.

THANKSGIVING.

How many Sunday schools or churches will join with us in taking a special offering on Thanksgiving or Sunday following for our Orphans' Home? I don't think we could do anything better than take a thank-offering for these little unfortunate children. We have some two hundred schools and let's see how many will take this special offering on Thanksgiving. Now Bro. Superintendent, put this before your schools next Sunday, and if you do not have any service on Thanksgiving day, take the offering on the Sunday following, and insist on every pupil bringing something for this special occasion.

We notice only a few schools have joined in sending the first Sunday collection to the Home. Why can't we get every school in our church to join in this? I think if we were all interested in this work as we should be, we would see that ev ry Sunday school pupil in our church had the chance once a month to give something to this cause. I think our schools would prosper more. and they would grow in numbers as well as in interest

Now, Mr. Superintendent, do not forget this as soon as you have read it, but begin talking it right now, and let's see how nice a sum we can get for these little children on Thanksgiving.

Also do not forget to ask your school if they don't want to give something once a month. Leave it to a vote of your school if you can't settle it any other way. Very sincerely,

M. F. Vuncannon.

Star, N. C., Nov. 13th, 1911.

TRUSTEES MEET.

Notice is hereby given that Trustees of Denton High School will meet in M. P. Church in Henderson, Friday, November 24, at 2:00 P. M.

Geo. L. Reynolds, Sec...

This Nov. 13, 1911.

THE MINISTRY OF LITTLE CHILDREN.

Ere sin could blight or sorrow fade,
Death came with friendly care;
The opening bud to heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there

Some while ago, in a mood for such thoughts, our eye fell on the item that in one year the deaths in four Eastern cities amounted to 43,432; and of this number, 24,767 were children under five years of age.

The last sentence fixed our attention—twenty-four thousand, seven hundred and sixty-seven children died during the year! This in four cities only! Of the rest of the forty-three thousand four hundred and thirty-two, who can tell their destiny? Some went to heaven, some went to hell. But concerning these little ones none can doubt. Taking the aggregate of other cities, villages, and the country at large, we comprehend a fact that finds expression at the Saviour's lips: "Of such is the kingdom of God." And in a sacred couplet:

Millions of infant souls compose
The family above.

The adults had worked out their mission or failed to do it. But these little ones! Had they no mission? Was their being a failure? Lived they and suffered and died, and is the world all the same as though they had not been? Nay, verily. Theirs was a precious ministry, and one that they only could fulfill.

"What a waste of life!" exclaims the worldly economist as he figures up the statistics of the population. "They lived in vain" is the thought of the man ambitious of making his mark on the age. "Mere blanks, flowers that came to no fruit, broken off, fallen, faded" is the thought and feeling of many.

But Christian philosophy presents a more ennobling and comforting view. Cold and selfish would this world of ours be without these children. They preach the evangel of beauty and innocence: they break the incrustations of worldliness: they come to love and to be loved; they touch chords vibrating solemnly, sweetly, which are reserved only for their tiny hand: they stir in the heart the hidden wells of feeling: they preserve human sympathy from utter ossification; they deeply subsoil our hard natures. Geologists often show us, far down under the earth's layers, the clear and well-defined print of a frail leaf or the track of a bird made in the dim ages past. These have left imperishable memorials of themselves on the fact of a world from which whole species and races and kingdoms have passed away without a record.

The Bible makes mention, minute and kind, of the death of little children. Take the case of David's family. We lose sight of the sickness and death of the unweaned child in the effects produced upon the royal parent. It is not saying too much that a large portion of those who are saved will be saved by the ministry of little children.

Summing up the moral results of the year, we must not credit all to orators and papers and books and institutions. These little preachers have visited homes, softened the hearts of the indwellers, and drawn them heavenward, where other voices have not been heeded. The strong man, unused to tears, has bowed over the little coffin and wept. Under what sermon was he ever so melted down? What other preacher ever availed to bow that pride of strength and unseal that fountain of tears? The gay, worldly-minded sits silent and sheds secret tears and prays; and, peradventure, as these two hearts are drawn closer by a common grief they think of a common tie in heaven and resolve "through grace, as the babe cannot come to them, that they will go to it."

"When our little boy died" has been the beginning of a pilgrimage of many bereaved parents. The death and burial of the babe dates impressions on the whole family circle that have matured to godliness.

The old may outlive their friends, the middle-aged may make enemies who are glad to be rid of them, or, wandering off, they may die where none lament; but the babe is without prejudice in life and mighty in death. It is God's messenger of reconciliation, his flag of truce in this world of enmities, envies, wrath, and strife. It has a strong hold on two hearts, if no more. The empty crib, the half-worn shoes, the soft locks of hair that few may see prolong the painful yet pleasing memory of the angel visitor that looked in upon us and smiled, and went to heaven, bidding us, amid care and sorrow to follow on.

There is something so peculiarly affecting in the loss of a child that we sympathize with the parent who said that he believed no minister was prepared to bury another's child who had not buried one of his own.

"It was only a baby." Ah! they know not, who talk so slightingly, how deep and long a shadow that little form can cast. "In the death of children heaven is receiving large contributions from earth. Next to the conversion of a soul, the enemy of God and man may take least pleasure in the death of a child. His snares are prevented and his prey lost."

We bless God for creation. The opening of a career of immortal existence is in itself a great event—a mission of life and glory which death cannot frustrate. Though the voice of praise swell as the sound of many waters, and the celestial harpers are numberless, yet his ear detects every new voice and joyful string, and the praise of these little ones glorifieth him. In this view the babe, even of a few days and sickly, that goeth from the cradle to the grave, is of more intrinsic importance than material worlds.

The mystery of pain is one of the hardest trials of faith. It is natural to associate suffering with guilt. But what have they done, the innocents? Even here there is a lesson and a consolation if our hearts can receive it. He who knew no sin was made perfect through suffering. May not our children, who cannot confess him before men, be permitted at this one point to have fellowship with their Saviour and ours? May not this refining fire chasten and prepare for the eternal heaven the fallen nature which they, with us, inherit? A drop of this baptismal fire falls even on them. By a brief experience of pain in the mortal body, before they quit it for the immortal, even they came to some knowledge of the price of their redemption, and the contrast of a few painful hours may heighten the joys of eternity.

A Hindoo woman said to a missionary: "Surely your Bible was written by a woman." "Why?" "Because it says so many kind things about women. Our Shastas never refer to us but in reproach." "Parents, watching by the couch of suffering innocence and seeing the desire of their eyes taken away at a stroke, have found themselves busy running over the Scriptures for comfort and gathering up, as a stay of their hearts, what God has said about their little children." How full and precious and unequivocal are the passages of comfort! The conclusion is: Surely the Bible was written by a parent. And so it was. He knows the heart of a parent and works by it to the glory of his grace.

"O, prattling tongues, never formed to speech, and now still in death, how eloquently you preach to us. O, little pattering feet, leading the way, how many are following after you to heaven!" We thank God for your ministry. And if it be in vain, the fault and the loss will be all our own.—Bishop McTyeire.

WANTED—To correspond at once with a dress maker or good seamstress who is willing to come and live in Winston for a while at least. Single lady preferred. Address promptly Mrs. B. F. Norman, No. 845, Patterson Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.

THE BOY'S COMPANIONS.

"Where is John?" Father, who had just returned from his day's work, made this inquiry concerning his five-year-old son.

"I thought he was out in front watching for you," mother replied

"I did not see him."

"He must have gone down the street then. I cannot keep track of him any more. He is off every chance he gets."

"He'll be back in a few minutes," father remarked indifferently.

Why be concerned about the child's absence? There was no danger. The street was a quiet suburban one, with no cars and few vehicles.

No danger? Ah! but John is more than physical body. He is mind and soul as well.

John returned as father said he would. He had been in a neighbor's house, and there was no harm done.

No harm? Then why did John hurry so with his supper and leave the house so quickly when the meal was ended?

Ah, well, the neighbors liked him. Of course they did. Who could help it? His absence had its advantages also, for father had time toread the afternoon paper and mother to do her evening work.

"Where is John?"

Five years later father asks the same question.

"I think he went down to Anderson's," mother replied.

"Why does he go there so much?"

"The boys have built a cabin in Anderson's yard."

"Which boys?"

"O, the Andersons' and the Griffiths' and Will Hamer and Sam Van Leer and a few more."

Boys from the best familes in the neighborhood. No cause for alarm here.

But come, father, and see that cabin. Come quickly, for the moments are precious. This is it. Open the door. Whew! What an odor of stale tobacco smoke! Do not hesitate on the threshold, for your boy is part owner here.

What is that small box behind the rafter? And thes papers, father! what are these? Dime Novels. And this little book with no title on its yellow cover, which is pushed away back beneath the other papers; what is this?

Quick, father! Have you a match? Burn them—the booklets, the papers, the cigaretts, the shanty—all of them!

But stop a bit. The nicotine poisoning, the lies, the false conceptions of heroic manliness, the vile stories, the impure thoughts, the corrupt practices! Can you burn these things out of your boy and leave him unscarred? Can you gather them together in one hideous mass of corruption and so utterly destroy them that he will know them no more forever?

Can you? Say, father, if you can do this, come with the speed of the lightening's flash and the glory of the morning's light to show us other fathers how to do it.

"Where is John?"

The same inquiry is made when another five year is past.

"He went down to the creek," mother answered.

"Why does he go down there so much?"

"They have a boat and a boathouse."

"The Anderson and the Griffith boys and Will Hamer and Sam Van Leer."

The same old crowd—boys from the best families in the neighborhood. But, mother, did John forget to tell you that a few more boys had joined that company—Jack Quinn, whose father keeps the notorious saloon; Mike Donnelly, son of a low-bred politician; and more of that type? No matter. Perhaps they are not so very different from your boy after all.

"But this is Sunday," father suddenly remembers. "Doesn't he go to Sunday school any more?"

"He hasn't been there for several weeks."

"Why?"

"I suppose he thinks he has grown too big."

Go after the boy, father. To the boathouse? Yes, or to any other place he may be this Sunday afternoon. Do not go in anger, with stern reproach or arbitrary command, but go with loving pity and sympathy and bring him back. And wherever he goes, be his companion. Let his interests be your interests. Learn his ambitions. If he has none, create some.

Another five year pass, and there comes the same old query: "Where is John?"

"I do not know," mother replies. "He never tells me now."

Ah, the pathos of it! But try as you will, sweet mother lips, you cannot utter the sob that is in the heart. It seems but yesterday that those same lips sang baby John to sleep while the heart built magnificent castles—virtue, love, achievement. They seemed so sure, so strong, those castles; but now they are blown over with the breath of these few words: "He never tells me now!"

"Where is John?" You have asked that question many times in the past, father; and you were satisfied when mother answered. You will ask that question many times in the future; but there will be no answer. Long after the lips have ceased to repeat the query your heart and soul will reiterate it, for in your innermost being will be the bitterness of a fearful disappointment. How gladly would you recall the days when the little fellow romped through the house while you complained of his noise or shunned his society! Because you shunned his companionship then, you will one day yearn for a fellowship which you cannot win.—Harry E. Bartow, in Mother's Magazine.

Andrew-Brewer.

Married on November 7th, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. H. Andrew, Miss Mollie Nora, to Mr. Rufus R. Brewer. The attendants were Mr. Walter Brewer with Miss Lala Andrew; Mr. Chas. Andrew with Miss Kara Jonston, and Mr. Jasper Jones with Miss Kara Andrew. The bride and groom were raised near Siler City and are most excellent young people.

After the ceremony a sumptuous dinner was served, and then the happy pair, accompanied by friends, drove to Siler City where the bride and groom left on the southbound train for Washington and other points.

The ceremony was performed by the undersigned.

May this happy pair have a long and useful life. J. H. Bowman.

Breedlove-Kittrell.

At the Granville parsonage, November 12, 1911, at 10 o'clock, A. M., Eugene R. Breedlove, and Pearl Kittrell, the writer officiating. The bride is one of our best and most industrious young ladies, a member of Rehobeth Church, and the groom who is an industrious young farmer is to be congratulated on winning such a prize.

We reminded them as they started on their journey that it was the folks and not the day that made the success in life. While the day was cloudy, we predict for this happy couple a bright future, for energies turned in the proper channel always means a life of influence and usefulness to those who are willing to make the best of their opportunities.

May heaven's richest blessings attend them along life's way. N. G. Bethea.

Bro. O. W. Hanner is critically ill at his beautiful home in Winston. He is attended by two or more good physicians. He has been confined to his bed for about three weeks. His many friends are quite anxious for his recovery.

—Mrs. Maggie Hicks Cozart drew a 40 dollar prize at the recent Oxford Fair for the best household exhibit. It was said to be very fine.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, NOV. 26.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject: "Peace and Blessings." I Thes. 5: 14-24. (Thanksgiving Meeting).

Daily Readings.

M. David's thanksgiving, I Chron. 16: 8-36.
T. Thanksgiving proclamation, Ps. 100.
W. A Thanksgiver, Luke 17: 11-19.
T. A backward glance, Isa. 63: 7-9.
F. Eternal thanksgiving, Rev. 7.9-17.
S. Daily thanksgiving, Phil. 4:6.
S. The topic.

Hints for This Lesson.

You are anxious to have a most delightful meeting for "Thanksgiving." All of you will be needed to have the "most delightful" meeting. The leader should begin early to plan a good strong program, and all the members should help by doing what has been planned. It takes more than a president to have a successful society; it takes more than a chairman to make an active committee; and it takes more than a leader to have a good meeting.

Topics for Discussion.

1. Why do we have Thanksgiving day?
2. Tell of the origin of the day.
3. Why does the government recognize it?
4. Is it a national or a religious holiday?

Topical Analysis.

1. Peace comes by obeying Christ.
2. The world can give no lasting peace.
3. The Gospel is a message of peace.
4. Blessings rest upon the obedient.
5. Storms pass away when Christ comes.
6. Is Christ dwelling in you?
7. Is your society a blessing to the church?

ABOUT THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving day carries us back to one of the Jewish Feasts. When all the crops were gathered, all the tribes journeyed up to the mecca of their nation and religion, Jerusalem, to spend a week acknowledging God's goodness. In this busy day, we think we cannot give so much time to a period of thanksgiving and service, so we take just a day. Even at Christmas only a part of our people take more than a day, while those engaged in the service of big corporations or public work do not get even a single day.

Among the Americans, Thanksgiving day had it sorigin in 1621. This was at the end of the first harvest, after that brave band of pioneers had landed from the Mayflower. Governor Bradford gets the credit of making the first proclamation. We know not what the Jamestown colony had done, but our good opinion of them leads us to believe that they must have had similar services.

The period of the first American Thanksgiving was a week, and was mutually enjoyed by the Pilgrims and King Massoit, with ninety of his braves. Many souls of the Mayflower had been harvested by the "grim reaper." A thousand doubts, misgivings, hardships and dangers had befallen them. A writer of the time says that "the barley crop was good, but the peas were not worth gathering." The cold of the long New England winter was upon them when that week of Thanksgiving came. Still they found much to be grateful for, and their expressions of appreciation of God's infinite goodness were something more than mere lip service. If they had much to praise God for, surely we can give thanks from the depths of our hearts for so many bounties.

Thanksgiving was irregularly observed by the colonists, "as unexpected prosperity or unhoped-for aid in adversity moved them to special acts of praise." In 1874 it became national, but was not observed regularly except in New England. In January, 1895, President Washington set aside February19 as a time of special thanksgiving and praise. In 1863 President Lincoln issued a proclamation for a day of the kind in the autumn and since that time the occasion has been regularly observed. It is now considered a stated holiday for the last Thursday in November.

Says one writer: "It is a great thing for a great nation, intoxicated with the hum of the wheels of industry and charmed by the glitter of gold, to close the throttle and sit still in the cab for a day, and meditate upon and render thanks to God for all His mercies." May all Christian Endeavorers regard the day so highly.

For the Christian Endeavorers.

1. And we exhort you, endeavorers, admonish the disorderly, encourage the fainthearted, support the weak, be long-suffering toward all.

2. See that none render unto any one evil for evil; but always follow after that which is good, one toward another, and toward all.

3. Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

4. Quench not the Spirit; despise not preaching; prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

5. Abstain from every form of evil.

6. And the God of peace himself sanctify you wholly; and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved, entire, without blame at the coming of Jesus Christ.

7. Faithful is he that calleth you, who will also do it.

FARMING FOR THE MASTER.

This article is to suggest to pastors, officers and members of country churches a plan of service that will be wholesome, interesting, practical and of untold helpfulness to the cause of our Lord and Master.

About two- thirds of our members live in the country and their families are engaged in the cultivation of the soil. Most of the number are owners of their own homes, but this plan will work whether one is landlord or tenant, or both.

On every farm, why not set aside a certain plat of land, say one-fourth of an acre, or two acres, or even more, and agree to give the crop raised upon it to the church of Christ. There is no farmer in our country too poor to do this. If he is to obey the scriptural injunction, he will make the plat of the church, one-tenth of his entire crop.

If the finance committee, deacons or pastors of the church will take up this matter and get a good-natured rivalry between ten or more of the prominent members of the church, it will, I verily believe, spread to every family represented in the church. With proper encouragment such a plan ought to double the income of any church in one year.

Imagine the enthusiasm and spirit that would bring to the church to have the familes represented in it, raising some crop that could be given to the work. It would be well in the outset to limit the amount each family could have, and in no event should a man be allowed to let his zeal cause him to undertake too much. Let the size of his plat for the church be governed by the amount of land he cultivates.

This suggestion will probably be hailed as a dream—as something impracticable. But I ask in all seriousness, why is it not practicable and something more than a mere dream? The idea is not wholly original. It has been suggested by reading of its trial on a smaller scale by Sunday school classes, young men's organizations, etc.

If the church, or a laymen's league, is not willing to push the plan, this would be a splendid opportunity for an organized class or C. E. Society to get in some work. Let this suggestion be taken by some organized class. Get every member to agree to give a certain amount of land to the Lord's service; then agree to give it just such cultivation and care as he

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Ma n. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m.. No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m.. No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

would give some crop planted for himself.

What would the harvest be? Something more than bushels of corn, pounds of cotton, or dollars and cents. There would be something of the man's self in the gift that would follow it like a benediction and help the work the dollars was to do. A certain amount would be for the expenses of the local church and a proportionate part for the extension of the kingdom throughout the world.

Imagine a week-day meeting at the church of the Laymen's League of Blank chapel to receive the reports by the farmers or their children as to the Lord's crop. Every one would be so happy over the service rendered that he would have no envy against the man whose acre had produced the most money.

This movement ought to be advanced by the laymen, for if the ministers attempt it there will be somebody ready to say it is a plan of theirs to get more money. Why not take this upon yourself, members of the finance committee and deacons? Give it a trial; it can certainly do no harm.

Say to your members, "How much will you plant," and you will relieve yourself of asking them, "How much will you give?"

During the first year of the trial members of the church should not let up in their cash gifts to the church and wait until the end of the year to pay with their crop. Get a year ahead, so that the crop may be marketed in the winter and be for the church's expenses the ensuing year.

A Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank Bro. Ed. Finch for the lead he took in securing from several members of Granville Charge funds sufficient to purchase a fine tailor-made Prince Albert suit, together with a fine hat and pair of shoes, for the writer. I wish to thank all who helped in this and especially Bro. Finch in the time he took from his work and home to secure the amount necessary to do this. Such acts make a pastor feel good to know that his services have a reward even above the salary promised. The spirit that prompts such acts is appreciated even more than the gifts as much as they are needed and as helpful as they are. May God bless the leader and the donors.

Sincerely,
N. G. Bethea.

Women's Toes in Danger.

"American women will have only four toes on each foot in 1,000 years from now, because they wear shoes too small for them. This in time will pinch the little toe of each foot out of existence," said Dr. Franz Bargman, a physician of Berlin, visiting the United States to study American life.

Dr. Bergman has been in America one year and is about to return to his home, where he will file a report on what he has found with a board of medical research.

"The great pity in the loss of the little toe will be that the men will have to suffer for the folly and the vanity of the women," said the doctor. "It will take generations to bring about this change in the anatomy of the foot, but it is coming; in fact, it is already in progress."

PELLAGRA: CAUSE AND CURE.

"Pellagra is a disease due to eating semi-drying oils (as cottonseed oil, etc.), in quantities that cannot normally be disposed of, in which case they are deposited as fat foreign to the human organism and in their final disposition (by oxidation) there is developed a series of products that act in a deleterious manner upon the cells and intracellular tissues of the body.

"Glyceride of linolic acid (linolin) is the constituent of this group of oils that places them in the semi-drying class. This acid readily combines with the alkalies forming salts that undergo oxidation even more readily. The oxidation products are the cause of pellagra.

"A casual glance will convince those inter sted that the cottonseed oil industry parallels the development of pellagra in this country. Occasional cases may have occurred before this period, from eating adulterated olive oil. (For years this and other edible oils have been so adulterated).

"Now, linolin has a strong affinity for sulphur and forms a compound which does not oxidize. In other words, it antagonizes the oxidation of linolin. Calcium, given in combination with it, is especially indicated. Hence, as a specific agent, we give calcium sulphide.

"Given in doses of one-half to two or more grains, three times daily, it shows its effect in a few hours. In fact the results are so prompt that I feel like claiming specific action for the drug. We began the use of calcium sulphide eighteen months ago and have never been disappointed with the results.

"Under its influence I have seen stools reduced to normal; the redness of the tongue fade; the eruptions on the hands disappear; the intense burning and fever (so often complained of) yield readily, usually in less than twenty-four hours. One case, in whom the eruption had been continuous for twelve months, although treated by arsenic, was relieved of suffering in twelve hours; was out of bed in three days; and had no erythema in ten days.

"The best way to administer calcium sulphide is in the form of one-sixth grain granules. They may be given in a capsule, as many as you like."

(Extracts from Dr. George C. Mizell's article, which appeared in the Journal-Record of Medicine, June, 1911).

Note. When applying this treatment our readers are cautioned to use an active preparation of calcium sulphide; a good many are practically inert. The Abbott Alkaloidal Co., of Chicago, have for years made a specialty of this drug and their granules are reliable.—Char-Medical Journal.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO .,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

FIVE COUNTIES IN NOVEMBER PROVIDE FOR FREE DISPENSARIES.

A Total of Twenty-four Counties Lend Aid to Fight the Hookworm.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 13.—Five counties have provided the funds necessary to have free dispensaries for the free examinatiop for and treatment of hookworm disease since November 1st. These are the counties of Wake, Vance, Beaufort, Bertie, and Edgcombe. Prior to November 1st, nineteen counties had made provision for them, making a total now of twenty-four counties. The work has been finished in ten counties and is now in progress in Pitt, Brunswick, Pender, Harnett and Hertford.

How the Work is Conducted.

Five widely separated points in a county are selected. At each point an available building, usually a public school house, is secured for the dispensary. On advertised days of the week the Field Physician and his Laboratory men spend about six hours at each dispensary. On corresponding days of the five subsequent weeks that the county work continues the dispensaries are similarly opened. Thus people in every section of the county are afforded an opportunity weekly for free examination and treatment until the successive treatments needed to effect cures have been received. The people are cured, and the educational work goes on by actual demonstration.

—Winter came on us unexpectedly, did it not?

—Our Annual Conference meets in Henderson next week. Don't forget the place or the time.

—The M. E.'s went and adjourned to meet next year in High Point, and now High Point won't invite us!

—Henry Clay Beattie must die on the 24th. The governor of Virginia has refused to interfere with the execution of the sentence. Many will be sorry for the doomed man, but few, if any, question his guilt. The crime was a most atrocious one, and if capital punishment is ever justifiable, it would seem to be in this case.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1911. NUMBER 52.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Bro. Swain was re-elected president on the first ballot.

—Rev. S. W. Taylor was unanimously elected secretary.

—President Swain and Captain A. M. Rankin, of High Point, were elected Stationing Committee.

—Rev. G. L. Curry is reporting for the Raleigh News and Observer.

—Miss Mamie Bays, the well known and capable newspaper correspondent, is taking notes of our Conference.

—A. J. Harris, Esq., made the address of welcome in behalf of the Henderson church in a meeting on Tuesday night.

—We are pleased to give our readers President Swain's annual report in this issue.

—On last night, Dr. C. H. Beck, made a strong appeal for home missions, he being secretary of the Board, and Dr. Klein spoke on foreign missions in his usual eloquent manner.

—Conference sermon to day at 11 o'clock. Tonight Dr. Hubbell is to speak of the young people's religious work.

—We wonder where Rev. Tobe Shepherd will be sent. How would it do to assign him to Jumping Off Circuit?

TO THE NORTH CAROLINA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH, HENDERSON, N. C.

Dear Brethren:—

In the providence of God we are permitted once more to meet to transact the business of the church and report what we have done during the Conference year now closed.

During the year two of our members have been called to their reward. Early in the year Bro. W. L. Harris, whose genial spirit had made glad so many lives went to the center of Joy. Later Bro. J. H. Turner, at a ripe old age answered the roll call in heaven. Committees appointed to write obituaries have been appointed and will report at the proper time.

Releases and Appointed.

Immediately after the last session of Conference Bro. W. P. Martin was released form Caldwell at the request of some of the brethren of Monroe, where, so far as I know he has been faithful to his trust. Bro. J. B. Bivins was released from Mecklenburg and assigned to Caldwell. Mecklenburg then being without a pastor, Bro. J. W. Self was assigned there and has done a good work. East Winston being unsupplied at the last Conference Bro. Mansfield Owen of Yadkin College was asked to give work what time was at his disposal. Being in school he gave the work Saturdays and Sundays till vacation during which time he devoted all his time to the charge till leaving school at the opening of the fall term. Rev. Homer Casto asked to be released from his charge during the summer months which request was granted.

The pastors have been faithful in the discharge of their duties and where prayer and perseverance has obtained at last some satisfactory degree of success has been enjoyed.

Not all the charges in the district have been visited. The new plan of work for the executive has not been all new nor has it been old. It has been found difficult in some sections to make the new plan work. So many seem to think that what they contribute to the president is for the sermon he preached at the church to which they happen to belong, and claim to be under no obligations to the president unless he visits and preaches at that church. It is believed by many that the executive can do more good to have the general oversight of the whole district than to spend so much time on the road. Doubtless the plan inaugurated at the last Conference is a good one, but it will take more than one year to make it workable every where.

Two Special Needs.

Again it becomes necessary to emphasize the great need of more money and men. The great coffers of the country are full. The volume of money in circulation seems to be increasing as commercial demands require. The people verbally assent that the claims of God upon what we have and are must be the first consideration and all secular interest secondary, and yet the church so often lags for want of the best that professing christian men and women might give and be. No worthy minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ expects to lay up much for a rainy day. Often when worn and weary with the long years of arduous toil, living or tyring to live on a salary so alarmingly small that the faithful pastor in old age faces a condition so appalling that young men of ambition and spirit are deterred from the ministry even when they feel the call for that work. Some may say that if he feel the call to the ministry he cannot afford to ignore the call if he does it is at his peril. Granted, but what of those whose stinginess and conceit in some measure at least thwarts the purpose of God, deflects a promising life and at the same time greatly imperils the salvation of all whom this deflected life might have helped. But money aside from men counts for little. The knowledge of men regarding matter is going forward at a prodigious rate and unless the church can draw into its service at least some of the trined minds of the day it will not be long till we shall be a nation of pronounced materialists. To be sure the church has enlisted very many of the masters, but the per cent of trained men in the church giving their time to the futherance of the Kingdom is not as large as it should be. I would suggest that all our pastors

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

MR. PARKSON'S MISSIONARY DONATION.

Edith M. Russell.

"Sorry, but it seems impossible to help you this year. Of course, you understand, Miss Clark, how I feel in the matter. My sympathies are still with the missionary cause, but this has been an exceptionally hard season. The price of living has increased considerably, as you know. Meat, alone, has advanced nearly"—

Here the speaker paused for breath, while the collector murmured a feeble assent, at the same time glancing around the well furnished room that showed no sign of having suffered for dearth of funds.

"Excuse me for interrupting your flow of argument, Mr. Parkson, but could you give even half the amount of last year's donation? It was fifty dollars according to the last printed report."

"I think not, Miss Clark. You will have to excuse me this time. Here's a compromise—if you let me off, I'll give the double subscription next year with interest on the first fifty. How'll that suit you?"

Reluctantly the collector took her departure, having tried her best to convince Mr. Parkson of the pressing need in heathen lands where time is of such paramount importance, thousands passing daily into the Great Beyond without having received the Gospel compass to guide them.

Left to himself, Mr. Parkson endeavored to appease his conscience by pulling out his cash-book and making comparisons with the past year. He reasoned that he had been fully justified in his refusal. Was there not an increase in expenditure and a decided decrease in receipts, owing to dull trade?

"Miss Clark is a good little soul," he admitted, "but few women understand these matters readily. They accept a statement without really grasping the logic of it," and Mr. Parkson lit a cigar and gave himself up to more congenial reflections.

"Harold, dear," whispered a musical voice beside him, a moment later, "I feel sorry for Miss Clark. She needs a little encouragment. This is her first year as collector. It was so hard to get any one to undertake the work, and she volunteered for service."

"Then she deserves the rebuffs and disappointments that she receives," was the teasing rejoinder. "Besides, it's not a personal affair of Miss Clark's. You should regard the heathen's loss rather than the mission collector's discouragement. Eh, Marion?"

"So I do, Harold, but I thought that perhaps since the far-off heathen do not appeal to you as they should, our own church member and neighbor might for courtesy's sake and friendship's sake find the door to your pocket book."

"Hard times, my love, hard times. By the way, dear, I had almost forgotten to tell you that Frank Ellison phoned me this morning to buy tickets for that grand concert Thursday evening. It's a chance of hearing some celebrated artists. Such an opportunity does not come our way every day. I booked a couple of the best seats in the house; not that I care particularly for music myself, but I know how you appreciate anything good in that line."

"It was very thoughtful of you, Harold," acknowledged his wife, in a subdued tone. "I always enjoy anything of that description, but I would rather have foregone the pleasure and had you give the amount to Miss Clark."

"Nonsense, you unselfish mortal! The concert will do you good. The price of the two seats was only three dollars. That would look insignificant as a missionary subscription, wouldn't it?"

"It would be better than nothing," was the gentle reply. "Besides, the earning power of one dollar in America has a greatly multiplied force in heathen lands. I was reading the other day that in China two dollars will send a boy or girl to the mission school for one year."

"Incredible!"

"It is really so, dear. It is stated on good authority."

It was a few days after this conversation that Mrs. Parkson, watching her husband's enjoyment of his after-dinner smoke, remarked upon the pleasure that so many men derive from the weed.

"It seems deplorable to see so much good money going up in smoke."

"A fellow must have a little enjoyment in life."

"Don't you think it's a selfish kind of enjoyment?" quried his wife. "Why not share it with me?"

"What! Do you contemplate smoking?"

"Hardly, though I suppose women have as much right to indulge as men. I just want the cash equivalent, that's all."

Mr. Parkson glanced admiringly at his wife's dainty form. "Don't I give you enough pin money, dear? Or am I a niggard with regard to the household running expenses?"

"Plenty for both purposes," was the ready admission.

"Well, here goes!" and Mr. Parkson tossed a shining quarter into his wife's lap. This will keep you in smokes tomorrow."

"All that! You don't mean to say that you spend a quarter of a dollar every day on tobacco? You are not an inveterate smoker, either."

"No, dear, only three cigars a day. That's quite moderate."

"I thought they cost less than that?"

"Many brands do, but I don't care for a cheap cigar. Three for a quarter is my standard until I can afford better."

"Do you mean to give me this amount every day for my special pleasure?"

"Certainly."

"Those ice-creams, chocolates, or whatever they are, seem to be doing you a world of good," was a frequent remark of Mr. Parkson, as he watched with growing delight an added interest in life on the part of his wife, who showed more animation than was her usual wont. "It's well worth a quarter a day to see you in such good trim. I never made a better investment."

Compliments such as this were passed over with a good-natured laugh, excepting the investment statement, which always met with the same reply: "Indeed you never did!"

Mr. Parkson was nonplussed when the annual missionary report came to the house to find his name opposite the handsome sum of $91.25, and asked his wife if she could solve the mystery.

"Easily. Can't you see, Harold, that it's only my cigar money for one year?"

"Marion, you don't mean to tell me that"—

"That some people spend nearly a hundred dollars a year on tobacco," finished his wife, archly.

"I couldn't bear to have your name dropped from the list after it had appeared for several years. Besides, the money was earned by you, so that you are actually the true donor."

"How like a women! The prime mover in a good deed, and giving the credit to another. Is it possible that I have spent this amount each year for a luxury and never missed it, given the same sum to you and felt no loss, yet told Miss Clark that I could not afford the missionary cause the paltry sum of twenty-five dollars?"

"I think I would be better without tobacco, any way. What do you say to our united cigar money next year—say $200 for good measure?"

For answer Mrs. Parkson could find no words, but her smile of approval gave decided assent to her husband's scheme.—Zion's Herald.

—The American Exchange Bank of this city has applied for permission to organize as a national bank.

LOVE SWEETENS ALL IT TOUCHES.

Some things which must be done are very disagreeable to those who have to do them. The tasks of study, the tasks of business, the tasks of professional life, are often irksome. We have heard that the duties of home are irksome to some people. There are mothers who loathe the work which occupies their hands, their brain, and their time, and sigh for freedom from the drudgery of home. There are young people who are not happy in their home life. They spend as much time away from home as possible; and when they must go home they count the hours tedious which they are compelled to spend under the parental roof.

Religion is irksome to some men and women who, nevertheless, would not be willing to give it up. Prayer is to them a disagreeable duty. They fetch a sigh of relief when it is over, and do not return to it again for many days. The Bible is a dull book which they read only once in a long while, when they have nothing else to read. The Sabbath is a dreary day and the services of the sanctuary are a bore. They find no luxury in their religion from first to last. They give grudgingly and worship reluctantly. Why is it so? Is religion a disagreeable thing? Is it not sweeter than honey and the honeycomb? So the Bible teaches. Why, then, is it irksome to so many people? Why this contrast between the theory and practice of religion? The reason is not far too seek.

Why is the home life irksome to so many? It is because one note has been dropped from the music, the note of love. Let love be the keynote of the home-life. Drop the note of love, and, no matter what you substitute in its place—fine music, fine preaching, fine society, or what not—you can't save it from becoming a weariness to the flesh and the mind. But sound the note of love clear and strong, and it will sweeten every prayer, every Sabbath day, and every good work. Even the bitter things of life will be sweetened by love. A lady in the hospital, who had suffered much, said she was glad that she had been ill, because the letters, the calls, the flowers, and other tokens of sympathy and appreciation she had received made even her suffering a blessing. She did not know that she had so many friends, that they cared so much for her, or that friendship was so sweet in adversity. The bitterest cup of sorrow and affliction with love is sweeter far than the best wine at Satan's banquet. When love rules in the heart, there will be something at the bottom of every cup which is sweeter than honey and the honeycomb. —Australian Christian World.

A CONDITION OF RECEPTION.

While very much of skepticism is being indulged in by a large number of professing Christians, aside from multitudes of others, it is eminently necessary for the true ones to keep insisting upon the Bible requirements of personal faith in God as an essential condition of one receiving the great blessings that he needs

Reflect upon the fact that Christ made a constant practice of demanding faith in Him as one condition of ones receiving healing from Him. When two blind men went to Him to receive sight. He ask them this question: "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" They replied positively that they did beleive. It is most certain that they would not have received that great blessing without a trusting faith in Christ's ability to give it. And Christ insisted upon a personal compliance whether it pertained to a reception of physical or spiritual blessings. He said that one would be saved by Him if one believed on Him. He that believes shall be saved This was the universal rule then, as it ever has been since that time. He who would not have faith in Christ was deprived of any and all favors that he might ask for. And why was Christ so insistent upon a personal compliance with this condition? Because for one thing he knew that there was a great inclination in human nature to indulge in unbelief. He knew that it was from unbeleif that Adam and Eve fell from their state of innocency. Eve believed in Satan's words more than she believed in God's word, and this resulted in her ruin. And ever since that day there has been a proneness in fallen man to disbelieve God's word. Hence the requirement by God that sinful people should have decided faith in Him, and also in Christ. Another reason is that sinners must be saved by faith, and never by their works. God must have the glory and not man; therefore sinners cannot become saints by spiritial evolution, but by simple faith in the Divine Son, the crucified Lord, to whom shall be the glory for ever and ever.

C. H. Wetherbe.

I wonder why it is we are not all kinder than we are? How much the world needs it! How easily it is done! How infallibly it is remembered! How superabundantly it pays itself back! For there is no debtor in the world so honorable, so superbly honorable, as love. "Love never faileth." —Drummond.

Life is short and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the dark journey with us. O! be swift to love, make haste to be kind.—Amiel.

IT IS NOT FAIR.

"The outer world is dark; my room is bright.
It is not fair that I should have the light
While others wander on in darkness still.
I'll place my lamp upon the window-sill
And keep it burning brightly, that its ray
May cheer some traveler on his homeward way.
"The outer world is dark; my world is bright.
It is not fair that I should have the light,
My life be free from sorrow and from care,
While others faint with burdens I might share,
I'll keep my heart's lamp burning, that its ray
May cheer some soul upon his lonely way."

A CRY FOR HELP.

Keep me from turning back!
My hand is on the plow, my faltering hand;
But all in front of me is untilled land,
The wilderness and solitary place,
The lonely desert and its interspace.
What harvest have I but this paltry grain,
These dwindling husks, a handful of dry corn,
These poor, lean stalks? My courage is outworn;
Keep me from turning back!
The handles of my plow with tears are wet;
The shares with rust are spoiled, and yet —and yet,
My God, my God, keep me from turning back! —Selected.

A GOOD SORT OF HONESTY.

She was a bright little woman, and when some one apologized for an occurrence at which she might have taken offense, she laughingly disclaimed any such thought. "I am honest, you know, and so I never pick up things that don't belong to me—not even slights," she said merrily. "I don't like them anyway, and I have to be quite certain that one is intended for my use before I appropriate it." So many people spend wearisome days and nights in nursing grievances that they have only "picked up," and in brooding over slights which were never designed for them, that this sort of honesty is heartily to be recommended.—Selected.

BEGUN ON PAGE ONE.

preach at least one sermon at each church served not only on the call of the ministry, but especially on the call to prepare for the ministry. It seems that the great need of the church today is more men and better prepared men.

Some Hopeful Signs.

That benevolence is on the increase is evident from the fact that there are more eleemosynary institutions in our country per capita than ever before, much of the energy that once went to noise alone is now being turned into pratical channels of real helpfulness. In our own Conference there have been some great steps taken this year. High Point has paid off the debt on the church amounting to nearly a thousand dollars. Chapel Hill on Davidson work has been painted at a cost of fifty dollars and a new organ for Elbaville seventy-five dollars. A twelve hundred dollar home was bought in Mocksville for the pastor. On the Caroleen work two churches have been built, one in Shelby —one in Lincolnton, the two costing two thousand four hundered and ten dollars. On the Denton charge the following: Land for Orphanage $2,200.00. Church, $2,300.00. School building improvements $450.00. Lot and material at Southmont, $300.00. Other improvements not reported.

Rocky Mount.

It seems that no satisfactory arrangement can be made for this place. It has been the desire of the executive to find a supply for this charge, and the situation there has for two years been of deep concern. During the year just past both the church and parsonage have been rented, approximating twenty-five dollars a month. Whether any of this sum has been paid on the parsonage debt or not I can't say. Possibly there will be some report from this place made to this Conference which will enable the Conference to see what is best to be done under the circumstances. There are some loyal Methodist Protestants there and the problem demands the prayerful consideration from this body.

The Orphanage.

This institution though young has appealed to our people and some of them have come up strong in its support. During the past year the people of Denton have purchased additional land costing Two Thousand Dollars. The number of children cared for at this institution steadily increased, many applicants being denied a place there for want of room. It is the first, and so far as known, the only orphanage we have undertaken. For these reasons it should be regarded as belonging to the whole church and should be fostered and supported by the whole church. The orphanage in many respects is on stronger ground than ever before and the work it has already done should appeal to the entire denomination.

Our Literature.

That we have as good as the best no one will deny. That the cost of blank paper has increased is evident. The cost of labor and material has increased. Yet we are offering the best at a price lower than that charged for similar productions. It might be well for pastors to bring the matter of our literature continually before the people in some public way and state its merits along the highway and by the fireside. It is feared by some that we are so very modest that we fail to let the world know who and what we are. Because of the peculiar position occupied in the great ecclesiastical historic movement today our convictions and our attitude should be more clearly understood by all both of our church and others. There is no open channel so well suited for this as our church literature. The Methodist Protestant Herald, published in Greensboro, N. C., at one dollar a year is equal to similar publications at one dollar and fifty cents. It is clear in tone and clean in manner and strong in expression. It should go to every Methodist Protestant home in the N. C. Conference and many outside. The Methodist Protestant, published in Baltimore, Md., is admittedly one of the strongest religious journals to be found. This much is admitted by many not of our communion who are in a position to know. This able perodical is cheap at $2.00 a year and may be had for the sum of one dollar and fifty cents. Why all of our people do not take them both some cannot understand.

The Vance County Methodist Protestant, edited by three of our ministers and devoted especially to the interest of our church in the neighborhood of Henderson, N. C. deserves more than passing notice It is worthy of a stronger support than it has yet enjoyed.

The Methodist Recorder, published in Pittsburg, Pa., is a strong paper and while circulating largely in the North and West should be read by our people in the South and East. It is painful some times to find Cook's Sunday school literature in what claims to be a Meth. Protestant Sunday school. It may be that in some cases this is the best than can be done, but if possible Meth. Prot. Sunday school literature should always be used in Methodist Protestant Sunday schools.

Educational Work.

Yadkin College Institute continues to do splendid work. Prof. Totten and his assistants are faithful and those who complete the course there stand well in whatever college they enter. Denton High School has really been over crowded and yet the work done has been of the best. Prof. Reynolds and his assistants deserve the hearty co-operation of the whole church. In consideration of what Oak Ridge has done for the church and many of the members of this Conference in particular the thanks of the whole church should be tendered and the path to its door made as smooth and straight as possible for every young man who can be induced to go there As a matter of fact, West Maryland College stands in the front ranks of Southern educational institutions. As a result of its intrinsic worth it has steadidly grown. We should have double the number of students there that we have. This institution with the Theological Seminary is doing a great work for our church and deserves hearty support. Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D L. L. D. president of Western Maryland College and Rev. H. L. Elderdice, D. D. president of Westminister Theological Seminary deserves the fullest endorsement of this Conference.

Pastoral Support.

—To be sure we are improving in a sense, that is more is paid the average pastor than formerly, but when the actual cost of living is considered it is doubtful whether the average pastor receives more than he did twenty-five years ago. It is believed by many that he does not really receive as much. Probably there is not a charge in this Conference that is not able to pay every cent of every claim. To pay all claims would naturally generate more self respect and greatly help in the onward movement of the kingdom. Some do nobly and justly deserve the highest esteem of their fellows. Let us all learn to mulate the example of those whom we praise.

The Outlook.

We are facing the future. What that future for the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina means is for us to determine. Questions of larger volume are daily before us. Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, Baptists Young People's Societies and similiar organizations are being multiplied and the scope of their operations enlarged, yet no one of these nor all of them seems to be doing what ought to be done. There seems to exist deep in the restless realm of soul a hungering for more than these have brought. Sometimes the soft refrain of a song has strangely stirred this speechless impulse. Our machinery is all that human learning and inventiveness can make it and yet the stifled cry of the soul finds no verbal expression. What lack we? Perhaps that in the mad rush of the strenuous age, when the demands are for specializing, we are allowing the altar fires to burn low. Indeed it might be well to ponder. A small engine well charged with steam is much stronger than a large one cold.

It is more clearly seen now that human ability alone can not do the work than ever before. The task before us transcends all human power. It might be well during the session of Conference to take time to look within. There is no time lost in earnest prayer.

And now, with a prayer to Almighty God for the guidance of the Holy Spirit during this session of Conference, and with profound gratitude to the ministers and laity of the district for their uniform kindness, I am, Fraternally,

W. E. Swain.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEES, 1911.

Colleges

Geo. L. Curry, Chairman.
G. W. Massey
G. F. Milloway.
J. H. Moton.

Conference Treasurer.

J. R. Hutton.

Christian Endeavor.

C. H. Whitaker, chairman.
W. F. Ashburn.
A. P. Morgan.
R. U. Nice.

Credentials.

J. F. Dozier, chairman.
G. L. Amick.
C. C. Riggans.

Financial Statistics.

1st. Sub. District.
C. L. Whitaker, chairman.
J. H. Harrison, Jr.
2nd. Sub. District.
C. J. Edwards, chairman.
Elbert Kittrell
3rd. Sub. District.
C. E. M. Raper, chairman.
G. S. Kernodle.
4th. Sub. District.
J. H. Stowe, chairman.
W. L. Ward.
5th. Sub. District.
H. L. Powell.
J. W. Cartner.
6th. Sub. District.
W. D. Reed, chairman.
Edward Suits.
7th. Sub. District.
J. S. Williams.
Robt. L. Troxler.

Conference Sermon

S. W. Taylor.

Fraternal Relations.

Jno. A. Burgess, chairman.
R. C. Stubbins.
W. D. Shoffner.

Literature.

Thos. E. Davis, chairman.
A. M. Rankin.
A. H. Bryan.
T. A. Hunter.

Minutes.

W. A. Lamar.

Ministerial Moral Character.

W. D. Fogleman, chairman.
S. M. Hines.
E. A. Plyler.
G. E. Matthews.

Missions.

J. F. McCulloch, chairman.
N. G. Bethea.
C. W. Patterson.

Official Character.

C. A. Cecil, chairman.
C. G. Bivins.
L. H. Hatley.
J. A. Turner.

Ordinances.

A. G. Dixon, chairman.
C. C. Lineberry.
W. C. Kennett.
J. C. Morris.

Pastoral Work.

T. F. McCulloch, chairman.
J D. Gault.
J. E. Hartsell.
Thos. E. Pender.

President's Report.

A. L. Hunter, chairman.
C. V. White
W. R. Lowdermilk.
G. A. Nicholson.

Pulpit Service.

R. M. Andrews, chairman.
Geo. S. Kernodle.
J. B. Ogburn.
Walter Bivins.

Statistics.

T. M. Johnson, chairman.
J. F. McAdams.
E. F. Seagrove.
B. F. Bulla.

Sunday Schools.

W. C. Lassiter, chairman.
Numa E. Morris.
H. W. Braswell.
A. L. Foust.

Temperance.

Geo. W. Holmes, chairman.
G. A. Webster.
W. M. Pike.
S. M. Speas.

To Receive Reports.

J. A. Ledbetter, chairman.
W. L. Holt.

Unfinished Business.

E. G. Lowdermilk, chairman.
J. H. Harrison, Jr.
T. A. Plyler.
C. H. Hill.

For chairmen of various other committees see Minutes , 1911, pages 3 and 4.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Next Thursday is our national thanksgiving day. It is fitting to give thanks every day. Every day brings its blessings, fresh from the hand of God. No one should fail to appreciate God's constant goodness or fail to respond to its daily outpour with a hearty giving of thanks. But while this is true, it is also true that we as a nation should lift up our hearts to God in grateful remembrance for His gifts to us as a nation. The past year He has given us peace. He has given us plenty. He has given us health. He has given us opportunity to labor with Him for the uplift of humanity and the enlightenment of the world. He has given us a national hope and His own sure promise that He will be our God if we will be His people.

Let all who can meet in places of worship next Thursday and publicly and gratefully acknowledge God's goodness to our American nation.

JUMPING OFF CIRCUIT.

This circuit is located in another part of the State. Some years ago Rev. Mr. New was sent there, and before the year was off he leaped over into the Baptist Church. The next year, Rev. Mr. Unstable was appointed by the Conference, and he made one round, and concluded that the Presbyterian Church was more of his faith and order, and away he went. The president then sent Rev. Mr. Noexperience, thinking it was a good field for his development; he remained six months, concluded he had had development enough for a larger field, and leaped over into the M. E. Church, South. Thereafter the circuit was called "Jumping Off Circuit." We wonder who will be sent to it this year.

I learn that you are agitated by many tempests, and that your soul is tossed to and fro by the waves.—The cross of Christ is divided among all the world, and each man has his share. You should not, therefore, reject that which has fallen to you. Receive it rather as a holy relic, not in a vessel of silver or of gold, but in what is far better—in a heart of gold —in a heart full of meeksness.—Luther.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Second Chronicles, Chapters 8-14.

—Governor Mann is said to have offered to postpone Beattie's execution for a month if he will confess that he killed his wife. Beattie's father is said to oppose his making any public statement.

From Pastors and People.

Burlington.

The past two Sundays have been good ones for our church and Sunday school. The attendance at Sunday school was off somewhat, but the offerings were excellent. The Sunday school paid off $6.80 for reparing the furnace, and also a pledge of $18.00 to the North Carolina Cottage, on these two Sundays. The congregations at preaching services were excellent, and last Sunday we cleared away a small deficit which had been unprovided for on pastor's salary and general interests.

Our fourth quarterly conference met Thursday evening, November 9th, and also on Tuesday night, the 14th. The pastor gave the following synopsis of this year's work; Pastoral Visits, 520; Times Preached, 183; Taught S. S. Class, 39; Conducted Prayermeeting, 30; Funerals, 26; Marriages, 12. He has not missed a single appointment this year on account of sickness, and only one in the three years he has been here. The church register shows a membership of 339, and about $1,800 has been contributed for all purposes during the year. The conference instructed the delegate, by a unanimous vote, to ask for the return of the present pastor. The salary for the coming year was fixed at $800.

The Sunday school is beginning to make preparations for the Christmas exercises. A committee was appointed last Sunday to make the necessary announcements.

The Ladies' Aid Society and the Philathea Class will have their annual bazaar on next Friday. They will have on sale useful articles suitable for Christmas presents and also will serve dinner and supper consisting of oysters, chicken, " 'possom and 'taters," etc. It will be in the building between I. J. Mazen's clothing store and the Grotto. Everybody is invited to come and help make a success of the event.

On Thursday evening, November 30th, at 7:30, we will have a Thanksgiving service at the church. There will be a sermon, and an offering will be taken for the Denton Orphanage. Anyone wishing to contribute anything other than money can bring their gifts to the church and they will be taken care of until the next day when it will be packed, and sent to the orphans along with the money collected. We hope every member of our church will contribute to this cause either in money or provisions.

Bro. Williams received five members into the church at Carolina on last Saturday night, and four joined at Glen Raven on Sunday afternoon.

Bro. Williams and our delegate, Bro. G. L. Amick, left yesterday for Henderson to attend Conference, which convenes today. We hope the Conference will have a pleasant meeting, and that the best things only will be done.

T. T. Stafford.

Burlington, N. C., Nov. 22, 1911.

Pine Grove Church, Oak Ridge Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, preached his last sermon here yesterday for this Conference year, using for his text John 3:7—"Marvel not that I said unto thee ye must be born again." His discourse was good and enjoyed by all. He begged his congregation not to put faith in the things of this world, but to have faith in God, and lay up treasures in heaven. There was a very good congregation out. If he is not returned to this charge, may he be blessed with a long and useful life. We will not forget him and his good work while serving here

Our Sunday school has stopped for some cause. They just failed to come out.

There were two little infants dedicated here last week: the little son of Henry and Rosa Ingram, also, the child of Mr. and Mrs. William Vernon.

This closes another year as reporter. Hope they will elect another for the coming year who is better qualified for the place.

May God's blessings be with all and our Conference.

G. A. Ingram, Reporter.

Flat Rock.

That vision—have you had it? A M. P. College in North Carolina! Not by military strategy, no. But diplomacy, persuasion a universal diplomacy throughout the Conference and civic and municipal contingents acceeding. All past failure and inertia overcome by this subsequent impetus. A soliciting agent in the field from this Conference. A Conference pulsating with prayer. Did you note Mr. Dixon's success phenomenal success? All small subscriptions paid within two years, large ones in four years.

Twelve of our wealthy men guaranteeing his salary each one month, or seventy-five dollars. Every Methodist Protestant home in North Carolina visited. Then that Carnegie fund (in subdued tones). Have you thought of it? Investigate the terms. Greensboro Female College has utilized one hundred thousand, also Salem Female Academy the same. O, church of our fathers, awake! And with zeal commendable, rare and commensurate, advance, and undeterred your efforts can but culminate in success. These plans will materialize. This is only an idea—you formulate plan. And our church shall be forever established, a church of our national ideal. "Of the people, and by the people, and for the people." And that condones not with evil. And this chaos and approaching ignorance which will (you will pardon irony) soon be profound among us, will absolutely disappear.

We have our men of wealth and they are not mammon worshipers.

But there personages are distinguished for the urbanity of soul and love of God and man, that flows out from their personality.

May this largeness of heart flow out in philanthropy to a suffering and disintegrating church.

Twelve of our wealthy men two thousand each, twenty-five men two hundred each, , ten men one hundred dollars each, ten dollars from each remaining home, would make a total of some seventy thousand. Add this to present amount, and it will aproximate one hundred thousand. Duplicate this by the afore mentioned fund and the grand total of two hundred thousand will sum up.

Mrs. Fannie Kirkpatrick, Rep.

Denton.

Dear Brother McCulloch:

We have had a very pleasant year with our good people. I can truly say I have enjoyed the work. My people have been very kind to me for which they have my heart-felt thanks. I believe they have prayed for me in my work. We have some as good people on the Denton Mission as you will find in the State. And I am sure that you will find some as loyal Methodist Protestants among them as you will find anywhere, and they are a people that want to grow, they are not satisfied with just living, they want to branch out and do greater things for God and His cause. And we have some most noble people of other denominations in and around Denton, and they have been very kind to me, and they have given to our cause. They also have my heart-felt thanks.

We have had 71 conversions and reclamations on the work, and 51 accessions to the church. There has been invested in the Methodist Protestant cause on the Denton Mission this year, $5,550.58, not including what has been paid out on the school building or the miscellaneous report. I do hope all our people will respond to Sister Hammer's call for the Orphans. I feel like it is the call of God for His little ones. I believe our good people will heed the call of Sister Hammer and Sister Auman. God bless the good women in their good work.

Conference is at the door; let us all pray for God to lead the Conference.

May heaven's blessings rest upon the entire Church. D. A. Braswell.

Kistler's, Cleveland Ct.

Dear Herald:

Bro. Reed filled his regular appointment Sunday, as usual. He gave us a good sermon as he always does. Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much. Bro. Reed is so in earnest, and we love him so much. This was his last appointment for this conference year. May the Lord send him back to us next year, as we think he is the man for us on this circuit, as he has done so much good work since he has been with us.

We have not had Sunday school for quite a while, but we hope for it to start again very soon.

I am very sorry to say that Rev. A. P. Ivester is right sick and was unable to go to church Sunday. We hope for his recovery very soon.

I will close saying we will gladly welcome Bro. Reed back next year.

Yours in Christ,
Lola Ivester, Reporter.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

Fourth quarterly conference convened in Haw River Church November 12. Business was transacted in a very harmonious manner. Every one seemed to be encouraged and very much interested in the work. The people all hope for better things another year. All the officers of both churches have been elected for next year, and are now hard at work planning for the better things hoped for. Both churches will pay their pastor more next year than this. The stewards are now at work to see that promises are fulfilled and that the pastor is paid as the work is done. Graham will pay by the week and Haw River by the month. The pastor has been over paid this year and every other interest has been paid in full.

The year is now over and I am glad to say that I have never met a more responsive people. I appreciate this kindness and only wish I could have served them better. God bless the people of Graham and Haw River. Whoever is their pastor next year, I can congratulate him.

Geo. L. Curry.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion, Mt. Zion Circuit.

Our pastor filled his last appointment here Sunday for this Conference year. We hope to have our pastor return to us again, for we feel that his place could not be easily filled.

Bro. Hunter has won the hearts of the people during the time he has been with us. We have heard many favorable comments about his work. He is enthusiastic in every movement pertaining to the upbuilding of God's kingdom and our hearts would be made to feel sad to see him leave our midst, but we feel that God knows best how to supply our fields so we are willing to leave it with him to say who is best suited for us. Our Sunday school is doing very well at present, but it is not as good as we would like for it to be. Mr. R. S. Barber, who has been very ill, was able to attend church again Sunday, we are glad to say.

Hattie Wall, Reporter.

Nov. 19, 1911.

Bethany, Haw River Circuit.

The fourth quarterly conference assembled in Midway church Oct. 21st, to transact business mainly pertaining to the work on this Haw River Ct. All the churches were represented except Sandy Cross. Some of the officials of Brown Summit were present and stated to this conference that they wished to be detached from this circuit and be annexed to St. Paul as a mission point, subject to the decision of the Annual Conference. This conference granted their request. The quarterly conference by a large majority raised the pastor's salary from $550 to $600, and the major portion of the officials of said conference said they believe that it would be best to return our present pastor. From the fact, near all the members of the circuit think it best and earnestly request Annual Conference to send the same pastor, Rev. C. E. M. Raper, back to this charge, Haw River Circuit.

Brother G. S. Kernodle, delegate elect, I think will verify this statement.

T. R. Totten.

Oct. 26, 1911.

Mr. J. S. King was born August 13th, 1888, and departed this life November 12, 1911. He professed faith in Christ Aug. 1905, and was waiting the summons of the death angel. He requested his relations to meet him in heaven. It was inspiring to stand by his bed side and see the bright seraphic gleam on his features play. He leaves to mourn their loss, father, mother, three brothers, two sisters, These are: Rev. and Mrs. H. B. King, L. R., T. T., J. A.; Mrs. Cora Killough, and Miss Dora L. King. Justice was a good boy and would read his Bible and hold family prayer. He loved to sing; the last song he sang on earth was, Safe Within the Vail. He was laid to rest in the grave yard at Pleasant Plain. The grave was was covered with beautiful flowers. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. J. McClendon and Rev. Mr. Davenport, of Matthews, N. C., on the 13th, inst. A very large congregation showed the tender esteem in which Justice was held in his community as they passed around the casket and took the last look. He was loved in life, remembered in death. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community.

One who loved him.

Mt. Pleasant, Liberty, Ct.

Dear Herald Readers:

Yesterday was Rev. W. D. Fogleman's last appointment here before Conference. Mr. Fogleman's stay among us has been short, but we have learned to know him and appreciate his work among us. We hope that Conference will see fit to send him back to us for another year.

Dr. W. E. Swain preached for us yesterday in place of Pastor Fogleman. Dr. Swain gave us an interesting and well prepared discourse from the text, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." We are always glad to have Dr. Swain with us and we feel sure that all who heard his discourse were very much benefited.

The Ladies' Home and Foreign Missionary Societies are planning to send a box to our orphans at Denton sometime between Thanksgiving and Christmas. This is a matter that we think every true Methodist Protestant should be interested in and should try to aid in any and every way possible.

The new president of the societies, Mrs. Robert Amick, seems to be doing much to get the people interested in mission work.

We were sorry to lose Mrs. W. L. Spoon from the society. She had been president since the society was first organized and made a faithful and earnest leader. Mrs. Spoon and little daughter, Miriam, have gone to spend the winter with Mr. Spoon at Winston, where he has his headquarters for the winter. We miss them all very much and hope they will be with us again in the spring.

The public school opened here on the 13th with a right good attendance. Miss Dovie Mendenhall is principal and Miss Estelle Jones assistant. We are very glad to have these two ladies with us in our church and S. S. work. We think they will help all they can.

Mrs. Emily Amick, the widow of the late A. G. Amick, recently left this community to make her home with her son, Mr. G. L. Amick, of Burlington. We are very sorry to lose Aunt Emily from our church and Sunday school.

Our Sunday school is still alive and we hope will increase both in interest and in attendance.

Mr. S. A. Alexander conducted the prayer service the second Sunday. His talk was interesting and helpful as they always are. We wish we had more men that would take the interest in Sunday school and church work that Bro. Alexander does.

Let us all be more interested in our Master's work.

Mrs. Will H. Neese.

Liberty, N. C., Nov. 20, 1911.

WINSTON STATION.

Not long ago Rev. G. L. Curry came to assist us in a special meeting. Our one regret is that he could not remain with us longer. He preached 4 or 5 nights, also in the afternoon. His preaching was the kind that gets the attention of hearers and holds it. Our people were edified, refreshed, and strengthened by his sermons. The weather was very unfavorable was a special meeting, but good was done. May he live long to preach the everlasting gospel.

Pastor.

YADKIN COLLEGE, CT.

Dear Brethren:—The year of nineteen hundred and eleven is almost gone and we will soon be in Annual Conference to receive appointments for another year.

I am closing a good year. There has been the worst drought in this section of any other in the state. Mills have not run, yet we are confident at this time of a rounded up report. I have a good people to serve on this work and they appreciate the feeble efforts of their pastor.

They came in on us last night and filled the kitchen with good things to eat, dresses for children and some brought bags of corn for horse and some said there is some corn for hogs. The fragments of this pounding will not all be gathered up by Feb., 1912. A sum of money. I will not call names. I know and God knows. (It was my neighbors the people of Bethesda). Many thanks for these good things. May God bless every one of them with richest of His blessings.

I closed my last special meeting at W. Lexington last Tuesday night. It commenced on the Wednesday night before. Rev. D. A. Braswell from Denton charge came on Thursday night and did all the preaching to the finish. Bro. Braswell is spiritual, has great faith in God. He preaches the strong simple truth of God and does not fail to cry out against all forms of sin. We were glad to have him with us and the good, the real good, will be seen later.

May God bless him and send him this way again.

We had some 60 conversions and many reclamations. The church is greatly built up. It has indeed been a good year.

There are many things worthy of mention but I must stop. The blessings of heaven rest upon the entire work. God bless the Conference.

Yours &c.,

H. L. Powell.

HAWKINS CHAPEL

Littleton Circuit.

Der Herald:—

Sunday Nov. 12, was the ending of the Conference year at this church. And to us it was a real sorow to feel that it was, perhaps, the last time our beloved pastor would preach for us. He has indeed won for himself a tender memory in the heart of every one at this place.

Bro. Taylor's subject for Sunday was "Thanksgiving," and a splendid sermon it was. Our blessings were pictured to us so beautifully, that we could but feel glad and thankful, yet deep down in our hearts was the regret lest we in the future be deprived of the loving counsel of so gifted a man as our dear Bro. Taylor.

I am sure that I but voice the sentiment of the entire congregation and community as well, when I say that it is our sincere desire that the Conference will see fit to return him to this charge for the coming year. Yet we will abide the will of God in all things, should He send him elsewhere.

It is to be regretted that we are behind some in our finances. The general interest fund is about ten dollars behind and the pastor's salary eleven dollars. This, however, will be collected before Conference I am quite sure.

Our S. S. at this church continues in a flourishing condition, and we hope to keep faithful during the coming winter.

The Young Men's Prayer Meeting seems to be thriving, and we feel confident that great and lasting good will result from their effort.s

On Oct. 28, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hale, near here, and claimed for his own Mrs. Della Hale. She had been sorely afflicted for years, and death was but release from suffering for her. She was a member of the Baptist Church and a consistent Chirstian; also Mr. Jim Shearin an aged man, uncle of the writer, died Nov. 8, and was buried in the old family burying grounds near here to await the resurrection morn. He was a good man.

Miss. Mamie Glasgow was married to Mr. Hayes, of Newoprt News, recently. We wish for them a long and happy life.

Mrs. Tempie Shearin has returned home from a two months' visit to her daughter Mrs. Geo. Gaither, of Rocky Mount.

We are planning a "suprise" in honor of Grandpa Jim Hawkins, on his 93rd, birthday. He is the oldest man in our church and community. This will take place the 17th of November. Everybody send him a post card.

Wishing the Herald and all its readers success I will close.

Vannah Shearin.

Aurelian Spgs., N. C.

THE MOTHER'S OPPORTUNITY.

God and mother have the children first. Before the world has a chance to mar the purity and innocence of the little one in the cradle, the mother may lead the child by the hand straight to the feet of the Master. The earliest impressions are indelible and in the first three years of life a child receives and retains them with amazing quickness. Before children are old enough to go to Sunday School, the mother at home may teach them to pray, tell them about the Saviour and make them familiar with the dear stories of the Bible. Here too, the father may lend assistance. A woman who is herself a grandmother recalls with vivid delight the days when she sat as a small child on her father's knee with his arm around her, while in the gathering twilight of a Sunday evening he told her about Jacob and the vision of angels, about Joseph sold into Egypt, about Samuel, Elijah, David and Daniel, so that the heroes of Bible history were familiar figures to her before she ever took her seat in a Sunday School class. Those who are afraid to tell children that sweet story of old because they fear the immature mind will not understand it, have not themselves received the Saviour into their hearts with the simplicity of childhood.

How fitting it is that all our people should make a gift to our orphanage on Thanksgiving day. Remember the fatherless ones most kindly and generously.

—Capt. S. B. Hunter, of Washington, N. C., was recently in Greensboro on his way to Liberty to visit his daughter, Mrs. Wells.

A GLIMPSE OF HOME.

There is much in my mature years I would gladly forget, but the memory of my early home life strikes a chord in my soul that awakens the best impulses of my nature. Every morning after breakfast, no matter how busy the day was to be upon the farm, we waited a few minutes at the family altar, as father, mother, and the children read a few verses from the Bible, and father thanked God for life and health and asked for divine guidance during the day. Somehow after this family worship we went to the field with a greater appreciation of life; we were not confined during the day to the dirt in which we dug, but our thoughts went up toward God, out towards our fellow-men, and away in to the great possibilities of life.

And after the week of hard toil was ended and the Sabbath greeted the household, we prepared for church. In rain or shine we drove five miles to church and stayed to Sabbath-school—father and mother were never too old to attend Sabbath-school, in fact to-day my father is seventy-three years old, but he is still a Sabbath-school scholar, learning the great truths of God's word.

Then the glorious Sabbath evening came. We did not usually attend service at night, but we sat around the fireside and listened as mother read to us from a religious paper (we had no Sunday papers) and the Bible or talked to us about being obedient to God and loving Jesus Christ. After a time the hour for retiring was at hand. Then we knelt in close embrace around the old hair-cloth sofa, and sought strength for another week. Father would pray first, then the voice of mother was heard, the sweetest music in the world. Next my oldest brother would pray, and after him the other children in order of their age, until the youngest boy would breathe a few simple words which told of his childlike faith in God. If the time ever comes when I doubt God's care and Christ's love, when faith grows dim and I am in danger of losing my way in the gloom of doubt, I will ermember those sacred moments spent with father, mother, brothers and sister around the family altar on Sabbath evening; I will remember the prayer my mother taught me, and then I shall have new hope and victorious faith.—Lewis E. Carter, in Herald and Presbyter.

WHY THE FEMININE MAJORITY?

The "Men and Religion Forward Movement," of which we hear much in these days should be conducted with great caution and delicacy, lest the sisters should be led to think that their membership is a detriment to the churches. There are various reasons why the men are outnumbered by the women. There is a sense in which Christianity has done more for women, in the present life, than for men. In all pagan and Moslem lands woman is degraded and enslaved. In those countries the birth of a daughter is a calamity. To a Hindu neighbor, Dr. Wm. Butler, knowing that a birth had just occured in that pagan home said: "What hath God sent?" The reply was "Nothing!" In the vast kingdom of China millions of these "nothings" have been thrust into a tub of water and their bodies thrown into the streets to be scooped up, in the morning, by the daily scavenger and carried off to the dump heap. Christ has changed all this, wherever His Gospel has prevailed, becaused He has emancipated woman and lifted her to her God intended equality with her brother, in education, in inheritance, in social standing, and at last (according to the trend of progress) in civil rights.

Morover women, especially mothers, feel more the need of Divine help because of their greater sufferings. It has been said that the women of the United States, in giving birth to children, suffer more daily than the men suffered in the dreadful battle of Gettysburg, where scores of thousands were killed, wounded or taken prisoners Again, the mothers feel a higherobligation to train their children aright because they are with them more than are the fathers. Hence they regard Christianity as their powerful ally in their religious training.

But all women are not mothers; many are not even wives, having preferred self-supporting maidenhood to ill-assorted marriage with a godless Dives, it may be. Miss Helen B. Calder pays a high tribute to such women when she says: "The highest product of Christian civilization is the "old maid," because such are never found elsewhere. These are drawn to Christ for companionship, and may sing what John Wesley (tinged with the Romish error that celibacy is holier than matrimony) wrote before his hasty and lamentable hymeneal venture:

"I have no sharer of my heart,
To rob my Saviour of a part,
And desecrate the whole.
Only bethrothe'd to Christ am I,
And wait His coming from the sky,
To wed my happy soul."

Again women have fewer vices to abandon in becoming Christians. They are not frequenters of the dramshop, nor are they generally addicted to the poisonous and stupefying cigarette, nor to other narcotics. Neither are they tempted to substitute the lodge for the church, as many respectable men do, claiming that it is a religious institution, frequently having Christian ministers for their chaplains, who thus unwittingly strengthen a rival to their our churches. The moral intuitions of woman are so clear a sto keep her from confounding any of her social organizations with the church, "the body of Christ."

Again, some hundreds of thousands, possibly a million, of men are religiously at a disadvantage, being required to labor on the Lord's Day, in transportation, in journalism, and in the postal service, which latter Postmaster-General Hitchcock is commendably reducing. The leaders of the "Men and Religion Forward Movement" should endeavor to emancipate this vast multitude from Sunday labor as much as possible.

And when these men are induced to come to church, they must be addressed in a way to lay the foundation of Christian character. The preacher should not philosophize about Christianity; he should not deal in negations or in abstractions. He should preach repentance, and should magnify Christ as a present Savior. In Pauline style he should enforce his words by his own testimony to Christ's transforming powers: "I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision;" "I am crucified with Christ; it is no longer I that live, but Christ that liveth in me;" "I know whom I have believed;" "I am in a strait betwixt two: whether to depart and be with Christ, which is very far better." The preacher should remember that this style of address is best adapted to the masculine mind, which is disposed to be argumentative; whereas the feminine mind is naturally intuitive. This difference may be more favorable to the masculine mind in things temporal, while it is certainly less favorable in spiritual matters. A very significant event occurred at the recent session of the Wesleyan Conference in England, a few weeks ago,, when, for the first time in nearly two centuries, that body listened to the voice of a woman, Mrs. Hugh Price Hughes. True to a woman's intuitions, she magnified the superior converting power of testimony. And this was spoken to preachers by one who knows what Christian testimony has done, instrumentally, in London, in rescuing many regarded as beyond reach. From the beginning testimony was the right arm of the power of Methodism—testimony by preacher and laity. Meetings for testimony—the watch-night, the love-feast, the class-meeting, the prayermeeting—flourished in vigor. The condition of these means of grace is a good thermometer, indicating the spirituality of the church. Happy are our foreign missions, and those sections of the home land, in which this instrument registers a warmth attractive to souls benumbed by the chilling blasts of worldliness, to which men are more exposed.—Dr. Daniel Steele.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Loving Memory of Little Vaughn Thompson.

Vaughn, son of Alson and Minnie Thompson, was born Oct. 19, 1908, and departed this life November 19, 1911, aged 3 years and 1 month.

Funeral services were very impressively conducted by Rev. H. S. B. Thompson, and, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, he was laid to rest in Bethel cemetery today, November 20.

Vaughn was a sweet and affectionate child; the darling of the home, and beloved by all who knew him. How much his sweet little face and childish prattle will be missed by the loving parents and brothers and sisters; none can tell, only those of us who know by sad experience what it means when baby has gone home.

How our sympathy goes out to them in this sad trial. May God comfort and help them.

His sweet little voice on earth is for ever stilled, his chair at home is vacant, but in heaven he has joined the angel's choir, and the mansion prepared by our Lord for Vaughn is filled, brightened, and glorified.

His life was short and sweet, perfect and complete. His mission on earth is finished and he has now gone to his reward. To him it was a happy day, when the angel of God bore him into the presence of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

His life was short, but not in vain. In our minds will live always the memory of short, sweet lives of little children and through them our lives are made better, and we thank God for the ministry of little children. "Behold an angel came and dwelt among us and we knew it not."

Dear sorrowing friends, think not of the little mound so newly made where rests so peacefully his sweet little form, but rather let your minds in imagination picture little Vaughn in the spirit which is not dead, but changed, glorified, and beautified in the transfiguration of immortality. Forever at rest in the glorious paradise of heaven, he sings to music no mortal can sing; the music of heaven so pure and sweet. Dear little one, Papa's' and Mamma's darling baby; the sunshine of the home, 'tis so hard to give him up, but we could not wish him back, for he is so happy in Jesus' love; up very near the throne of God, for, "In heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 18:10.

God's will is best. In submission we humbly bow, and sometime we'll understand. Sometime, when God will, we will meet our loved ones in heaven.

A Relative.

A Card of Thanks.

We thank our many friends and kind neighbors for th ir kind helpfulness and and nice presents given during the long and fatal illness of our son and brother, Justice, and we ask Heaven's sweetest blessings to fall on all of them..

Rev. & Mrs. H. B. King, Miss Dora L. King.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY 9th QUAR. CONF.

Liberty Ct., Nov. 11, 1911.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father hath permitted Bro. J. J. Kimrey to be removed from our midst by death, Oct. 23, 1911, be it resolved;

1st. That in the death of Bro. Kimrey, this Quarterly Conference has lost one of its most faithful members, the church at Liberty Grove a consecrated Christian and the community a good neighbor.

2nd. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the journal of this Quarterly Conference, a copy sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication, and a copy be furnished the family of the deceased.

Rev. W. C. Kennett,
S. A. Alexander,
Committee.

The Quarterly Conference of Grace Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro, N. C., having lost one of its valuable members, Mr. A. H. Stack, desires to place on record this expression of appreciation of his life and character.

For several years Brother Stack has been a member of the Board of Stewards and of the Quarterly Conference of this church. By his faithful attention to his duties, and his consistent life, he won the esteem of his associates, who recognized in him a man of a broad Christian spirit, quite, unassuming and sincere. Therefore, be it:

Resolved, by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of this Church, that the sympathy of this body be expressed to the family of deceased, in the great bereavement which they have sustained, and that as an evidence of the esteem in which he was held, this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, a copy sent to Mrs. Stack, and a copy furnished to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

J. Norman Wills,
J. M. Millikan,
J. M. Stone,
Committee.

CONFEDERATE BALLS.

We do not think that it is well to give pubilc balls for the entertainment of Confederate Veterans.

Three Bishops in North Carolina, twenty-one Presiding Elders and nine Editors of the Religious Papers of the State have signed this statement.

Let the dancers stay away from our meetings. Let us Vetrans talk, sing and pray and help each other toward God and Heaven.

A. D. Betts,
Chaplain N. C. Division Confederate Veterans.

BARNHILL-LOCKE.

On Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 15th. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Locke was the scene of a very pretty marriage, when their daughter Miss Lelia, became the bride of Mr. Walter Barnhill.

The parlor was beautifully decorated with autumnal leaves, chrysanthemums and potted plnts.

Just before the bridal party entered Miss. Annie Bell Dickens sang; All that I ask is love. After which to the lovely strains of Lohengrin's wedding march rendered by Miss Sallie Barnhill, came the attendants, Miss Lila Whitehead with Mr. with Mr. Roy Pike. Miss Blanche Hardee Dawsy Hardee, Miss Pat Lou Whitehead with Mr. Thomas Locke, brother of the bride After these had formed a semi-circle about the altar, the groom came in with his brother, Mr. Kerg Barnhill, as best man, following these came the bride leaning on the arm of her sister, Miss Jennie Locke, who gave her away.

The cermony was impressively performed by Rev. J. E. Holden, of Enfield.

The bride was attired in white messaline and carried white carnations. The maid of honor wore blue messaline and carried white chrysanthemums. The other bridesmaids were gowned in white embroidery, carrying carnations and chrysanthemums. The bride is a young woman of many sterling qualities. The groom is a prosperous young farmer near Enfield.

They received many handomse presents, attesting in some degree their popularity.

Amid congratulations and many good wishes, they left on the North bound train for Petersburg and Richmond. After their return they will make their home near Enfield, where Mr. Barnhill in his thoughtfulness has already furnished his home.

—J. P. Caldwell, for a long time the popular editor of the Charlotte Observer, died yesterday at Morganton. He had a stroke of paralysis two years ago, from which he never recovered.

THE CALL O' THE CRIMSONING HILLS.

"Yes, to be is infinitely better than not to be," and to emphasize her splendidly optimistic observation Lorraine Floyd gave a joyous little sniff at the air, in which there was an exhilarant tang that set her blood tingling to roses in her cheeks.

She stood still in the middle of the park and looked about her. The sun was spilling its autumn gold over the earth, for October's bright blue weather was at its best. Sauntering on, she found a tree and stood with her back against it that she might better drink in all the morning glory of the world about her. As she did so a swife change came over her mood. Shadows seemed suddenly to gather about her, and the old uneasiness crept back.

It had been partly through the influence of a friend and partly through a desire for something, she knew not what, that she had left ease and luxury behind in a beautiful country home and had come to the city to investigate and study for a time in a school where women were trained as specialists in the great field of Christian social service. Four weeks had been to her a startling, almost sickening, revelation of the blighted, bewildered lives in the congested city underworld. She was haunted as never before by the cry of human need, and she realized as never before the tragedy of an aimless life in a world where there was so much waiting to be done. She knew that good men and women were giving their lives up to the rescue of these helpless ones. She knew there was nothing to prevent her from doing the same. But she knew that at home—that beautiful home in the beautiful country—the maples were now flaming to scarlet, and that all the joy and charm of the leisurely life were there. For days she had been hearing the insistent call of the crimsoning hills of home, and for days she had been weakly wavering between duty and desire. She loved physical freedom and chafed under the exactions and restraints af a work-a-day life. "If I were a Buddhist I could easily believe that I had been a gypsy in some previous incarnation," she had laughingly confided to a friend once, when she felt a sudden seizure of the autumn wanderlust.

But today there was another reason for her restlessness. It was an anniversary sacred to herself. There had been an autumn in her life when in an outburst of hurt pride she had ruthlessly put from her all that a woman cherishes. When God wants to discipline a woman for a great work he does it through her heart. He makes her suffer until she is bowed into tenderest sympathy with all suffering. That was His way with Lorraine Floyd. But she was beginning to understand that her pain was of a kind that held distilled in it something of the joy of deep self-revelation.

What she was remembering today was just a hurt, surprised look in a pair of human eyes.

"O, what a little thing
To remember for years,
To remember with tears."

No, not a "little thing," for because of it suffering always touched her quickly, and of this was born that divine thing—a desire to heal and help.

In the school, the work and purposes of which were so amazing to her, she had been studying the women who set service above self; and it had been borne in upon her that service is the measure of true greatness. She understood as never before that self-denial is one of the crosses on which the strong are fastened for the help of the weak and faithless.

"I must decide to-night," she kept repeating to herself on her return from the park. And always, over and against the calling of the hills and home, there was the more insistent cry of the slums and the sin-sick multitudes.

That night at prayer meeting when she faced honestly what she knew to be the will of the Master, she made her decision.

"I have seen too much to ever again be happy unless I am doing my part in the world's great work. Even in the little I have been able to do I begin, in the work of the Master, to find my own self. I understand with one who has said, "If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.'"—Deaconess Advocate.

THE MINISTRY OF WOMEN.

The address of Rev. William Bradfield of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, delivered at the Ecumenical Conference.

Having once had to do with the preparation of a hymn book in England, I discovered a very interesting thing. Almost all the great hymns in the hymn books are by ministers or women. If it were not for the English poet Cowper and the American poet Whittier, laymen would have a poor showing in our hymn books. That throws a light on the phrase "the ministry of women." From the beginning they had a share in the ministry. These women who ministered to Christ cared not only for his clothes and food but for his gospel. They belonged to the apostolic company who gave us the New Testament and had their share in it. Who told the story of the first two chapters of Luke but a woman? Who told the story of what happened on the cross when the disciples all ran away but the women who were there? People refer sometimes to St. Paul as if he were somehow an enemy of women. But Paul in his work found two oppressed classes, slaves and women. He gave them both the same advice and told them both, "You are free." He told them, "In Jesus Christ there is neither bond nor free, male nor female," and advised them both to make the best of the present social order. He did this because a social uprising of slaves and women at that time would have ruined the chances of the new religion of Jesus in the world. You have no more right to quote St. Paul as limiting the activities of woman than to quote him as a slave owner.

I want to plead that women should have every opportunity. I will tell you why they have not exercised their ministry in some ages of the Church as well as they might have done. You find two teachings concerning women in the New Testament. When the day of Pentecost comes it is "Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." When you get a Church like that in Corinth, with ugly social conditions inside the Church, it is "Let the women keep silence." All through the Testament, when Pentecost comes it is, Let the women keep silent." We have to expect for our women and from our women infinitely greater things than have yet been received, when we are good enough. Meanwhile, we have to wait. I do not think we shall have to wait much longer.

—J. W. Scott & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants, are having the best business they have had since the panic of 1906.

—W. B. McIlwaine, Presbyterian pastor at Asheboro and Thomasville, goes to Maxton to become co-pastor with Dr. H. G. Hill.

—Rev. J. W. Goodman, pastor of Buffalo and Midway Presbyterian churches, has resigned to accept charge of the Hawfields and other churches near Mebane.

—A number of brethren on their way to conference had time to stop in Greensboro and see where the Herald comes from. We were sorry to be unable to go with them, but hope to reach Henderson before the end of the week.

—London policemen arrested 223 women recently for breaking windows. They were suffragettes, and when restrained from entering the House of Commons, they took to window smashing. Women have a hard time to get their "rights." They have our sympathy in contention for the right to vote, but not in their use of violence. Gentleness becomes women.

THE LITTLE BLUE SPOOL.

There was once a little blue shuttle in in a great loom that was weaving a beautiful silk cloth of many colors.

You have seen a loom, have you not? You remember the long rows of silk threads called the warp, and the shuttles with the spools of different colored threads. The little spools were shot through between these threads from right to left, from left to right, making the woof that bound the whole into a firm cloth.

But one day a little shuttle, or spool, that carried a certain shade of blue thread said to himself: "There isn't very much blue that I can see in this silk. I don't believe that I am of much use and I don't believe that I will work any more."

And he didn't. And when the silk was taken from the loom, it was found that the silk was ruined for there were great gaps in it where the little blue spool should have run through.

We all have a part in the great loom of life; and like the little blue spool that spoiled the beautiful silk, we must do our share of the work or spoil the whole web. —Jewels.

THE ANIMALS' MOVING PICTURE SHOW.

There was a great commotion in the brown and green woods, for Sir Bruin was to give a moving picture show in the old school house. Bless your dear hearts, the show was to be given on Saturday, when not a boy or girl was within sight or sound.

It was a grand procession which wended its way to the little red school house. The squirrel family was out to the very tiniest, the newest baby chipmunk. The woodchucks, the foxes, and the deer took their places, some on the chairs and some on the desks. Fancy if the teacher had caught them! The field mice came and sat on the wide window sills, and a blackbird perched on a map that hung on the wll. Hippity—hippity—hop, hurrying for fear of being late, came the toads, little ones and big ones.

A crow, dressed in his best, black, shiny coat, stood at the door and took the tickets. Now what do you suppose was the price of admission? Why, the squirrels brought nuts, the birds, red partridge berries; the bunnies clover tops. Each one offered his choicest treasure from his woodland storehouse.

Then Sir Bruin commenced to throw pictures on the screen. O, dearie me, the pity of it all, for the very first picture was of a boy, a boy who went to the little red school house, stoning a fat brown baby woodchuck.

"O, my poor little chuckies," sobbed mother woodchuck, wiping her eyes with a gossamer web which she had plucked from the grass on her way to the show.

"Poor chuckies," echoed Papa Woodchuck "I told him boys were bad and to run home if he saw one."

"Boys are bad," and the big bear's voice, which was usually so kind, sounded quite growly, "look at this."

It was the picture of a mother doe crashing through the woods in search of her fawn who had wandered away. Back and forth, back and forth, up and down the woodland paths ran the mother, until by and by, through the trees she saw two boys, and in their arms they carried her baby.

You have all seen squirrels scampering in the park and many of you have seen them in the real, truly woods, but I hope none of you have ever seen one living in a cage. Yes, there are poor little squirrels who are made to dwell in cages, when they are longing to be free and at play with their brothers and sisters. No cage however large, is equal to a leafy tree in the fragrant pine woods. And this was the picture which Sir Bruin next showed—a large store on a busy street and in one window of the store were seven cages, and in each cage was a squirrel running round and round and round, looking for a way to escape.

There was not one in the audience but who had lost a brother or a cousin or a friend in this way, and great was their indignation. But the effect of the next picture caused a great surprise—to Sir Bruin at least.

First you saw Mr. Rabbikins hopping through the green ferns, suddendly he stops and sits up and sniffs the air. "Carrots!" he says to himself, and there, sure enough close at hand, under a box—a very funny place for carrots to be growing—Mr. Rabbikins spies a nice, yellow carrot. Under the box he steals, nibbles, nibbles, nib—bang down comes the box, and Mr. Rabbikins is a prisoner.

"Daddy daddy," cried the little white rabbit, "I want my daddy."

"That explains why papa did not come home to us last nigh," cried the white rabbit's mama. "I must go and release him."

"We'll all go " shouted all the animals together, and away they scampered and hopped and glided and ran, each in his own way.

"Very—unusual, very unusual," said the big brown bear as he scratched one ear and looked around at the empty seats. "It's the first time that my audience ever took to its heels in this fashion. However, I'll just slip in another picture, and sit down and wait."

He did not have long to wait, for with such a number to the rescue of poor Mr. Rabbikins, the prisoner was soon freed from the trap and with his little white rabbit on one side of him and Mrs. Rabbikins on the other, was given a place of honor in the front row of seats.

When the show was over, and I cannot tell you all the pictures which Sir Bruin showed, the question was how could they punish the cruel boys.

At last a robbin-red-breast spoke. She it was who had her nest robbed of three tiny blue eggs. "I think," said the robin, "that if we were to leave the pictures here and let the children see how cruelly some of their playmates have treated their woodland brothers, the naughty boys will feel so ashamed that they will never bother us again.

And what the robin said came true.—Gertrude Winham Fielder, in Our Dumb Animals.

HOW BIRDS DRESS.

Birds think a good deal about their dress and are careful to keep themselves tidy and in good order.

Of course their fashions differ because birds themselves differ by they do not change. A robin today dresses just as her grandmother did, and none of her neighbors would dream of calling her old fashioned.

Neither do birds have many suits. Two a year is quite sufficient for most of them and many are quite contented with only one.

As a rule the gentlemen dress more gaily than their mates, though they spend less time upon their toilets.

Just watch your canary after he has had his daily bath. See how each separate feather is cleaned, pulled and looked over, and how all the loose ones are pulled and dropped.

All this is done by the bill, for a birds neck is so flexible that it can be turned in all directions, but the bill cannot reach the head, and so Mr. Canary uses his foot.

With it he combs his hair, first on one side, and then on the other, scratching very fast, as if to get all tangles out. Then he uses his hair oil, for, although complexion powders are not known in the bird world, hair oil certainly is. Ladies and gentlemen alike carry it about with them. They have a little pouch or sack on the back near the tail for the purpose. When Madam Bird wishes to use it, she squeezes it out with her beak, just as you press rubber bulbs; then she lays the oil on her back, just above her wings, and rubs her head against it, turning her neck until every feather in her head is straight and shining.—Selected.

THE BLOOM OF THE MORN.

The beautiful bloom of the morning,
Standing spotlessly fair and white,
Lies stained in the dust. Was blown there,
By the fierce wind ere the fall of night,
The stem that upheld the fair blossom
Proved weak in the blinding storm,
And before we knew that it was falling,
We found it, all bruised, and alone.

So like the fair flowers, we pilgrims,
Oftimes prove weak in the gale,
And soon we are found beginning
To waver, to falter, to fail,
We fail to hear the dear Voice,
Of Christ calling us, thro' the storm,
And soon we, like the sweet blooms,
Are found bruised, weak and forlorn.

We gaze on the bloom, lying dust stained,
Its loveliness now is concealed.
Who will stoop down to lift up, and cleanse it
That its beauty once again be revealed?
No one makes an effort to touch it,
Each one thinks it useless to try,
To place it with standing companions,
So forever in dust it must lie.

But not like the flower, dear pilgrims,
Are you if you've fallen today.
Don't think that you, too, must be there
In the dust of the earth to decay;
There's One who will tenderly lift you,
There's One who will hear your weak cry,
'Tis Jesus, He gladly will cleanse you,
Just call Him, He'll pass you not by.

Anon.

—Beattie has made a profession of religion, and says he does not want his execution deferred. Tomorrow is the day set.

—The Norfolk and Southern has bought a number of roads, including the Page road from Asheboro to Aberdeen, and is developing into quite a system.

—China is in a state of political upheaval and it seems that the Manchu dynasty must go. China is not ready for republican form of government, but that her people are determined on some sort of constitutional government there can be no doubt.

—The Central Carolina Construction Co. is suffering the annoyance of a number of petitions for bankruptcy or a receivership. Its business has become greater than its capital, and it is consequently embarrassed. We hope it will come out of the difficulties. It has built a large number of important buildings. Bro. W. C. Bain; its president, long ago proved his capability as a substantial and honest dealer.

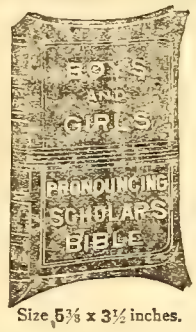
PRESENTS

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG SCHOLARS

For Intermediate Scholars

Every boy and girl should have a Bible. The Bible is the Word of God. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is Good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of life.



Size 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

No. 91. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles. Special Postage, 10 cents. $1.00

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

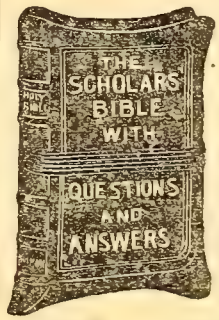
WHOSOEVER believeth that Je'sus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him

PICTORIAL BIBLE

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also six maps of Bible lands in colors. Also with new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

For Teachers and Preachers



Holman Pictorial Scholars' Bible Pronouncing Text

Size 7 x 5 inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

22 And the prophet came to the Is'ra-el, and said unto him, Go, str thyself, and mark, and see what tho for at the return of the year the

Beautifully printed on fine white paper from new, clear type. Containing, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, 22 Beautiful Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands. These views are printed on enameled paper and are made from recent photographs, which show places as they actually are today. In addition, this Bible also contains Helps to the Study of the Bible. Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Presentation Plate and Maps in colors.

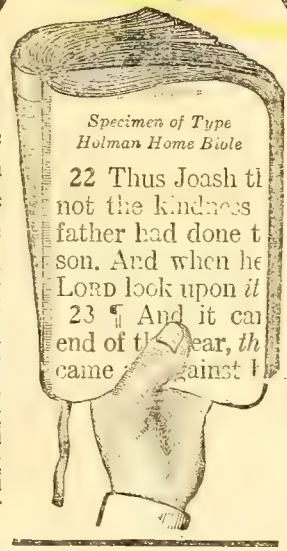
No. 21. French Morocco, overlapping covers, headbands and marker, round corners, red under gold edges. Postage, 14 cents. $1.20

RED LETTER EDITION

Same Bible with Helps, etc., as above and with the Sayings of Christ in the New Testament printed in RED.

No. 21 RL. Binding same as 21. Postage, 14 cents. $1.45

Four Best Editions of the World's Best Book



FOR OLD FOLKS

The Holman Home Bible

Printed from large, clear Pica type, with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for eevryday use in the Home, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for births marriages and deaths. This is the best Bible obtainable for Old Folks who need extra large clear print and a lightweight book.

Holman Self-Pronouncing Large-Print Teachers' Bibles

Size 8 x 5½ inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

the priests, the Lē'vites, the the singers, the Nĕth'i-nims, they that had separated then

Containing New Copyrighted Helps: A Practical Comparative Concordance, Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen Colored Maps.

No. 47. Egyptian Morocco, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges. Special price, $2.00 Postage, 25 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same large type and Helps as described above. The words of Christ in the New Testament, Prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., are all printed in RED.

No. 81 RL. $2.50 Postage, 25 cents.

INDIA PAPER EDITION

The finest Bible made; will last a lifetime.

No. 75X. Genuine Morocco, overlapping covers, leather lined, silk sewed, red under gold $4.50 Postage, 16 cents.

FOR THE HOME

The exact size of Bible when closed is 6⅛ x 9 inches.

No. 201. Bound in Flexible French Morocco, grained lining and fly leaves, silk headbands, and purple silk marker, round corners, red under gold edges.

Publishers' price . . . $3.00
Our special price . . . $2.10
Postage, 24 cents.

Each of the above Bibles is specially priced for this offer at about one-fourth less than the publisher's retail list. SEND ALL ORDERS TO

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, GREENSBORO, N. C.

Subject—Lessons from Paul—II Tim. 4: 1-8. (Consecration Meeting).

M. His conversion, Acts 9:1-20.
T. His labors, II Cor. 11;22-33.
W. His earnestness, Rom. 9:1-3;10:1.
T. His devotion, Acts 20:31-36.
F. His independence, Gal. 2:12-21.
S. His one theme, Gal. 6:14-18.
S. The topic.

Paul.

I. Early Life.

1. Born a Jew and a Roman citizen.
2. Was Pharisee of the tribe of Benjamin.
3. Grew up in schools with good instructors.
4. Was leader of persecutions against Christians.
5. Enthusiastic, ambitious and energetic.
6. Was converted while persecuting the church.

II. After His Conversion.

1. Began to preach Christ immediately.
2. Began preaching where he had persecuted.
3. Was a special apostle to the Gentiles.
4. He was ever enthusiastic in his work.
5. Was stoned, shipwrecked and imprisoned.
6. Carried Gospel to Europe—foreign missions.
7. Wrote fourteen New Testament books.
8. Labored more abunlantly than all the rest.
9. Suffered martyrdom, as the chopping block.
10. He was faithful—a crown awaited him.

III. Reflections for Us.

1. He was always in earnest.
2. When he saw he was wrong he changed.
3. He did his duty regardless of consequnces.
4. He followel Christ all the way.
5. I wonder if I can say as much.

Hints for this Lesson.

1. Have some concert feature in the meeting, the Lord's prayer, a favorite Psalm or other scripture. The concert feature might be near the close.

2. Leader keep your hand on the reins of the meeting; a nod here, a bright smile there, a look of animated attention from you, will alone almost make the meeting a success. Have something for associate members to do.

3. Have chain prayer concerning the example Paul gives us. Have some member begin, and close, yourself. Arrange for roll call and response of quotations from Paul's instructions to the young men, Timothy and Titus.

Something of His Life.

Paul was a native of Tarsus, a city of Silicia, and a citizen of the Roman empire. He was of Jewish nativity and was schooled in the doctrines and teachings of his people. His early education was that of other boys of the city, but when a youth he went to Jerusalem and became a pupil of the eminent Gamaliel, who was a profound scholar, though more liberal in his views than the more orthodox of his race.

After his Rabinnic training he returned to Tarsus to learn a trade. It is probable that he continued his studies in the Gentile schools, for which Tarsus was noted. From Silicia he went back to Jerusalem, where he became prominent in the councils of the Jewish church, and apparently was chosen a member of the Sanhedrin. Though in Jerusalem for some time and about the same age of Christ, he was probably not at the capital during the ministry of Jesus, for he seems never to have seen the Great Teacher. He knew, however, of the Messianic claims of Christ and was clearly conscious of the opposition to Judaism involved.

He threw himself into the fight against the new faith, and with his characteristic impulsiveness and determination did all he could to stem the tide of Christianity and exterminate the believers. He consented to the death of Stephen, if he did not actually participate in the stoning. This he followed up with an inquisition that made him conspicuous among his fellows.

In the year 34 or 35 A. D., while on his way to Damascus, he went through a supernatural vision that brought him under deep conviction of his sin. Out of this experience he came a Christian disciple, convinced of the Messiahship, distinctly conscious of having been commissioned to preach the gospel among the nations of the earth. He did not immediately begin preaching, but retired to Samaria for two or three years, where he engaged in study and preparation for the work.

His first preaching was in Damascus and Jerusalem, but he was soon called to the Gentile nations. He went first to Antioch and there had Barnabas associated with him. After a few months he returned to Jerusalem, where he entered into a controversy with certain of the Sanhedrin regarding the question of whether or not certain forms and ceremonies were necessary to salvation. Paul believed that justification was by faith and not by ceremony. He finally won and the Jews accepted the Gentiles who professed to be Christians as such. Paul continued his missionary work in all the neighboring countries. He touched all the more important cities of that time and region and probably preached the gospel to more people than any man who has lived in all the tide of time.

Paul was often disconsolate, though his work in the main is now considered marvelously successful, as compared with other apostles of his day or missionaries of later years. He swung far afield in his doctrine and preaching from the church at Jerusalem, though his views of Christ's teachings seem far more in accord with modern views than did the majority of other early preachers and leaders.

In 56 A. D., after some years of successful work in the principal cities of his day, he returned to Jerusalem. He was then called upon to show his belief in the ideas of the home church by conducting certain ceremonies. This he did, but was misunderstood and came near losing his life. He was soon after arrested and remained in jail or in custody of officers for two or three years. He was before Felix and Festus, then Agrippa. Appealing to Caesar he was carried to Rome, from whence he wrote several of his epistles. He was eventually released, only soon to be re-arrested, tried and sentenced to die upon the block. While in prison the second time he wrote the remainder of his epistles.

There are many things in the life of the man that call for comment and give food for discussion and an interesting meeting.

He was a man of education and culture. Learned in the old scriptures, upon his conversion he studied zealously the doctrines of Christ. His conclusions, based upon his study and his visions, were unlike others of his time. Some of his views have been accepted by the church as unquestionably right. Others on matters of church polity were subjects of variance throughout the ages that have followed. He was a profound and sympathetic man, but not a metaphysician.

He was enthusiastic. He was daring. He cared not for the beaten paths; he preferred to travel the undiscovered territory. He accepted no man's views; he followed his own convictions. He was sensitive, but unflinching when duty demanded bravery.

"It is easy, in the world, to live the world's opinion; it is easy, in solitude, to live after your own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."

"Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education."

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Ma[illegible]. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.
Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

A RAINBOW QUEST.

"Br- r Br'r!" buzzed the new automatic telephone. There was a psychic urge, a sound of compelling importance in the ring that brought a deaconess hurrying to answer it.

"A woman has just arrived from Los Angeles. She believes her daughter is here some where in the Chicago red light district. will you please call for the woman at No. — and bring her with you to the Midnight Mission to-night?" It was the superintendent of the mission who made the request and the deaconess's response was of course an eager assent.

To help a heartbroken mother find her lost child—was there anything under the wide heavens that she would rather do? Many times she had aided in similar searches, and sometimes, alas, in vain. But hope is always high in the hearts of those who consecrate their lives to the service of a supreme cause.

The story of the anguish-racked little mother enlisted at once the tenderest sympathy. Separated from an unfaithful husband a few years ago she had been left with the care of four children. The oldest, a girl, through some trick of circumstances came to Michigan and there in two different cities had tried her luck in the ranks of the bread winners, but that life was hard and dull and she was young and loved gayety and brightness and—well, the instince of her mother discerned in the letters that later came from Chicago something of the peril touching the life of her child. Wildly and even without sufficient means, she started her rush half way across the continent Angels must have accompanied her opening the way. When her journey was but half completed her money was gone. But an old check her husband had given her, the value of which she had doubted, was unexpectedly honored and she found herself at last in the great city where her child must be.

Inquiries at the house, the number of which the girl had given, brought the information that she was out—in fact, that she was very rarely in. There was nothing to do bnt to go on to the missions. Darkness had fallen when the little party descended from the car on their way, the mother hurrying on a head.

"Pardon me but the woman who just got off the car with you looks so much like my mother I can't help asking you about her." The speaker, a dainty slip of a girl pulled the sleeve of the deaconess timidly.

"Did she?" The surprised deaconess took the girl's arm and tactfully drew her into conversation. By the time she had reached the little mission house she had learned the girl's name and was convinced that something like miracle was happening, Gently she persuaded the girl to enter with her and dramatic indeed was the scene that followed. There is no word in any language living or dead to tell just what that moment meant to her mother. Only those who have been delivered from the uttermost depths of suffering can know what real thanksgiving is. Such prayers of gratitude as went up from those hearts that night! Such rejoicing as there was! Many and fervent are the prayers sent up for this girl that she may not only win final victory for her herself but that she may be the means of helping and saving others. For to such sevrice the grateful mother pledged her at that memorable Thankgiving celebration of her life.

BRO.. PICKENC CALLS ATTENTION.

I have been thinking for some time that I would ask the use of the generous columns of the Herald to bring to the attention of the Annual Conference at its approaching session the importance of making some provision to meet the payment of the amount apportioned to North Carolina for the purpose of creating a fund to be used by the General Conference in paying the assessment upon our church by the federal council of the several denominations that organized for the purpose of effecting a closer union or a more effective system of cooperation. I do not recall the amount but it was brought to the attention of the Conference at its last session, I think, and is of record, I presume. If our church is to continue to participate in these meetings it is necessary for the conference to furnish the money, as there is no general church fund to meet this expense. Our representatives have gone at the instance of the church and participate in the meetings and relying upon the support of the denomination, and our failure to meet our part of the expense of that organization will place us and them in an embarrassing position, to say nothing of the obligation incurred. If the conference has an adverse opinion upon the question of continuing the connection I think it would be proper to instruct the delegates to the next General Conference in regard to it.

I also think that there are some other matters that will come up in the General Conference upon which this conference might well give an expression to guide its representatives in their action.

Another may be the consolidation of the general church organs.

Perhaps the rearrangement of the several church Boards so as to eliminate some of the expense in the administration of this part of the church work may suggest a change in the law. Doubtless the delegates would like to know the wish and judgment of conference in regard to all possible questions upon which they may be called upon to vote. They might thus be better able to represent the people who intrust them with the responsible mission.

The progress our denomination is making demands some material legislation, and the coming session of the General Confeernce will be a most important one. Those who are keeping in touch with the awakened spirit of our people, and appreciate the important position our church has assumed, or into which it has been placed by the virtue of its principles and doctrines, better than I, know the importance of a correct and conservative expression of the will of the membership of the church in all legislation at thi time.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

As a church we are face to face with responsibilities and duties that must be met. Conditions have arisen, especially in some other sections of the church, that demand prompt solution. The wisdom that comes only from sincere devotion can determine the happy destiny of our church. In her loyalty and wisdom may not the North Carolina Annual Conference give counsel.

R. T. Pickens.

--According to statistics recently issued there are 157 pastorless Presbyterian churches in North Carolina. Statistics for other denominations would likely show corresponding number of vacant churches. More ministers, more ministers, is the cry on every hand.

—President Finley of the Southern Ry. announced November 13th that, in recognition of the value of their service and their loyalty to the interests of the company, the management had authorized an advance in the salaries of its clerical employees heretofore receiving $70.00 per month, or less. This advance is to be effective from November 1st, 1911.

A GIFT WITH A THOUGHT IN IT.

What other Christmas present cost so little and means so much as a subscription to The Youth's Companion—52 weeks for $1.75? It is a gift that not only benefits the one that receives it, but every member of the same household.

If you do not know the Companion, if you are at all uncertain, just send us a postal card asking for sample copies.

Not only is the Companion the best gift that you can choose for the money, but the easiest to choose. Keep the loving Christmas thought bright and unwearied by making the gift The Youth's Companion.

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free The Youth's Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, too, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Calendar.

The subscription price is only $1.75, but on January 1, 1912, it will be advanced to $2.00.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
144 Berkley St., Boston, Mass.

New subscriptions received at this office.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., TRURSDAY, NOVEMBER, 30, 1911. NUMBER 2.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE HENDERSON CONFERENCE.

The session of our Annual Conference this year passes into history as one of the best yet held. The spirit was good, the time was occupied with legitimate business, and there seemed to prevail the feeling that our church has an important work to do. The Minutes will give reports adopted.

The splendid church our Henderson people have built made an uncommonly good place to attend to the business of Conference and committees.

One thing out of the ordinary was the appointment of a delegation to represent our church in the convention soon to meet in Washington to urge national legislation to protect prohibition states against outside liquor dealers. Rev. T. M. Johnson, T. T. Hicks, and A. J. Harris constitute the delegation.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE—ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

By A. J. Harris, Esq.

Mr. President, and Brethren of the Methodist Protestant Church of N. C.:

Years ago I read a poem in which the story ran like this: The blind and venerable Bede was being led along by a mischievous boy who halted the venerable priest and said: "Father, a vast concourse of people are here assembled who are anxious to hear you preach and receive your blessing." There was nothing really present except a great number of large boulders and stones. Yet in his blindness this was unknown to the man of God who immediately opened up and gave a sermon and concluded it with, "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, thine the glory now and forevermore," to which every boulder, stone and clod, responded with a fervent Amen! They boy was completely overcome by this miraculous response from the stones and confessed his double-dealing and the old father replied, Be not surprised, my son, for is it not written that if "these should hold their peace, the very stones would cry out." Were I this evening to refuse the pleasant task assigned me and remain silent, the larders and pantries, the turkey gobblers and hams, sausage and backbones, the lights in the windows, the smiling faces and extended hands would bid you welcome.

The common place and customary platitudes of the address of welcome may not well be dispensed with, so I say to you, Mr. President, and brethren, the Methodist Protestant Church of Henderson bids you welcome. The churches of Henderson have thrown open their doors. Our homes are your homes. Our tables your tables. Our pleasures, your pleasures.

The town, individually and collectively, greets you; we hold out our hands to you; we shake hands; we press and squeeze your hands; we pay attentions to you; we touch and take off our hats; we doff our caps; we present arms; we make a leg—that is all the ways the dictionary gave and so the burden is off and we all say, Welcome.

We welcome you to this place where men of God have erected an altar of sacrifice; we welcome you to our temple of justice where you may attend to the routine of Committee work.

We welcome you to this time which our loving heavenly Father has blessed and set apart, in the economy of nature, for gathering the fruits of our fields.

We welcome you to this opportunity to build into the life and character of our people a knowledge of what you are, and for what your fathers stood.

We bid you hearty welcome for the sake of the old men we have known among you. We honor ourselves and them by this recognition of the part they took in the history of our past.

We welcome the glory of your history—the grandeur of your present opportunity and the joys of your future.

We welcome you with pride, because we believe that God has called this church to a "Manifest Destiny."

By this, I am reminded of the story told by Prof. John Fiske in a lecture at the Royal Institute of Great Britain in May, 1880. He said that at a great supper to a noted citizen of our country, three men were called upon to give a toast as sentiment to the United States. The first said:

"Here's to the U. S., bounded on the North by British America;
On the South by the Gulf of Mexico;
On the East, by the Atlantic;
On the West, by the Pacific Ocean."

The second said:

"Here's to the U. S., bounded on the North by the North Pole;
Bounded on the South by the South Pole;
Bounded on the East by the rising sun;
Bounded on the West by the setting sun."

Whereupon the third man, feeling the necessity of the case so urgently upon him, responded:

"If we are going to have the historic past and present and take our manifest destiny into the account, why restrict ourselves within the narrow limits assigned? I give the U. S., bounded on the North by the aurora borealis; on the South, by the procession of the equinoxes; East, by the primeval chaos, and West, by the day of Judgment."

In our abounding joy in this greeting, we welcome you from your beginnings as outcast seekers after Liberty; on to your tabernacling in the Union for Conference; on, further, to your assured place in the history of those who seek for truth; and yet on, to that glorious culmination of God's plan, when we shall all be free men because the truth we sought has made us free—when one chall be our Master and we all be brethren!

Mr. President, and brethren, if it should be thought necessary to explain the universality of the welcome to this great brotherhood and to tell why all churches, all creeds, all mankind, look so kindly upon you, we would go back to the conditions of 1824 when those who held that a layman should be permitted to share in the government of the church, were looked upon as "stirrers up of strife," and rudely cast aside.

We would tell of the agitation which centered around the periodical called Mutual Rights; the Convention of 1827; the petition to the General Conference of 1828 and the unfavorable reply. We would then call attention to the present status of the sons of God, and point mankind back to the glorious shining of that star which caught its light as a reflex from Him who died to make men free, and with that shining has given a new impulse which has brightened the way of all mankind who walk toward Him, who is the source and fountain of all light and knowledge.

Let me paraphrase a saying of Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, and say, a new age has come which no man can forecast; but the past is the key to it; and the part of the founders of Methodist Protestantism lies at the very center of all modern church history. From whatever point of view you approach modern church history you find it necessary to reckon with the facts which are resultants of the movement of the fathers whose demand for an open door was met with scorn and reviling.

This new age has new conditions, but the eternal truth of God must still find men for its exponents or linger unknown until they are found. It is still true that the Spirit of Christ must abide in the heart to purify the life and broaden the view, before mankind will know the truth which will make them free, a broader view which will teach them the new conception of God which in the last 75 years has driven out the harder Calvinistic interpretations which were so prevalent even in the reformed church, and substituted the Righteousness of God in the place of the Power of God in their definitions.

We welcome the representatives of the Methodist Protestant Church because of the part this grand organization has played and is playing in reducing the theology of all the churches to a moral science where the question of Abraham: "Will not the Judge of all the earth do right?" becomes the foundation of all the Ethics and the adopted philosophy of all the progressive churches.

There has been a wonderful broadening of church work in the last 100 years. Then the minister was supposed to do all the work of the church—organization for service to the community by the entire church was unheard of. Even Sunday school was in its infancy. There was no Y. M. C. A., no Y. W. C. A., W. C. T. U., C. E., or Salvation Army. There was none of these and only the occasional whispering of those who hoped in a brighter future day to be allowed to help forward the cause so dear to their hearts, The seeds sown by the liberty-loving sons of God of a former day, are now germinating in every field.

You, Mr. President, and brethren, are thus universally welcomed because your whole history shows that by your standard man was more than meat, and the body was more than raiment. and because there is gathered into your system all that the advancing light of knowledge shows of good—yet you are untrammeled by aught which may dwarf the lowliest among you. Your history shows that Methodist Protestantism has "purposed in its heart that it would not defile itself" with any portion of domination in spiritual things, but would, in true humility and godliness conform its government and control to the spirit of the teaching of the Master who taught that before ruling one must learn that higher lesson of obedience.

History tells us that for a thousand years the Jew looked and hoped for a messiah who should come to bind the broken hearts of suffering Jewry—and that when he came, their very brightest and best, who in prophetic ecstacy had cried, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" had from his gloomy prison walls, wailed "Art thou He who should come, or look we for another?"

In repetitions of history may we not see the Christian church, for like centuries. standing on the tip toe forecasting a union of God's church where He should be the one vital connecting link which would make them all one,—and when "Freedom, equality and union in Christ" was really unfurled, asking, Shall we look for Another?

Your welcome is thus universal, Mr. President, because this church has incarnated the great ideas of religious freedom and complete personal service. Because it calls to the highest and best that is in man—and urges him to become unshackled by any ordinance, decree, dogma, or limitation of man's sceming or of Satan's devising. Because you nowhere acknowledge a higher sovereignty than fatherhood or recognize a greater law than love.

—Be of good cheer.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE CHRIST CHILD ON THE WORLD.

The Christ Child is the central figure in history; take Him away and you have lost the keystone of the arch; lose sight of Him and the foundation stone is gone; take Him away and peace departs; lose the vision of Him and there is no pardon. He is making impressions on each one of us every day we live. He is making his presence known in the songs we sing—you could not persuade me, as we pass up and down the streets and hear the snatch of song yonder and a bit of whistle of a tune here and there, that it is because the music is catchy and fascinating.

I know why men have been singing, "He will not let my soul be lost:" I know why they have been singing over and over, "He will hold me fast," it is the "Influence of the Christ Child." He has filled heaven with music and earth with peace and joy.

You may be a man of education or a woman of culture, but you will fail without the Christ. You may be indifferent toward Him, but it seems to me that a man must have a heart like stone if he could be indifferent to the Christ Child. All that makes life worth living you got from Him. We have the Home and Foreign Boards and fields as a result from the influence of the Christ Child. Through missionary efforts there has been produced a better civilization. Out of the missionary efforts have grown some of the largest movements of the past century. Beginning with Livingston's effort we see the slave traffic begin to crumble, missionaries all along the line have given their efforts in the abolition of this traffic. So, we are fighting the opium traffic in and India.

Another by-product of missions is, in the beneficent change in the position of women, the redemption of the home life. Christianity brings woman to her domestic throne and breaks the chains of custom which enslave her, giving her an equality with man, the education of girls giving them an equal opportunity with boys. These are object lessons with mighty uplifting power.

Foreign missions act on home missions. It produces an expansion of our thought to embrace the whole world.

It is just as much our duty and we are just as much under obligation to try to save the unsaved in the less fortunate portions of our cities and country as to save the Japanese or Africans—surely we are. Think of 110,000 people, ((mostly foreigners) in one district in St. Louis with only three or four feeble missions among them to save their souls, and break to them the bread of life.

Contrast the Pagan estimate of the value of childhood, especially of girlhood, in China and India, contrast these with the great work Christians are doing in rescuing orphans, in these countries and in Turkey, Porto Rico, and other afflicted lands, to say nothing of the Salvation Army, and orphanages in England, America and other Christian lands.

The Play-ground movement is another outgrowth of the sympathy the Christ-Child has awakened for childhood. So, the juvenile courts, the recent legislation regulating child-labor. The vast sums of money invested in children's hospitals, asylums for imbecile children, the blind, deaf and dumb, and cripples.

Who could conceive of the whole civilized world becoming interested in the development of a defective girl like Helen Keller, if the Christ-Child had never come?

The immense number of childrens' story books, games, toys, and amusements is of the Christ Child. So is the Kindergarten, the children's songs, the Christmas trees, the Sunshine Society, the Band of Mercy, the Loyal Legion, and Temperance Education in public schools and the Sunday School; the graded lesson and the elaborate equipment for primary work; the Junior Endeavor Society, and all the rest along religious lines.

The Christ is still passing by, yes, but, oh, so slowly, as He is waiting to hear you say: "I am here, Lord; take me with you, for without you I am lost indeed."

P. S. Prepared by request to be read in December meetings of the Woman's Home Missionary Societies, by Mrs. Emma Ledbetter.

Cicero, Indiana.

THE MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Board met in the Director's Room of the First National Bank of Henderson, North Carolina, on Thursday, November 23, 1911, at 10:30 A. M., with the President, Rev. F. T. Tagg, D. D., in the chair.

All the members were present except Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., and Mr. J. H. Baker. Rev. T. J. Ogburn, former Cor. Sec. and Treas., was, on motion, invited to meet with the Board, but important Conference duties prevented. Extending communication and maps explaining the Mission's plans for the Nagoya College Grounds, and changing and adding to the buildings, were carefully considered, and action was taken authorizing the Mission to take preliminary steps to secure at least a part of the land now so urgently needed.

It was further decided to give the Board's approval to the general plans for enlargement as outlined, and also to express the Board's regret that owing to the present state of the treasury, further steps could not now be taken.

The New Constitution for the Yokohama School, which was presented to the Board for its approval, was duly considered and approved.

A special communication concerning the Girl's Afternoon Department of the Yokohama School was read, and the Corresponding Secretary was instructed to write to our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in reference to the same. The new Constitution for the Nagoya College, adopted by the Mission and submitted to the Board, was approved after due consideration.

The proposed new Constitution of the Japan Mission was amended and finally approved by the Board.

The purchase of the Ejiri lot, as explained in the Mission's communication, was approved, as was the purchase of the Yokkaichi lot.

The Cor. Sec. was instructed to send a suitable letter to Rev. E. H. VanDyke in reply to his request.

It was decided that Rev. E. I. Obee should return to America after the session of the Japan Conference in April, 1912, on a well-earned furlough.

The reports from the four Sub-Districts of the Japan Mission Conference, the Educational Institutions, and the Japan Treasurer were submitted, and approved.

The former reports show that we now have seventeen organized churches, three missions nearly ready for organization, and twenty-six other appointments, a total of forty-six. There were twenty-one baptisms, besides sixty-four applications for baptism, and fifty full members were received and five probationers—this was in the Quarter ending September 30, 1911. The total church membership, including enquirers enrolled, was 2109. There were forty-five Sunday schools with 2713 scholars, and 119 teachers, total, 2832.

The Nagoya College has an enrollment now of 327 young men. The Yokohama School of English has 204 young men enrolled, and 35 young ladies in the Girl's Afternoon Department.

Treasurer Klein's reports were submitted. The report of the Auditor, Mr. H. C. Staley, that the accounts were correct and in order, was accepted. The treasurer's Reports were opproved.

The president and Cor. Sec. were made a Committee to secure the services of a competent missionary.

The President and Cor. Sec. were elected Delegates to attend the Conference of Foreign Mission Boards in New York, January, 1912.

It was decided to held the next meeting in Baltimore, February 29, 1912.

A resolution of thanks was tendered to Mr. S. R. Harris, and the First National Bank for courtesies shown.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec. Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Balto., Md.

THE FIRST FIVE YEARS OF THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

A Message to the Churches.

On November 15, 1911, the Laymen's Missionary Movement completes five years of life. Its primary purpose has been the development of intelligent missionary interest among laymen. The joy of the Movement and its sufficient reward will be to see all the churches enlarge their missionary policies and resources, until they are adequate to the evangelization of the world.

The past five years has witnessed the most extensive and inspiring increase of missionary interest during modern times. The greatest series of union meetings for Christian men ever held in North America has occurred during this period, for the one purpose of considering an adequate missionary program. Several hundred thousand men have been reaeched directly, and many more indirectly, by the challenge to participate in world-evangelization.

Into thousands of churches thoroughgoing methods of missionary education and finance have been introduced. In a multitude of congregations and in some entire cities the number of systematic contributors to missions has been more than doubled by the methods recommended by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Alongside of these direct results in the churches which bave been awakened on missions have come concurrently a general and successful effort for the payment of church debts, augmenting of pastors' salaries, increase in regular church attendance, and development of large numbers of inactive laymen into effective Christian workers.

It has been clearly proved that intelligent enthusiasm for world-evangelization is not a hindrance, but a distinct help to every other Christian activity. Along with the larger offerings toward missionary work abroad have also come largely increased gifts toward Christian enterprises at home. The message of the Laymen's Missionary Movement promotes interest in every department of church work. Many thousands of men's missionary committees have been appointed as the result of its agitation, and all of those include both home and foreign missions in their plans and activities. The financial canvasses promoted by the Laymen's Missionary Movement always include more adequate provision for the needs at home as well as for the work abroad.

The financial gains to missions during the past five years are the greatest ever made during a similar period by the churches of entire nations. The churches of Canada have increased from $1,492,000 to $2,216,000 annually in their combined home and foreign missionary offerings. Taking the United States and Canada together, the increase to foreign mission work alone has been from $8,980,000 to about $13,3500,000 annually, or a gain of about 50 per cent. In addition to this increase in current revenue, more than $5,000,000 have been raised during the past two years in special equipment or endowment funds for foreign missionary objects, by different agencies in the United States and Canada. With the accumulated momentum and experience of the past five years, it should be possible to make a larger proportionate increase during the next five-year period. The Laymen's Missionary Movement hopes to render a much larger service to the churches during the future than it has in the past.

The genius of the Movement is the spirit of cooperation between the churches in behalf of the greatest task confronting Christendom. Co-operation develops sympathy, appreciation and confidence. The spirit of Christian unity has had a phenomenal development in connection with the conventions and work of the Laymen's Movement. Great communions are now co-operating with each other to a degree supposed to be impossible five years ago. All the churches have had abundant illustration of the fact that each can accomplish its best and largest work in sympathetic co-operation with other Christian bodies. They therefore require and cordially welcome the Layman's Missionary Movement to enable them to act together in the great world task.

The missionary program of Christ is the most powerful challenge that can be used to awaken and enlist men both within and outside the church. Many men have been led to Christ and into fellowship with the church by being confronted with the world's spiritual need and challenged to practical co-operation in the universal propagation of Christianity. Thousands of inactive men within the church have been aroused and set at work by the same appeal. The biggest thing in the world is the world. If the world-appeal fails to awaken and enlist men, no smaller appeal is likely to be effective. It is Christian strategy of the highest order to use the most powerful lever ever put into human hands with which to quicken and vitalize men's deepest convictions about the spiritual significance of life.

As a natural and inevitable result of the missionary awakening, far higher standards of Christian stewardship are coming to be recognized and adopted. Not only are many men beginning to use their possessions as a sacred trust, to be administered for the good of others and the glory of God, but they are giving their time, thought, energy and life, in increasing proportion, for the highest service of mankind. Prayer, the most expensive of all human effort, is being offered with multiplying frequency by laymen, including intercession for missions and all other worthy ends.

Best of all, the essentially universal in Christ and His message are coming to be more generally recognized. Christ is not a partial Saviour, either of an individual or of the race. No man has a right to share in Christ's redemption for the world unless he prays and works to share that redemption with every other person in the world. Between evangelization and world-evangelization there is no essential difference, except a difference in geography. Every man's appreciation of Christ and Christianity may be measured by his desire to fill the earth with the light of the world.

To meet the opportunities now confronting the Church in the non-Christian world the entire present force of missionaries and resources should be at least doubled within the next five years. The Laymen's Missionary Movement is glad to be among the influences that has to do with the creation of a new atmosphere, and expects to co-operate to the limit of its power with the missionary agencies of the various churches, until the work of evangelization is actually accomplished. At the present time there are twenty regular paid secretaries of the denominational and inter-denominational Laymen's Missionary Movement, who give their whole time to the work, and this number is steadily increasing. The Movement is not a spasmodic or temporary sentiment, but the expression of a profound and determined purpose to rally and hold the men of the churches to the patient accomplishment of the mightiest task ever committed to human agency.

"The life of a nation's commerce depends upon its export trade." strength and virility of a nation's depends upon the length and power o reach in the uplift of the depressed needy nations of the world.

In behalf of mankind, your fe worker, J. Campbell White,

Gen. Sec., L. M.

1 Madison Ave., N. Y., Nov. 14, 19

THE GREAT MISSIONARY MO MENTS OF TODAY.

At the Commencement of Yale Col June, 1909, the survivors of the clas 1853 placed marble tablets in Mem Hall in memory of the men whom thought most worthy to be thus hon The class of 1853 of Yale Universi one of the most famous classes of great school, and many of its men have risen to high places in private public life. This class with many fa members looked over very carefully list of their deceased to determine should be the ones most worthy to their names placed on tablets for a spiration to coming generations of students.

You, as I was, will doubtless be prised to know whom they chose. men honored were two humble fo missionaries who gave their lives to sions after their graduation—Dr. H Bingham, who was a missionary in Sandwich Islands and Micronesia, and Chas Harding, who died in missio service in India. Dr. Andrew D. W formerly President of Cornell Unive and later Ambassador to Russia and cently to Germany, made the addres the unveiling and he in part s "Among the class-mates we have were others in Church, in State, in L ature, in Scholarship, who held pl which the world considered higher the places held by either of these as things go in the world. And yet we wish to leave to our Alma Mater names which she must not willingly die we have named these two. We named them because their ideals the highst and because they sacri most to make these ideals real. Men these have given the world somet better than any material success in r ing savage races into 20th Century of labor and business. These two c mates of ours gave to our land, to u all our thinking fellow citizens, somet more precious than this! — Noble i of self-sacrifice, of the spirit of St. P something of the spirit, we may say erently, of Christ himself. These na therefore, we deliver to our Alma M for the inspiration of successive gen ons in Yale University during all the ming Centuries."

This fact is so significant for mission ork that I thought I would tell it here night. It is good for us to know that ne of the greatest of American Univer-ties decided that the greatest man and e one most worthy to be remembered he who gives his life for his fellowmen d that this great college holds in holy onor and deep affection those who, not unting their lives dear unto themselves, forth to dare and to do for the up-fting of their fellows. It is well to re-ll those great words of the Master in hose name and for whose glory Bing-am and Harding went out into the world Missionaries when they had finished eir course at Yale. "If any man will me after me, let him deny himself and ke up his cross and follow me; For hosoever shall save his life shall lose it; d whosoever will lose his life for my ke shall find it."

At the close of the last hour Christ ent with his disciples on earth as He as about to ascend out of their sight to Heaven, He gave them his parting ords—the message that he wanted his isciples never to forget—saying: "Go e, therefore, and teach all nations, bap-zing them in the name of the Father nd of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: eaching them to observe all things what-ever I have commanded you." And en I doubt not at all that Christ looked own through all the coming centuries and aw all the loneliness, all the suffering, ne persecutions and the horrible tortures nat His missionaries of the cross would ave to endure—and he turned and said—can imagine, oh so very gently and ten-erly the Savior said it, "I am with you lways, even unto the end of the world." Had Christ omitted this promise from His ommand the history of Christian Mis-ions and the world would have been ritten very differently than it now is—sad and unprogressive history it would ave been—because without His promise e would not have had the courage to arry His Gospel to the ends of the earth. nd because of this promise no matter here you turn your canoe or go with our caravan, you will find the mission-ry preaching and teaching living in na-ive dress amid the filth of Manchurian illages; nursing on lonely isles the retched people sick with leprosy; rov-ng with the Nomad tribes of the Sahara; leeping in the Indian wigwams of the ar Northwest, and preaching in churches nade of seal skins amid snow, north of he Arctic Circle.

When Col. Younghusband with his En-lish troops ruthlessly forced his way in-o the mysterious and forbidden land of Tibet, he supposed that he was the first white person to ever enter that exclusive nation, but on his march to the North-ward there he found a little American woman who was carrying on all alone, her missionary work.

When Christ said, "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature" he gave into the hands of the Church the continuation of His work on earth. From that moment commenced the Missionary cause and God intended it to be the chief work of the Church The command is still with us to go and preach the gospel to every man who does not know of Christ and to persuade him to admit Him to the control of his life.

In 1806 four students from Williams College, Mass., met out of doors for a prayer meeting. A heavy rain and thun-der shower came up and they sought shel-ter under an old haystack. That prayer meeting held underneath an old stack of hay proved to be one of the greatest pray-er meetings ever held in the history of the Church. We call it now the "Hay-stack Prayer Meeting," and not long ago in New York City, great meetings were held to celebrate the 100th anniversary of this boys' hay-stack prayer meeting. After prayer, one of the boys, Samuel J. Mills, suggested that they should try and send the gospel to the heathen and he said: "We can do it if we will." Today, Missionary Societies are using these words as their slogan of inspiration. The boys agreed to give their lives to missions. Other meetings of ministers and students followed and their earnestness resulted in the establishment in 1810 of the Amer-ican Board of Foreign Missions the first organized effort for Missionary work in America. What a mighty work four boys were able to do for God and man be-cause they met in prayer-meetings!

During the last 20 years the missionary spirit has had a marvelous development among the colleges of the United States and Canada. The Student Volunteer Movement was born in 1886 and has swept through the colleges with its in-spiring watch-cry, "The evangelization of the world in this generation," familiar-izing the men and women in colleges with world conditions and leading thousands of strong college men and women to live with a dominating missionary purpose. Their watch-cry of the Evangelization of the world in this generation was not be-lieved by very many in 1886, but now largely under the influence of the stu-dents, the Church has taken hold of this idea of present duty and it has now be-come a part of the prayers and earnest hope of nearly all of the important Mis-sionary Societies in Christendom.

Within less than a generation there have sprung up in different countries all over the world, National Christian Stu-dent Movements banding in these coun-tries for the purpose of making the col-leges propagating centers of pure Chris-tianity.

A little over a decade ago there was formed the World's Federation uniting all of these National Students' Associa-tions thus fusing together Christian stu-dent in 2,000 universities and colleges scattered over 40 countries. These have a combined membership of 135,000 pres-ent members. Besides this great number there is possibly near half a million of former students who have graduated and carried out to the world the ideals and spirit of this Student Missionary Move-ment. Its principal object is to make Je-sus Christ known to the whole world in our day. To accomplish this purpose the native Christian students of Asia, Africa, and Latin America are uniting with the Christian students of Europe, N. A. and Australia. Isn't this wonderful? There has been nothing like it in the annals of Christianity. These students will be the leaders of the future and where is the prophet who is great enough to tell us the work that these educated young men and women of all countries will ac-complish for Christ in the very near fu-ture? Does it not look as if God is pre-paring the people of all nations for a large work to be done?

In the great Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement held at Nashville in 1906, the Spirit planted the seed thought that has resulted in another great and wonderful Missionary Movement. As a young business man from the city of Washington sat and watched over 3,000 students considering for several days their relation to the evangelization of the world, the thought came to him that if the laymen of North America could see the world as these students are seeing it, they would be inspired to provide all the funds necessary for the enterprise. The opportunity came for carrying out this idea and a few months later when the 100th Anniversary of the Hay Stack Prayer Meeting was celebrated in New York City by a series of Inter-Denomina-tional Missionary meetings, it was arran-ged that one of these meetings should be a prayer meeting to be held November 15, 1906. It was a stormy evening and only about 75 laymen were present. Most of the time from 3 to 6 was spent in actual prayer. The meeting was continued in the evening at which they discussed what practical steps should be taken for Mis-sionary work. Out of the discussion grew a set of resolutions, calling into existence the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

(Continued on page eight.)

From Pastors and People.

Mt. Hermon Ct.—Greeting.

Dear people:—It has fallen our lot to become laborers together with God. In such a great cause let us begin early and prove faithful. The Lord willing I will fill all the appointments beginning with the 3rd Sunday in December at Mt. Hermon.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Hermon on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in January.

Praying God's richest blessings upon every member, I am

Your Pastor,
E. G. Lowdermilk.

Tabernacle Ct.

As the Conference has assigned me for another year to Tabernacle Ct. I now announce through the M. P. Herald that I will preach at the following times and places, (viz.) Julian, 3rd Sunday in Dec., at 11 a. m. Tabernacle, on same day, at 3 p. m. Moriah, the 4th Sunday, at 11 a. m. Shady Grove, same day, at 3 p. m.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Tabernacle Church on Saturday before the first Sunday in January.

Hope the new boards will meet and elect a chairman, secretary and treasurer and that the stewards will hold meetings and arrange the financial part and be ready to make reports to the conference as to the assessments for pastor and general interests. The pastor's assessments at each church are as follows: Tabernacle, $367; Julian, $87; Moriah, $169; Shady Grove, $35; President's Salary, $35. This amount we want to raise at once. Trust we may have good congregations on first round, so we can give and suggest our plans, and I certainly do expect the officials from each church to be present at our first quarterly conference.

Fraternally,
C. A. Cecil.

Matthews' Chapel, Greenville Ct.

Dear Herald:

Will write a few lines to let the readers of the Herald know we are still alive.

Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, preached for us yesterday. Quite a number out to hear his farewell sermon. It was the last time that he will be with us this year, but we hope he will be with us again next year. We were all sorry to see him leave, but glad to say he received his pay before leaving.

Our Sunday school is still going on with good interest and also good attendance; we are preparing for a Christmas tree and we hope to have a grand time.

As the morning breeze of October 29th was gently passing, the soul of Mrs. Fannie Ray, the wife of Mr. Jim Ray, also passed from its earthly to the beautiful home above.

She was 37 years of age. She professed religion and joined Matthews' Chapel M. P. Church, and there remained a member until death called her home. She leaves a husband and ten children to mourn her loss, the smallest child being an infant, one month old. She was sick only a few weeks. All that was possible for loving hands to do was done for her, but she continued to droop and fade until the end came. Her body was laid to rest in the burying ground near her home. Many flowers covered her last resting place.

Let us ask God to prepare us to meet her in heaven, for we know she is now singing redeeming love with loved ones who have gone on before.

"Gone from home and loved ones who weep;
Happy, she's walking the bright, golden streets,
Patiently stands on the heavenly strand,
Fannie is calling with beckoning hands."

Lottie Edwards.

Nov. 20, 1911. Vineland, Va.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 160 in S. S., and the offering was $2.66. Bro. Rogers, the Supt., announced the committee appointed by him to have charge of our Christmas exercises. It is composed of the following: G. L. Amick, Walter Thomas, T. A. Amick, O. W. McPherson, R. F. Williams, W. E. Crutchfield, T. T. Stafford, and Misses Jessie Heritage, Agnes Heritage, Flossie Loy, Cora Isley, Ila Stafford, Lena Lineberry, and Ivy Coble. We hope we will have a nice Christmas exercise and believe we can if the committee will all get together in earnest.

The Ladies' Aid Society and Philathea Class held their annual Bazaar yesterday and last night. It rained about all day and streets were very muddy, yet about $70.00 was taken in. There was some expense attached, so this will not all be clear. It was a nice occasion, and everyone seemed to enjoy it immensely.

The Annual Conference at Henderson saw fit to change our preacher this year. We regret sincerely to give up Bro. Williams and his family and we shall welcome our new pastor, Bro. T. E. Davis, with equal sincerity, and trust that next year will be a great year for our church. We understand that 1912 is the 20th anniversary of the building of our church here and we truly hope it will be the best year in its history. We are going to be glad to have the Annual Conference meet with us again next year. This will be the third time for our church.

Our Thanksgiving service will be tomorrow evening at 7:30. An offering will be taken for the Orphanage. We trust it will be large. Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

For the fifteenth time the editor of The Postal Card has been assigned to the pastorate of Flat Rock Circuit. No better people are to be found anywhere then the people of Flat Rock Circuit and we have entered hopefully upon the work of the new year and with the determination to do the best year's work yet.

The Annual Conference. It seemed to be the universal verdict that the session of Conference just closed was the best we have ever held. There was a full attendance, the order was excellent, and the spirit of the Conference fine. Our home was with Mr. S. R. Harris, president of the First National Bank; Mrs. Kennett, by special invitation accompanied us. So many other guests were entertained in this splendid home that we cannot mention all here. Mr. Sam Harris, Jr., was voted the greatest man among us because, with his fine 36 horse power automobile, he became "servant of all," and whisked us to and from the Conference in great style. The ride to the depot the morning after Conference closed will ever be remembered. Bro. and Sister Harris and all the family know how to take care of a houseful of guests and to make every one comfortable and happy. We would here record our vote of thanks. May God's richest blessings abide upon the kind people of Henderson and may His grace come abundantly upon every worker and every field in the N. C. Conference and may 1912 be a greater year than 1911 which we believe was the best in our history as a Conference.

Horse and Buggy for $150.—The horse is a large pony, five years old. A minister moves and would like to sell. If interested, write the editor for fuller information.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Next Conference goes to Burlington. Shelby and Rehobeth also invited it.

—Rev. W. C. Kennett, at the age of 77, is remarkably young—one of the liveliest ministers in Conference. He took his first work 51 years ago, when there were but 17 fields and five or six thousand members in the N. C. District.

—Bro. Geo. B. Harris said that it is a disgrace that we are not doing more for our superannuated preachers. Let us do more.

—A. A. Hicks, Esq., of Oxford, attended Conference on Sunday.

—D. W. Hardee, superintending Sunday school on Sunday morning, said they had their people so well trained that they would do at once what they were called on to do. To prove it, he called on S. R. Harris to make a five-minutes speech, and he made it, but Bro. T. T. Hicks jestingly said that was made up between them.

—Greetings were received from and sent to the M. E. Conference at Kinston. Bishop Hoss is reported as saying to his Conference that more and more it is coming to be seen that the principles for which the Methodist Protestants have so stoutly contended are right.

—Dr. C. E. Wilbur, editor of our Sunday-school papers, was present and spoke on several occasions. He preached on Sunday morning. We were glad indeed to see him.

—Dr. Klein, Dr. Brown, Dr. Beck, and Dr. Hubbell and Rev. Mr. Broomfield added much to the interest of this session by their addresses. Bro. Broomfield is a member of the Board of Foreign Missions which met in Henderson.

—Dr. Tagg was with us again this year. He has not yet fully recovered his health but is much better than he was a few months ago. We were glad to have him among us.

—The preachers for Sunday at the various churches in Henderson and vicinity were Drs. Tagg, Wilbur, Brown, Revs. G. F. Millaway, A. G. Dixon, T. J. Ogburn, J. A. Burgess, T. E. Davis, W. D. Fogleman, J. H. Moton, W. F. Ashburn, D. A. Braswell, D. R. Williams, G. W. Holmes, C. L. Whitaker, J. D. Williams, H. L. Powell, Edward Suits, C. J. Edwards, some of them preaching twice.

—Sunday afternoon, memorial services were held in honor of Revs. W. L. Harris and J. H. Turner, and Bro. O. R. Cox.

—Rev. R. C. Stubbins was received into Conference and ordained on Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Hoover, of Henderson, was also ordained as a local elder.

—The oratorio was enjoyed by those able to appreciate music of high order.

—Master Earl Harris reminds one of the old masters of music as he sits at the pipe organ, his whole soul intent upon bringing the best out of the instrument.

—The election of delegates to General Conference took much time this year. The folowing were elected: Ministerial—W. E. Swain, T. M. Johnson, C. A. Cecil, N. G. Bethea, J. R. Hutton, T. J. Ogburn, J. D. Williams, J. F. McCulloch, G. W. Holmes, G. F. Millaway, W. F. Kennett. Lay—A. M. Rankin, T. A. Hunter, S. R. Harris, G. E. Matthews, R. T. Pickens, J. N. Wills, Dr. W. R. Goley, M. H. Holt, J. D. Ross, A. J. Harris, Dr. J. H. Harrison.

—Rev. J. S. Williams, on request of the Ministers' Association of Asheville, was released to accept the position of chaplain of that body, he being charged especially with the duty of ministering to the sick of whom 4,000 annually come to Asheville. It is an important work, and Bro. Williams has peculiar qualifications for it.

—When the report on Pastoral Work was presented, Rev. C. A. Cecil made an earnest talk, urging that pastoral visiting should have a religious end, and that the poor should be given especial attention. Rev. T. J. Ogburn urged that children should be induced to attend church services and grown people Sunday school. Bro. Geo. B. Harris spoke of the pastor's duty to absent members. He should write to them and to the pastor to whose parish they have gone.

—Dr. Tagg and Dr. Brown invited our ministers to the Summer Assembly inaugurated last year by some of the younger ministers of the Maryland Conference.

—Rev. D. A. Braswell spoke in favor of fifth Sunday conferences, several ministers uniting.

—Rev. D. A. Highfill was elected to preach the Conference Sermon at the opening of next Conference.

—Bro. T. T. Hicks taught the visitors' class in Sunday school, and showed them how much interest a lawyer can take in Bible study.

—The entertainment in the homes of Henderson was princely. And in some cases, the capacity of the homes (and perhaps of the visitors) was amazing.

—Rev. A. O. Lindley's purse was taken from his pocket while he was getting off the car at Durham. A man following jammed his valise against Bro. Lindley to attract his attention while he picked his pocket. The man left on the train before the purse was missed. Some of the brethren partially made up to Bro. Lindley his loss.

—Rev. J. A. Burgess had the misfortune to have his overcoat taken from the hall. We believe some kind brethren bought him another.

—Mrs. W. F. Kennett visited Henderson during Conference, the first time since she left there as the pastor's wife.

—Miss Annie L. Forrest is to work in North Carolina as the field agent of the W. F. M. S. She is a "live wire," as they say, and will interest those who hear her.

—Mrs. A. G. Dixon said she dearly loves to raise money for the kingdom, and nobody disbelieved.

—Mrs. Edwards was missed in Henderson. We learned that she is in Durham, having a responsible place there.

—A brother in High Point this Thanksgiving remembers two of his daughters, one in Wilmington and one nearer home, with a year's subscription to the Methodist Protestant Herald. We thank him.

—The editor in company with President Swain, Dr. Goley, of Graham, and Bro. Beavans, of Enfield, found a delightful home with Judge Henry Powell and wife and little son, Henry, Jr. Our entertainment in this home will long live as a pleasant memory. The Judge presides over the daily court that is saving thousands of dollars annually to Henderson and Vance County, and keeping the jails empty by promptly deciding cases. It seems strange that it was not found out long ago that it is cheaper to pay one man to decide cases as they arise than to feed numbers of people in jail awaiting deferred trial.

FROM REPORT OF STATIONING COMMITTEE.

Albemarle, Rev. A. H. Bryans.

Alamance, Rev. W. M. Pike.

Anderson and Yarborough, Rev. W. A. Lamar.

Asheboro, Rev. T. M. Johnson.

Asheville and Buncombe, Rev. W. D. Fogleman.

Burlington, Rev. T. E. Davis.

Caldwell, Rev. H. D. Garman.

Caroleen, Rev. H. W. Braswell.

Cleveland, Rev. W. D. Reed.

Concord, Rev. A. O. Lindley.

Davidson, Rev. J. W. Hulin.

Denton, Rev. D. A. Braswell.

Efland, Rev. Homer Casto.

Fairview, Rev. J. R. Hutton.

Flat Rock, Rev. W. F. Kennett.

Forsyth, Rev. T. A. Williams.

Gastonia, Rev. D. M. Loy.

Glen Raven and Carolina, Rev. T. F. McCulloch.

Graham and Haw River, Rev. G. L. Curry.

Granville, Rev. N. G Bethea.

Greensboro, Rev. J. J. Ogburn.
Greensville and Spring Church, Rev. W. F. Ashburn.
Guilford, Rev. T. A. Plyler.
Halifax, Rev. Jesse Pritchard.
Haw River, Rev. C. E. M. Raper; Rev. Geo. Kernodle, supernumerary.
Henderson, Rev. J. D. Williams.
High Point, Rev. A. G. Dixon.
Ivy, Rev. —— Stephens.
LaGrange, Rev. J. H. Abernethy.
Lebanon, Rev. J. H. Moton.
Liberty, Rev. R. L. Troxler.
Lincoln, Rev. L. H. Hatley.
Littleton, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter.
Mebane, Rev. C. J. Edwards.
Mecklenburg, Rev. W. P. Martin.
Mocksville, Rev. D. A. Highfill.
Monroe, Rev. J. W. Self.
Mt. Hermon, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk.
Oak Ridge, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk.
Orange, Rev. R. C. Stubbins.
Pinnacle and Mt. Zion, Rev. A. L. Hunter.
Randleman, Rev. J. B. O'Bryant.
Randolph, Rev. W. C. Lassiter.
Richland, Rev. C. H. Whitaker.
Roanoke, Rev. C. L. Whitaker.
Rockingham, Rev. J. F. Dosier.
Rocky Mount, Rev. C. W. Bates.
Saxapahaw, Rev. G. W. Holmes.
Siler City, Rev. J. H. Bowman.
Stanly, Rev. Geo. L. Reynolds.
St. Paul and Brown Summit, Rev. G. F. Millaway.
Tabernacle, Rev. C. A. Cecil.
Thomasville, Rev. Edward Suits.
Uwharrie, Rev. Joel Trogdon.
Vance, Rev. J. A. Burgess.
Why Not, Rev. J. H. Stowe.
Winston, Rev. S. W. Taylor.
E. Winston, Rev. S. M. Needham.
Yadkin College, Rev. H. L. Powell.
Welch Memorial, Rev. D. R. Williams.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews was left without appointment at his own request. Wm. Porter was at his request transferred to the unstationed list. The others (except the superannuates) were left in the hands of the President.

(Begun on page four.)

Do you know what the Layman's Missionary Movement is? Did you read in your daily paper of the Laymen's Missionary Convention held in Grand Rapids the Spring? Some of the speeches made there were printed in the Grand Rapids Press & Herald. If you are not posted on this movement you are losing the inspiration of the greatest Missionary Movement of all the times. Read up on the Laymen's Movement and be a 20th Century Missionary Christian. God is preparing mighty movements in these latter days that will, we now believe, evangelize the world in this generation and that many who are here tonight will see the day when the Gospel is preached to every man.

A Commission of six laymen from the United States and Canada presented the Movement in Great Britain where it was at once taken up and has since spread to Germany and Australia. We are rapidly approaching the time when the Christian men of all nations will be federated for co-operative missionary work. The laymen's Missionary Movement has already resulted in enlisting large numbers of men in the active work of promoting Missionary work and has added hundreds of thousanls of dollars to the receipts of the Missionary Boards. Did you know that from October, 1909, to May, 1910, was held the most remarkable series of Missionary Conventions ever held in the history of the Church? From Maine to California at 75 main conventions and thousands of secondary meetings, Christian men of all churches have been meeting to discuss a comprehensive and adequate plan for making Christ's Kingdom known to the whole world in our generation. These 75 conventions have brought together the representative men of all States and they have been the largest and strongest assemblies of Christian men ever gathered for any purpose in these cities. President Taft, Gifford Pinchot, James Brice, and other national men spoke in these Conventions. This is a man's undertaking and is leading the men of all Protestant churches to work together to make Chistian missions in all our Churches more effective. Hundreds of thousands of men have thrown themselves into this movement with an enthusiasm that is equaled only in history by that of the Crusaders or by the high resolve that men have ever faced a moral crisis when to stand for the right might lead to death.

The message of the movement is the summons to all the men of all the Churches to immediately take up in a serious way the evangelization of the world in this generation. The emergence of the laymen will probably be reckoned by historians as the characteristic of the first decade of church life in the 20th century. The men went at the work in a very practical way. One of the plans was that a committee of business men be sent to the principal foreign fields, make a thorough investigation of conditions, results and prospects, and upon returning home give the public a report with suggestions concerning the administration of this vast enterprise involving now an annual expenditure of over $22,000,000. Sixty of the keenest and most representative business men in all parts of the country were chosen to visit practically the entire Missionary Field of the world. It is doubtful if anything ever occurred that gave the Missionaries so much inspiration and encouragement and the people at home so much confidence in foreign missions as this investigation.

I cannot tell you all that the report contained, but without an exception worth noting, committee endorse in the largest and most comprehensive way the character, ability and service of the missionaries and they conclusively refute the staple criticisms made against foreign missions. They are emphatic in their declaration that the missionary work is carried on in a business like, practical manner and that it will stand any test of investigation. Send to the Laymen's Bureau, N. Y. City, for the report and read it in full whenever you hear again some one say that we do not know how our Missionary money is expended, that it is wasted by the Missionaries, that the work is not practical, and other criticisms that are made. Just tell the fault-finder of this investigating committee composed of the best business men in the country. Tell them that the notes of the Missionary Boards are promptly honored by the big banks in the East and that they say if the Boards haven't the money, the Methodists at home will get down in their pockets and pay it.

In June, this year, the most remarkable gathering that has ever taken place in the church since Apostolic times, took place in Edinburgh. From all parts of the world, delegates of many nationalities and of many creeds, met and for ten days considered plans for the evangelization of the world. Surely it seems as if men all over the world have caught the vision that Christ had when He said, "Go into all the world." We have found out how glorious it is to do something for our fellowman. To do something for the man not so well off as we are, is the spirit of the 20th Century.

With all the mighty modern forces that are working together for the evangelization of the world, I imagine that some of us are sitting back in our "easy seats" with folded, idle hands and pleasant feelings that things are going along so smoothly. If we are doing this we are blind and foolish in our optimism, because world conditions are such that we have need to feel the greatest anxiety. The Church today is facing the greatest crisis it has ever confronted and God has raised up the mighty means to evangelize the world because the present crisis demands such forces.

The nations of Asia have slept for untold centuries. Napoleon looking at China, said: "There sleeps a giant." And then standing in deep reflection of what the awakened China might mean to the white man, he said, as a man of the world would say, "Let him sleep." China, Japan, Persia, India, Turkey, and all of Asia are now astir with National life. Things are changing so rapidly in the east that it is difficult to keep intelligently posted on Oriental events. Railroads, schools, printing presses and other conveniences of modern life are being built as if by magic. Hundreds of thousands of the youths of Asia are in newly built, modern schools, and thousands of other students are in the schools of Japan, Europe and America. Classes for the study of the English Bible, not for religious purposes, but to learn the English language, and because they think it contains the secret of power of the western nations. They come to our Western schools, not to learn religion, but to learn the source of our power.

Kaiser Wilhelm several years ago, raised the cry of the "Yellow Peril" and we laughed and said he did it to call attention to himself. Sometimes a man in our own country now and then calls our attention to the "Yellow Peril" and we laugh and call him an alarmist. Is there a "Yellow Peril?" If we do not give to these awakened people of Asia the spirit of Christ which makes all men brothers, there is indeed a "Yellow Peril."

The world has grown so very small during the last few years that there will surely come a day when two strong men will stand face to face, one from the East and the other from the West. What will the character of that meeting be? If we hasten to give these Yellow people our Christian religion, there will be as Kipling says:

"Neither East, nor West,
Nor border, nor creed, nor birth,
When one strong man meets another strong man,
Tho' they come from the ends of the earth!

The educated men of Asia are deciding that their religions are mere superstitions and they are turning away from their Ancestral Temples,—unto what? If we do not hasten to give them the Christian Religion now, they will turn to infidelity. I read that there was once a day 50 years ago when in the Yangste Valley, the heathen temples were torn down and the broken idols were thrown into the river. The people watched the gods as they bobbed up and down in the yellow water and then turning sadly to one another, asked where they should look for help as the old gods had shown themselves of no avail. A Chinese Minister said to a Christian Bishop, "Now is the day of opportunity. We plead with you to strike while the iron is hot." But the opportunity was allowed to pass by. The heathen temples were built again on their old foundations and the gods were fished out of the river and set up once more on their pedestals and men whose hearts for a little while were open to a new faith turned back again to their heathen idols.

Shall we, in this new hour of opportunity, take our brothers of Asia by the hand and lead them to the throne of their God and our God, their Father and our Father, or shall we allow them to go from their old shrines out on new paths all alone without any Gods at all? These nations are now in a plastic condition and can be moulded as the Christian nations wish. In a short time these new feelings and aspirations now stirring them will have crystalized into National traits and characteristics and can not be easily influenced. We must hurry, for when once a Chinaman makes up his mind, it is made up forever and when once he settles a question, that question is settled for all time.

The doors of all heathen nations are wide open and the people are anxious for the Missionaries to come, not for religious purposes alone, but that they may learn the Western ways and langauge. The open doors are not near full. The number of Missionaries could be doubled and quadrupled before the doors are filled. The first Missionary to China worked seven years before he gained one convert. Now the converts are coming at an average of 450 per day during the entire year. It takes money to do this work and the investigating committee of the Laymen said $100 spent on the Mission field would go further than any where else in the world.

At one of the men's great Missionary Conventions held this Spring at Birmingham, Ala., a business man from Tennnessee gave $10,000 to help the missions of his own church. The amount was more than one seventh of his entire property. He said, "I promised the Lord that if He would prosper me, I would do the square thing by Him, and I am trying to keep my promise."

A business man in Winnipeg with an income of $15,000 a year has decided to live on one-third of it in order to give at least $10,000 a year to the Lord for His work.

A merchant from North Carolina. "Before the Layman's Movement with its message came to my attention, my ambition was to be worth a million dollars, but now my highest ambition is to see how much good I can do with my life and my possessions."

A successful business man of Georgia has decided to live on the same amount which his brother is receiving as a Missionary in China, that he may have the balance to devote to Missions.

A public school teacher in Pittsburg is supporting her own American representative in India on a salary of $500 a year.

A business man in Brooklyn is living on one-tenth of his income and giving nine-tenths to the Lord.

"Keeping is losing. Giving is saving. The only permanent values in this world are Spiritual values. We brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can carry nothing out. All of us face eternal bankruptcy, except as we invest our lives and our treasure in that which alone can endure."

Sunday school teachers will do well to note that the new volume of Dr. J. R. Miller's "Devotional Hours With The Bible," which is the fifth of this excellent series, practically covers the ground of the lessons for the coming year. Dr. Miller is of all writers one of the most sanely suggestive and deeply spiritual, and the teacher who looks for something really new in the lesson will be apt to find it here.

Dr. Chapman's new book. "The Problem of the Work," just issued by the George H. Doran Company, is pre-eminently a book for ministers and evangelists. The book is the result of demands made on Dr. Chapman for counsel and advice on questions of arousing interest in churches. He has answered these questions out of his experience in this eminently sensible manner.

Innate Depravity or Adenoids?

Readers of the best and oldest fiction know what a small part children are represented as playing in life—at any rate, as reflected in novels. This generation has seen a reversal of all that. It is the day of the child. But the spiritual life of the child is almost the last thing approached. Such a book as Dr. Arter Wright's "The Moral Condition and Development of the Child" is consequently welcome not only for itself but as a sign of a serious and scientific consideration of the spiritual education and nurture of children. The world is coming to see that much that has been considered as innate depravity may be purely adenoids. Physicians knew this long ago. It is time, thinks Dr. Wright, that every one else did too.

A Sad Death.

Mrs. William Parish, one of our best Flat Rock women, passed to her reward at 2:30 yesterday morning. Funeral services will be held in Flat Rock Church this afternoon (Thursday) at 1 p. m., conducted by the pastor.

Gone, but Not Forgotten.

When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit and was troubled. Jesus wept. St. John 11: 33-35.

And why should we not weep when our loved ones are taken from us?

On July 25, 1911, the death angel came and claimed my father, Lindsay Julian. His death being so sudden and unexpected was a great shock to his family and friends. For many years he had complained of his head hurting him at times and had talked with different physicians in regard to his suffering, and they pronounced it catarrh of the head.

While being able to carry on his work, none realized his condition as being serious; but he often said he could not live long if he did not get better. Having consulted all the physicians in reach and without being cured he decided to go to Dr. Wilkerson, of Randleman, and see if he could cure him. So on Monday, July 24, papa and I started to Randleman to see the Dr. and going to the home of papa's nephew, J. F. Routh, we spent the night there, and next morning went on to the hospital. After an examination, Dr. Wilkerson said he could do nothing for his head and advised him to go to Dr. Reeves of Greensboro. So after leaving the hospital we came on our way as far as the home of papa's sister, Mrs. A. N. Routh, where we stopped to take dinner. After we finished eating dinner, being excused from the table, I left the dining room and walked to the front door and was returning when Aunt Martitia called me to the dining room saying something was the matter with papa. When I reached to door I found papa still sitting at the table where I had left him with his hands resting on the table and his head bowed on his plate. I raised his head from the table and saw he was dying. I hastened to call Dr. Wilkerson and the nearest neighbors and while waiting for the Dr., we applied all home remedies that we knew, but all that loving hands could do for him did not save his life, and in ten minutes from the time he was taken ill he had passed from earth to the great beyond.

Dr. Wilkerson came as soon as possible and pronounced his death caused by the rupture of a blood vessel in his head.

The following day at 3 o'clock P. M., he was laid to rest by the side of his mother in Bethany Cemetery to await the resurrection morn. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Matthews, being absent, Rev. Mr. Routh, of the Holiness church, conducted the burial service. It was so hard to give papa up; and as I stood by the side of his casket and looked down on his dear face, so cold in death, and the hands, so active in life, but now cold and still, and knowing that I could never see him again in this world, and as memories of the past came rushing back, it seemed more than I could bear, and my heart felt like crying out, Oh, God, why hast thou taken papa from me? Why hast thou left me so near alone? But the answer seemed to come back, "My child, I have not forsaken thee, neither will I leave thee alone. I will be a husband to the widow and a father to the orphan; only trust to me and I will take care of thee."

Papa was born and raised in Randolph Co., one mile from Worthville, on the farm now owned by J. F. Routh. In early life he was converted and joined the M. P. Church at Bethany, where he remained a member for a number of years. He gave the land for the church and cemetery and to build the church.

He was another Confederate soldier, serving in the latter part of the war. Being opposed to war, he did not go until compelled to, and I have often heard him say that before leaving home he decided should he be called into battle he would not try to kill any one, for that would be against God's will.

Shortly after the close of the war he left his home and went to Indiana, going through the country in a wagon in company with a Mr. Wall and family who were going to make this their future home. After staying there for a while, he came back to his home in N. C. and after a few years recided to go back to Indiana, but not being satisfied to live that distance from his people he returned to his childhood home where he lived until after he was married.

On August 31, 1882, he was married to Adaline Swift, daughter of Flower and Jane Swift. To this union were born two children: George Luther Julian, of Atkins, S. C., and Amanda J. Julian, of Liberty, N. C.

In 1885 he sold his home near Worthville, and bought land on Sandy Creek, where, after building, he made his home, near Randolph Church, until death.

Papa was born December 31, 1839, and died July 25, 1911. He leaves a wife, two children, two sisters: Mrs. A. N. Routh and Mrs. Thomas Millikan, of near Randleman, and a large number of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss —but our loss is his gain, for I feel sure that papa is in heaven.

Not long before he died, during our conversation one evening, he spoke of death and said he wanted to be ready when God called him, and that he was trying to live as near right as he could.

Some years ago, one Sunday, some of my friends came to spend the day with me, and in the afternoon we sang that beautiful hymn, "I'm going home to die no more." After singing the last verse, papa laid aside the paper he was reading, looked up and said, "When I am buried I want them to sing that hymn," but as it could not be found in the books at the church, they sang, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Looking This Way." Why papa was taken so suddenly is a mystery we can't know, but sometime we'll understand and until then we can say, "Thy will, not ours, be done."

Goodbye, papa, till I meet you,
On that bright celestial shore,
Up in heaven I hope to greet you,
Where death and parting come no more.
I am lonely here without you,
For I miss you everywhere,
But some day I want to meet you
In that home so bright and fair.
One by one, earth's ties are broken,
One by one, our loved ones die,
And, one by one, we'll meet in heaven,
There no more to say goodbye.
Life is short and will soon be over,
Then on earth we'll cease to roam,
For God will some day send his angels
To gather his faithful children home.
Dearest papa, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grove's embrace,
But thy memory shall be cherished,
Till we see thy heavenly face.

His daughter.

It is rarely that the work of an American scholar receives such a prompt and widespread recognition as has come to Professor A. T. Robertson's "A Short Grammar of the Greek New Testament." The first edition was published in October, 1908. In the following February an Italian translation was commenced; three months later the second American edition was necessitated; the following month a German translation was made and since then it has appeared in Dutch and Spanish. Now a third edition is announced by the publishers, the George H. Doran Company. Despite its comparative brevity it is probably the best book extant on New Testament Greek and as such it has been acclaimed by Continental scholars.

Washington, D. C., November 25.—That the good roads movement was given most effectual impetus by the Southern Railway's "Road Improvement Train" which made a sweeping tour through Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessess, North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida between May 1 and October 27, is indicated in figures summarizing results of campaign just made public. In the period of six months during which time from one to three demonstrations were given daily, the experts accompanying the train instructed nearly 50,000 people in the art of building good roads and keeping them in repair. The train traveled a distance of nearly 13,500 miles, stopping at 250 towns which were located in 201 counties. The attendance at the various meetings ranged from a little less than 100 to over 1,500.

The method used in showing the people the advantages of good roads not only afforded an opportunity for them to secure a practical education on the subject of highway construction, but was so unique as to form a source of real entertainment for those not directly interested in the movement. The train consisted of three coaches, two of which were specially fitted up for demonstration. One contained working models of good roads showing the various materials used in construction, miniature road machinery shown in actual operation, and enlarged photographs showing every phase of the good roads problem. The other car was equipped with a stereopticon and illustrated lectures were conducted by the government representatives, showing in very striking manner the advantages of good roads over bad.

In some of the counties visited the interest aroused by the train was such that the people went actively to work improving their roads, voting for bond issues and employing engineers to give skilled supervision. A representative of the American Association for Highway Improvement accompanied the train for a portion of the trip and efficient work was done in organizing branches of the association in many of the counties.

The Southern Railway handled the train without charge to the government of the people in the belief that greater prosperity will result from the construction of improved roads in the South. Without a single exception the work of the "Road Improvement Train" was heartily approved and in every town there were heard unqualified expressions of the value of the work and public spirit shown by the Southern Railway in bearing the expense.

PRESENTS

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG SCHOLARS

For Intermediate Scholars

Every boy and girl should have a Bible. The Bible is the Word of God. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is Good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of life.

Size 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

No. 91. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles. Special Postage, 10 cents. $1.00

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him

PICTORIAL BIBLE

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also six maps of Bible lands in colors. Also with new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

For Teachers and Preachers

Holman Pictorial Scholars' Bible Pronouncing Text

Size 7 x 5 inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

22 And the prophet came to the Is'ra-el, and said unto him, Go, str thyself, and mark, and see what the for at the return of the year the

Beautifully printed on fine white paper from new, clear type. Containing, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, 32 Beautiful Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands. These views are printed on enameled paper and are made from recent photographs, which show places as they actually are today. In addition, this Bible also contains Helps to the Study of the Bible. Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Presentation Plate and Maps in colors.

No. 21. French Morocco, overlapping covers, headbands and marker, round corners, red under gold edges. Postage, 14 cents. $1.20

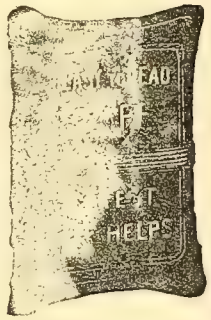
RED LETTER EDITION

Same Bible with Helps, etc., as above and with the Sayings of Christ in the New Testament printed in RED.

No. 21 RL. Binding same as 21. Postage, 14 cents. $1.45

Four Best Editions of the World's Best Book

Holman Self-Pronouncing Large-Print Teachers' Bibles



Size 8 x 5½ inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

the priests, the Le'vites, the the singers, the Ne'thi-nims, they that had gone ...ted then Containing New Copyrighted Helps: A Practical Comparative Concordance. Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen Colored Maps.

No. 47. Egyptian Morocco, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges. Special price, $2.00 Postage, 25 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same large type and Helps as described above. The words of Christ in the New Testament, Prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., are all printed in RED.

No. 81 RL. $2.50 Postage, 25 cents.

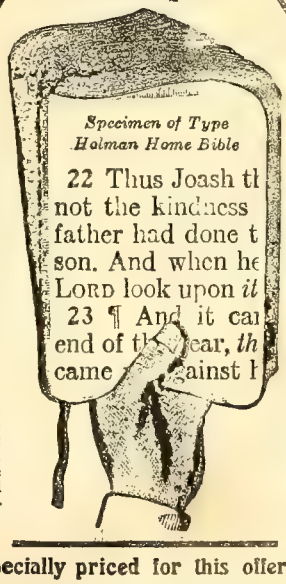
FOR OLD FOLKS



Specimen of Type Holman Home Bible

22 Thus Joash th
not the kindness
father had done t
son. And when he
LORD look upon it
23 ¶ And it can end of th[illegible]ear, th
came [illegible]ainst h

The Holman Home Bible

Printed from large, clear Pica type, with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for everyday use in the Home, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for births marriages and deaths. This is the best Bible obtainable for Old Folks who need extra large clear print and a lightweight book.

INDIA PAPER EDITION

The finest Bible made; will last a lifetime.

No. 75X. Genuine Morocco, overlapping covers, leather lined, silk sewed, red under gold $4.50 Postage, 16 cents.

FOR THE HOME

The exact size of Bible when closed is 6½ x 9 inches.

No. 201. Bound in Flexible French Morocco, grained lining and fly leaves, silk headbands, and purple silk marker, round corners, red under gold edges.

Publishers' price . . . $3.00
Our special price . . . $2.10 Postage, 24 cents.

Each of the above Bibles is specially priced for this offer at about one-fourth less than the publisher's retail list. SEND ALL ORDERS TO

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, GREENSBORO, N. C.

HOW MARGARET SPENT THANKSGIVING.

"Oh, mother, must I go to Cousin Patience', for Thanksgiving?" asked Margaret. "It's so far away, in the country, and than all the girls at school are going to have such a beautiful time next week. Why, Thanksgiving evening, there is that party at Marion's, and Marion always gives beautiful parties; then there's the skating the very next afternoon, I would miss so much, mother, dear."

"I know it, darling," replied Mrs. Alling, soberly, "but you see it would disappoint them so if none of the family come. For three years your father and I have planned to go to the farm, and each time something has happened to prevent it."

"Yes," cried Margaret, "and now that business trip father takes to Chicago. Oh, there's reason enough this year, but do they really want me if neither you nor father can go?"

"See what Cousin Patience' says," was Mrs. Alling's reply, putting on her glasses to more easily read the small, cramped handwriting. "Since you and George are called away, we count upon having Margaret with us at Thanksgiving time, and will expect her on the afternoon train Wednesday."

Margaret listened, winking hard to keep back the tears, and tried hard to answer cheerfully, "I suppose I'm going since they want me, and yet how can I feel like Thanksgiving?"

Her father did his best to encourage her. "Why, childie," he said, "Cousin Patience has a charming old home, a genuine New England farmhouse, right in the heart of the Berkshire hills. It's a regular story book place in which to spend Thanksgiving. I had happy times there in years gone by, and I well remember the walnut grove above the house, and the harvest of nuts we boys gathered. The cousins will give you a royal welcome, I know."

The day before Thanksgiving, a rather sorrowful Margaret leaned back in her chair, and watched the landscape flying past. Four hours before she had regretfully said goodby to her father and mother, and seen the cathedral spire and the distant clock tower, familiar landmarks, disappearing. Several of the girls had come to the station to see her off, but they were all talking of the festivities she was to miss, and somehow they failed to cheer her. Margaret knew that Cousin Patience had a daughter about fifteen, her own age, and a son a little younger, who was an invalid.

Her bag contained little gifts for the family. She wondered if what she and her mother had so carefully chosen would please these unknown cousins. As the train slowed up at the little country station she looked eagerly out. A pair of strong looking gray horses, attached to a high wagon, stood near the platform, evidently waiting for some one. The driver, a red-cheeked young fellow, stood up as Margaret alighted, and beckoned her. "Guess you're the one I'm looking for!" he called out; "want to go to the Bassett farm now, don't you?"

"Yes," smiled the girl, "I do."

He lifted in her bag and made place on the seat beside him for her.

"Are you one of my cousins?" inquired Margaret, timidly.

"No," briefly, "I'm one of the men who works for 'em; my folks live on the next farm." Not a word further did he vouchsafe, and the drive was taken in solemn silence. It was a bleak November day, and a chill wind blew across the fields. They gray horses trotted cheerfully along the frozen road, they knew they were homeward bound and proposed to get to the comfortable stable as soon as possible. The country didn't look very attractive, so mused the girl at least, in its autumn dress of brown. Maybe in summer it would be as beautiful as father remembered it. The white farmhouse did look homey and comfortable, as with a flourish they drove up before the horse block and Margaret was helped out by Cousin Reuben Bassett, Cousin Patience' husband. Cousin Patience herself greeted her warmly. "You look like your father, child," she said; "not a bit of your mother in you."

Behind Cousin Patience, in the shadow, Margaret caught a glimpse of a tall, dark girl, who was furtively watching her, but who didn't offer to come forward until her mother called: "Why, come right out and see your new cousin, Sally. Margaret, this is Sally, and you and she are 'most twins; her birthday comes in July and, if I remember correctly, yours in September." The tall girl held out her hand and, unsmilingly, acknowledged the introduction, then turned abruptly away and began to talk to her father.

"You know our boy, Albert, is lame, don't you?" said Mrs. Bassett, leading the way to the large guest-room. "Poor boy, he'll never walk, we fear, but his wheel chair is a great comfort; he's had it only within the year."

"I want to get acquainted with Albert," cried Margaret, impulsively; "he and I must be great friends."

Cousin Patience soon bustled away, saying, "Come downstairs as soon as you're ready, you'll find some of us around."

As Margaret opened the door of her roomy closet to hang up her warm traveling coat she heard some one speaking in the next room, and she paused involuntarily at the mention of her own name.

"Oh, yes," began a voice she thought she recognized as Sallie's. "she's Margaret Alling, Mary, only our second cousin and mother had to have her here for Thanksgiving. We weren't anxious to invite her, but, you see, her people evidently expected it. She has an awfully good opinion of herself, I can see that, and, of course, a city girl thinks a farmhouse is as old-fashioned and countrified as possible."

"How long is she going to stay, Sallie?" broke in a voice, evidently Mary's.

"Only three days, thank goodness," was Sallie's reply; "so we can get along for that little time. Her parents have money and I can imagine how plain our Thanksgiving table will look to her. Oh, I wish I knew how to trim it up and surprise her; just to shew her country folks are not so backwoods as she expected. Oh, must you go, Mary—come over tomorrow."

Margaret's cheeks were all aflame and her lips trembled as she stepped back into her room. She had listened, and realized the truth of the old saying, "Listeners never hear any good of themselves." So that was the way her cousin felt, they were as unwilling to receive her as she had been to come. She fumbled for her handkerchief, then changed her mind and smiled instead. She, the petted Margaret, whom every one at home approved of, was an unwelcome guest, and she must spend three days in the house; now what was there to do about it?"

"Why did I ever hear that talk?" she told herself, regretfully; "I never would have guessed how they felt—then with a sudden change of tone—"never mind, I'll make them like me, I will; I'll be such a nice guest that they'll not be sorry they asked me; they'll find that I am not a suspicious city girl, but just a pleasant cousin."

She rose, straightened her trim stock, smoothed her pompadour, and went slowly down the steep stairs. As she entered the lighted sittingroom she saw there was but one person in the room, and that must be Albert, for a pale face lit by eager brown eyes looked out of a wheelchair, and two frail, white hands rested on its polished arms. Margaret never hesitated, but crossed the room and stood looking down on the boy. "You are Albert, I'm sure," she said, gently, and pressed one of those delicate hands between both her strong ones.

"I wonder," glancing at the book in his lap, "if you enjoy the White Company as I did!"

The boy smiled up into the interested girlish face, as he replied, "Cousin Margaret, I guess you love books, too; there isn't much but books for a fellow like me."

When his mother came in, a few minutes after, she was surprised and pleased to see her shy son talking happily with his new cousin, as they exchanged views on Lorna Doone, and David Copperfield. Sallie made her appearance soon after, and, before she realized it, was drawn into the discussion, and found herself agreeing with Margaret on many of the points brought up. Why, she was not so unlike them, this newly found cousin, but frank and natural as any country girl.

After supper Margaret disappeared upstairs and presently brought down her offerings. Sallie was made happy by some embroidered collars, and dainty, lace-trimmed bows, which, she noted, were very like those her cousin wore. Mrs. Bassett received a delicate green and silver bon-bon dish, her husband a heavy, embossed key ring, while Albert beamed with delight over an illustrated copy of Scott's poems. "Just what we wanted!" they all declared.

Next morning, Margaret begged to be allowed to help Sallie set the long dinner table before the troop of cousins should arrive. At her suggestion they cut off the stem end of a small, perfect pumpkin, scooped out pulp and seeds, and, as if it were a vase, filled it with some yellow chrysanthemums. It made a glowing centerpiece, and seemed to light up the whole table. At each place Margaret then placed a smaller chrysanthemum in different yellow tonesfi thus carrying out the color scheme, as her mother would have done. The old, broad silver cake basket was piled high with glowing apples, ruddy winter pears, and a few oranges. "Oh, Margaret, thank you, thank you!" cried Sallie, impulsively, delighted with the whole effect. "You've made the table lovely, how surprised the company will be. Mother, just look, aren't we all fixed up?"

"Indeed, it is beautiful!" agreed Mrs. Bassett, and from the door Albert, in his wheel-chair, smilingly surveyed his cousin's handiwork.

One hour later a merry party assembled around the heavily laden table, and Margaret became speedily acquainted with her many cousins. Dinner was about over, and, as was his wont, Mr. Bassett asked the assembled guests what each one had to be thankful for. One by one they answered, some gravely, some merrily, and now it was Albert's turn: "Well," he said, slowly, "I'm thankful that Cousin Margaret came to visit us, I am."

Margaret's cheeks flushed crimson with surprise and pleasure, but she was still more astonished to hear Sally say: "And I'm thankful I know Margaret. I feel pretty rich to have found such a sweet cousin."

Under the table cloth Margaret's hand met Sallie's and gave it a grateful squeeze.

"You'll stay longer next time, Margaret, and you know you are going to write me," cried Albert.

"Remember you are coming to visit us just as soon as the school closes in June"—this from Sallie.

"Good-by, you dear child!" chimed in Cousin Patience.

"God bless you!" said Mr. Bassett.

It was the day after Thanksgiving, and now the gray horses were standing in front of the house, ready to take Margaret to the station.

"Yes! yes! I'll surely come again," she promised, and was carried off down the road she had traveled three days before. Today the sun seemed to light up the brown fields in cheerful fashion, against the blue sky stood out the bluer hills, and a fresh wind blew out of the pine woods. Her dreaded Thanksgiving visit was over, and, behold, a miracle! She was looking happily forward to her next visit!—Alix Thorn, in the Presbyterian Banner.

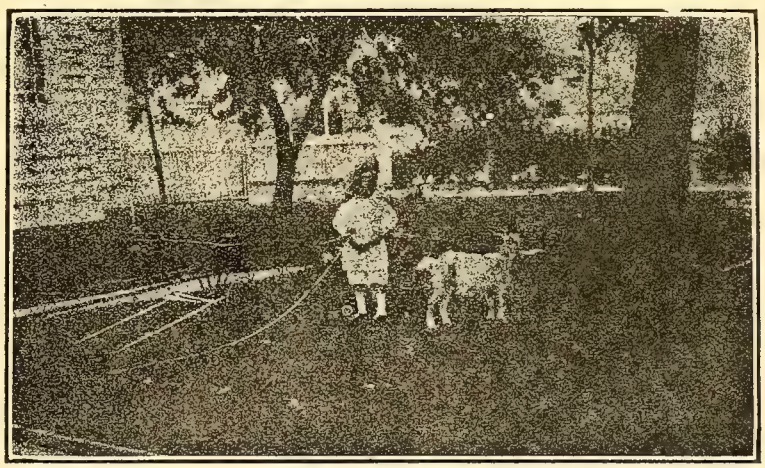
OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

2 Chronicles, chapters 15-21.

Be patient, keep sweet. Do not fret or worry. Do your best and leave results with God. Believe firmly in God, in the fulfillment of his purposes and in the march of his providences. God's laws are immutable, and work with undeviating regularity. Walk in fellowship with God, and every year you will be a stronger, better, happier and sweeter man. Do not mar your peace or power by needless worry. Live by faith in the Son of God, who loves you and gave himself for you. On some bright tomorrow you will come to anchor under a haven of sapphire and a harbor of calm, with chimes ringing their welcome from the spires that sentinel city of God, while from the battlements millions will shout, "Well done!" while God himself will say, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—George B. Vosburgh.

—Rev. J. E. Hartsell was quite ill the night Conference closed, but was able to travel next day.



Henry Powell, Jr., and "Benny Perry."

Henry Powell, Jr., is the boy and "Benny Perry" is the goat. The goat was given to Henry by a boy named Benny Perry, and Henry called the goat by the same name. They look lively in this picture, but the goat has died since this picture was taken. The cold wind blew upon him one day when he was tied out, and the next day he died. He was taken away and buried, and Henry followed with flowers to lay upon his grave. Henry is still very bright and lively. The editor stayed in his home while at Conference in Henderson. Henry entertained us nicely with his talk. He has a story to explain why his grandfather (Bro. Geo. B. Harris) is bald. Henry says that grandpa, when a boy, was leaning over trying to get sugar from a barrel, and fell in, as the sugar was low. When they pulled him out, all his hair stuck to the bottom of the barrel! Henry and Grandfather Beavans became great playmates. Henry tied Mr. Beavans in his chair one day.

KEEP AGE AND YOUTH APART.

By Charles A. Hines.

The plan of the international society is to have Christian Endeavor organizations suited to the needs of various ages. To this end there are three branches of Christian Endeavor societies. These are called the Senior, Young People's and Junior.

The Senior society is designed for those people who are grown—fully matured in mind and body. Its meetings should probably be held once a month,having the usual officers and committees and looking after the welfare of the church and the comfort of the older members. This organization should have its social meetings, its business meetings and definite work, but its prayer meetings should be the prayer meetings of the church.

Take the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor as the principal and oldest branch of the work. It will have its officers and committees, will hold frequent social and business meetings. Its prayer meeting is to be separate from the regular church prayer meeting; this ofganization will have a prayer meeting of its own.

The Junior Society is for the children, boys and girls from eight to fifteen years of age. The leader of this organization should come from one of the other two societies, but all the officers should be from the children. More about program for the meetings, prayer meeting topic etc. may be had by reference to the various publications of the society.

Christian Endeavor has failed in many churches because the above order has not been observed. I know a society in which there were members from 12 to 60 years of age. The organization died in a few months. There were a number of bright boys and girls in the organization when it began its work, but they would not express the things they felt in the presence of so many of their elders. The elder people run the thing and one by one the children and young people dropped out.

The organization would mean great things in any church if the three divisions above outlined were put into use, proper officers chosen and the members availed themselves of the much good literature published.

If in your church you decide to have only one society, fix some limit upon ages —make it either a society for grown people, young people, or children, but in no case for all. It is just as fatal to lump all ages together as it would be have a Sunday school with only one class.

—Hon. Levi Scott, Greensboro's oldest lawyer, was buried yesterday. He was 83 year old.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 10, 1911.

Subject—The Worker's Source of Strength. Col. 1:9-13.

Daily Reading.

M. Strength from God ——II Tim. 1: 7
T. Strength through the Spirit, Eph. 3: 16,17
W. A strength promise ——Isa. 41: 10
T. God our strength —— Ps. 46: 1-3.
F. Strength in weakness —II Cor. 12: 9, 10
S. Strength in the world ——Eph. 6: 17

Suggestions to the Leader.

For a candlelight meeting see that every one is provided with a candle. Those that cannot get candlesticks will have squares of board upon which the candle is fastened by the melted grease. Burn the ends of the wick before the meeting. Put out all the light in the room except that on the organ. As the leader takes part he will light his candle. The members will now take part in order as they sit, beginning in front, each lighting his candle from that of the one who has just spoken, until the room is a blaze of light.

In the open meeting have just as many take part as can be enlisted. Plan with them before the evening of the meeting. Keep your presence of mind, and fill in your program where necessary, without attracting the attention of the meeting. Have special music.

Discussion Topics.

1. Discuss the lesson text.
2. Quote other strength texts.
3. How may we get this strength?
4. How must this strength be used?

Gems from the Poets.

I cannot live without Him,
Nor would I if I could;
He is my daily portion,
My medicine and my food
None can with Him compare—
The chief among ten thousand,
The fairest of the fair. R. L. Allan.

Some Short Addresses.

1. In all the departments of life it is the quiet forces that effect most. The sunbeams fall all day long, silently, unheard by human ear; yet there is in them a wondrous energy and a great power for blessing and good. Gravitation is a silent force with no ratle of machinery, an dyet it holds all the stars and worlds in their orbits and swings them through space with unvarying precision. 'Tis in the lightning, not in the thunder peal, that the electric energy resides. Thus even in nature strength lies in quietness; and the mightiest energies work noiselessly.—J. R. Miller.

2. "I can." That means determination. It means faith. It means the full strength of one's powers, for they come into full service only for him who dares. Let no one fear the coming of egotism. Egotism is not akin to confidence, determination, faith. It has been said that "God helps those that help themselves." This is a proverb. Some may deny it. But it is a dangerous thing to quarrel with a povrerb. It is a child of experience. Deep down it may be, and difficult to find, but there hidden away in the proverb is the truth. So there is truth in the proverb "God helps those who help themselves." Where is it? May it not be in this: he can only help those who will permit him to help them? The man who brings in line all his powers puts himself in a position where God can help him. So "I can" has underneath it a deep philosophy as well s first of all the word of God.—Ex.

3. "I can't." That spells defeat. It is not hard to see that one who is sure he can not do a thing is weakened in every means in his command, to begin with. In any thing that requires strength, precision, quickness, skill, the one who comes to the task in the spirit of "I can't" is impaired in the powers that hold the keys to all the above objects. "I can't" trembles; the nerves are unsteady. The courage is weak. Nothing will work as it should. No power will come forward with the strength of which it is capable under favorable circumstances. "I can't" is not loyal to one's capabilities. "I can't" robs one of his resources.

A city missionary telling of his pastoral expariences says:

"On one occasion I had been listening to quite a long outpour of words that fell from the lips of a most disagreeable personality, very illiterate, untidy, and unkempt, and malodorous. When I bade her good-by, she squeezed my hands in both of hers, which were very dirty, and said: 'This has been a great pleasure, Reverend; it has been the first time in many years that I've had the satisfaction of talking to one of my own kind.' "—Sel.

—The simplest, and at the same time, most comprehensive treatment from any source we have seen on tuberculosis is in pamphlet form covering only five printed pages and issued as the Virginia Health Bulletin, Vol. II, No. 12, Dec. 1910. We are indebted to Dr. J. E. Rawls, Suffolk, Va., for sending us a copy which we carefully preserve for reference. It is a Tuberculosis Catechism for Beginners. The Truth About a Dread Disease in Simple Form, Recommended for Use in Public and Private Schools. It is to the point and teaches a layman the facts about this dread disease.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk trains.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

KEEP THIS—IT IS YOUR RECEIPT.

Received on Herald Subscription Accounts

$2 each—J. Lee Poole, I. W. Barber, R. F. Williams.

$1 each—W. N. Thornton, Mrs. S. Powell, L. M. Harris, Miss Attie Black, J. P. Sells, L. W. Warlick, Beverly Surratt, Rev. Joel Trogdon, A. N. Roberson, J. M. Speas, Mrs. L. A. Williams, E. C. Kittrell, S. M. Speas, Russell Pickett, Miss Emma Job, Mrs. M. A. Payne, M. J. Wyrick. Miss Melissa Ivy, R. W. Lineberry, J. F. Spencer, Oder E. Burns, Miss C. E. Wolf, G. N. Burtner, J. F. Whitaker, J. A. Turner, Mrs. M. J. Turner, H. D. Rushing, Jno. A. Powell, T. T. Hicks, J. W. Davis, E. C. Harris, J. R. Cummings, Miss Betsy Patton, A. L. Foust, M. M. Wicker, W. W. Bean, Mrs. Henry T. Powell, Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, Mrs. G. A. Nicholson, Mrs. Fanny Payne, Mrs. L. H. Coble, Leila McKee, Mason Costner, J. A. Walker. W. A. Prim, W. M. Martin, Mrs. T. B. Stuart, W. B. Baker, Mrs. Sarah Corbett, J. S. Pender, Miss Etta Hight, R. H. Hight, Mrs. G. P. Stubbins, Bertha Jones, L. W. McAdams, Dr. F. R. Harris, Miss Mary Wills, C. H. Hill, E. F. Seagraves, Mrs. Jas. Dickens, A. O. Clodfelter, John Watts, Will Walker, Miss Agnes Loftin, ——? Smith, H. A. Finch, E. A. Powell, W. R. Earnhart, J. W. Kiser, A. F. Blackwelder, W. H. Scarboro, L. H. Sides, W. L. Holland, Calvin Garman. A. C. Turner, Isaac Mooney, John Glenn, Hester Martin, Mrs. M. M. Richard, C. A. Philips, M. Furr, W. E. Biggerstaff, P. S. Gettys, D. A. Sisk, J. W. Morrison, J. P. Turner, Mrs. R. E. Floyd, E. M. Ivester.

50 cts. each—Miss Ruffis Hudson, Mrs. Anna Stuart, C. W. Adkins, Mrs. Margaret Ledbetter, Miss Emma Kennett, Mrs. L. T. Smith, H. E. Iseley.

25 cts. each—L. H. Patrum.

—Rev. Chas. Underwood Butler and wife, singing evangelists, having finished a successful revival at Brunswick, Ga., are engaged at Live Oak, Fla., in a series of meetings till Dec. 7.

Women are a new race, created since the world received Christianity.—Beecher.

"Oh, matchless honor, all unsought,
High privilege surpassing thought,
That Thou shouldst call me, Lord to be Linked in such work, O God, with Thee!
To carry out Thy wondrous plan,
To bear Thy message unto man;
In trust with Christ's Own word of grace,
To each soul of the human race."

Go on and up, climb up and on;;
The cross at every wayside shrine,
Has uplift for your heart and mine,
And brings us nearer to the dawn.
Give thanks, take courage, onward; when
We scatter cheer, it is like seeds,
That blossom into human deeds,
And waft their fragrance back again.
—Union Signal.

—Dr. Wilbur spoke a few words in favor of President Taft's arbitration treaties. Surely our Senate ought not to stand in the way of honorable peace.

—Rev. W. D. Fogleman stopped in Mebane and spent Thanksgiving with his daughter, Mrs. Henry Nicholson.

THE BEST KIND OF FAMILY READING.

For the home, where the right influence counts for so much, choose the reading that quickens the pulse, that tells the deeds of daring, that takes the reader into strange parts of the world, and yet, with all its power to entertain, depicts honor, true manliness, gentleness, loyalty to principle, as the things of chief importance in life. It benefits while it entertains.

You will find such reading week after week in the pages of The Youth's Companion. Contributed by the most popular story-writers, and by men and women whose names are famous in every field of enterprise and scholarship.

Send us your address on postal card, and we will mail you the beautiful prospectus of The Companion for 1912, together with sample copies of the paper.

We think you will agree, when you have read them, that there is no other paper that gives quite so much of such high quality as The Companion, and it costs only $1.75 now for 52 weekly issues. After January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced $2.00.

The new subscriber receives a gift of The Companion's Calendar for 1912, in ten colors and gold, and all the remaining issues of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION.
144 Berkley St., Boston, Mass.

New subscriptions received at this office.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

Secretary Wilson announces that hereafter the Department of Agriculture will not examine or recommend for purchase under the Weeks Law timberlands upon which options have been secured with a view of selling to the Government at a profit. The Department wishes to deal direct with the owners of lands, since this course will result in the payment to the owners the full value of the land and at the same time make it possible for the Government to secure lands cheaper than through option holders.

The purchase of land through option holders means a lower price for the landowner and a higher price to the Government than is justified by the conditions. This decision to purchase only from the owners means that no action can be taken upon some of the proposals which have been made for the sale of lands, but as the appropriation available is limited to $2,000,000 per year, there will be no difficulty in selecting from the large amount which is being offered a sufficient acreage to readily consume the entire appropriation as fast as it becomes available.

While optioning of land in advance of the Government examiners has become an obstacle in certain localities in the South, Secretary Wilson says in general his assistants have made excellent progress in examining and reporting upon lands and in reaching agreements with owners on terms and conditions of sale.

More than 1,800,000 acres have been offered in the Southern Appalachians and White Mountains, over 400,000 acres have been examined, and agreements as to price have been reached with the owners for over 100,000 acres.

Four parties of estimators and five expert lumbermen have been busy in the field since the 1st of June securing the necessary information upon which to base reports to the National Forest Reservation Commission, by which all purchases of land must be authorized in accordance with the provisions of the law. Secretary Wilson will ask that a meeting of the Commission be called early in December for the purpose of considering some of the reports which are being prepared.

Before making his reports to the Commission, the Secretary will have reports from the Geological Survey showing whether the control of the lands examined will promote or protect the navigation of the streams on whose watersheds they lie. Only lands that are approved by the Geological Survey will be recommended for purchase.

The agents of the Agricultural Department will continue in the field all winter making examinations of lands offered for purchase. They are especially instructed to negotiate with the owners of small tracts. Much of the land offered for sale is held in tracts of less than two hundred acres. It is tracts of this kind which have been optioned by the speculators in the past and which the Government now expects to buy direct from the owners.

The Quick and the Dead.—When a little boy was asked to tell the difference between the quick and the dead, he said he guessed the quick were the fellows who dodged the automobile, and the dead were the ones that didn't.

—Rev. John A. Burgess responded to Bro. Harris's address of welcome.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., TRURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1911. NUMBER 3.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

A BOOK BY DR. TAGG.

Within recent months we have published two addresses by prominent candidates for the presidency of the United States on the Ter-Centenary of the Authorized Version of the English Bible. We have before us a still better address written by Dr. F. T. Tagg, editor of The Methodist Protestant, and published in book form by our Baltimore Book Concern. It is really a gem. It has 59 pages, including an introduction by Rev. T. O. Crouse, D. D. It has a good photograph of Dr. Tagg, and will be a good souvenir of him to be treasured by friends who outlive him. We believe the book sells for 25 cents. It would make a good present for Christmas or birth days, as it helps to inspire respect for the Book of Books.

THE CAGE.

A Book by Harold Begbie.

This English writer is doing some fine service with his pen. Those who read his writing are brought to a keener perception of spiritual realities and to a firmer grasp of moral principles.

In "The Cage," the question of divorce is treated in a masterly way. It is a story of fascinating interest, the heroing being a young woman who was married while yet in her teens by her mother to a man of wealth but who proved to be a very uncongenial companion. They live apart and in their separation she falls in with a playmate of her childhood, a man she likes and who tries to convince her that she is bound in her own interest to make the breach permanent. The author carries her through a most trying series of temptations, but brings her through them to an honorable conclusion. The keynote of the book is in the quotation: "Social questions are only difficult and dangerous, while the one central and eternal Question of Life, Whither goest thou? remains unanswered."

The book is published in this country by the George H. Doran Company, New York.

CONSCIENCE AND HONOR.

Mr. Harold Begbie, in "The Cage," thus finely describes the subtle diference between conscience and a sense of honor.

"Conscience is something from without, or if within, imposed from without; it is not ourself; it whispers, it warns, it accuses; in the presence of conscience one is in the presence of an angel; conscience is superior to us; we listen, we bow, we submit; to reject it is impious, to destroy it is ruin; conscience is religion; it is God.

"A sense of honor is the personality itself. It controls conduct because it is conduct, it elevates character because it is character. We might twist a phrase of Goethe's and say that the behavior of a man of honor is a mirror in which he sees his own reflection. A high sense of honor does not warn against vice, it makes vice impossible; it does not reform, it is reformation itself. A man of honor does not keep himself from stealing; he could not steal. He does not struggle with himself to conquer temptations. It is not more impossible for him to commit murder, deceive a neighbor, destroy a reputation, brutalize a child, or forge a name, that it is to alter the beating of his heart, the vibrations of his brain, or the color of his blood. The sense of honor is the man himself. It is a term which describes a character.

"It is better perhaps to have a conscience than the sense of honor. Conscience is progress; it is never satisfied; it is aware of eternity. A sense of honor is content with itself; it is a noble synonym for self-satisfaction, self-sufficiency. Between conscience and the sense of honor there is the same difference which divides morality from religion. The Pharisee in the temple represents Honor; the poor man who durst not even raise his eyes, Conscience."

A TWICE-TOLD TALE.

The committee on entertainment appointed by the Henderson Church for our Annual Conference rceived from a preacher the modest request that he be sent to some poor home where nobody else would want to go. They also received from a lady in Henderson the request that they send her some poor stick of a man whom nobody else would want to entertain.

The committee felt that such a distinguished spirit of self-sacrifice on the part of these two people deserved to be fittingly rewarded, and after the manner of an Eastern monarch, they resolved to reward both in a manner extroardinary. After sufficient meditation, aided perhaps by advice of their wisest sages, they decided to send that preacher to that lady's home. Imagine his surprise on finding himself inducted into one of Henderson most elegant of many elegant homes, and imagine her surprise on receiving as a guest one of the most polite and agreeable gentlemen imaginable. We cannot give you the name of the lady, but the name of the preacher is Rev. —. —. —. . . . . .

—The most heroic advance was made by St. Paul Church at the last Annual Conference.

—Bro. S. V. Pickens has gone to Florido, that land of wonders. Perhaps he will be so good as to write us about some more of them.

Auction Sale.—Rev. W. D. Fogleman will sell at public auction at his residence in Liberty next Saturday at 2 p. m., his household and kitchen furniture. This is one of the sacrifices incident to the itinerant ministry, but there are compensations spiritual for the loss material.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Response to the Address of Welcome

By Rev. J. A. Burgess.

Mr. President, Friends, and Brethren of the Conference:—The first thing that I want to say is this: Brother Swain, our worthy President, has much more confidence in my speaking ability than I have in his. It seems to me that if I were to call on him to respond to an address of welcome delivered on a great occasion I would certainly give him more time in which to prepare his speech than he has given me. I assure you that it is with no little embarrassment that I attempt to respond to the splendid address of welcome to which we have listened. It has been a treat to us all, and I hate to spoil a good thing. But I do not see any way out of it tonight. It seems to me that good wine should be served last. Tonight it has been served first; and the only redeeming feature that I can see about this is is the fact that you will not have to drink so much of the last as the first. Since I have been trying to speak to the public it has been an ambition of mine to speak just as well, or a little better than the other fellow. Tonight this ambition is impossible of realization for two reasons: First, My mind works slowly. I cannot think quickly. I cannot think on my feet. I cannot think on the train. Since getting here I have not been able to think. Before I started I did not have time to think. It takes me a longtime to prepare a five minute's speech. If I could have known the brother's speech a month ago, and that I would have been called on to make this response tonight, possibly, in that time I could have prepared a five minute's speech. But at that time I knew nothing of this. These things constitute the first reason why my ambition cannot be realized tonight; and I have too much confidence in the good sense of you people to state the other reason, for I feel quite certain that before this response is finished you will be able to guess the other reason. However this may be, it is a fact that I am here tonight, called on to respond to this splendid address of welcome, without any prepared speech. I confess to you, I do not know where I will begin, nor when I will begin, nor which way I will go, nor where I will end —so you would better look out. But, in behalf of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, I want to say to you people of Henderson, we are glad to be here. When it was decided twelve months ago that this Conference would hold its next annual session in Henderson I was glad. I had never seen Henderson, but I had heard a great deal of Henderson and the Henderson people. I had heard something of the beauty of your town, and of the progressiveness of its citizens. I had heard of your stand for righteousness, and virtue. I had heard of your loyalty to the cause of humanity. I had heard of your loyalty to the Methodist Protestant Church and Methodist Protestant principles. I had heard of your loyalty to the King of Kings. I had seen your representatives at the different Annual Conferences. In this way I had formed an opinion of Henderson, and the Henderson people, and, especially, the Methodist Protestant Church of Henderson. I had heard of your boundless hospitality. A week or two ago Dr. Tagg in speaking of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, and the fact that it would hold its eighty-sixth session in the town of Henderson, spoke of you people as a people than which there was no more hospitable to be found in all this broad land. All these things made me anxious to come and see for myself. And now, I must confess to you, that, since getting here, and grasping the hands of some of you, and breathing the Henderson atmosphere, and being welcomed into your town, and seeing something of its beauty and learning also of the activities, and being welcomed into your homes, and eating Henderson rations, I have been made to feel, and now I am going to say it so that you can all hear it, the half has not been told, and Dr. Tagg was not abe to exaggerate. From the day Henderson was selected as the place for the assembling of the eighty-sixth session of this Conference to this morning I have looked forward to this as a pleasurable trip. Tonight finds me here enjoying your boundless hospitality. You met us at the train, heartily you took us by the hand, you ushered us into your homes, you spread your tables before us, you gave us every possible evidence that we were welcome, and tonight you have completed the welcome through your representative in the splendid address to which we have listened. In extending to us this welcome you have been enthusiastic. Now, let me tell you that this Conference accepts your welcome in all good faith. We believe it is real, that it comes from your hearts, that there is no affectation about it. I want to tell you in behalf of this Conference that it is no less enthusiastic in its acceptance of this welcome, and in its appreciation of this welcome, than you are in extending it. Let me assure you that the Conference feels at home, and it is going to feel at home as long as it stays in Henderson. Twelve months ago I spent a night with a certain family, and they were so kind that I felt like I owned the home. I almost forgot that I was a visitor. After I left I told a friend that for one time in my life I had been able to feel, to say the least of it, that I was in moderate circumstances, and that sometimes I hoped to experience the same feeling again. This hope is now being realized. Though I have been here only two or three hours, I hardly feel like a visitor. I am beginning to feel like the home where I am stopping belongs to me. I believe it does for this week; and I am sure that this is the feeling of every member of this Conference. I don't know but that if I spend a whole week in Henderson and if this welcome is kept up, and I am sure that it will, I shall feel like I imagine a rich man feels. And I don't know, but it is possible that some of my ministerial friends who do not fare so well at home as I do, are already beginning to feel like they think rich people feel. What is bothering me most now is how this Conference, after having spent a whole week in Henderson, will ever be able to put up with the home fare, but I suppose we will get along some how: for you know when a man becomes a Methodist minister he soon learns to adapt himself to the varying circumstances. In the next place I want to tell you that this Conference is not glad to be here simply because you met us at the train and welcomed us into your town and into your homes, and have extended to us this welcome tonight. We are glad to be here because of your history, and of what you are. We are glad to be here because your are a people than which there is no more loyal to righteousness, to the principles which shape character, to real progress, to the great work of lifting fallen humanity, to the principles of the kingdom of God, to the King of Kings, to the Methodist Protestant Church, and to Methodist Protestant principles, to be found in all this broad land. We are glad to be here tonight because we feel that we are being entertained by a people who have felt the divine touch, who have heard the divine voice, and who have beheld the heavenly vision, and who have not been disobedient unto this vision, but have opened their hearts and allowed the King of glory to come in and take possession. We are glad to be here because your ear has never been closed to the cry of suffering humanity. We are glad to be here because in the past you have been willing to bear burdens and make sacrifices for the Methodist Protestant Church. We are glad to be here because you have labored to further the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church, not only in this State, but throughout this nation. The influence of this church has not been confined to the town of Henderson, nor to the limits of the North Carolina Conference, but it has extended to the limits of the Methodist Protestant Church. These are facts which make us glad to be here.

In the next place I want to tell you that with pleasure we are going to remember this visit in years to come. We are going to look back upon this Conference, and say that it was in Henderson, during the Henderson Conference of 1911, that we received encouragement and inspiration in the Master's service, that we were enabled with a stronger determination to press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, and to labor more earnestly for the advancement of the highest interests of the Methodist Protestant Church, Already we feel the uplifting power of the spiritual atmosphere of you people. And we desire so to conduct ourselves while with you that you will feel that you are entertaining men who have also felt the divine touch, heard the divine voice, and seen the heavenly vision, and have not been disobedient unto the same. We want you to feel that we are just as much interested in lifting up the race as you are, that we are just as ready and willing to bear burdens and make sacrifices to this end as you are, and that we are just as loyal to the Methodist Protestant Church and her principles as you are. We want so to conduct ourselves that you will remember us with pleasure and want us to come again: for I assure you that this Conference will want to come to Henderson again. We want to impart unto you some spiritual blessing. We want this Conference to be one of spiritual blessings and inspiration to you. We want to be this much like our Father above who delights in bestowing blessings. We feel that if we fail in this our coming to Henderson will be largely a failure, and that you will be disappointed —for we believe you have been expecting this from the Conference. May God grant this unto us and unto you. Let me again tell you that we accept your welcome, and are glad to be here because of what you are, and of what you have done to build up our beloved church, and to spread the kingdom of God, and of what we believe you are going to do. Now, I want to conclude these scattering remarks with the following story which perfectly illustrates my feeling in trying to respond to the splendid address of welcome to which we have listened. The president of a certain theological seminary had the habit of testing the ability of his students to think quickly by sending them out on Sunday morning to preach with the text sealed up. They were not to unseal the text till they entered the pulpit. Then they were to unseal it and preach from it. In this way a certain young man was sent out. When he unsealed the text he found these words: "Apply the case of Zacchaeus to your present circumstances and call to the ministry." The young man said: "Friends, the subject on which I shall address you this morning is that of applying the case of Zaccheus tomy present circumstances, and call to the ministry. In the first place we note that he was very small of stature. I never felt so small in all my life. In the second place he was up a tree. This is exactly my condition. In the third place he made haste to come down, and I am going immediately to follow his example.'

ON TO WASHINGTON!

There is no doubt in my mind now that North Carolina will be well represented at the National Anti-Saloon League Convention and also at the Conference to "consider the evils of the inter-state liquor tarffic," which meetings will be held at Washington, D. C., from December 11-15, 1911.

A communication this morning writing for information and etc., says: "I have decided to attend the Convention and hope to take one or two delegates."

Another says: "You can count on me."

A communication yesterday said: "Will go to Washington on December 14th."

Another one says: "I expect to go. It is my purpose to call the attention of my congregation to the matter next Sunday and see whether my local church will send some one."

Another communication, written while party was sick in bed, says: "It is my purpose to attend the Conference at Washington, provided I am well enough."

Another says: "I hope to be there on the 11th, and our Total Abstinence Union is planning also to send a delegate."

These are samples of letters coming to our office every day, which gives us assurance of a good delegation at Washington. But the larger, the better. Let local churches make provision to send men. Let individuals, deeply interested in this matter of National legislation, go of their own accord, and let's have at Washington the greatest temperance gathering that has ever convened in this nation.

North Carolina is looked upon by the temperance people throughout the nation as being in the fore-front of this temperance reform movement. "Where she sits is at the head of the table;" and we want a delegation at Washington that is in keeping with North Carolina's reputation, and will cause the National law makers to sit up and take notice. Secretary Nicholson writes me from Washington that all signs indicate a large attendance In this last call, my brother, let me urge you to meet us there.

Yours for National Legislation,
R. L. Davis, Supt. N. C. Anti-Saloon League.

WESTMINSTER SEMINARY NOTES.

It might be interesting to the church to know something of the character of the young men in her Seminary. That they are devoted, consecrated, earnest Christians we may readily believe. If anyone is inclined to be skeptical about this a glimpse into the more sacred precincts of the Seminary life might be enlightening. The regular prayer meetings are held every Friday evening and special ones whenever the class officers or the faculty choose to call the students or a part of them together. One of the special meetings was called for Wednesday afternoon, November 29, for praise and thanksgiving. It was led by Dr. Feeman and will be remembered as an occasion of precious fellowship and of the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit. But that is really characteristic of all the prayer meetings, for all are helpful and prove "seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord."

Sometimes the devotional element may be very strong in the lives of a body of young men and still there will be an absence of those other qualities which must be present to make useful and effective leaders in the Church. The future success of any institution depends very largely upon the character of the young people now in training for service in that institution. Particularly is this true of the Church of Christ. The progress made, the degree of success attained depends much upon the quality of her leaders. Strong leaders make a strong Church; weak leaders a weak Church. To be strong, leaders must be prepared by experience and training that they may fill well the positions to which they are called. It is here that education fulfills her high mission. But of what value is education if character is lacking? In the Christian minister the quality of leadership is important, training is important, but character is most important of all. And true Christian character not only involves devotion but pluck, energy and determination.

That the young men of our Seminary possess these qualities is proved by their efforts to obtain the seminary training. Evidently they believe what Dr. Elder-dice is accustomed to say to his classes—"When God calls anyone to preach the Gospel he calls them first to preparation. There should be no short cut to the ministry. If Moses required forty years of scholastic training why should the average theolog balk at four years in College and three in the Seminary?" And we recall that the Master spent thirty years in preparation for a three years' ministry. With such qualities, with this ideal—that the best possible preparation is none too good for the Christian minister—and with abounding faith in God they press bravely forward in the attainment of that ideal.

The fact that the average theological student believes that God wants men who are thoroughly equipped to be the heralds of His message of life is illustrated by other facts. It is probable that less than ten percent. of the young men who enter our colleges with the Christian ministry in view have means enough to meet their expenses for one year. But with supreme confidence that He who has called will surely provide, they trust and pray and work, and the result is that in the great majority of cases the full college course is secured, and for many the way opens for them to complete their preparation by attending the Seminary. Sometimes the young men are so fortunate as to have more means when they leave college than when they entered, but the rule is that they have accumulated a considerable debt instead and this often prevents their securing the much needed and valuable seminary work.

While in school opportunities for self-support are offered the student by preaching and various kinds of manual labor. In may cases this necessity for extra hard work is beneficial. It helps him to sometimes makes a better student of him. Too often, however, it does not have the best influence. Too much outside work is distracting and prevents the student from doing justice to his studies and also interferes with the cultivation of studious habits. This is particularly noticeable in the Seminary. Very often by the time the theological student reaches the Seminary his financial resources are nearly at an end. He must then borrow more money or do outside work. Usually he has to do both. Today nearly fifty per cent of the students in the Seminary have pastorates. This requires the preparation of from one to three sermons every week; it takes the student away occasionally for funerals and special church gatherings; it compels him to do some pastoral work, and all the time there is the burden of the church as well as the class room upon him. Consequently it is almost impossible for him to do justice to either.

To obviate the necessity of doing so much outside work, two methods of support have been provided. The one is by the church and the other is by the Seminary: help from the Board of Ministerial Education and Scholarships. The former plunges the one helped into more debt so if possible the student avoids such assistance, though it is a fact that many of our young men could not have had their higher educational advantages were it not for this Board. The latter, that is the Scholarships, provide gifts of $100 or less, according to the need of the student, which gifts are distributed by the faculty to those considered most worthy. At present the Seminary might do much more than it can do were the income for Scholarships larger. The permanent Scholarship fund amounts to $6500, the annual returns from which barely reach $300. As the number receiving aid from this source ranges anywhere from ten to fifteen or more each year it falls upon some one to find the necessary amount. That one, of course, is Dr. Elderdice, and through the hearty co-operation of generous friends who appreciate the work the Seminary is doing and understand its needs, the necessary amount has always been raised. It is but giving credit to whom credit is due when we say that the heaviest contributors have been and are members of the Maryland Conference. Is it not time that other parts of our church were represented in the support of this important branch of her work? The various boards are constantly and earnestly appealing for more funds. Their appeals are legitimate and the causes they represent most worthy. They deserve and should have liberal support. But when you are responding to the other appeals, do not forget the Seminary and its needs. The permanent Scholarship Fund ought to be at least four times as large as it is. Surely it is the duty of the church to make it as easy as possible for young men to secure the best possible theological training and such training does Westminster Theological Seminary afford.

THE McNAMARAS SENTENCED.

The long trial in Los Angeles is ended. The prisoners, seeing their conviction was inevitable, yielded to the advice of their lawyers, and confessed their guilt.

In their pictures, they do not look like criminals. John J.'s face gives no hint of his awful deed. But James B. confessed that he dynamited the Times building in the wreck of which twenty-one persons were killed, and John J. confessed that he had blown up the Lewellyn Iron Works.

Judge Bordwell, addressing the destroyer of life, said:

"There is very little or no comfort, Mr. McNamara, in the assertion by you that you did not intend to destroy life. The widows and orphans and the bereaved parents will look upon that statement at this time as mockery. The circumstances are against you in making any such claim. A man who would put 16 sticks of 80 percent. dynamite in the building full of explosives of which you may have had no knowledge, I really mean some combustible material), I say that a man who under these circumstances would place a dynamite charge of that quantity in such a building, in which you, as a printer, knew gas was burning in many places and in which you knew there were scores of human beings toiling must have had no regard whatever for the lives of his fellow beings. He must have been a murderer at heart.

"You well merit the maximum punishment prescribed by law."

The prisoner quivered and his head dropped. He twisted his fingers in his hands behind him and then lifted his head again.

"That the judge of the court does not condemn you to death upon the gallows is due to the existence of no exterminating circumstances whatever, but because it appears to the court the part of wisdom to do otherwise.

"It is the judgment of the court that as a punishment for the crime of murder in the first degree, to which you have pleaded guilty, you shall be confined in the state prison of this State, at San Quentin, for your natural life. You may be seated."

Addressing the destroyer of property only, the judge said:

"Mr. McNamara, you have heard the court's remarks to your brother, and in no small degree, sir, they undoubtedly apply to you. And, as in his case, the fact that the court may not mete out to you the extreme penalty of the law, is in no degree due to any doubt that you merit, but simply because it appears to be the part of wisdom to do otherwise. The judgment the cournt now pronounces on your plea of guilty to this charge is that you be confined in the state prison at San Quentin for the period of 15 years. You may be seated."

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Second Chronicles, chapters 22-28.

—Be of good cheer.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS AT LAST ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

We, your Committee on Ways and Means, beg to say that we have recommended different plans at different times, and finding that the brethren have their different plans and times for collections, we therefore recommend the prosecution of such plans on the different fields as are the most effective in teaching the people liberality and also teaching them the importance of supporting the different causes to which we are asked to pay.

After investigating we find that the work being done at the Orphans' Home belongs to the Methodist Protestant denomination, especially the North Carolina Conference, therefore, be it resolved:

(1) That we recommend that each pastor see to it that an "Orphans' Home Day" be observed in each church at which time a program suggested by the Executive Committee of the Woman's Home Mission Society may be used, the claims of the Orphans' Home presented and an offering taken. The time for holding the day being left to the quarterly conference.

(2) Believing that it is most important that the children of the church and the Sunday school be interested in the Orphans' Home, we recommend that collection be taken once a month in each Sunday school for the benefit of the Orphans' Home.

(3) We recommend that a committee of one to three ladies be appointed by the pastor at each church whose duty shall be to solicit offerings in cash and supplies, such as clothing, food, and such other things as can be profitably used by the Home. The pastor to report the names of said committee as soon as appointed to the chairman of the Executive Committee, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C.

(4) That this report be published in the Methodist Protestant Herald in the months of January and May, accompanied by one or more articles under the supervision of the chairman of the Executive Committee.

(5) That all money and supplies be sent to Miss Etta Auman, Denton, N. C.

We recommend that the assessments be as follows:

President's salary	$1,200
Church Extension	3,250
Foreign Missions	2,250
Home Missions	2,000
Superannuates	750
Ministerial Education	446
Theological Seminary	400
American Bible Society	65

In addition to the above, we recommend

For Minute Fund $100

For defraying delegates expenses to General Conference $375

For Conference Fund on charges paying pastor less than $500 an assessment of $1.00.

On charges paying pastor $500 or more an assessment of $2.00.

To defray expenses of delegates to the Anti-Saloon League Convention, $50.00.

President	Ch. Exten.	For. Missions.	Home Missions	Supernnuates	Min. Educ.	Theol. Sem.	Bible Soc.	TOTAL	Gen. Conf. Fund	Minutes Fund	Conf. Fund	Anti-Saloon L.	CHARGE	Paid to Treas.
34	75	60	56	18	13	8	1	265	2	10	2	1	Alama.
20	25	20	11	10	7	7	1	101	1	2	1		Albem.
1?	40	20	19	10	6	5	1	118	2	3	1	1	Anders.
17	65	35	26	12	8	6	1	180	1	6	2	1	Asheb o
10	25	20	21	5	2	3	1	87	1	3	1		Ashev.
12	25	17	17	7	6	5	1	90	1	3	1		Bunco.
17	85	40	38	9	9	6	1	205	2	8	2	1	Burl.
3	11	7	5	1	2	1	1	31	1	0	1		Caldw.
5	15	27	13	6	5	3	1	75	1	3	2	1	Carole.
2	2	6	1	1	1	1	1	15	1				Car&G
35	90	61	67	22	13	12	1	301	2	11	2	1	Clevel.
10	40	50	30	12	5	2	1	150	1	5	2	1	Concord
17	60	41	40	5	3	4	1	171	2	6	1	1	Davids.
6	11	17	12	7	4	2	1	60	1	2	1	1	Dent'n
6	15	35	20	4	2	2	1	85	1	3	2	1	Efland
12	45	25	25	5	6	6	1	125	1	5	2	1	Fairy.
27	70	65	50	20	8	10	1	250	2	9	2	1	F. Rock
25	54	35	45	8	3	3	1	175	2	7	1	1	Forsyth
6	24	20	12	10	1	1	1	75	1	2	1		Gaston
5	10	10	8	2	2	2	1	40	1	1	1		Gilbrg.
12	27	23	10	8	2	2	1	85	1	2	1	1	G&HR
27	85	55	50	20	10	3	1	250	2	9	2	1	Gr'nv'le
27	*		50	25	17	25	1	285	3	14	2	1	Greensb
13	46	25	15	20	7	6	1	132	1	5	1	1	Gre'nsv
24	51	42	44	12	4	3	1	183	2	6	1	1	Guilf.
28	70	52	39	19	9	7	1	225	2	8	2	1	Halifax
35	85	51	55	17	15	11	1	270	2	9	2	1	Haw R.
25			76	75	28	20	14	1	424	3	15	2	1	Hend.
17	05	76	60	25	12	14	1	300	2	11	2	1	Hi. Pt.
17	26	12	10	7	6	4	1	83	1	3	1	1	Ivy
17	29	20	17	10	5	4	1	103	1	3	1	1	La Gr.
6	26	9	20	5	4	2	1	74	1	3	1	1	Lehi.
32	07	57	53	16	15	10	1	281	2	10	2	1	Liberty
22	75	58	47	11	6	3	1	233	2	10	1	1	Lincoln
28	02	47	57	16	12	8	1	260	2	10	2	1	Littlet.
17	1	25	20	11	17	15	1	140	1	4	2	1	Mebane
17	24	12	11	5	4	3	1	78	1	3	1		Meckl'g
7	28	17	16	6	2	2	1	79	1	3	1		Monroe
20	15	20	20	12	8	4	1	150	1	4	1	1	Mocks.
22	76	55	50	18	8	6	1	255	2	10	2	1	Mt. Ho
27	86	51	40	12	12	6	1	240	2	10	2	1	Oak R.
17	20	20	15	5	6	5	1	105	1	3	2	1	Orange
22	57	45	25	12	7	10	1	194	2	7	2	1	P&Mtz
22	66	52	45	18	10	9	1	224	2	10	2	1	Randll.
24	60	45	41	12	6	4	1	224	2	10	2	1	Richla.
33	82	60	40	20	10	9	1	255	2	10	2	1	Rogers
6	20	7	11	9	2	10	1	66	1	2	1		Rocking
5	25	1	2	1	1	1	1	97	1				Rocky M
20	46	24	25	8?	9	5	1	163	2	5	1	1	Saxap.
12	20	21	15	10	5	7	1	100	1	3	1		Silo C.
12	51	21	27	10	4	8	1	124	2	5	1	1	Sn. Ch
10	25	21	15	5	2	1	1	80	1	2	1		St. Pa'l
25	65	52	20	22	8	11	1	214	2	9	1	1	Stanly
25	96	85	50	20	13	10	1	310	2	12	2	1	Taber.
6	20	15	15	9	4	5	1	75	1	2	1	1	Thom.
16	17	15	25	9	2	4	1	84	1	2	1	1	Uwha r
25	57	47	27	11	11	13	1	204	2	8	2	1	Vance
8	9	5	5	4	2	2	1	37	1	1	1		Welch
27	07	56	61	16	12	15	1	252	2	10	2	1	Wbr. N.
27	80	50	50	12	12	2	1	225	2	10	2	1	Wmst.
15	20	10	12	12	5	4	1	80	1	2	1	1	Wwsv.
17	42	30	28	14	5	8	1	155	2	5	1	1	Yarbor.
35	65	40	55	22	4	11	1	233	3	10	2	1	Yad.C.

*$140. $100. !!$185.

—From The Christian Sun.

"HOW COME?"

How come a Thanksgiving football game? Who originated the idea and what for?

President Taft issued a proclamation advising the people to meet at the places of worship, render to Almighty God thanks for His abundant blessing the past year, and remember the poor and needy with gifts of gratitude and so forth. How does a Thanksgiving foot-ball game fit in with that proclamat' and with the thought of giving thanks?

Do please somebody tell us, How come a Thanksgiving foot ball game?

Lessening the Number of Homicides.

The people of the good State of Virginia must be very much gratified at the conduct, within the recent months, of her courts and her executive, in their dealings with a case of revolting crime that became the topic of conversation throughout the country. No country in the world has as many homicides as the United States and the number is on the increase. One of the principal reasons assigned for this unenviable record is that our courts are slower in meeting out justice and our executives are readier to stay the execution of sentences than in any other country in the world. On this account Virginia has given a good example of late in dealing out justice, where justice was deserved, in spite of a hundred contradicting influences. We agree most fully and heartily, therefore, with this statement from The New York Christian Advocate;

"If all homicide trials were conducted with the spirit and method of that in Virginia which has attracted the attention of the world; if all juries were as honest and as sensible as that jury; if every State has a Supreme Court that could not be swayed from its duty, and a Governor who could withstand the combination of puerility, abnormal sympathy, countless letters from all parts of the country, and the demands of the ultra-religionists who wished to give the criminal three months to make his peace with God, the number of murders would be lessened by seventy-five per cent."

Sidney, says a writer in the Delineator, was walking on the beach with his uncle John one day, when his uncle told him if he would find two pebbles exactly alike he would give him a dollar.

Full of glee, Sidney began searching. By and by he ran to his uncle, crying, "O Uncle John, I've found one of them!"

From Pastors and People.

REMINISCENCES.

1st, It is conceded by all who attended the last session of the N. C. Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant church that it was the best yet held. The total absence of unkind feeling, the high personal regard entertained for each other and the deep interest all took in what was thought to be the best interest of the church, made it an inspiration.

2nd, The intelligent and tireless efforts of the committee on entertainment placed every minister and layman where he could be best entertained and where surroundings were most congenial.

3rd, The people of Henderson, regardless of denominational lines, have few equals and no superiors as hosts and hostesses. Every minister and layman was sure he had the best home in Henderson, but this was denied by all those entertained in other homes.

Now that the Conference of 1911 has passed into history, let every minister and layman go to work to make the Conference year, 1912, the best yet This is not hard to do if each will reconsecrate himself to the service of God and the church and the vantage ground already gained should greatly stimulate every Methodist Protestant, not only in N. C., but throughout the entire nation. We are being better understood and being better understood are more appreciated. At the last session of the N. C. Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held in Kinston, N. C., Bishop Hoss said: "It is becoming more and more apparent that the principles for which they (Methodist Protestants) struggled so stoutly in the past were right." We have known this all the time and are glad that others are beginning to do so. Not to vindicate our position merely, but because in free America we are jealous of our liberties, both civil and religious. May the richest blessings of a divine Providence be upon every minister and layman throughout the district! Very truly,

W. E. Swain.

NOTICE.

Let every official and every one else that is interested attend the 1st quarterly conference of Granville Charge at Antioch, Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in December, 16th, 11 a. m., 1911.

Business of importance to be attended to and we especially urge the attendance of all the officials. N. G. Bethea

Stanly.

I expect to fill appointments at Simpson's 4th Sunday in December, at 11, a. m. Am sorry that I cannot reach the work at an earlier date, but my wife is not able to be up much of the time. We are expecting, however, to spend Christmas at the parsonage.

Geo. L. Reynolds, Pastor.

Dec. 5, 1911.

Lexington, N. C.

To the official brethren: The first quarterly conference for Yadkin College Ct. will be held at Shiloh on Saturday before the third Sunday in December, 1911. Preaching at 11 o'clock; dinner; quarterly conference. The presence of all the official members requested and expected. H. L. Powell, Pastor.

I am very kindly received for the third year and work is rapidly being planned. I serve a great people. I am truly glad to be their pastor.

Miss Annie L. Forrest visited two appointments yesterday, namely, Mt. Carmel and W. Lexington. Made two inspiring addresses. We are looking for great things to be done on this charge this year. H. L. Powell.

Siler City Circuit.

Perhaps this name is not familiar to all, yet it is the name of a circuit composed of as good and clever people as can be found in North Carolina. Our church at Siler city belongs to this circuit, and while our church is not numerically as strong as some, yet it is composed of some of the most progressive people of this thriving town and a better people is not to be found anywhere. We are glad that this church as well as Siler City circuit was honored in the selection of one of their number for a representative to our General Conference.

All the churches that constitute this circuit did well last year; the circuit made the best financial report that it ever made and in many ways did well. In all this God blessed the people and I am glad that the people realize that God did bless them.

Now, dear brethren and friends, let us start the new Conference year with a full determination to do better this year. The way to do this is to begin in December, 1911, and continue steadily on. This is the easiest and only right way—this is the way to get the best there is in your pastor. Will each steward begin in earnest in December—it does make a difference.

And brethren, the stewards can't do much unless they have your sympathy and support. Our first quarterly conference will be held Saturday before the first Sunday in February. Will each church try to make the best comparative report? This is a pride to be envied by any church and steward. Paul said "Covet the best gifts." I was glad to be present at Hope Church at one of the splendid prayer-meetings on the night before Thanksgiving and also at the Thanksgiving service Thanksgiving day. This indeed was a Thanksgiving occasion. An offering was taken for our Orphans' Home amounting to $5.27.

I filled my appointment at Piney Grove the 1st Sunday. We were glad to have with us Bro. Reed, a former pastor, who gave us a good sermon. In the afternoon I filled my appointment at Zion. There was an unusually large crowd present. We are glad they are enthusiastic in the preparation of a Christmsa tree and that a goodly amount has been raised for that purpose. May the Lord help the pastor and people to go forward to still greater things, Fraternally,

J. H. Bowman.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

The death of Mrs. William Parish of Flat Rock removes from our midst a most excellent woman. Sister Parish had been in declining health for a year or more. She knew that end was approaching and expressed herself as being ready for the long journey. Her only regret was in leaving behind those whom she loved. Bro. Parish and his son, Oscar are left alone and the home must be a very sad and lonely one. They have our prayerful sympathy.

The Year's Work Begun.

Our first appointment for the new year was at Bethel last Sunday. A very good congregation was present and the spirit manifested betokens a good year's work

Our First Quarterly Conference.

The first quarterly conference will be held in Flat Rock Church on Thurs. after the 1st Sunday in January, (Jan. 4th). Conference to begin at eleven o'clock, a. m. We hope for a full attendance and good reports. Let us get to work early this year and avoid a hard pull at the close of the year.

January.

The month of January will be the time to take collections for expenses of delegates to the General Conference.

Thanks.

We thank Mrs. J. B. Harrison, Mrs. N. T. Pegram and Mrs. J. R. Dwiggins for generous contributions of fresh pork, sausage, etc. Such good things make a very favorable impression upon us these fine winter days.

Henderson.

The Conference came and went. It was suggested that I express my view of the work.

I saw the Conference in its sessions of 1875, 1876, 1878, 1879, 1888, and 1901. I thought this one a great improvement over all of them. There was division and some dissension in those earlier days. Last and West, and "who shall be the greatest among us." None of that was heard this time. Bros. W. C. Kennett, Geo. E. Hunt, Ogburn and Highfill are the only ones I recall at this and those earlier sessions.

I kept thinking of Pickens, the Michaux's, Alson Gray, Paris, J. G. Whitfield, two Wills', "Ferd," and G. A. T. Whitaker, Ferree, Garrett, J. R. Ball, J. L. Ogburn, Page, my father.

I did not hear a cross word spoken during this Conference. The presence of the brethren from the North representing the general interests added much to the enjoyment of Conference.

Having become assustomed to living and working rapidly—the operations of this Conference seemed to me inexpressibly slow. The social, personal contact and opportunities for acquainting ourselves with the men in the front ranks of the church, and for talking about its business and prospects were fine; yet as far as the transaction of the business of the Conference in open session was concerned, it seems to me it all could have been done in one day. If I may be allowed to offer a comment on the only discussion I heard it is that I thought most that was said was mere expansion of the thought of the moment than of careful reflection. Yet a correct result was reached after a little while. Of course there was no occasion for hurry; but a tight grasp of the reins by the presiding officer and a clear expression of the idea would have saved some desultory talking. This view may be the result of my long established opinion that we are too free, and ought to be willing to subject ourselves to stricter discipline.

It was indeed a pleasure to us all to see the brethren, grasp their hands, and hear their voices and know of the progress of the church in their various sections of the State. And Henderson was especially delighted to see all her former pastors—Ogburn, Johnson, J. S. Williams, W. F. Kennett and Dixon. The worst thing about it all was that we just "had to" reconcile ourselves to "giving up" our latest leader and teacher, Bro. Andrews. Yet we feel that we fared well in the distribution of our spiritual leaders, for Bro. J. D. Williams is not unknown to us. We are planning a welcome service for him for next Sunday night, when we expect all our members to be present, ready to fall into line for the operations of the years.

We intend to be hopeful and expectant of good and joy in our individual personal lives and in our church life. We are determined to make the church relation and church attendance more and more worth while. I close with a little clipping which has, I think, the right ring. Let us all try to live up to it.

"Let us then cease forever our miserable habit of prophesying evil. Men do go to church, and the way to get more of them to go is to make our churches more sunny, more cheerful, more human, more helpful, more like sweet and holy homes. Things good are not all decaying and dying out—and the way to get more good into the world is to stop our ungrateful fault-finding and discouragement and begin to help every body to be good and brave and true." T. T. Hicks.

Dec. 4, 1911.

Winston-Salem.

Dear Brother:

Our Winston church is now facing a new era as our beloved and efficient pastor, Bro. Millaway, retires to give place to our new pastor. And we will accord to Bro. S. W. Taylor the warmest welcome we are capable of giving and feel honored that we will have him and his excellent young wife with us by next Sabbath. Yet we are all sad at the thought of Bro. Millaway must leave us. We shall miss him and his kind ministrations in our homes in times of sickness and sorrow. We shall miss his excellent and heart searching sermons and we believe at the last day of final accounts there will be many to rise up and tell how ardently he labored to teach them how to lay hold on eternal life. Bro. Millaway is a truly consecrated servant of the most high God and the churches to which he is assigned may congratulate themselves that he is to minister to them in holy things. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear we believe that He will give to him a crown of glory that fadeth not away. And we will not forget Mrs. Millaway and her untiring devotion to her church, her many visits to the sick and in entertaining visiting ministers and friends in her hospitable home. When they leave us they will carry with them the best wishes of our church and all the best citicens of Winston-Salem. May the Lord bless and keep Bro. Millaway and family. "The Lord make his face to shine upon them and be gracious unto them. The Lord lift up his countenance upon them and give them peace."

We are glad to be able to state that Bro. O. W. Hanner after a long and painful illness is now convalescent. He says he hopes to be with us next Sabbath when our new pastor will preach for us. We are looking forward with much interest to his coming. Bro. Taylor will have an arduous task to take up the work started by Bro. Millaway, but we are expecting to have a new church in the near future and we believe that Bro. Taylor will have the hearty co-operation of our best people and that he will take up the work and carry it on to certain success, and we hope he will come among us well equipped for the great undertaking. He is young and strong in the strength of the Lord, and we expect him to accomplish much aided as we think he will be by the entire church as well as a large number of our friends outside.

And now, Bro. McCulloch, we wish you to accept congratulations for the splendid last week's issue of the M. P. Herald. It was truly inspiring to read page after page and with what intense interest we read of how handsomely the Conference was entertained in Henderson; of the large amount of important business transacted, etc. It all goes to show what consecrated wealth and intellect can accomplish.

I suppose that our graceful and successful reporter, Miss Rosa Reynolds, will give you a better and more detailed account of our present prospects in our church; but she is a tireless worker and has very little time to devote to this important matter, hence, this long letter from your humble servant. E. A. N.

Mebane Charge.

Hebron: Our pastor filled his regular appointment last Sunday, Dec. 3, and preached an excellent sermon, using as his text, Matt. 21:28. Son, go work in my vineyard today. We all love our pastor and are glad to have him with us again this year.

On the third Sunday in November we elected church officers for the year. Mr.

Julian Thompson and Mr. Jerome Steele were elected as stewards. The old board of class-leaders and trustees were re-elected.

We are sorry to say that our Sunday school has gone into winter quarters. Hope to reorganize early in the spring.

One of our members, Mr. F. W. Nelson, is very ill at this writing. Very little hope is being entertained of his recovery.

I will close with much love to the Herald and its many readers.

Lelia McAdams.

Mebane, N. C., Dec. 4, 1911.

Haw River Notes.

Mrs. J. C. Morris entertained the Philathea Class and several friends Tuesday evening, Nov. 28th, at a Stocking Shower for the benefit of the Denton Orphanage. Quite a number of pairs of nice stockings were received for the little homeless children.

After a social hour, elegant refreshments were served which eveyone enjoyed Our class is trying to live up to the Class Motto—"We do things." We have helped to pay a church debt, bought two beautiful contribution plates, two linen cloths for the communion table, a nice chancel railing, two handsome chairs for the pulpit, a communion set, and other things. We hope soon to be able to seat and carpet the church.

We are glad to have Brother Curry with us for another year. On Wednesday evening, the 29th, he conducted a Thanksgiving service. The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and holly. The gift-table for the Orphans' Home, was piled with useful presents by members of the church. Friday evening about thirty-five members and friends of the church chartered a street car and went up to Graham and gave pastor Curry and wife a good old-time pounding. We trust the gifts were useful and much appreciated.

Espa L. Bullard,
Sec'ty Philathea Class.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.

Dear Herald:

We are glad to have Bro. Hunter back with us another year.

Mr. Crist, from Winston, lectured on Thanksgiving at the M. P. Church. It was enjoyed by all.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. On last Sunday there were 75 present. We were sorry to give up the banner, but not sorry that others did better than we did.

Miss Ila Hunter, who has been very sick with appendicitis, is improving, we are all glad to know.

Mrs. Nancy Crouse, wife of the late Henry Crouse, died Dec. 3, 1911, aged, 5 years, 9 months, and 13 days. She was laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery on Monday.

With best wishes to the Herald,

Maggie Mickey.

HAW RIVER CIRCUIT.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Fair Grove on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in this month. There has been some change in the boundary, so come, dear brethren. The salary to apportion. The missions to fix. In all an important meeting. I have outlined the work for the year. Come and let us arrange for a good year. I met good congregations yesterday.

C. E. M. Raper.

HAW RIVER CIRCUIT.

Bro. Swain:

I am making my first round. I will meet my regular appointments for the work, beginning the first Sunday and taking it in regular order. This is my eighth assignment to this work and I feel so grateful for the reception I have received and the welcome extended me.

C. E. M. Raper.

Reidsville, Dec. 3.

To Richland Ct.: Greetings and Best Wishes!

Conference having assigned me to you as pastor for this Conference year, I shall, (D. V.) beginning with next Sunday, fill the appointments.

Hoping for a pleasant and profitable ear for all, I am,

Yours truly,
C. H. Whitaker.

Dec. 5. 1911.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

The greatly appreciated and longed-or sermon was delivered here last Sunday by Rev. Rev. G. W. Holmes.

Bro. Holmes expressed his appreciation of being with us as being great; but truy ours of having him surpassed his of being with us.

Bro. Holmes left us three years ago, having been with us six consecutive years, preceding. An unusual congregation assured Bro. Holmes of what he was to Mt. Carmel and Granville Ct.

Glad that I was present and heard the report of the stationing committee that I might immediately report the return of Rev. N. G. Bethea to this charge. Bro Bethea has been a wonder to us since first he appeared. He is like the old man's rabbit, he is "good for anything." In the pulpit, an exception; in the home, very entertaining and instructive; as a solo-ist, worthy of great consideration. So, how could the charge have been meliorated by a change? Polk Garrett.

Nov. 28, 1911.

(This was overlooked last week.—Ed.)

Littleton: Greeting.

Having been assigned to your circuit for this year, this is to tell you all that I will be on hand for services the third Sunday, and will fill all appointments from then on, the Lord helping. Praying God's blessing on the work and workers, I am, Yours truly,

J. A. Ledbetter, Pastor.

Yarboroughs, Anderson.

We are again at work on our field of labor. Our work last year was not what we hoped for. We expected that all claims would be met. But one church, Liberty Hill, fell behind on Conference claims. We expected it to reach us before our report was made to Conference but didn't. We have had some success on this work, for which we give our Heavenly Father the praise. The interest manifested in different ways seems to indicate better things.

The parsonage on Anderson charge is now complete, costing over seventeen hundred dollars, including the wiring, lighting and water. Neat six-roomed cottage in Greenville. It will rent for twenty dollars a month.

We are very thankful to our Conference for giving us a place to work, and by the grace of Him who called us, we are going to make this the best year of our lives yet.

Bro. Watson gave the Yarborough congregation a splendid talk at the Sunday service, giving an outline of the good things he enjoyed at Conference. We were pleased to hear his encouraging remarks.

Collection for the Orphans' Home was $3.70.

First quarterly meeting for Anderson will meet at Fairview church, Saturday before the third Sunday in December, and for Yarborough's, Saturday before the fourth Sunday in January.

W. A. Lamar.

We had 113 in S. S. at Caroleen last Sunday. The collection was $5.10.

Our S. S. at Shelby is doing well. We are going to see what we can do at Shelby this year. We have got things well in hand. H. W. B.

Our thanks for this invitation: Mr. John A. Thompson invites you to be present at the marriage of his daughter, Mary Effie, to Mr. Cicero H. Jones, Wednesday, December the twentieth, nineteen hundred and eleven, at three o'clock, Chestnut Ridge Methodist Protestant Church, Efland, North Carolina.

Concord.

We have begun our fourth consecutive year's work with this kind people. They have received their new-old pastor kindly. Before he had returned from Conference, the parsonage was taken charge of; and matting and curtains put in the hallway, and new shades secured for windows; and many other things were done which added both to the appearance and comfort of the pastor. They have our thanks for their good deeds, and kind words. May God make us a blessing to them!

Our congregations on last Sunday were quite good, both at Fair View and at Concord. We are hopeful for a good year's work.

Brother John Braswell has moved to Charlotte where he will make his home. We regret to lose him; but trust that he will be happy and successful in his new home.

Brother L. R. Blackwelder and wife have come to Concord from Asheville. We are glad to have them abide with us.

I desire to thank those who contributed toward making up my loss on the way to Conference. Surely I appreciate your kindness more than I can tell.

A. Oscar Lindley.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 203 in S. S. and the offering was $3.41. The committee on Christmas exercises is hard at work on the program, and we expect a nice exercise.

Bro. Williams preached for us last Sunday morning, and Bro. D. M. Loy, of Gaston Ct., preached at night. Bro. Loy is one of our own men and we were glad to hear him.

Our Thanksgiving service was last Thursday evening. It was a good service. Several gifts were made to the Denton Orphanage of provisions, etc., and a nice amount was collected in cash, which will be sent in.

We are very glad to have Bro. R. M. Andrews, the new editor of the "Burlington News" in our church and S. S. Bro. Andrews taught the Baraca Class last Sunday, and the boys compliment his teaching very highly. We hope the paper of which he is editor will be a greater success than ever, and that it will become a great factor in the promotion of the cause of righteousness in our city.

The Ladies' Aid Society and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. B. Cheek. I am advised that in my report last week I mentioned the receipts at the bazaar as being $70.00, whereas it should have been $80.00. I gladly correct the same.

Bro. Williams, our ex-pastor, is leaving today for Hillsboro and then will go on to Henderson. We expect our new pastor, Bro. Davis to be with us next Sunday. We trust a good congregation will be present.

The Ladies' Aid Society is having concrete steps and walk laid from the sidewalk to the parsonage this week. This will add greatly to the appearance of our property.

Bro. J. H. Boon is acting as sexton of the church now, Bro. G. L. Amick having resigned.

Miss Rosa Forlines, for many years a member of our church and a faithful attendant, but who, for a number of years, has been living at Jefferson, Va., will be married at that place tomorrow. We wish for her and her husband a long and happy life.

We are glad to see some of our folks who have been sick at church again.

T. T. Stafford, Reporter.

Burlington, N. C., Dec. 5th, 1911.

Piney Grove, Chatham Ct.

Dear Herald Readers:

Since our last report the Annual Conference has come and gone and we feel grateful indeed that our good pastor, Bro. Bowman, was sent back to us. He commenced his second year's work with us last Sunday. He did not preach, however, as Bro. W. D. Reed was visiting friends in the community and preached in his stead.

Bro. Reed preached a most interesting and unusually good sermon, which I feel sure was enjoyed by every one present.

We were glad to have Bro. Reed with us in our home and also in our Sunday school. He taught a class of young ladies and then gave us an interesting talk on S. S. which made us all feel that it was good to be there.

Mr. Reed's very soul is in his work and Cleveland Ct. is to be congratulated in securing such an able preacher.

C. A. Cooper and wife, of Siler City, worshiped with us last Sunday.

After services J. R. Siler was elected steward for the coming year and J. A. Cooper class leader.

Whatever Bro. Bowman has in store for us to do this year I hope we may all be ready to respond to the very best of our ability. We are glad to state that he is looking so much improved since his return from the hospital.

I now close with much love and many good wishes to the readers of the Herald.

Mrs. J. A. Cooper, Reporter.

Dec. 5, 1911.

NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH.

On November 5th, at Center M. P. Church, Alamance County, N. C., a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was organized with 11 members. Failing to elect a Treasurer I did not report until after our next meeting, which was Dec. 3rd.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. A. S. Lindley; First Vice-president, Mrs. C. N. Lindley; Second Vice-president, Mrs. Ira Guthrie; Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Whitehead; Asst. Sec., Miss Bessie Guthrie; Treasurer, Mrs. A. Richardson; Corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. W. Lindley, Snow Camp, N. C.

—Our thanks to Rev. C. J. Edwards for a goodly list of new subscribers obtained by his special effort since Conference.

—Four Alamance County men served on the federal grand jury here this week.

—Washington, Dec. 3.—After many months of investigation of pellagra in the Southern States, the scientists of the public health and marine hospital service are in as much doubt as ever as to the cause of the scourge. Meanwhile the disease seems to be gaining and it has been reported that nearly every physician in South Carolina has from five to fifteen cases in his private practice.

Assistant Surgeon General John D. Long says it has been demonstrated that cures can be effected even up to the fifth attack, but that there is little hope when the person has reached the stage of insanity. Pellagra has been found to be a seasonal disease and it is thought that the great varying temperatures of South Carolina may be partly responsible for its prevalence there.

—From The Christian Sun.

—What do you think of a good woman working at 75 cents the week and saving on that wage over $700 in good cash to give the Orphanage at her death? With that sum the Orphanage will begin its permanent endowment, will only spend the income and keep for all the years to come the bequest as a memorial of her, and all like her who live and labor and sacrifice that the homeless and the needy may be well cared for. The Trustees have voted that only the interest, none of the principal, of any bequest shall be spent in maintenance and current expense. In this way we hope to build up an endowment that will mean much in future years for the Orphanage.

A NOBLE WOMAN GONE.

Mrs. S. A. Huffines died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Wednesday morning about six o'clock. Her remains were brought to Reidsville and received into the home of her son John D. Huffines Thursday about one P. M. Her body was laid in its resting place in her home church grave yard at Fair Grove, in Rockingham Co., Haw River Ct. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. E. M. Raper, her pastor. She was about 70 years old. Her husband preceded her to the spirit land about six years ago. The deceased is survived by eight children as follows: Mrs. R. A. Hopkins, Mrs. Wm. Cummings, all of Rockingham, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, of Littleton, moved to Winston, Mr. T. R. Huffines, Bedford, Ind., Mr. John D. Huffines, Reidsville Mr. R. L. Huffines, of Rocky Mount, and Mr. E. F. Huffines. Three children had gone on before. Sister Huffines was a great and good woman. I have known her for about 18 years. The poor, the needy, the common, the rich, the community, the church and her pastors all felt like she was their mother. Her home was the preacher's home. "She went about doing good." She looked for some one to help. Her church was always on her heart. Her daughter, Rev. S. W. Taylor's wife, and her youngest daughter, said to me, "It seemed mother had finished her work." For some time this had been her thoughts. In fact, she had been at this for years. She is gone, but her work abideth. She leaves four noble daughters who have received their training and are loyal to the principles taught them by their parents. If they are not at church I know something is wrong, or they are on a mission of mercy. She loved her church devotedly and her God above all else. Yet she found a time for each. Her son John D. Huffines of Reidsville is one of the board of stewards in the M. E. Church. He joined here some twenty years ago, as there was no M. P. Church here. The other sons are away and I do not know so well; but I feel they emulate the early principles taught them. She bought and paid for two dozen song books for her home church last summer. Also gave me a donation on our church in Reidsville and on our endowment fund in Greensboro. She thought of each child as well. On their birthday a present was forthcoming. John D. received some nice hem-stitched sheets and a loving letter the next day after her funeral, his birth day, she had sent in time to reach him on that date,; though she was dead the presents and letter came. She was at the Annual Conference on Saturday. She was a great sufferer for years with asthma, yet did not complain. Loved ones thought at first this was another acute attack, which proved to be quick pneumonia. She lived nobly. She seemed to have finished her work and is gone to the God she loved and served so well. She has joined loved ones and no doubt is beckoning to those here to "come home." She has left some local church workers and one itinerant worker, the wife of Rev. S. W. Taylor, who fills her place so well. Let us be faithful and emulate her good traits of character.

The pall bearers were Mr. L. R. Dixon, Mr. Albert Troxler, Mr. Hugh Troxler, Mr. Will Fogleman, Mr. James Walker, Mr. Harvey Moore.

The graves of Sister Huffines and her husband were almost covered with beautiful flowers. The flower bearers were Miss Bell Troxler, Miss Allie Troxler, Miss Lillie Troxler, Miss Jennie Troxler, Miss Fannie Cummings, and Mrs. Sam Lomax.

Last year the first day after the Annual Conference how happy the event! This year the second day after the Annual Conference a sad telegram was sent. Last year the mother witnessed the marriage of her last child. This year her children looked upon their mother's last sweet smile. Last year at this time her youngest daughter was a happy bride. This year that daughter if left to her feelings no doubt would hide—this calamity is pat asnd she is left with loved ones for awhile. For it is upon such occasions as this the Lord loves to smile. He has said I will be with you. your troubles I will bless; and I will never, no, never forsake you in your distress. So children and loved ones, be faithful and be true, for at the beautiful gate your mother is looking and waiting for you.

Her Pastor.

O. R. Cox.

When on October 27, 1911, Bro. O. R. Cox passed from work to reward, humanity lost one of its best friends. The leading facts in his life were given in the Herald just after his death, hence, need not be given here. His starting as a farmer boy, afterward working as clerk in the company's store at Cedar Falls Cotton Mill, then as Secretary and Treasurer, and general manager of the mill, becoming stock holder and finally, almost sole owner of the mill, meantime increasing very materially the capacity of this mill and building an additional one—these facts attest something of the business worth of the man.

His having been elected sheriff of his native County, Randolph, in his earlier life, and elected to represent his county in the last legislature, both without solicitation or political aspiration on his part, attest the public confiedence in him. His position of trust in the church, such as trusteeship in different institutions, delegate to the Annual Conference, representative to the General Conference, and the like attest the church's confidence in him.

He was a man of parts. A character well rounded, a completeness not often found in finite human beings. In the Biographical History of North Carolina, Vol. V., page eighty, I find this: "Within the range of his (the writer's) observation there has rarely come a life so rounded, so smooth, so straight, so unaffected, so serious, so earnest, so successful as that of Orlando R. Cox. From the humblest beginning it has grown and expanded each and every day until at its meridian we find its impress upon nearly every enterprise and institution of his church and his native county. * * * At his home he is a faithful communicant and liberal supporter of his church and all of its enterprises. In the Sunday school and elsewhere he is as prompt, as active, as enthusiastic and as earnest as he is in the prosecution of his business affairs."

The high tribute paid by the above quotation is a just compliment. Bro. Cox never felt that he was too old to attend Sunday school; nor was he too tired Sundays to be a regular attendant at both Sunday school and church. If at any time he was not there his pastor knew that sickness or some other providential condition hindered him. Though a busy man all his life he was never so much engrossed with business affairs that he could not give personal attention to church matters. Nor did success in business or the accumulation of wealth so absorb him as to lessen his interest in church or religion.

He was the kind of man whose greater wealth of character lies beneath the surface. While you are drawn to him when you first come in contact with him, yet each succeeding contact brings you closer until you learn to love him as you do a brother or father. There never was a time since I knew Bro. Cox that I did not hold him in high esteem, but each time I have been thrown with him I went away with my estimate of him heightened.

His was the kind of character that was true to itself. Sometimes a person who has made a good impression will disappoint you by doing or saying something that does violence to the good impression already made.

He loved his family and was loved by them. He is missed by all who knew him, but his loved ones in the home miss him most. May the grace of our kind heavenly Father sustain the widow and the fatherless children.

T. M. Johnson.

Asheboro, Dec. 3, 1911.

HOME MISSION WORKERS.

Dear Friends:

Various letters have been sent from time to the Home Missionary societies in this Branch, that have brought no response. Will you not send the names and proper addresses of your new officers to the Secretary of Branch so that the workers may keep in touch with each other? A prompt response to this requent will help the cause greatly.

The Orphans' Home at Denton was adopted as our special work in N. C. by a meeting of representatives from all the auxiliaries in the State. It was sanctioned by the Woman's Board. It has been endorsed and splendidly aided by our pastors. What has been your support—what will it be this year?

The work goes forward—but not so rapidly because it needs you. There is strength in union, and it is for that union and a united effort that we plead now.

Yours in the work,
H. Frances Sutton, Sec.

Greensboro. N. C.

ORPHANS' HOME.

The Home was graciously remembered Thanksgiving as you will notice by the following reports. We wish we could give the names of the articles and the donors that we found in each of the well filled boxes, but we are afraid that would require more space than the Editor can give us, but God knows it all and we pray that He will make your hearts as happy as you have made the little orphan children's.

Following is a list of the boxes we have received and we have notice of others to follow: "Kernersville Needle Work Guild." This box was well filled with useful garments for the children. One coop of chickens from Kernersville gotten up by Clara and Ernestine Smith Lowdermilk. Three quilts from Worthville, and Bethany Sunday schools. Clothes for one child from Julian. A box with number of articles in it from Creswell Junior Society. Two bolts of cloth from Salisbury Cotton Mills.

One barrel of potatoes shipped from Graham, but minus the name of the donor.

Mr. Wall, of Denton, potatoes, syrup, pumpkins, flour, bran.

J. P. Pearce. wood.

Enfield Ladies' Aid sends a large box packed with the very articles of clothing needed most at thist time.

All of these things are useful and help to prepare us for the cold, winter days.

We were glad to have Bro. John Hulin and family with us in the Home for dinner Thanksgiving day. We held a little service in the Home and each child was asked to express himself. They said they were thankful for different things. The Home, school, a good dinner, health, and that Christ had saved their souls. When it came time for a little boy four years old to express himself, he said, "I am glad we have fire."

We endeavor to teach the children to be grateful and to realize that this Home is being provided for in order that their lives may be trained for usefulness.

Againg thanking each one who has contributed in any way, and those in advance who have sent boxes and they have not yet been received. All these are encouraging and fill us with new zeal for the work.

As we take pride in the Methodist Protestant Church, may we help our Orphans' Home to be an institution that will be a credit to our church.

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Henderson, Conf. Collection	$76.89
Moriah S. S.	7.60
High Point W. H. M. S.	20.10
High Point S. S.	6.50
High Point church	16.10
Whitaker's' S. S.	3.00
Welch Memorial S. S.	1.05
Giles Chapel S. S., Richland Ct.	2.50
Fairgrove S. S., Why Not Ct.	2.19
Denton S. S.	1.01
"Busy Bees," Asheboro S. S.	1.19
Baraca Class, Asheboro S. S.	2.14
Asheboro W. H. M. S.	.60
Asheboro S. S. Thank Offering	6.00
John W. Bauldin	2.00
Bethany, Haw River Ct.	3.55
Jas. E. Whitehurst	1.00
Mrs. D. L. Carrol	1.00
Mrs. W. T. Capps	5.00
Pinnacle and Mt. Zion	5.00
Cedar Falls S. S.	.53
Ronanoke Ct.	8.89
Mebane S. S.	1.50
Union Grove S. S., Orange Ct.	2.00
Union Chapel, Ladies Aid	3.15
Antioch church	1.25
Granville Ct.	9.70
O. O. Young	10.00
A Friend	1.00
Liberty S. S.	10.00
Hickory Grove S. S.	5.00
Spring Valley	3.50
Shiloh S. S., Yadkin College Ct.	2.74
Yadkin College, Yadkin Col. Ct.	.50
W. Lexington, Yad. Col Ct.	4.27
Mt. Carmel S. S., Yad. Col. Ct	.50
Bethesda S. S., Yad. Col. Ct.	1.69
Total	$237.64

Etta Auman, Treasurer.

MARRIED.

The home of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Bowman was the scene of a pretty wedding Thursday evening, Nov. 30th, at 7:30, when their daughter, Maria Ione, became the bride of Mr. L. W. Causey.

The parlor was tastefully decorated in white and delicate pink, with a few ferns artistically arranged here and there. The relatives and friends who attended were ushered into the parlor by Misses Margaret Greeson and Florence Sullivan, on Winston.

Before the ceremony Miss Espie Clapp sang impressively, "There's no one just like you." Then, as she played the wedding march, the bridal party entered. The groom with his brother, Mr. Kemp Causey came first and were met under the arch by the bride becomingly attired in gray cloth and cream lace, with her bride's-maid, Miss Lizabel Foust, in pink mull. Rev. T. M. Johnson then read the sweet and solemn Methodist service which made them man and wife.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party, followed by the guests, went into the dining room, where Miss Inez Hornaday, in white, and Miss Catherine Pike, in yellow evening dresses, served fruit salad; ice cream and cake, coffee and cheese straws.

The happy bride said she didn't know she had so many friends until she saw the array of lovely and useful presents.

Indeed she has many friends, for her character and disposition are such that she cannot fail to gain friends and keep them. She deserves just such a young man as Mr. Causey—a man of unquestionable character, and one of Guildford County's most prosperous young farmers, and we can but predict for them a long life of usefulness and happiness.

—It was "like pulling eye teeth" to vote a letter of dismissal to Bro. J. Robert Hardin last Sunday, he had been so long a faithful member of Grace church. He withdraws to join the Friends with his excellent wife. He will make a true member, but they must not expect him to say "thee" and "thou."

—Bro. J. A. Loy, of Mt. Hermon Ct., is here serving as grand juror in the federal court. He says that Mt. Hermon people are reluctant to give up Bro. Burgess as their pastor.

—Rev. W. D. Fogleman has a sale next Saturday, preparatory to moving to Weaverville. He is a real itinerant.

—The people of Richland will note the greetings of their new pastor, Bro. C. H. Whitaker.

JACK'S GOOD NAME.

"And I can't do anything for him, not one single thing!" Jack shook his head mournfully as he arrived at this sorrowful conclusion. "I can't go to see him and sit with him because I haven't got the time. I can't send him fruits and books and things like well-off folks does when their folks has to go to the hospital, because I haven't got the money. I can't earn a cent mor'n mother and the young ones need. No help for Billy from me."

Billy was an orphan boy younger than Jack. He had recently moved into Jack's neighborhood. Going on an errand, he had fallen from a street car and broken his leg.

Jack was office boy in a place which made large demands on his time and, indeed, on every other thing which might be said to belong with a growing boy. His duties were many and his master exacting. But it never occurred to Jack to question the reasonableness or otherwise of anything which was required of him. He was nothing more than a good, plodding boy, having very fixed notions on the subject of his duty, which notions were expressed in a few words: "I'm going to do the best I can."

There came a day when Jack stood face to face with a hard question. Taking a moment on his way home to run in and see how Billy was getting along, he found him with a cloud over his usual happy face. "What's the matter, Billy?"

"They've been telling me," Billy shook his head despairingly, "that I won't get well until no telling when, unless I go to some place in the country when I go away from here."

"Phew. Billy." said Jack in dismay.

"The folks here are telling me of a real nice place where I could go for twenty-five dollars, where I'd get good treatment and stay as long as I needed. They think that's awfully cheap; but," poor Billy sighed woefully, "twenty-five dollars is a lot of money."

"It is that."

"So I'll be back near you the first of the week, and then I'll be with you evenings. And," hopefully, "I guess I'll get well without any twenty-five dollars."

Jack talked about it with his mother. "I wish the poor boy could go," she said. "It might be the settling of his health for some years to come."

"But how can he?" said Jack in a discouraged tone.

"If it could be paid a dollar at a time," she said half questioningly, "you might be able to put by a dollar a week for it."

"I don't see how you will spare it, mother."

"We might pinch a little closer."

After a little more talk, Jack made his plans. He went the next morning to his employer and asked him if he could advance the twenty-five dollars, deducting a dollar each week from his pay until the amount was made up.

Mr. Strong looked keenly at the boy as with much hesitation he pressed his request, telling of Billy and his needs. "How do I really know that you'll work it out?" asked Mr. Strong. "You can't give me any security, can you?"

"No, sir." And Jack dropped his head forlornly.

"You might, you know, leave me before the twenty-five weeks were up."

"I'd promise not to," said Jack earnestly. "But I haven't a thing to give you for security."

"Your promise will be enough." Mr. Strong's manner changed as he went on. "I'd take your word, Jack, for more than twenty-five dollars. You have worked for me a good while, and I know what you are. Your good name makes your promise all the security that I want." As Jack was turning away, his face crimsoned with gratification at the kind words, Mr. Strong added: "I'll speak more about it tomorrow."

"If—if," Jack strove to stammer out his thanks, "if there's a thing more about the place that I can do that I don't do, I'd be glad, sir"—

"There isn't," said Mr. Strong, kindly. "You are honest and faithful in everything. Such a reputation is a valuable thing to start on in life."

Mr. Strong, on going home that evening, spoke to his grown-up daughter: "Bertha, haven't you to do with some of these fresh-air businesses?"

"Yes, father. You have given me money for them."

"Where they send poor little lads into the country and feed them and brace them up and return them as good as new?"

"Exactly that kind of thing," said Bertha, smiling.

"Well, I have a boy for you, one for whom I want a top seat."

So Billy went out to one of the places provided by some of the Master's faithful who strive to follow in his footsteps in showing loving-kindness to his little ones. Jack's heart gave a great bound when he learned that Miss Bertha Strong was to see to Bill's outing, for surely it must be something better than could be offered by any one else. Looking into his pay envelope at the end of the week, he turned it back to Mr. Strong. "You've given me a dollar too much, sir. There's the expense for Billy, you remember."

"I remember. But that goes on the account of your good name. There's nothing more to pay. And there will be a vacancy in the office next door by the time Billy comes back. If he is your kind of boy, he can have the place."—Youth's Companion.

FAIRY FASHIONS.

The faries read the Daily Leaf,
And so they always know
When Nature's big department store
Has something new to show.

The latest shapes in acorn tops
For hats are now on sale,
And with each hat they give you, free,
A filmy cobweb veil.

New models in the pea-pod gowns
This season can be seen,
With sunshades of nasturtium leaf
In harmonizing green.

The glove department shows a make
Of small five-fingered fern;
From caterpillar boas
One can hardly bear to turn.

'Mid this display the faries find,
Although they are not rash,
That silver dewdrop coins will melt
Like any other cash.

—New Zealand Outlook.

ON FALLING IN LOVE.

An Article For Boys.

You can love only the things you like. The first sentence does not seem very startling, I admit, but it is the supreme though hidden lay of all romance. All of us in our youth are training ourselves by our secret likes and dislikes for that ultimate great fall upward, into love.

I once knew a boy, and if you had asked him what the things he liked best in the world were, he would not have been able to tell you very well, because there were so many things he liked. Now, your love, which is going to put a cupid's arrow through your heart some day, is made up of the things you really like best, whether you are able to tell about them or not, and the things this boy really liked best were these. He liked the open air, and sports, and games, and the wind, and the ice; he liked trees, especially the graceful ones, although he did not go out to look at them and talk about them; he liked the clump of birches in his front yard, especially when they swayed about in the wind, and he would not have had them cut down for anything. He liked good company—to go off with a number of other fellows into the woods or up the mountain, and laugh and fool and sing together. He liked music, especially the music of one low-toned bird song which he heard often in the woods in the evening.

Most of all, perhaps, he liked the look in his mother's eyes when she laughed, and when she was going to say good-by to him as he went to school in the morning; and there was something also about the music of her voice which he loved, although he had never even thought of it till after she was dead and he could hear her no more.

Now one day this boy was walking on the board walk on one of the side streets of his town. It was one of the early days of spring. He met a girl coming towards him. He knew her as well as he knew any one. He had known her and people since he had been a tiny boy. But, as she came walking towards him, he suddenly began to admire her graceful way of walking, with a strange little sway in it like the clump of birch trees in the wind somehow. The wind was blowing her hair over her forehead in a thousand golden strands which the sun lit up till they simply shone like gold. How strong, how much at home she looked in the open air, in the wind! She laughed when she recognized him, and he had never noticed before how like was the sound of her voice to the low-toned song of that bird he used to hear in the woods ot evening. Then he caught just a glimpse of her eyes beneath the lashes. Why had he never noticed it before? They had that same good, honest, tender look that somebody else's used to have when he was a little boy going off to school. He tried to get another glimpse of them; but, as he tried to do so, he felt a sharp pain like the running of a keen needle blade through his heaert. All this happened in less than a second.

Then they stopped and talked and laughed and shook hands and parted. But from that day till he told her all about it he could not do a single thing like a rational man. He did not know what had happened. He does not know yet.

He had nobody but himself to blame. What happened was simply this. All his life he had been training himself to like things, and one day all the song and music and strength and tenderness he loved best in life met him, and he fell ten thousand fathoms deep in love, and at last reports, although all this happened years ago, he is falling in deeper still at the rate of about three hundred and sixty-five fathoms a year and three hundred and sixty-six in leap years. Why? Because the right man met the right girl.

Why is it that so many of the girls who have loud laughs and hard eyes and tell cheap stories and walk ungracefully also are popular? Why, because there are some boys who like to sit on the dump, looking at the empty tomato cans, telling ugly stories. Some day they, too, meet the girl who reminds them of all these things they like best. They, too, think they have fallen in love. A little painted, grinning, hunchback cupid does leap out from her eyes and, drawing ablunt arrow, does fire at his heart, and it may stick there for a time. But as for falling ten thousand fathoms deep in love, why, it is impossible, for he and she are both too shallow. They love what they like best. They never can get very far away from their dump and the cans and stories in which their tastes were trained.

It seems a truism, but it is not. All boys may remember it, you are going to love what you like best. Only the boy who loves lovely things will all his soul will have the power to fall in love with the lovely girl when his time comes. I suppose something of the same is true of girls, but I don't know anything about girls.—Rev. Bromide Smith, D. D., in Christian Register.

THE SIMPLICITY AND SAVING POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

By Rev. D. S. Millard, D. D.

On a certain occasion the disciples asked Jesus why He spake in parables. He answered, "Because it was given unto you to know and understand such teaching, and it is for this reason I speak in parables." It was then, as it is now, the heart can be more easily reached by the simple comparisons of life, and the more attractive they are made the more certain is their effect on the human heart.

Jesus would speak to men in a way that would reach the spirit within them. Therefore He gave the truth in such a manner as to leave it alive in the soul. He unfolded it by simple illustrations which they who heard Him could understand, and which all who study His Word can understand also.

God's truth is of priceless value. The Bible, especially the New Testament, reveals it unto men. Jesus is the revealer. That which the soul needs is found in His Gospel. If, with believing hearts, we study the Word, we shall know the truth, and if we "follow after the truth," we shall follow Christ, who said—"He that followeth me shall walk in the light."

The more we do of that which we know to be the will of God, the nearer we shall be to Him and the greater will be our joy. There can be no abounding joy to any heart living beneath a dark cloud of unbelief. Unbelief that says, "I know not God; I have no experimental knowledge of Christ; I know nothing of the way of salvation; I am in utter darkness concerning the future." Sad, indeed, is the condition of a soul in such darkness! How different the feelings of the man who can say, with the assurance of a true and living faith, "God is love; He is my father; His divine heart goes out after all, even the low and sinful; He would not that any should perish, but that all should come to Him and live." "I know my Redeemer liveth, and in Him do I trust." Here are fountains of joy, here are helps to uprightness and purity; here are promises of blessings which extend beyond the present life to the life eternal.

Reader, go to the Word of God with a devout heart and an unprejudiced mind, and at the same time with a willingness to be led by its teachings, and it will reveal to you inexhaustible fountains of joy. They are open now and the Spirit and the bride say, "Come." Here to penitents is pardon, and here to trust and prayer are rest and peace. We read, "The pure in heart shall see God." In spiritual vision they see Him now, as faith looks away to brighter scenes and fuller joys in the friendships and loves of blessedness and eternal home above.

Faith is not a mere sentiment. It is the unchanged and unchangeable basis of all true religion. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." That is, accept, without reserve, the testimony of the Scriptures concerning Christ. This is the faith that brings light and peace and joy to the soul—the faith that saves. Let us hold it up to the world, and count not the means, time or faculties ill-expended which may advance or establish it more firmly on earth! Such faith "adds charms to earthly bliss,

And saves us from its snares;
It yields support to all our toils,
And softens all our cares"

"Wide it unveils the heavenly world,
Where endless pleasures reign,
It bids us seek our portion there,
Nor does it seek in vain."

Portland, Mich.

Troxler-Squires.

At the home of the bride's father, Mr. William Squires, in northern Alamance County, on Wednesday, November 29th, 1911. Reverend Robert Samuel Troxler, of the N. C. Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, to Miss Myrtle Squires, one of Alamance County's best young women, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, officiating. At home in the parsonoge on Liberty Circuit after Jan. 1st.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL.

By Charles A. Hines.

In connection with the Christian Endeavor lesson for December 7th, would it not be well for the society to consider some plan to obtain a number of regular, systematic givers to foreign missions in the church? Not only is this a work Christian Endeavorers can do, but it is a work that every official board might undertake and should undertake if the church is not giving regularly to foreign missions.

It is a shame and a disgrace that men will call themselves Christians and not give to the salvation of others. The true follower of Christ desires to carry others with him. The man who attempts to follow Christ without saving others will soon discover that he is not a follower of Christ, for the Master doesn't go that way.

I suggest that the society appoint a missionary committee of five, and let this five divide the members of the church into five groups. Each committeeman will then become responsible for one group and will agree to canvass and collect from them each preaching day, Sunday school meeting or Christian Endeavor meeting a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly gift to missions.

It is true this a work for the church to do, but if the church doesn't do its work then the responsibility falls back on the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor society or some other auxiliary.

Is is estimated that every $2.00 given to foreign missions saves a soul. Who is a member of the church and willing to give enough each year to save at least one soul in the foreign field?

Start a mission study class in your church, give your pastor a subscription for the Christian Missionary. Learn something about the call to the havest and the few laborers and little means, and it will loosen your purse strings.

C. E. TOPIC FOR DECEMBER 17, 1911.

A Missionary Journey Around the World. XII. Missions in the West Indies. 2 Cor. 12: 1-15.

Daily Readings.

Dec. 11. Power for the Needy. Matt. 9:6-8.
Dec. 12. Life for the dead. Jno. 5:24-26.
Dec. 13. Liberty to captives. 2 Cor. 3:16-18.
Dec. 14. The dry bones. Ezek. 37:1-12.
Dec. 15. The acceptable year. Luke4:18-19.
Dec. 16. Harvest at last. Gal. 6:9-10.
Dec. 17. The Topic.

Hints for This Meeting.

1. President open the meeting with an announcement of the topic, prayer for the leader and the meeting, then introduce leader.

2. Leader announce hymn, followed by reading of the lesson and story of the daily readings. Quote in concert the golden text of the Bible, and little talk, "The Life Text."

3. Have a rough blackboard map showing relative location of the lands being studied. Have some one give a short address concerning the same.

4. Have missionary hymns full of light and life, not just "happen so," hit and miss fashion. Think and pray over the topic and its preparation for this meeting.

5. Let the leader be from the missionary committee, or better, the mission study class. If you have no mission study class, begin now; it will put life in the society.

Quote in concert the golden text of the Bible, John 3: 16, if the members do not know it, have them learn it. Follow with short address, "The Life Text."

John 3: 16, is the greatest text in the Bible, because it tells the most about the nature of man, that is he is a sinner; and the nature of God, that He loves sinners; and the nature of Christ, that He is the Saviour of sinners; and the future of the unrepentant sinner, that it is perishing; and the future of the Christian, that it is eternal life. It would be impossible to find a life situation that would not be illumined by this sun of text of all the Bible.

Discussion Topics.

1. Tell of what has been done in the West Indies.
2. How can our society aid West Indian missions?
3. What are some of the effects of the gospel in a new land?

Helpful Points From Fruitful Pens.

1. Make all you can; save all you can; give all you can.—John Wesley.
2. Giving is an effort to share our blessings with others, and is measured by willingness and not by amount.—Tressa R. Arnold.
3. Genuine benevolence is invincible.—Marcus Aurelius.
4. He that giveth, let him do it with liberality.—Paul, (Rom. 12: 8).
5. Giving yourselves, you give everything.—Peloubet.

Gems from the Poets.

1. A man there was—the people called him mad—
   The more he gave away, the more he had.—John Bunyan.
2. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below.
   Words without thoughts never to heaven go.—Shakespeare.
3. "Lord Jesus, look down from thy throne in the skies,
   And help me to make a complete sacrifice;
   I give up myself, and whatever I know;
   Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

The Spanish-American war, our temporary rule over Cuba, our permanent annexation of Porto Rico, have made every American more interested in the Antilles than any other mission field. Some of the people who live there are of our nationality, and many of us have relatives in this field. The islands are only a few miles from the mainland of our country. There is every reason for our being supremely interested in the natives.

The climate of these islands is tropical. The result is that of most tropical countries, much of the population is indolent. Living in a land of great fertility, where tropical fruits are in abundance, the people do not need to worry about things to eat. As for apparel the scantiest possible is used by the grown ups, and, many times, none at all by the children.

To understond the religious situation one must consider the make-up of the population. More than two-thirds of it it what is known as the native Cuban. A small percentage of this class is of considerable intelligence and ability, and in some cases the Cubans are rich men with large estates. There are the merchants, tradesmen and other middle classes. Finally there is the big class of indolent, ignorant, shiftless natives.

Of those foreign born the Spaniards are in the majority. Among them is more intelligence, but at the same time there is often as much of the vicious as in the less intelligent natives. These people need the church as much as the most ignorant of the aboriginess that roam the country half-naked.

The Roman Catholic church has held sway in this country for four centuries. No stronger arraignment need be brought against Catholicism than to repeat the condition into which that church has brought the people of Cuba and Porto Rico. Truly the last state of these people under Catholic dominion is worse than the first. The priests in the church were men themselves depraved. Many fathers would not allows their wives and daughters to attend mass in these houses said to be devoted to the worship of God, but

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p. m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:15 p. m., No. 55 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

which were in fact given over to the carnal.

Ten years ago in all Porto Rico there was but one Protestant church. Today the number of churches and stations probably exceeds a thousand. This means that all the towns and cities are occupied, though, of course, there is much of the country districts that is still untouched. In Cuba all of the principal places have the gospel of Christ, but there is still great work to do to cover the entire country.

In these islands the work is different from what the missionary work is ordinarily. Instead of winning the men from a false God, we must win them from the false worship of the true God. The Catholic church has taught them of God, but has given them by example of the lives of their priests a false conception of what the life of a follower of God should be.

Americans have practically built up a public school system in Porto Rico during the past ten years. They range from high schools downward, are free to all, and are eagerly attended. School libraries, school banks, and municipal playgrounds are being established.

Since our war with Spain Americans have built roads in Cuba, stamped out yellow fever, introduced election laws that will give an opportunity for pure politics, revised the criminal code so as to safe guard personal rights, advanced free education, and established religious liberty. The missionaries are active and successful uprooting superstition and planting the knowledge of the truth.

Christian Endeavor flourishes in the West Indies, especially in Jamaca, where there is a large union that holds important conventions.

—The dawn of peace has hardly arrived. They are fighting like mad in China and bloodshed is deplorably abundant. No one knows the end of the strife and upheaval that now obtain there. Moreover, the Secretary of the Navy of the U. S. A. has outlined a program which calls for the building of other and heavier warships for our purposes of offense and defense. Turkey and Italy have not cooled off yet, and the war dog, if not turned loose, is doing some awful growling. All of which is regrettable in the extreme.

—Hon. Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, delivered a notable address before the Teacher's Assembly at Raleigh, Nov. 30. An audience of about 5,000 greeted him and the papers report that a great address was delivered. He did not talk politics, as he was speaking to teachers and he himself was several years a school teacher.

—A frightful freight wreck occurred on the high bridge of the Southern Ry., at Haw River, Thursday, p. m., Nov. 30. One of the engines tumbled down into the deep abyss pinning under the fireman who died some hours later. The engineer jumped and had a narrow escape.

—Speaker Champ Clark, in an address at Raleigh, last week, said that the present revolution in China started July 4, 1776. That there are now 26 republics and American made them all.

The Beginning of a Great Preacher.

That God works in a mysterious way and brings mighty events to pass out of small beginning is exceedingly well illustrated in the life of Rev. A. C. Dixon, who recently left one of the largest congregations in America to go to London to become pastor of the Spurgeon Tabernacle there, supposedly the largest single congregation in the world. The Charlotte Observer recently erroneously remarked, in writing of this wonderful preacher, that he was born in Duplin County, North Carolina. We are glad now that the Deacon made this blunder in counties for it calls forth this simple and strikng account of Mr. Dixon's birth place and of his beginning in the ministry, from Mr. L. B. Weathers of The Cleveland (Co.) Star, Shelby, N. C.:

"He (Mr. A. C. Dixon) was born on Buffalo creek four miles east of Shelby, being the son of the late Rev. Thomas Dixon, Sr., the father of prohibition, in this section and perhaps in North Carolina. Dr. Clarence was here when his father was buried and in his sermon in the First Baptist Church he told of how he took to the ministry. His father was conducting a protracted meeting at one of his country charges. The meeting was so fruitful that the old gentleman did not wish to close at the appointed time. It ran on into his appointment when he was to begin a series at New Prospect. The morning dawned on the opening day so the aged minister told his son Clarence to go over and inform his flock that he could not be with them that day; that he could not close such a great revival right at that time, but that he would be over in a few days. Clarence was a stripling of a youth. Barefooted and scantily clad he mounted a bareback mule and rode over to New Prospect to deliver the message.

"A handful of country people had gathered from the surrounding neighborhood to hear the pastor and it was a great disappointment when Clarence told them that his father could not come that day. Rather than be disappointed, those Gospel-thirsty men and women prevailed on Clarence to attempt a talk. They had confidence in the ambitious lad and after a song and prayer he mounted the front door steps and began. I have forgotten what he said his text was but anyhow he aroused the people with his simple interpretation of a well-known lesson and they asked him to come back next day and continue the meeting until his father could come. The lad preached the next day and the next and with each day the attendance and interest grew. From that day on he has been preaching. His first sermon was at New Prospect in the King's Mountain Baptist Association.

"I do not know where he was ordained. New Prospect was organized by his father and he was its pastor for 60-odd years. He was the only pastor of the church until he died and now the remains of that wonderful old man lie buried there. His portrait hangs behind the pulpit."

A wonderful old man indeed was this old gospel preacher, and his influence is being felt now in the world as never before. God works in a wonderful way.

—From The Christian Sun.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

A BEAUTIFUL ILLUSTRATION.

I heard from the lips of a beloved pastor a beautiful illustration. A naturalist one day was studying a cocoon, in which a butterfly was struggling to be free. He heard it beating against the sides of its little prison, and his heart went out with pity for the little helpless creature. Taking a tiny lancet he cut away the fragile walls and released the little captive. But to his amazement he was not the beautiful creature that he had expected to see. It lay struggling upon the table, unabble to walk, unable to fly, a helpless unlovely object. In place of the gorgeously colored wings that he had expected to see were weak, shriveled members. What was the matter with this creature that should have been so fair? The prison gates had been opened too soon, the obstacle had been removed before the struggler had developed sufficiently, through the struggle to be ready for its glorious flight into the sunshiny sky and among the perfumed flowers. O God, when the walls seem to close about us, when we struggle and agonize to be free, when thou dost not cut away the barrier, is it not because, in thine infinite wisdom, thou dost see that we are weak and dost want us to become strong? Then, at last, when the struggle is finished, like the butterfly, we may come forth, not perhaps, in glorious robes of splendid colors as it is, but in the everlasting robes of the righteous.

—Sel.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons is much improved and is now allowed to sit, for a short while three times a day, propped up in bed.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER, EVEN CHRIST, AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., TRURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1911. NUMBER 4.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

We cannot supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE MINISTER'S CALL—NOT COME! BUT GO!

Some ministers act as if the call to preach came primarily and exclusively from men. They wait until men have built a church and erected a pulpit and gathered a congregation and said to them, Come and preach, before they think of preaching.

Christ did not wait for such a thing. He made pulpits out of boats, hilltops, street corners, waysides. He did not wait for a great congregation, but he addressed audiences of one or two, speaking the things that go direct to the heart and conscience.

This matter of preaching has come to be too much conventionalized. Some preachers must have not only the church and the pulpit and the great congregation, but they must have the gown and the great organ and the choir.

When Christ gave the commission to preach, did He say: Go and preach to all who come to the place of worship at the times appointed? No, He said, Go and preach to every creature. If we preach only to those who are interested enough to meet us in the place of worship, we are leaving unreached those who most need Christ's truth and Christ's influence. Jess spoke approvingly of the shepherd's leaving the ninety and nine to go in search of the one that has gone astray. We must not wait until men are already converted and Christianized before we begin to preach to them. The great throng that does not go to church is more properly the audience to be addressed than the small company that does gather on Sunday morning.

Whenever there are people, thoughtless and indifferent, there is a call for a preacher with love of men in his heart and the command to go ringing in his ears.

MORGAN'S FALL.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the mighty financier, was recently passing the collection plate in the wealthy New York Church which he attends and to whose membership he belongs. The plate was piled high, and he was proceeding down the aisle when his foot caught, and he started to fall headlong, the gold and silver and banknotes rolling and flying in every direction.

That is but a symbol of a fall that is coming some day. When that fall comes, how the railroads and banks and steamboats and big business of various kinds will slip from his grasp! And in lesser degree, the same thing is going to happen to you and to me.

Error.—In the table of Ways and Means Committee, the lines for General Conference Fund and Minutes Fund were interchanged. Please note. Thanks to Rev. W. F. Kennett for calling attention to this.

"TO MAKE THEOLOGIANS EVANGELISTS AND EVANGELISTS THEOLOGIANS."

This was the aim of Professor Denny had in mind in writing "The Death of Christ," he tells us in the preface in the new edition. This is just issued by the George H. Doran Company, and includes the "Atonement and the Modern Mind" as well as more or less fresh material which has sprung up as a result of the controversies and discussions which accompanied the first appearance of this book. The demand which has made it worth while to issue a new edition of this is in itself an answer to the claim often made that there is small demand for works on theology, and it is also proof that when a man writes with such a mission—to make theologians evangelists and evangelists theologians—there is a moral purpose which is apt to carry far.

A RENTER'S UNION.

Texas has 200,000 tenant farmers. On the 4th of November, some of them held a convention in Waco to organize for their mutual help. The following is a statement of purpose:

To secure equity, establish justice and apply the Golden Rule, we shall always struggle with all our power against unlimited ownership of land.

To destroy the bonus and cash system and refuse to rent for more than a third in grain and a fourth in cotton.

To assist our members in securing places and refuse to compete for the same.

To educate ourselves in science of government, to establish reading clubs and learn the methods of our exploiters.

To maintain our organization without sectarian or partisan bias.

To promote co-operative farming as far as possible, realizing that the machinery needed to farm in the modern style, is beyond the reach of the individual renter.

To promote in every honorable way the initiative, referendum and recall, believing that the nearer the government is brought to the people the better it is for the people.

—Briceville, Tenn. is the scene of a great horror. Hundreds of men are entombed in Cross Mountain Mine. Already 34 dead bodies have been found, and a few tave been taken out alive. Pathetic and interesting is this letter written by one of the entombed miners to his wife:

"We have to fan with our coats to live. You know half the cow is yours. If I don't get out of here, get your papa to help you get my pay from the mine. If we don't get out, I hope to meet you in heaven. (Signed.) "Milton Henderson."

—President Swain was in Greensboro Tuesday night to attend a meeting of the Boar.' of Church Extension.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

We are now doing business for God. Our stewardship makes it evident that some principles, instructions, have been set forth for our guidance in the use and disposal of all which God has entrusted to us.

The principle, the rules to be applied or followed are emphasized in the teachings of the Word, and by those who lived and wrought mastered by them.

They have ever been found sufficient and effcacious as is proved by the history of all lands where they have found expression in the character and service of men, and in the ideals and standards of civilization.

Infinite wisdom could not err in either the scheme, or the divine agents, or aught else connected with such a great and beneficent work as the world's salvation.

It is, therefore, to the human factors which have so largely to do with the further prosecution of the world-embracing enterprise that we have to turn for the cause of the seemingly delayed extension of the Kingdom.

The narrow vision, the lack of knowledge, the misconception of the church's true mission, self-centering plans and activities born of self-sympathy and much else as the outgrowth of our Adamic natures are responsible.

The fact is we are not doing business for God like we do usiness for ourselves, but we ought to do more for Him, because we owe life and everything to Him, and derive our highest joy when we give ourselves and our means unselfishly to His service.

We do not hesitate to expend for our mere gratification and pleasure money which, if put to nobler purposes, would enrich us far more in the highest delights of the soul, and inspire us with grander thoughts and with larger plans for the world's bettering, and thus bring us nearer to God.

To spend dollars on ourselves when self-denial exercised would often help us, and then give God pennies and nickels is a very poor way to secure dividends in the final settlement when we face God in the Judgment. No wonder the church is discounted in some quarters when its members, solemnly pledged to contribute as God gives them ability for the support of the gospel, give mere pittances, and r sort to fairs, suppers, etc., to meet obligations that could be promptly met if some plan for regular contributions were made.

When it comes to the general interests of the church like Foreign Missions a poorer showing results, because on the flimsiest pretext many decline to contribute, and thus ignore the fact that their church vows include the support of this great department of the church's work.

The fact is that our Foreign Missionary ent rprise is one of the only two great divisions into which the church's work can be divided, for the Home department is the effort to build up a denomination in America, and the Foreign department is the effort to build up a denomination in Japan, and there we are doing all the kinds of work we are doing in America, but the contributions of our people do not indicate that they so understand it.

We are now pushing a campaign to raise an EMERGENCY FUND to provide absolute necessities for the proper maintenance and development of our Japan work. Illustrated leaflets, subscription blanks and letters have been sent to pastors of several Conferences, and more are to go forward, and we are expecting good returns therefrom. Some may complain that our calls are too numerous. What else can we do to secure the needed funds? We can only turn to the pastors and members. A crisis is upon us, and not to try to meet and overcome it would disqualify us for this position. One supreme effort by our churches, and the work will be done.

I hope every pastor will help carry out the plan, preach on Foreign Missions, distribute judiciously the leaflets and subscription blanks, and make an appeal for a special offering.

The Michigan Conference will please take Sunday, Dec. 24, with the Indiana the Kansas and the Ohio Conferences. Under the circumstances I think it will be well for all the other Conferences to take that day as far as possible.

We Must Not Neglect Them.

We have come to recognize more clearly the duty of helping the young to cultivate benevolence, the Christ-like spirit, and also the value of using their zeal, energy and means in the church's activities.

The excellent work done last year in teaching the young in our Sunday schools the true meaning of Christmas, i. e.: God gave His Son to be the world's Saviour, and that He commands us to make Him known to all peoples, and having them share in the work of the church must be continued, both as a part of the training we owe them, and to have their aid in averting the consequences of the crisis now upon us, arising from the needs of our Japan work not having been supplied.

The aid of every Sunday school in the church is asked to so increase the Christmas offering above last year's that the Board may send out a missionary who will then be the Sunday Schools' Missionary.

Last year some schools voted to dispense with their regular Christmas treat, and gave the cost to our Board;others voted a contribution from their treasury; and others exerted themselves to secure a good offering.

We need the help of every Suprintendent, and an offering from every Sunday school. I earnestly plead for this.

Endeavorers to the Front.

The C. E. Societies are also urgently asked to make a special offering at their service nearest to Christmas for the support of their Missionary, Rev. E. I. Obee, and to return him to America next April for a needed furlough after more than seven years of faithful service.

The whole amount promised by the Denomination C. E. Union ought to be paid this year, and it will, if every Society will generously respond to this urgent appeal. Send for a copy of the new Missionary Service, "A Vision,"—tableaux, Scripture readings, etc.,—and receive it free of cost.

Let us united pray for God's blessing upon our effort, and upon our workers and work in Japan.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

A WASTED DAY.

A wasted day! no song of praise
Wells up from depths of grateful heart,
Yet others long to hear our lays,
The souls that dwell in gloom apart.

A wasted day! no kindly deed,
No cup of water, cool and sweet,
We bear to other souls in need,
Nor lead some pilgrim's straying feet.

A wasted day! no victory won,
The sword lies idle in its sheath.
If deeds of valor be undone,
How can we wear the conqueror's wreath?

A wasted day? Forbid it, Lord!
Glad service would we render Thee,
To mourners speak a cheering word.
Bless Thou the deed, though small it be.

Time is too short for wasted days,
Then let us leave no task undone.
Nor fail to lift to Thee our praise,
For by Thy help the goal is won.

—Rev. T. A. Plyler writes that Mrs. Plyler is improving slowly. She has suffered much—enough to have worn some people out.

AN INALIENABLE RIGHT OF THE CHURCH MEMBERS.

Has the church member any right or privilege that does not belong to the non-church member? We answer unhesitatingly that he has.

Here is one. I believe that every church member, young and old, rich and poor, healthy and unhealthy, regular attendant and constant absentee, every church member everywhere at large, has the right to be waited on at least four times a year, in person if possible, by letter if impossible, and given the individual and specific privilege of contributing something to the support of church and pastor. And no church has done its duty to its membership until it has done this very thing. There are lukewarm, unconcerned, indifferent church members to day in uncounted number who have grown away from their church and care precious little for it for no other reason on earth than that the church has shown an equal unconcernedness and indifference to them. They have turned their back upon the church, but the church is equally guilty of turning its back on them.

A large percent of us have been thinking that the indifferent and absentee church member does not want to be approached and appealed to. Very often the exact opposite is true, and the one thing needful for bringing that indifferent or absentee member back to activity and regularity is to be told by some one in the name of the church, appointed for the purpose, that the church is in need, is trying to raise funds and wants his or her help here and now. Money getting from church members is not hurting the churches. It never has hurt the church. But the opposite has; or the attempt to get all the church needs from a few. If you want to arrest a church, hold it up from progress and development, just depend on the few, look to the few, and neglect the many. Your task will certainly be effectual. The church lags because it does not give the careless, the indiffrent, the absentee a chance. See to it that the man who does not come to church once in six months or a year has the same privilege of giving that the one has who comes regularly. You will then see something happen in church finance. Give every church member a chance to give. This is a right that belongs to all.

—From The Christian Sun.

WAVERLY, VA, NOTES.

Thanksgiving was generally observed at this place. The merchants closed their places of business at 12:30 P. M., and during the afternoon the streets were quiet There was hardly the sound of a gun in the community.

At 7:30 in the evening union services were held in the Methodist Church. The altar was most tastefully and exquisitely decorated with harvest products, mounted turkeys, pea-cocks, squirrels, rabbits, and partridges, which had been done by the hands of good ladies. Addresses were made by the Methodist and Christian pastors. It was planned that the other pastors of the place should also take part, but unfortunately they could not be present. The music was rendered by members of the choirs. The house was nearly full of attendants and the services were very impressive.

It does one and all much good to express themselves in thanksgiving for kindnesses bestowed. Something is wronk when it is not done. Benevolence is done a great injustic when gratitude fails to recognize her.

It is said that the Supreme Being once held a banquet in His azured Hall to which He invited all the virtues. They were all there, both great and small, and all seemed in good spirits conversing politely as became such near relations. But the Supreme Being noticed two Virtues who did not seem to know one another. He took one by the hand and led her over to the other, saying, "This is Benevo-'ence, Gratitude." For the first time since the creation, and that had been a long time, these two Virtues had met face to face. And yet I wonder if these two virtues have not gone on much of the time as though they had never met.

We all alike, if not equally, have shared in the bounties and blessings of the year. Do we all render unto Him any thanks for such blessings? I fear that there were so many on that day, hunting or seeking for pleasure, or following the games, etc., compared with the few who did really thank God, that God must have said, "Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" Let us all now give thanks and render to God the vow of David: "I will bless the Lord at all times, His praise shall continually be in my mouth."

That was a good resolution. It was a happy condition of heart and mind. The blessedness of a constant indwelling of praise and thanksgiving can exist in him only whose heart is after God's own. "At all times." "Continually." They are words that mean more than our minds can grasp at the first thought. Some people worship God spasmodically. The most of them do, perhaps—just once a week and then in a half-hearted sort of way. They are the ones who are never satisfied. Christianity to them is only a title. But he who can render unto God at all times real thanksgiving possesses peace and finds a real pearl almost everywhere in everything.

But one says, "It is easy enough to talk about such good graces and the continual consciousness of the Lord. It is easy to praise Him when everything is good and happy, but it is not so easy when the test and trials, and misfortunes and sorrows of life come. How about it then?" Listen to David: "They that trust in the Lord shall not want for any good thing."

"This poor man cried and the Lord saved him out of his trouble."

Thinking this way, it is no wonder he made such resolutions. They seemed good to him. He was so close to God, really, I think he could not help it. Is it not something to be desired?—a life of constant victory? Do you believe He can make your weakness strong? Will you trust Him?

"Commit thy way unto the Lord and He shall bring it to pass."

H. E. Rountree.

THE STRUCTURE OF LIFE.

No act in childhood's early days,
Nor thought, nor word, nor song,
But leaves a picture of each scene
Which is portrayed in right or wrong.

Build, then, ye who would choose aright.
A mansion not of wood or clay,
But rear a temple that will stand
When centuries have passed away.

The structure that frail man erects,
By workmanship divinely wrought,
With right and truth as architects,
Will stand when all things else are naught.

The little things, and not the great,
Together make us what we are;
Thus each life is exemplified
In others' lives in year afar.

Then strive today with conscious self,
With motive as the solemn test,
As if tomorrow were the last,
And prove your work to be the best.

Sometime your earthly clock will show
To you the hands of time are still,
Then blest will be the faithful one
Who carries out his Master's will.

—Victor P. Hammer.

Washington, D. C.

—Two years ago the Post Office deficit was $17,479,770. Now for the first time since 1885 the annual financial statement from this Department shows a surplus. That is saving somewhat.

A FOREIGN MISSION SERMON.

By Rev. C. E. Newman.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25:40.

The Savior has just given a picture of the final Judgment when he, the Son of man shall come in his glory and sit upon the throne of his glory to judge the nations of the earth. Let us contrast the picture with the scene enacted when the Savior was divested of his glory and stood before a throne upon which another sat to pass judgment upon Him. When instead of being surrounded with holy angels it was a howling multitude bent on the crucifixion of our Lord.

He tells us that when He shall come in his glory, accompanied by the holy angels and sit upon the throne of His glory all the nations of the earth shall be gathered before Him and there shall be a division of the good on the right hand and the bad on the left. To those on the right hand will be said, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." He who when upon this earth had not where to lay His head will have a kingdom to give and that kingdom is heaven, the future home of the righteous. This is the reward awaiting those who are faithful in this life.

Upon what the reward depends:

It depends upon our feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, showing kindness to the stranger, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and going unto those in prison. Strange indeed it is that the Master in making mention of deeds to inherit the reward names only the apparently insignificant ones. So small were these that those who had done them had forgotten the same. Surely the great acts of philanthropy of this modern Christian age will be worthy of some mention in the final day of reckoning. Why, then are only little deeds mentioned? I think it is because these are such things as all can do. The church from its early history has had an interest in the temporal welfare of mankind. And I think such service is none too exhaulted for the humble and none too low for the most highly favored. From the lesson we have in the Judgment scene, we learn that Christ would have us serve Him through service to our fellowman. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Mr. Vandyke, in his story of "The Other Wise Men," beautifully illustrates the text. In the days when Augustus Caesar was master of many kings and Herod reigned in Jerusalem, there lived in the city of Ecbatana, in the mountains of Persia, a certain man named Artaban, who, together with his three companions, had read in the ancient prophecies concerning the star that should come out of Judah and the scepter that should rise out of Israel. They had searched the ancient tablets of Chaldea, and computed the time of the year. In that year they had studied the heavens and seen two of the greatest planets draw near together. A new star had appeared which shone for one night and vanished. Again the planets were meeting. The night of their conjunction had arrived. Artaban was watching at home and his three brethren were watching by the ancient temple of the Seven Spheres at Barsippa, in Babylon ten days' journey away. It had been agreed that if the star appeared again, they were to wait for him ten days and together they were to set out for Jerusalem to see and worship the Promised One, who should be born King of Israel. Artaban had made ready for journey. He had sold his possessions and purchased a sapphire, a ruby, and a pearl to carry them as a tribute to the King. From the roof of his house he watched Jupiter and Saturn as they rolled together like drops of lambent flame about to blend in one. And as he watched the mysterious star appeared. He bowed his head, he covered his brow with his hands. "It is the sign," he said; "the King is coming and I will go to meet him." All night his horse had been saddled and bridled in her stall. Early in the morning the Other Wise Man was on the high-road leading westward. Artaban must lose no time if he would keep the appointed hour with the other Magi. He passed along the brown slopes of Orantes; crossed the plains of the Nicean and passed the fertile fields of Cancubar. He traveled over many a cold and desolate pass, down many a black mountain gorge, and across many a smiling vale; over the swirling floods of the Tigris and the many channels of Euphrates till he arrived on the tenth day at nightfall beneath the shattered walls of populous Babylon. His horse was almost spent. Gladly would he have gone to the city for rest and refreshments for himself and her; but it was a three hours' journey yet to the Temple of the Spheres, and he must reach there by midnight if he would find his companions waiting. So he haulted not, but rode steadily across the stuble fields. A grove of date palms was reached, near the further end his horse scented danger. At last she stood still, quivering in every muscle, before a dark object.

Artaban dismounted and the dim starlight revealed the form of a man lying across the road. His humble dress and outline of his haggard face showed that he was probably one of the Hebrews, who still dwelt in great numbers around the city. His pallid skin bore the marks of the deadly fever which ravished the marsh lands in autumn. As Artaban turned to leave, a ghastly sign came from the man's lips, and with his long fingers he gripped the hem of his garment. How could he linger here and fail to meet his companions! Certainly this man had no claim upon him. "God of truth and purity," he prayed, "direct me in the holy path, the way of wisdom which Thou only knowest." He took the sick man to a little mound, he unwound the thick folds of the turban and opened the garment above the sunken breast. He brought water from one of the canals nearby and moistened the sufferer's brow and mouth. He mingled a draught of of those simple, but potent, remedies which he always carried in his girdle—for the Magi were physicians as well as astrologers—and poured it slowly between the colorless lips. Hour after hour he labored till at last the man's strength returned and he sat up and looked at him. "Who art thou," he said, "and why hast thou sought to bring me back to life?"

"I am Artaban, of the city of Ecbatana, and I am going to Jerusalem in search of one who is to be born King of the Jews, a great Prince and Deliverer of all men. Here is all that I have left of bread and wine and here is a portion of healing herbs." The man raised his trembling hand solemnly to heaven and uttered a prayer for the success of the journey. And then told Artaban that he had nothing to give him in turn only he could tell him to look not in Jerusalem, but in Bethlehem, for the Messiah.

He hastened on; but the sun had arisen before he came in sight of the Temple of the Spheres. There was no trace of his companions to be found. Artaban dismounted and climbed to the highest terrace and looked out to the westward. There was no sign of the caravan of the Wise Men. Under a cairn of broken bricks he saw a piece of papyrus. He caught it up and read: "We have waited till past midnight and can delay no longer. We go to find the King. Follow us across the desert.

Artaban sat down and covered his head in despair. "How can I cross the desert with no food and a spent horse."

He went to the city, sold his sapphire, purchased a train of comels and provisions for the journey.

Next we see him as he moves on by day and night across the desert. Till at last he arrived at the garden and orchards of Damascus. Then in sight of the snowy peaks of Hermon and the cedars of Lebanon. Down the valley of Jordan and on by the blue lake of Galilee. At last he arrived at Bethlehem just three days after the visit of the three wise men. The streets seemed deserted. From the open door of a cottage, he heard the sound of a woman's voice, singing softly. He entered and found a young mother hushing her baby to rest. She told him about the visit of the wise men and Joseph and Mary and the child. How the strangers had disappeared as mysteriously as they came and the same night Joseph and Mary had taken the child and fled and the report was they had gone into Egypt. Since that time a spell seemed to hang over the city. It was said that Herod's soldiers were coming to levy an additional tax and the men had gone with their flocks to escape the same.

The young mother placed the baby in its cradle and set food before the stranger. Artaban accepted, and as he ate the child fell into a happy slumber and a deep peace seemed to fill the room.

But suddenly there was a great noise in the streets, a clangor of brazen trumpets, the clash of swords and the shrieks of women. "The soldiers! the soldiers of Herod! They are killing our children." The young mother's face grew pale. She clasped the child to her bosom and crouched motionless in the darkest corner of the room.

Artaban went quickly and stood in the doorway. The soldiers came hurrying down the street with bloody hands and dripping swords. The captain of the band made as though he would thrust him aside. Artaban stood motionless. He took the ruby from his girdle and gave it to the captain to leave the house in peace.

The next that is seen of Artaban he is among the throng of men in populous Egypt, seeking traces of the household that had come down from Bethlehem, traces were found, but so dim that they vanished before him continually.

He continued to travel from place to place among the people of the dispersion. He passed through famine-stricken countries where the poor were crying for bread. He made his dwelling in plague-stricken cities where the sick were in helpless misery. He visited the oppressed and the afflicted in the gloom of subterranean prison, and the crowded wretchedness of slave markets. While he found none to worship, he found many to help.

Three and thirty years of Artaban's life had passed and he was still a pilgrim and a seeker after light. His hair, once dark, is now like wintry snow. His eyes once flashed like flames of fire were dull as embers smouldering among the ashes.

Worn and weary and ready to die, but still looking for the King, he had come for the last time to Jerusalem. He had often come to Jerusalem before, had searched its lanes, crowded hovels and black prisons without finding any traces of the family of Nazarene, who had gone from Bethlehem long ago.

On this occasion the city seemed to be in a stir of excitement. The great crowds seemed to be moving along the street that led to the Damascus gate. Artaban joined himself to a company of Northern Jews, who had come up to keep the Passover, and inquired the cause of the tumult and where they were going. He learned they were going to Golgotha, outside the city walls, where two famous robbers were to be crucified and with them another called Jesus of Nazareth, a man who had done many wonderful works among the people, for which they loved Him much. But He was to be put to death because he had given himself out to be the Son of God. Could this be the same, thought Artaban, who was born in Bethlehem thirty-three years ago? Ah! thought he, the ways of God are stronger than thoughts of man. It may be that I shall at last find the King and come in time to offer my pearl for His ransom. So the old man followed the multitude with slow and painful steps. A troop of Macedonian soldiers came down the street dragging a young girl with torn dress and disheveled hair. As the Magus passed to look in pity, she broke from the hands of her tormentors and threw herself at his feet, and begged him to save her from worse than death. She told him that was a daughter of the true religion as taught by the Magi, her father had been a Parthian merchant, and she was to be sold for his debts.

Artaban trembled. It was the old conflict in his soul that had come to him in the palm grove of Babylon and in the cottage of Bethlehem. Twice the gift which he had consecrated to the worship of religion had been drawn to the service of humanity, and this was the third trial. He took the pearl from his bosom. Never had it seemed so luminous, so radiant, so full of tender lustre. He laid it in the hand of the girl. "This is thy ransom, daughter! It is the last of my treasurers which I kept for the King."

Just then the darkness of the sky deepened, shuddering tremors ran through the earth, the walls of the houses rocked to and fro, stones were loosened and crashed into the street. The soldiers fled in terror. But Artaban and the ransomed girl crouched beneath the walls of the praetorium. The earth again began to quake. A heavy tile loosend from the roof fell and struck the old man on the temple. He lay breathless and pale as the blood trickled from the wound. The girl bent over him, fearing he was dead, and as she did there came a voice small and still, like music sounding from a distance, in which the notes are clear, but the words are lost. She turned to see if someone had spoken from the window Then the old man's lips began to move as if in answer; she heard him say "Not so, my Lord; for when saw I thee an hungered and fed thee? Or thirsty and gave thee drink? When saw I thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked and clothed thee? When saw I thee sick or in prison and came unto thee? Three and thirty years have I looked for thee; but I have never seen thy face, nor ministered unto thee, my King."

He ceased, and the sweet voice came again and she heard it very faint and far away, but now it seemed as though she understood the words: "Verily I say unto thee, inasmuch as thou hast done it unto the least of one of these, my brethren, thou hast done it unto me."

Then calm radience of wonder and joy lighted the pale face of Artaban, a long breath of relief exhaled gently from his lips. His journey was ended. His treasures were accepted. The Other Wise Man had found the King.

Message for the church:

The last of the nations of earth are included in our Lord's commission to the church: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." The heathen world is an hungered, they have not the bread of life; thirsty, they have not the life-giving water. Strangers to grace, because the church is slow in giving them the opportunity to be taken in. They have not the blessings of Christian civilization and enlightenment, they are sick and in prison because of idolatrous superstitions and gross immorality. Oh, Christ! if we would find the King, see Him in His beauty, enter into the richest inheritance of the kingdom prepared from the foundations of the world, we must be up and doing. For in obeying the great commission of our Lord there is a work that each can do. He shows us the field. The Church must furnish the men and means. This is the highest work of the Church, although it is to be done for even the least of the people of the earth, is the service Christ would have us render unto him, for "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

From Pastors and People.

VOLUNTEERS.

When war breaks out the country, through its hight officials, call for volunteers. Why? An enemy has invaded or attacked the strong holds of the people and men and money are wanted to rout him and save the people. An enemy has invaded our land, and though we have been playing with tremendous responsibilities it is not too late to do some effective fighting. Who will volunteer to give a tenth of his income? Some will say this would reduce them to great want and the necessities of life could not be had. How do you know? Did you ever try it? Some will say: "No, but common sense tells me so." What is your so-called common sense and mine when set up over against the real experience of thousands and the plain mandate of God? A business man of Shelbyville, Ind., in speaking of tithing, said: "From any human viewpoint, the tenth is unreasonably liberal on God's part. Much more was required of the ancient Jews under their peculiar administration."

Listen to only a few of the demands made upon them. "And thither shall ye bring your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, and your tithes, and the heave offering of your hand and your vows, and your free-will offerings, and the firstlings of your herd, and of your flock." Here, as in some other instances, human reason and human experience does not agree. One would suppose that such prodigal tithing would have bankrupted the whole Jewish nation, but actual experience proves that Israel was never so prosperous as when most liberal. I suggest that every Methodist Protesant in the District keep a book in which is jotted down the total amount received from all sources, and a separate column for recording the tenth. Some will be ready to say: "I can't afford to do that. It would require too much time, and then I could never run my business on nine tenths." But some of you charge your renters as much as one third or one half of all they make on what you call your land.

Now, methinks I see some small souled fellow making desperate efforts to escape through some little hole in the dark wall of his selfishness. To be sure, he is not trying to get out into the larger, sweeter air of glorious unselfishness, but back into the dark, somber chambers of his personal greed. I have observed, when walking through the deep forest on a summer's day, that, on overturning a rotten log or stump, the bugs and other crawling insects there, made desperate efforts to find some hiding place where the light did not fall. Sometimes they gave evident signs of anger. So some men, when the light is turned on so that the real fact must appear, get angry, call attention to some one's short-comings, begin to parade a squadron of last year hypocrites across the path, and do many other ridiculous things that they may fix attention somewhere else, so their own littleness may not be so well observed. O! for a vision that will impel us all to walk out in the open. It is too much to hope that we are almost at the dawning of a better, brighter day. May we not cry:

"Men of thought, be up and stirring night and day:
Sow the seed—Withdraw the curtain—clear the way!
Men of action, aid and cheer them, as you may!
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow;
There's a midnight blackness changing into gray,
Men of thought, and men of action, clear the way!"

God wants volunteers. He can't use conscripts. The world needs workers. It has too many drones. Who will volunteer to do your best the coming year? Let each one be true to himself, his fellowman and God, and when the thundering shout of victory shall roll along the line it will be found: "As his part is that tarryeth by the stuff so shall his part be that goeth down to battle. They shall part alike." W. E. Swain.

High Point.

We have been very kindly received by the people of High Point for the fourth time. The work is starting off well, in fact, it is just a continuation of the work that was already begun.

Our Sunday School was delighted at receiving the Conference S. S. banner, and we are going to do our best to hold it.

Miss Annie L. Forrest accompanied us from Conference, and was given the very first service of the Conference year. The morning she was with us was a bright, beautiful Sunday morning, and a large audience listened very attentively to her earnest appeals for help for the children of Japan. The offering cash and pledges amounted to $166.00. We can but appreciate the fact that the Ways and Means Committee raised our assessment for foreign missions $20.00. We love to serve a people who give largely to foreign missions.

How happy we are not to have to move, especially since we can feel that all our people here are glad to have us stay with them.

It is indeed comforting to be so comfortably housed in a good parsonage with such a good people to serve. Our people delight to say, "We have the biggest and the best Sunday School in the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina."

A. G. Dixon, Pastor.

High Point, N. C., Dec. 12th, 1911.

To the People of Randleman Circuit:

I expect to be on the work by the first Sabbath in January, 1912. I regret very much that I can not meet the appointments there before that time, but owing to circumstances which I can not adjust, I cannot reach the work until then. Brethren, pray much that we may have a prosperous year.

Yours for service,

J. B. O'Briant.

Denton Mission.

As the Conference has assigned me for another year to the Denton Mission, I now announce through the M. P. Herald that I will preach at the following times and places: Denton, 3rd Sunday in Dec., 11 A. M.; Pleasant Grove, same day, 3 P. M.; Denton, 7:30 P. M.; Southmont, Tuesday, Dec. 19th, 7:30 P. M. I trust we may have good congregations on first round, so we can give and suggest our plans for the new year. Both churches had good reports for last year. Now, dear brethren and friends, let us all set in to do more this year than we did last year. The way to do a good year's work is to begin in the beginning of the year and work on until the close of the year. I am glad that I have as good people to serve as there is anywhere. May the Lord continue to bless them in His work. My dear brethren, I will serve you again this year to the best of my ability by the help of the Lord. I shall need your prayers and continued co-operation in order to do my best work. Let each one say as the people said to Joshua: "All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go." Joshua 1:16. Will not all who read this that are able please make us a liberal donation for the Denton Church at once as we owe some that must be paid at once, and we are very anxious to get into our new quarters so we can do better work. Anyone wishing to give any amount can send it to me at Concord or Denton, or to Brother A. A. Hill, at Denton. Brethren, help us what you can as soon as you can.

Little Hasel Shelby Ruth Hatley, daughter of Bro. C. R. and Mary E. Hatley, was born September 28, 1811, and died Dec. 8, 1911. I baptized little Ruth Dec. 1, and preached her funeral Dec. 9. Her little body was laid to rest in the Rocky Ridge Cemetery until the resurrection. The parents have our sympathy, we have gone over the same road. God bless the sorrowing ones. We will see our loved ones again on the other shore.

Little Rubie Revis was born June 19, 1910, and died Dec. 11, 1911, and the writer conducted her funeral the same evening and her little body was laid to rest in the Concord Cemetery. What made the death seem so sad was that Bro. John Revis and family had only been in Concord about one week when Rubie died. As the little body of Rubie was being carried out at the door of the home the mother exclaimed, O, how can I give up my baby? I thought, oh mother, you are not giving it up. Jesus is only taking your dear baby up to His good home in heaven to take care of it for you. God bless you, dear parents, you have our sympathy. And Rubie is yours still. Both these families live at Concord.

Fraternally,
D. A. Braswell.

THE POSTAL CARD.
W. P. Kennett, Editor.

Our quarterly conference.

The Postal Card contained an error as to date of our 1st quarterly conference, in last week's issue. The conference is to be held in Flat Rock Church on Thursday after the 1st Sunday in January, Jan. 11th. This is correct—write it down, Thursday, Jan. 11th, and don't fail to attend.

A good congregation greeted us at Flat Rock last Sunday and gave excellent attention to the Word. The Flat Rock people help the preacher to preach by their good listening.

Thanks Again.

This week we thank Mrs. W. P. Lemons, Mr. J. W. Pegram, Miss Esther Williams, Mrs. S. H. Lemons, Mrs. J. R. Dwiggins and Mrs. Archie Lemons for fresh meats, sausage, butter, eggs, etc.

Richland Ct.

The first quarterly conference will convene Saturday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1911. President Swain will be with us. There will be preaching at 11 a. m., business session after luncheon. Let us have a full attendance from each church and plan broadly for usefulness and progress.

The attendance at Flag Springs last Sunday was a surprise to me in the large number present, and the attention to the Word all that a preacher could desire. The Sunday school at that point is preparing for a Christmas entertainment.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Dec. 13, 1911.

Siler City Circuit.

We are glad to know that Rev. J. H. Bowman is to be with us again this coming year.

Mr. Bowman filled his appointment at Hope church the second Sunday in December at 11 o'clock. He preached a most excellent sermon. His text was: Go forward. It was so simple and plain that even a little child could understand it.

We are having a fine Sunday school. We have an average of about 75 pupils every Sunday. And we have prayer meeting every Wednesday night, which is fairly well attended. And we hope to go forward with the work another year. Rep.

Dec. 10, 1911.

Concord.

We are glad to have our pastor, Bro. Lindley, back with us again for another year's work. We gladly welcome him back, not only our members, but other denominations; hope our members will all co-operate with him.

We have a very good Sunday school now; 145 were present Sunday. Collection was something over $2.00; our congregations are also good.

We are now busy with our Xmas exercise. We hope to have a good one.

Bro. L. R. Blackwelder and wife were received into the church Sunday morning and Bro. Fred. J. Harb, Sunday night. We trust these will be faithful members and live up to the requirements of the church.

Mr. Cleveland Rymer and Miss Lizzie Furr were united in marriage by our pastor on last Wednesday evening, December 6, at three o'clock. We wish for these a long and happy life.

Mr. Perkins, who lives near us, is very sick. We hope he will soon recover, if it be the Lord's will.

Sister Annie Ridenhour, who was a regular attendant of the church, has moved to the Young-Hartsell Mill, where her father, Rev. J. M. Ridenhour, is pastor of the M. E. Church. We all miss her very much.

Lettie Little, Reporter.

Asheboro.

Rev. T. M. Johnson began the new Conference year with a sermon on "Pray without ceasing," urging his congregation, which he has served faithfully for four years, to be more prayerful this year than ever before. He left Monday for Washington where he went to be present at the temperance meeting which is now in progress there.

Miss Annie L. Forrest, field secretary of The Woman's Foreign Missionary Board, made a most excellent missionary address in our church on Sunday, after which an offering amounting to $89.50 was made. Miss Forrest has served two terms as missionary to Japan and is very interesting. She also met with the members of the W. F. M. Auxiliary on Monday, at which time a number of interested missionary workers of the other churches asked privilege to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear her. Miss Forrest left Monday night for her home in Littlestown, Pa., to spend the holidays. She will return to North Carolina about the middle of January and visit the various churches.

The women of our church had a bazaar an Tuesday and Tuesday night of court, and realized over fifty dollars above expenses. This amount is to be divided equally between the Home and Foreign Mission and Ladies' Aid Societies. X.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Bro. Raper filled his regular appointment Sunday; this was the first appointment at this place for this Conference year. He preached a soul-stirring sermon. Good congregation.

Received four new members: Mrs. M. S. Cable, Cary Cable, Elwood and George Cable, all from Grace church, Greensboro. We were glad to welcome them in our church.

We thank that Lord that he has sent our dear pastor back to us again. This is his eighth year on this charge. We were so glad to welcome him back again. He seems more in earnest than ever befor. May the Lord help each member to feel that they have a duty to perform as much so as the preacher. Do we help our pastor as we ought? No, I fear not. They need our prayers, love, sympathy and support. May the Lord help each one of us Christians to make this the best year of all our lives.

Blanche Weatherly, Rep.

Siler City.

We are very glad to have Rev. J. H. Bowman for our pastor again. He preached his first sermon since Conference for us last Sunday night from the text, "Go Forward," and it was a splendid sermon.

After preaching we held a church meeting for the election of church officers for the ensuing year. The following were elected: Stewards, G. Wade Siler and G. E. Matthews; Church Trustees, L. L. Wrenn, P. S. Siler, J. H. Fox, E. Stone, and E. D. Woody; Class Leader, N. H. Hunt.

Our Sunday school is preparing to have a Christmas tree and entertainment for the little folks, which will take place Saturday night before Christmas.

G. E. M.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Last Sunday began the Conference year with us. Brother Bethea preaching one of those "common, unusual" sermons. Though he be "good for anything," had you heard that sermon, you would think his best is in the pulpit.

A good congregation; several visitors. Among these was Miss Blanche Hardee, of Halifax County. Miss Blanche visits this church about once a year and her presence is always appreciated.

The S. S. is still in good condition. The Christmas tree, the most interesting now, to the children.

One of our church and Sunday school members, Mr. O. H. Powell, was made to feel sad because of the recent death of his father, Mr. Silas Powell, of Henderson. Mr. Powell was formerly a member of this church, at his death, a member of Henderson M. P. Church. Interment taking place at the family burying ground.

Polk Garrett.

Dec. 12, 1911.

Lincolnton.

Dear Readers:

As we have had nothing in the Herald from here lately, I feel like writing a letter. As you all know, we have for our pastor, Rev. H. W. Braswell for the next year and hope and pray that the Master's work may prosper in his hands this year as never before. We have a Teacher's Training Class here at the M. P. Church, which meets each Thursday night; we are using Mr. Oliver's book on Teacher Training. We had our examination on the first ten lessons last Thursday night, which covers the Old Testament. The Examination stood as follows, taking one hundred for the highest and seventy for the lowest: Miss Jennie Jenkins, 100; Miss Martha Gales, 98; Mr. Robert Lippard, 97; Miss Lucy Gales, 96; Mr. A. C. Hull, 95; Mr. D. B. Johnson, 95; Miss Carrie Bellamy, 76; and Miss Ocie Heavener, 73. The Sunday school is going on nicely. Sunday, 52 present, $1.14 collection. We have one among the best schools in town. Some are against us, even some Methodists, but we hope to see the day in the near future when we will rise above all this and stand as one among the best churches in the N. C. Conference. If God be for us, who can be against us?

Bro. James Elmore, one of our most loyal members, has bought five lots joining our church property and has let a contract to the North Lumber Co. for the erection of a nice 8-room dwelling near the church, to be completed soon as possible. Sister Lucy Gales has also bought lots joining our church property on the West, (Bro. Elmore's being on the North) and will have erected this winter a handsome six-room dwelling. The new sash and blind factory, south on the next street will soon be in operation. Mr. Geo. Lynn's house is completed and he has moved into it. Several others are planning to build soon. Now, with Bro. Braswell as our pastor and other good men to help, such as Rev. Reed and Hatley, nearby, let all the consecrated men and women in the N. C. Conference pray as we have never prayed before, for the most wonderful outpouring of God's Holy Spirit in Lincolnton as was never known before and not only here, but everywhere. Success to the Herald and its many readers.

X.

Flat Rock Items.

Mrs. William Parrish passed from time into eternity November 16th. Married in young woman hood to Rev. Ham Peoples, son of our genial itinerant minister, Rev. Hubbard Peoples, and later to Mr. Wiliiam Parrish, a highly respectable farmer and lifetime member of Flat Rock Church. Dwelling happily with each, to these were no children born.

Her illness was protracted, complicated, and severe. But that spirit which characterized her life, was evident till death —patience. Whatever the background of her life, on sight of her face, the most careless observer would note. There dwells a lady. During her widowhood of continued years, if we mistake not, she told us, (Living in the homes of others) she performed with meekness, doubtless the menial tasks, and though seemingly narrow the sphere of her life at times, it was ever illuminated by love and Christian fortitude. For truly, "God's gentleness did make her great." We all loved her, and to the bereaved husband so kind ever, and who so abundantly provided, and loving stepson, the church extends sympathy. May they weep not. For "Death has made his darkness beautiful with her."

With the poets she felt—

"We would see Jesus; other lights are paling,
Which for long years we have rejoiced to see
The blessings of our pilgrimage are failing,
We would not mourn them, for we go to thee.
We would see Jesus, yet the spirit lingers
Round the dear objects it has loved so long,
And earth from earth can scarce unclasp its fingers;
Our love to thee makes not this love less strong.

Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday we had 213 in S. S., and the offering amounted to $4.50. The superintendent announced that next Sunday would be the regular semi-annual election of officers for the first six months of 1912. We trust we will have a large number present, and that those best fitted for the various offices will be elected.

Our new pastor, Rev. T. E. Davis, and family, except a daughter, arrived last Friday afternoon and have moved into the parsonage. Bro. Davis preached for us Sunday morning and night, and his sermons were highly enjoyed by those who heard them, as is attested by the many complimentary things we have heard said about them. He has entered heartily into the work, and we believe he will carry the work forward in an unusually successful manner. We hope we may all work and aid him in every way possible.

A goodly number of our people went to the parsonage on Monday evening with our "pounds" and left them there. The pastor and his family stood it very well.

The Board of Stewards met Monday evening, and organized for the year. Bro. J. Ed. Moore was chosen as chairman, and M. A. Coble as Secretary and Treasurer. Another meeting will be held Friday evening of this week, at which the work for the year will be divided among the stewards.

Bro. R. M. Andrews went to Elon College on last Sunday where he preached at 11:00 A. M. We missed him in our S. S. and church services.

In the Baraca Class last Sunday morning there were 34 men—all members of the class. Only nine were absent. This is probably the best percentage of attendance the class has had in this year.

The work of the entire church is starting off well, and we are looking forward to a good year. Pray for us that it may be so.

Reporter

Burlington, N. C., Dec. 13, 1911.

—I want to tender my grateful thanks to some brother or friend for sending me the Methodist Protestant. It is to me an inspiration and a source of comfort. May God bless that friend. J. L. Giles.

ORPHANS' HOME.

"The darkest hours are just before day."—Only a few weeks ago the sky was dark; it was raining on our little flock. Some of the children were sick and funds were low. Now the sun is shining; we are all enjoying the beautiful weather. The children are all well and happy. It makes your heart glad to see their rosy cheeks when they are all seated around the dining table. Funds are coming in better than at any time previous. We can only say, "God be praised," for we know He puts into the hearts of these good people to remember us so generously.

Bethel W. F. M. S. and Philathea Bible Class, of Alamance Ct., send a splendid box containing about 40 yards of goods, flour, peas, blankets, towels, bed linen, etc.

Henderson ladies have been very kind also, for their box contained dresses, coat suits, boy suits, caps, hats, shoes and numerous other things.

Ladies on Lincoln Ct. send four quilts and one pair pillow cases.

Mebane friends don't forget us. They send canned fruit, peas, beans, dried fruit, sage, etc.

Mr. Robert Prevost, who is teacher at Level Cross Public School, Randolph Co., told his children of the children in the Home and as a result we received a box containing beans, peas, corn, fruit, pickles, butter, jelly, peanuts, popcorn, and fifteen pr. hose.

These things will do us good for days to come, and we will remember you kindly as each article is brought into service.

We expect to have others to report next week. If we should fail to report any thing, either in cash, or any other donation, please remind us. With so many things on our minds we may happen to over-look or we may fail to get your donations.

I want to ask those sending collections from S. S. or Church to please state name of the circuit as well as church, as there are so many churches of the same name.

Yours in the work,

Etta Auman.

Treas. Report.

Denton S. S.	$3.16
S. V. Pickens	10.00
W. J. Teague	5.00
Grace Church, Greensboro.	3.02
Cedar Falls S. S.	.40
Whitaker's Chapel S. S.	4.00
Asheville S. S.	1.50
Fairfield S. S.	2.50
Star S. S.	3.50
Siler City ch.	6.00
Grace H. M. S.	25.00
Rehoboth S. S., Granville Ct.	6.00
Union Chapel S. S. Granville Ct.	3.20
Caroleen S. S.	5.10
Caroleen H. M. S.	2.40
Hope ch, Siler City Ct.	5.27
Haw River ch.	3.50
Rose Hill S. S.	1.70
Mrs. S. H. Tomlinson	5.00
Enfield S. S.	4.00
Fairview S. S.	1.00
Mrs. W. H. Finch	2.00
New Hope S. S., Vance Ct.	5.00
Friends	2.00
Philathea Bible Class, Bethel S. S.	1.65
Henderson	11.20
Lawnsdale Church	15.25
A Friend	2.00
Mebane S. S.	5.00
Total	$145.35

In Memory of My Mother.

Henrietta S. Anderson (nee, Hunter) was born June 20, 1831; departed this life Nov. 21, 1911, aged, 80 years, 5 mos. and 1 day.

She was married to John Sanford Anderson Oct. 14, 1858, who preceded her to the spirit world eight year ago. The union was blessed with three children, two of whom survive her. She leaves six living grand children, one dead. Two living great grandchildren, two dead. She professed Christ and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Pleasant Hill, Forsyth Ct., April 11, 1852, fifty-nine years ago, where she remained a consistent member until she fell

"Asleep in Jesus; blessed sleep
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.
Asleep in Jesus! O how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet.
With holy confidence to sing,
That death has lost its venomed sting."

All that the loving hands of the family and friends, and the skill of a faithful doctor could not restore her to accustomed health. She had so often remarked, in years gone by, that she hoped her last sickness might not continue long, and so it was not. She was taken sick on Saturday evening and lived till Tuesday morning, when God said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, come up higher, enter into the joys of thy Lord." A heavenly smile rested on her face as she lay so still and cold in death. While we deeply feel our loss and lament her absence here in our homes, yet through it all, by faith, we can look up and beyond the shadow and lonely gloom with tear-dimmed eyes to the time when we can meet her "When the roll is called up yonder," for she told us she was "ready and willing to go." Me thinks as mother's soul was pluming itself for flight, that just on the other side of the icy river of death, father was standing on the evergreen bank, with out-stretched arms ready to receive her happy spirit. Oh! what a happy meeting that was, there to be with Christ and all the redeemed ones forevermore.

Her daughter,

Florence L. Petree.

Important Notice.

A paper containing the names of those who, at Conference, paid me their Subscription to the Methodist Protestant was lost. Those who paid me for this purpose please drop me a card stating the amount paid. This is very important and by so doing these subscribers will greatly favor me as well as themselves as this is the only way I know to give these subscribers correct credit. I am indeed sorry this misfortune has occurred.

Yours truly,

Geo. L. Curry.

Graham, N. C.

SHOULD YOU NOT SERIOUSLY CONSIDER THIS?

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church," the sum of $..... and the receipt of the Treasurer shall be a sufficient discharge to my executors for the same.

Or, if it be real estate, as follows:

I give, devise, and bequeath all that (describe the property) unto "The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church," to have and to hold, to them and their successors forever.

—Bro. Edwards thinks his charge in a most excellent condition, and hopes for a good year's work, beginning at the beginning and going on to the end.

—Bro. Suits writes that his people seem to be more in earnest than ever. That is encouraging to a pastor, especially at the beginning of a new year. When the people hold back, the pastor is inclined to ask: Did not the Conference make a mistake in sending me here?

—Bro. Fogleman has gone to Weaverville to enter upon his new field. He said at Conference he had never received so many congratulations over an appointment. The people of Buncombe and Asheville will soon learn, if they don't know it now, that hey have a pastor who means business and wishes church work to move forward. If they will move with him, we predict that they will be highly gratified with the results when the end of the year is reached.

CHURCH FINANCES

By Prof. W. A. Harper.

The Biblical Standard of Giving.

In the very beginning of our investigation of this theme we need to get distinctly before us this truth: God does not need our gifts so much as we need the spiritual blessings that will come of our giving to Him and His work. The covetous soul is a small, shrivelled soul. Covetousness is the opposite of sacrifice, of giving. To rid our hearts of selfishness, our spirits of covetousness to which the flesh is heir, we need to give, and for that reason God has ordained that we should in this way assist in working out His plans in the world. Christ said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." But we can serve God with mammon, and it is our inalienable right and high privilege as well as Christian duty to do so. But what does the Bible teach on this point?

We are not told that Adam and Eve made offerings unto God, but we would infer that they did, for we find Cain and Abel bringing of their substance to honor God. Just why Cain's offering was unacceptable we do not know,—perhaps it was too small an offering considering his prosperity, perhaps it was not of his best, perhaps he brought it with the wrong motive. The point for us is that the first children born in the world acknowledged their debts to God and set about paying them. But we would get no standard from them. The first time that a definite standard of giving is mentioned in the Bible is when Abram paid tithes to Melchizedek, the great prototype of our Lord in his priestly character and work, and the second time is when Jacob vowed unto the Lord one-tenth of all that he should bless him with, (Gen. 28, 22). Thus did tithing antedate the law. Recent research has revealed the fact that the tithe was also practiced by many heathen nations of antiquity.

But what did the Hebrew law teach on this point? The general law of the tithe is found in Lev. 27:30-32, and reads as follows: "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is Jehavah's; it is holy unto Jehovah. And if a man will redeem aught of his tithe he shall add unto it the fifth part thereof. And all the tithe of the herd or the flock, whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto Jehovah." Numbers 18:26 shows that it applied also to the priests: "Thus speak unto the Levites and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave-offering of it for the Lord, even a tenth part of the tithe." The tithe referred to in these passages was a permanent enactment for the support of the temple and the priesthood, and was known as the tithe-terumoth. But the Jews were subject to two other tithes also. The first is the tithe for the feast of the Tabernacles, which was the Jewish Thanksgiving occasion and applied only to corn, wine, oil, and the increase of the flock. We find an account of it in Deut. 14:22-27, as follows: "Thou shalt surely tithe all the increase of thy seed, that which cometh forth from the field every year. And thou shalt eat before Jehovah thy God, in the place which he shall choose, to cause his name to dwell there, the tithe of thy grain, of thy new wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herd and of thy flock; that thou mayest learn to fear Jehovah thy God always. And if the way be too long for thee so that thou art not able to carry it, because the place is too far from thee, which Jehovah thy God shall choose, to set up his name there, when Jehovah thy God shall bless thee; then thou shalt turn it into money and bind up the money in thy hand, and shall go up unto the place which Jehovah thy God shall choose: and thou shalt bestow the money for whatsoever thy soul desireth, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul asketh of thee, and thou shalt eat there before Jehovah thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou and thy household. And the Levite that is within thy gates, thou shalt not forsake him, for he hath no portion nor inheritance with thee." The second was the tithe laid at the end of each three-year period for the benefit of the poor and fatherless and widowed, including the Levite, as we find recorded in Deut. 14:28-29, which reads thus: "At the end of every three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase in the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates: and the Levite, because he hath no portion nor inheritance with thee, and the sojourner, and the fatherless and the widow, that are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that Jehovah thy God may bless thee in all the work of thy hand which thou doest." These three tithes must be kept separate and distinct, else great confusion must cloud the whole subject of Christian giving and especially of the Hebrew practice of this grace. The tithe-terumoth instituted among the Hebrews by the founder of that race, Abram, was enacted into law by the Lord through Moses on Mount Sinai. The other two tithes were special enactments of the law and with it passed away. We celebrate our Thanksgiving day in another way than by levying tithes on corn, wine, oil, and flocks, and we have instituted orphanages and various sorts of homes to care for our own poor and our fatherless. The only way we have of supporting the ministry and maintaining the Church and its enterprises is by giving, or tithing, as the old Hebrew did.

These three tithes, the tithe-terumoth or that for support of the temple and the priesthood, the tithe for the feast of Tabernacles applying only to corn, wine, oil, and flocks, and the poor-tithe due every fourth year, were obligatory upon the Hebrews throughout the period from Sinai to the birth of Christ, and are according to the view of their rabbis still obligatory upon them. We find, however, that they were not always faithfully observed, and with dire consequences to themselves. One of the most powerful of the minor prophets charges up many evils to the neglect of the people to pay their tithes and calls the failures to do so robbing God. But hear Malachi (3:8-12) speak for himself: "Will a man rob God? yet ye rob me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee. In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob, even this whole nation. Bring ye the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither, shall your vine cast its fruit before the time in the field, saith Jehovah of hosts. And all nations shall call you happy; for ye shall be a delight-some land, saith Jehovah of hosts."

But what of the teaching of the New Testament on this point? Did the law—all of it—not pass with the new dispensation? Are we not under love rather than under the law? These questions might be very comforting, but for the last one—for surely a man will not do less for love than the law required. And so even without any direct Scriptural warrant. I would feel safe in saying that the tithe is the minimum standard of Christian giving under the New Testament dispensation. I would also have you recall that the tithe antedated the law and had its origin in the heart of man.

But Christ specifically commends tithe-paying. In his indictment of the scribes and Pharisees this is made plain: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightiest matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone: Matt. 23:23." This gives Christ's sanction to tithe paying as much so as his conversation with the rich young ruler does to the ten commandments, and also teaches us a great moral truth, that a man cannot buy his way into Heaven.

But as in other matters, the New Testament is in advance of the Old Testament also in the matter of giving. It is true that the old Testament provided for free-will offerings but it gave no standard for them and designated no method beyond individual caprice. The New Testament is very plain and specific on this point. Its standard of giving is given in I Corinthians 16:2. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him." This is the standard of giving under the dispensation of love, the tithe of course being the minimum. It shows that our gifts should be systematic—"upon the first day of the week" that is, upon our present Sabbath. If we were to do this, how easy it would be to pay our pastor quarterly in advance and to meet all Conferenee requirements without a struggle! Nor can the objection be raised that country churches do not have weekly service. The point of the injunction is not that offerings are to be paid, but laid up in store, each week on the first day. We can take it to the Church and pay it over once a month, once a quarter, or once a year, but we ought to lay by us in store for that purpose on each Sabbath. Suppose we try it for one year and see how things will work out.

But this standard shows another thing, that giving is obligatory upon every one. "Let every one of you lay by him in store," that is the Biblical ideal. In how many churches is this standard attained? According to this ought a father to say, my family will give so and so? Do we not often hear it complained that only ten or a dozen out of a hundred members have to do all the paying? Brethren, we ought never to rest until every member of the Church contributes to the support of the Church and its enterprises. It may take more time and effort to get the few pennies that some will be able to give, and it may be that we would rather pay it ourselves than to go after it, but can we afford it, in the face of the plain command of the Scripture to the contrary? It is always better for a Church to get ten men to give than for one man to give as much as ten men of his ability ought to give.

But in the third place, our gifts according to the New Testament standard are to be proportionate, "as God hath prospered him." That is the hard part—that is where it hurts. It may be more of a sacrifice for me to give ten cents than for many of you to give one hundred dollars. Many of us expect a man to give as he loves the Lord or according to his official station in the Church, but the Bible says "as God hath prospered him." We are willing to grant that we should give systematically and individually, but when it comes to giving proportionately,—well, what about that? And this proportionate part should not be reckoned according to the gifts of the most liberal man in the Church or the community, but according to a man's gratitude for what God has done for him in proportion to his prosperity, never falling below the minimum set in heath n lands, adopted by Abram, reinforced by the authority of the law, and specifically enjoined upon us by Christ.

If this standard were adopted, ten men in moderate circumstances could support a minister in moderate circumstanc s for all his time and two or three others per church could provide all the funds necessary for all church enterprises. I know a few who practice the tithing plan and they are happy and prosperous. God has wonderfully blessed them. I never knew of but one man who gave the double tithe during all his life, but he died a multi-millionaire, and was one of the best loved men of his day. His money went to estblish colleges, found orphanages, and do the work of the Lord—one dollar out of every five he ever made—but he prospered and has left a name honored among his fellows. That man was Francis Asbury Palmer, one of the best friends the Christian Church ever had.

Yes, we live under the dispensation of love, but we ought not to be content to do less for love than the old Hebrews did at the biddance of the law. What father will not do more for his child for love than the law requires? The Scripture tells us that "God so loved the world that he gave." We must so love God that we shall carry out the Biblical standard of giving, which, with the tithe as the minimum, enjoins us to give systematically—"Upon the first day of the week," individually— "let every one of you lay by him in store," and proportionately, "as God hath prospered him," remembering that the Lord Jesus said "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and that "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "Freely ye have received, freely give." But the greatest gift we can give him is that we should give our selves. 2 Cor. 8:5.

FAITH AND WORKS.

Among the unpublished manuscripts of N. Summerbell I find matter somewhat like the following:)

Faith and works are peculiar virtues. Both are essential to religion.

It is a strange paradox that of the two great bodies of the Christian world, Protestants, who contend most earnestly for faith, have the most good works; and the Roman Catholics, who contend most earnestly for works, have the most faith.

It is erroneous, that the faith of a church is its creed, or book of "articles of faith." And yet, if you were to ask some folks for a statement of their faith, they would look into the book-case for the creed. But would such a person say, if he could not find the creed, They have taken away my faith, and I know not where they have laid it?

Paper prayers and faith are no better than wooden gods, and should not be cultivated.

Those who depended on creed faith, which they defended by good works, weakened the morality of the world by preaching against it.

Those who depended on good works lost faith in God, and did few good works.

Hence the Catholicity of sin in Christian countries; where pride is the only god worshipped, and constantly coupled are: Fasting and fighting. Crossing one's self and swearing. Praying and lying. Use of holy water and rum and water.

Some have defined faith and works as twin sisters, equally dependent on each other, and will illustrate by the boat with two oars. But oars are works; both of them. Faith is the confidence in the heart. that makes the rower pull the oars.

Both are needed to make a Christian. Faith without good works only makes a bigot. Good works without faith become unfeeling and cruel.

Faith may be the tree, prized for its fruit, good works.

The sin of a believer is more hurtful than the unbelief of a professor. Thomas' unbelief was not as injurious as the treason of Judas. The man with good works and little faith can do more good than the man with much faith and few good deeds.

Faith purifies the heart and produces good works.

Faith is not independent of good works. Right faith produces action.

Morality, without faith, becomes sickly and dies.

Jesus' religion is pure in faith and perfect in works; but we are to be judged at last by our works.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

THE GOIN'-TO-DO.

There's a queer little thing that lives among boys,
That hides in their homes, in their books and their toys.
No one has described it, though some say it's blue;
It has such a strange name, it's called Goin'-to do.
I think it's a fairy; not content is this elf
To be around with a boy—it gets into his self
He forgets his own name (George, Willie, or who?)
Says he's somebody else, "I'm a Goin'-to-do."
His father says, "Willie, I want you to go
On an errand," or, "There's weeds in the garden to hoe."
But while father is waiting and work is in view,
Willie's watching the pranks of this queer Goin'-to-do.
His mother says, "Willie, be a good little man,
I know you can help me if you say that you can."
"Yes, mother," says he. Just then, strange, but it's true,
It flies like a bird, that queer Goin'-to-do.
His teacher says, "Willie, give attention to me."
And Willie says, "Yes, a great scholar I'll be."
But the studies are hard, and the questions not few,
And he can't see his books for a big Goin'-to-do.
So every day with this elfin he meets,
He loves to play with him though he knows that he cheats;
And' night after night he finds something to rue,
Because he's been fooled by this queer Goin'-to do.

R. Walter Wright.

WHY CAT FAMILY DIDN'T MOVE.

Mrs. Dapple Gray lived in the barn, where the hay was stored, with her three little kittens. One kitty was black and one white and one gray, just like his mamma cat.

When they got big enough to open their eyes, Mrs. Dappled Gray told her kittens all about the lovely big house and the milk and bread which they should have when they got big enough to go there for their meals as she did.

Every time Mama Cat came back from the house she told the kittens about the lovely nap she had with the baby and how sunny and nice it was there, till they could hardly wait to go and see it all for themselves.

One day Mama Cat said: "I have found a nice new house for you in a very large trunk, where some old clothes are kept, and I think we will move in at once."

Then she picked up black kitty and walked right out of the barn with him in her mouth. Mama Cat went into the hall upstairs, and dropped black kitty in the open trunk there. Then she started for white kitty.

But what do you think? The lady who owned the trunk came out, and, seeing it open, shut it up with a bang. She did not know that the dear little fat kitten was in there.

Oh, how frightened Mama Cat was when she came back with whitekitty. She scratched and clawed the trunk, and rushed to the lady who was playing with her baby in another room. "Mee-ow, mee-ow! You have your baby and I want mine," she cried and rubbed against her dress.

The lady saw Mama Cat jump on the trunk and scratch it with her sharp claws. "What can the matter be?" said the lady; and she opened her trunk. There cuddled up in the clothes was black kitty, sound asleep.

Before the lady could ask Mama Cat a single question, she had picked up black kitty out of the trunk and started for the old home and the barn.

When she got the three babies back in the hay, Mrs. Dappled Gray Cat told them that the house was a very nice place to go, but the barn was the best home to bring up little kitties.—Child's Hour.

Small Elsie: "Grandma, is your teeth good?"

Grandma: "No, dear, I haven't any real ones."

Small Elsie: "Then I'll let you hold my candy till I come back."

"Ma, do cows and bees go to heaven?"

"Mercy, child, what a question! Why?"

"'Cause if they don't, the milk and honey the preacher said was up there must be all canned stuff:"—Philadelphia Times.

In school was a very little boy called Dottie. The teacher had been talking with the children about the collar-bone. Finally she said: "Who can tell me the use of the collar bone?"

Dottie's chuboy hand went up, and on being asked he triumphantly replied: "Ith's the bone your collar weths on."

"Mention the name of some well-known Greek," said the teacher of a juvenile class in history.

"George," spoke up the curly-haired little boy.

"George who?"

"I don't know the rest of his name, ma'am. He comes round to our house every Thursday with bananas and oranges."

THE FOLLY OF PROHIBITION.

By Wallace J. Coburn.

What, shut up the poor house and jail
And open the church and the school,
Lay off the police from their work?
That looks some like acting the fool.
What, own your own house and your farm,
And take care of your child and your wife,
Not spend your good dollars for rum?
I never heard such a thing in my life.
What, lay up a few dollars in bank,
Provide for that dread rainy day,
Not fill up the saloonkeeper's till?
That's surely a mighty strange way.
What, let your wife have a good dress,
And saloonkeeper's wife not have silk,
Which your hard-earned money helps buy?
You must think I grew up on skim milk.
What, help a man pay up his bills,
And help him to keep out of debt,
Have a swelled purse rather than a swelled head?
Such folly I hope soon to foget.
What, vote to keep rum out of the state,
And bring peace and prosperity in,
Let men live rather than the saloon?
Don't you think it would be most a sin?

—The Methodist Protestant of this week reports encouraging progress in the Maryland Conference. "Never before have we raised so much money for foreign missions; never before have we made so much progress in church extension; never before have the salaries of the ministers been what they are now, nor the superannuates cared for as is now possible."

—President Taft's message to Congress is confined to the Sherman anti-trust act and the trust question in general. He suggests that Congress pass a federal corporation act and add to the Sherman law so as to describe and denounce methods of competition that are unfair. He makes this comparison as to the number of prosecutions under the Sherman Act:

Harrison's	administration	7
Cleveland's	" (2nd tm.)	8
McKinley's	"	3
Roosevelt's	" (7½ yrs.)	44
Taft's	"	37

Wage Earners in Our Country.

Statistics compiled by the Bureau of the Census show the following for 1909:

Average number of wage earners,	6,615,046
Workers in wood	695,019
" " iron	631,011
" " cotton	378,880
" " repair shops	282,174
" " printing	258,434
" " canning	59,968

"DON'TS" FOR THE SPEAKER.

Grenville Kleiser has issued a list of "Don'ts for Public Speakers." These, he thinks, should be of suggestive value to every one having occasion to speak before an audience. He says:

Don't apologize.
Don't shout.
Don't hesitate.
Don't attitudinize.
Don't speak in a high key.
Don't pace the platform.
Don't distort your words.
Don't exceed your time-limit.
Don't indulge in personalities.
Don't emphasize everything.
Don't praise yourself.
Don't tell a long story.
Don't sway your body.
Don't be "funny."
Don't fatigue your audience.
Don't speak with closed teeth.
Don't drink while speaking.
Don't fumble with your clothes.
Don't be sarcasitc.
Don't "hem" and "haw."
Don't stand like a statue.
Don't clear your throat.
Don't fidget.
Don't over-gesticulate.
Don't wander from your subject.
Don't address the ceiling.
Don't be monotonous.
Don't put your hands on your hips.
Don't be violent.
Don't rise on your toes.
Don't forget to sit down when you have finished.

In brief: Stand up so that you can be seen. Speak up so that you can be heard. Shut up so that you will be liked.

—Persia is in great straits. Russia is bearing down upon her, and the National Council of Persia has telegraphed to our Congress for aid. The treasurer-general, (Mr. Shuster) of Persia is an American whose removal is demanded by Russia. Our State Department demands protection for the person and property of Mr. Shuster, though declining to support him in his official acts.

—The insurgents in China have captured Nanking, which has been regarded as the keyposition in their struggle.

—The first women graduates of college in this country were those who were graduated from Oberlin in 1841.

—Spaniards have caught the arctic exploration fever and are preparing for an expedition to the North Pole. A good place to have the fever cooled off.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews, Burlington News' new editor, preached at Elon College last Sunday for Prof. Amick.

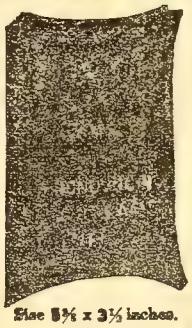
PRESENTS

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG SCHOLARS

For Intermediate Scholars

Every boy and girl should have a Bible. The Bible is the Word of God. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is Good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of life.



Size 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

No. 91. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles. Special Postage, 10 cents. $1.00

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

WHOSOEVER believeth that JE'sus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him

PICTORIAL BIBLE

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also six maps of Bible lands in colors. Also with new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

For Teachers and Preachers

Holman Pictorial Scholars' Bible Pronouncing Text

Size 7 x 5 inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

22 And the prophet came to the king'-ed, and said unto him, Go, sir thyself, and mark, and see what thing for at the return of the year the

Beautifully printed on fine white paper from new, clear type. Containing, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, 32 Beautiful Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands. These views are printed on enameled paper and are made from recent photographs, which show places as they actually are today. In addition, this Bible also contains Helps to the Study of the Bible. Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Presentation Plate and Maps in colors.

No. 21. French Morocco, overlapping covers, handbands and marker, round corners, red under gold edges. $1.20
Postage, 14 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION
Same Bible with Helps, etc., as above and with the Sayings of Christ in the New Testament printed in RED.
No. 21 RL. Binding same as 21. $1.45
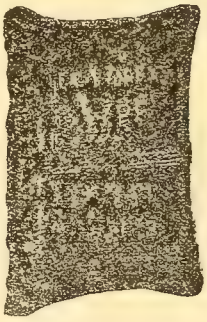
Postage, 14 cents.

Holman Self-Pronouncing Large-Print Teachers' Bibles



Size 8 x 5½ inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

the priests, the Le'vites, the the singers, the por'ters, they that had separated them

Containing Now Copyrighted Helps: A Practical Comparative Concordance, Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen Colored Maps.

No. 47. Egyptian Morocco, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges. Special price, $2.00 Postage, 25 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same large type and Helps as described above. The words of Christ in the New Testament, Prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., are all printed in RED.

No. 31 RL. $2.50 Postage, 25 cents.

Four Best Editions of the World's Best Book

FOR OLD FOLKS

The Holman Home Bible

Printed from large, clear Pica type, with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for everyday use in the Home, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for births, marriages and deaths. This is the best Bible obtainable for Old Folks who need extra large clear print and a lightweight book.

Specimen of Type Holman Home Bible

22 Thus Joash th
not the kindness
father had done t
son. And when he
LORD look upon it
23 ¶ And it ca
end of th year, th
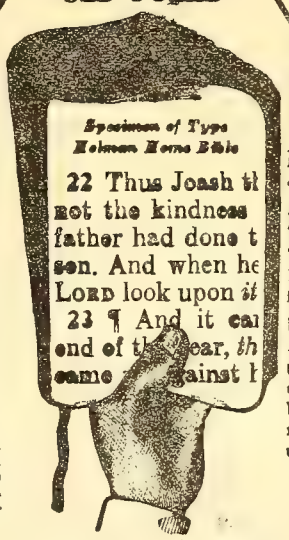
came gainst h



FOR THE HOME

The exact size of Bible when closed is 6½ x 9 inches.

No. 261. Bound in Flexible French Morocco, grained lining and fly leaves, silk headbands, and purple silk marker, round corners, red under gold edges.

Publishers' price . . . $3.00
Our special price . . . $2.10
Postage, 24 cents.

BIBLE PAPER EDITION

The finest Bible made; will last a lifetime.

No. 78X. Genuine Morocco, overlapping covers, leather lined, silk sewed, red under gold $4.50
Postage, 16 cents.

Each of the above Bibles is specially priced for this offer at about one-fourth less than the publisher's retail list. SEND ALL ORDERS TO

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, GREENSBORO, N. C.

Name in gilt on cover, 20 cts. additional.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 24.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—Christ, the Gift that Transforms ..The World. .II Cor. 9:15; Luke 1:46-55. (Chistmas Meeting.)

Daily Readings.

M. The gift of God, John 3:16.

T. The gift of life, Rom. 6:23.

W. The sustaining gift, John 6: 33-35.

T. The measurless gift, John 3:34; II Cor. 3:18.

F. The gift of love, I John 3: 1.

S. With him all gifts, Rom. 8:32.

S. The topic.

Hints to the Society.

1. Urge upon the member their pledge to do whatever Christ would have them do—or at least to try to do it. And do they not know that Christ would have them join His church?

2. Work with the pastor in his soul-winning endeavors, asking him what young people he thinks are nearest to the Kingdom, and would like to have your help reaching.

3. Form a class in methods of personal work for souls, and in the use of the Bible for that purpose.

4. Make each committee a soul-winning committee, and to that end make sure that every committee contains at least one earnest evengelistic member.

5. Form a personal workers' band, meeting every other week for reports of the personal work done by each member, and for consultation and prayer.—Amos R. Wells.

Discussion Topics.

1. Mention some of our gifts to God.

2. How may we best use the gift of God?

3. What difference has Christ made to us?

4. The daily readings will help this meeting.

Points From Eloquent Pens.

1. The Christmas idea is the gift idea. —F. E. Clark.

2. The kindness of Christmas is the kindness of Christ.—Maltbie B. Babcock.

3. A good conscience is a continual Christmas.—Benjamin Franklin.

4. Your best self you will find on Christmas day.—Russell H. Conwell.

5 This day shall change all griefs and quarrels to love.—Shakespeare.

6. I will honor Christmas in my heart, and try to keep it all the year.—Charles Dickens.

7. God never deals out to men just so much as they need and no more.—Alexander McKenzie.

8. One of the marvels of the Christmas gift is the way it sets those that receive it to giving in return."

9. "The coming of God into the world or into a life of necessity is a gift, for who could earn or purchase it.

10. "Gifts for which we must beg are not gifts at all, and the Christmas gift is urged upon us by the giver."

About Christmas.

In the darkest period of Herod's reign, when the Jews were despondent and sick at heart, through repeated and protracted captivity, and hope was cherished in the breast of but few, who like Anna and Simeon were "waiting for the consolation of Israel," an event transpired in Bethlehem which gave promise of a brighter day, and was destined to color and influence the future incidents of the world.

With the advent of this new King, there was ordained a new form of government. Other rulers might seek to extend their territory and maintain their throne by might and main, but his was to be a silent, quiet conquest, ultimately overcoming the kingdoms of the world, yet without the force of arms or military display, "Peace on earth, good-will to men" being the rally words of his campaign.

The character of the kingdom of heaven was forecast in the announcement of the birth of the King of sheperds rather than to the great ones of the earth. The shepherd was of the humblest rank, and was the farthest removed from the grandeur and pride of earthly rule.

Wise men came from the East to Jerusalem confidently inquiring, "Where is he?" The wisdom of all future ages, recognizing the great need of the world, has repeatedly emphasized the significance of this question. For no other character has so moulded the thought, and shaped the destiny of human beings as the babe that was sought by the Magi.

The song of the angels was the earnest of the heaven-born joy that has come into the hearts of millions of earth's wavering and sorrowing ones, through the life and teaching and ministry of the blessed Saviour king. This song was a prophecy that is even now being fulfilled as human hearts are filled with the peace that passes all understanding.

By short-sighted earthly standard, the babe Jesus might have been regarded unfortunate in the environment of his birth, but after all that child is blessed whose early years are close to nature and who has but modest means to support his reasonable wants. The child of the rich is handicapped quite as certainly as the child of the beggar.

—Be of good cheer.

MEETING OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Public Health Association is now being held in Havana. This association is composed of the leading health officers of Canada, the United States, Mexico, and Cuba. Their object is the advancement of sanitary science and the promotion of organizations and measures and for the practical application of public hygiene.

North Carolina can well feel proud of her representatives at this meeting. Dr. W. S. Rankin, secretary of the State Board of Health; Col. J. L. Ludlow,sanitary engineer of the State Board of Health; Dr. C. A. Shore, director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene, and Dr. J. A. Ferrell, assistant secretary to the State Board of Health for the eradication of hook worm disease, compose the strongest delegation evet sent by North Carolina. Col. J. L. Ludlow is chairman of the engineering section and Dr. C. A. Shore is a member of the executive council of the association.

COLDS.

What to Do and What Not to Do for a Cold.

With the advent of our first cold weather in the fall a great many fall victims to "colds." Others will probably soon follow suit. During the winter months it is one of the most common of accidents. It therefore becomes a subject of great interest and importance. The real importance and significance of colds are not as generally recognized as they should be. An ordinary cold, when promptly taken in hand, is usually cured in from two to six days, but not infrequently a "bad" cold (for there are no good colds) leaves behind its relics, the recovery from which may require months or even years. Sometimes a fatal disease finds its beginning in a neglected cold. Pneumonia, pleurisy, bronchitis and consumption itself, frequently follow in the wake of a cold.

But the average reader is interested in just two things concerning colds: First, how to avoid them, and, second, how to cure them. Concerning the first, we may protect ourselves by four lines of defense, as follows:

First. Colds are probably "catching," particularly from others, and it is there best to avoid intimate association such as the use of the same drinking cup and towel with people who have colds. Likewise avoid people who have recently had pneumonia, crowds, and overheated or badly ventilated places.

Second. Colds may be "caught" from ourselves, that is, we may reinfect our-

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:46 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:30 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:50 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

3:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

9:20 p. m., No. 42 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Lindley Building, S. Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

THE STANDARD FOLDING TYPE WRITER.

A practical typewriter, fully guaranteed. Weighs only five pounds. We especially recommend this machine to ministers who need a typewriter, but whose work does not require a high priced machine. Price $50.00. We add our guarantee to that of the manufacturers. Send for descriptive circular.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.,
Greensboro, N. C.

selves; so that a second line of defense is to keep our own mouth, nose, throat, and tonsils clean, and avoid gorging with food or drink, pacticularly alcoholic drinks:

Third. While a possible germ is one factor, getting our body or any part of our body overheated or thoroughly chilled is another. Therefore indulge in no careless exposures or permit the body to cool too rapidly when once warmed.

Fourth. Another line of defense is to build up our own physical resistance. This may be done by working and living in well-ventilated rooms and in the open air as much as possible, particularly at night; careful and regular bathing, moderate eating and daily exercise in the open air if the weather permits.

But even after we have thrown every possible safeguard about ourselves, it still sometimes happens that we take a cold, and then the question of prime importance is how to cure it in the safest way and in the least time. First of all, we should begin early and proceed with heroic efforts to remedy the thing that is causing the cold. For instance, if we get our feet wet, we should take a hot mustard foot-bath at the earliest moment. This is done by adding a tablespoonful of mustard to two gallons of water as hot as we can bear it on our feet. This bath should continue for fifteen or twenty minutes or until the skin is well reddened and tingling. While taking the foot-bath, one should drink from one to two pints of hot water or lemonade. After the foot bath dry the feet quickly, go to bed and have applied over the part in which the cold seems to have settled a towel wrung out of cold water, sufficiently dry not to drip, and cover with several thicknesses of flannel or sheet cotton so as to keep it warm during the night. Take a purge and keep the bowels moving freely for several days by eating fruits and vegetables. Drink water freely. From two to three quarts of water in twenty-four hours is not too much.

If a cold does not yield readily to such treatment, take no chances, but secure medical counsel at once.

At the residence of the bride's father, David H. Gill, Miss Mabel R. Gill and Harrison B. Williams, Wednesday, Dec. 6, 1911, 12:30 P. M., the writer officiating. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of friends who had gathered to wish this deserving young couple many good things for their journey through life together. Miss Mabel has many friends in this community who regret very much to give her up. Last year she had charge of the Primary work here in the Bona Vista High School and the children all think a great deal of her. She is also one of Union Chapel's best young ladies and we congratulate the groom on winning such a sweet Christian young lady for his bride.

Mr. Williams is a prosperous young farmer of Wake County and we believe worthy of the hand that he has won.

Immediately after the ceremony they took the train for their future home near Raleigh. May heaven's richest blessings attend this happy young couple through life, and may their journey together be as cloudless as the day on which it began.

N. G. Bethea.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY OFFERS GREATLY REDUCED RATES FOR THE XMAS AND NEW YEAR HOLIDAYS.

On account of the Xmas and New Year Holidays, the SOUTHERN RAILWAY will sell tickets at greatly reduced rates from all points on its's line. Dates of sale December 15, 16 17, 20, 21, 22, 24, 25, 30, 31st and Jan. 1st, with final return limit Jan. 8th, 1912.

For further information apply to your nearest agent or to the undersigned.

R. H. DEBUTTS,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
Charlotte, N. C.

TRAINING NURSES. FREE SCHOLARSHIPS. INCREASED EARNING POWER.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses, 2219 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, announces that enrollment for the Spring classes will shortly begin. This institution is recognized and endorsed by leading physicians everywhere. Free scholarships in the Two Year Course are available and provide room, board, laundering, incidental expenses and railroad fare home on completion of the Course. A Home Study Course and a resident Short Course are also provided. The School provides full instruction under safe and wholesome conditions and opens the way to almost immediate financial betterment for those who need to increase their earning power.

A Special Short Course Class opens February 21st, 1912. This class is formed at the request of leading physicians who are anxious that some provision be made to meet the increasing demand for nurses in all sections. This is an opening which will be appreciated by those who need quickly to prepare themselves for self-support, and nursing duty. An illustrated number of the School Bulletin, which is sent free to interested persons, gives all the details .

A Theologian Who is a Preacher.

Prof. James Denny, whose fame rests principally on his theological works, has been urged to issue a volume of sermons under the title "The Way Everlasting." Dr. Denny is as prized in Scotland as a preacher as he is as a theologian. There is nothing of the orator about him in the American sense of the word. His sermons are masterpieces of straightforward logical application of Christian doctrine of daily life and conduct, and correspondingly valuable alike as models and for the unwavering directness of their aim.

MANTELS, GRATES, TILES.

No modern house is considered complete without artistic tiles, grates, and mantels. A handsome catalogue will be sent free to those who contemplate purchasing. Our experienced salesmen can render valuable assistance in selecting designs that will prove to be harmonious and satisfactory.

ODELL MANTEL CO.,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings.

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company.

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE (Co-educational).

The number of registered students for the fall term is the largest in the history of the college. A number from the family of Methodist Protestant Herald readers are here and are making fine progress.

Courses are offered in Literature, Mathematics, Science, History, Modern Languages, Ancient Languages, Pedagogy, Biblical Literature, Philosophy, Music, Art, and Elocution. The regular college courses lead to the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. B., and L. I.

Improvements in the water system make the East Dormitory an ideal home for young men. The young ladies have the best obtainable in rooms and furnishings.

Others are coming in almost every week. If you contemplate taking college work, write to

PRESIDENT HARPER, ELON COLLEGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

OUR BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson for Next Week.

Second Chronicles, chapters 29-36.

—Bro. W. M. Pegram, formerly of Stokesdale, has settled in Winston. He and Mrs. Pegram were in our congregation there last Sunday.

—A collection was taken in Winston Sunday-school last Sunday for a member of the church who is very sick.

—Greensboro is swarming with colored Free Masons today—an annual meeting in the State.

—Bro. Taylor, because of the death of his mother-in-law, could not reach Winston for service last Sunday. His place was taken by the editor of the Herald at 11 o'clock. The church was closed at night.

—Bro. Martin, of our Winston Church, holds the responsible position of superintendent of the Salem Iron Works. His is a busy life.

—Samuel Stewart, formerly of Gastonia, died last Sunday night.

—Bro. Spoon, the State's road engineer, is now living in Winston with his wife and daughter. The latter, he said in an introduction, is "a little Spoon growing to be a big Spoon." Bro. Spoon is the interested and interesting teacher of a Bible class in Winston M. P. Church.

—Bro. O. W. Hanner has so far recovered his health as to take his place as superintendent of the Sunday-school last Sunday. He hopes to be entirely well soo —Bro. Millaway's family were still in Winston last Sunday. They expected to move this week.

—Bro. B. F. Norman of Winston has occasional attacks of a peculiar ailment. He suddenly becomes unconscious and remains so for some time, although he tries to talk. His physician says it is caused by an obstruction in the gall duct. When it gives way, the flood of gall is carried to the brain, causing the unconsciousness. In spite of this Bro. Norman is cheerful and happy. He and his good wife are two people that seem to be growing old gracefully.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER, EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XVIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1911. NUMBER 5.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diectly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

CHRISTMAS.

O glorious day! O Day of Days! When the heavens were opened and the King came down! When the night departed and the day began! When sorrow and crying began to cease and joy and hope lifted up their heads!

Beside thee no other day is to be thought of—save that more glorious day when the King shall come again.

'Twere sacrilege to mention July 4th. 'Twere idolatry to think of February 22d. All other days and seasons lose their meaning and their power.

When thou didst usher in the King, the angels came singing for joy. How could they keep from singing? On that day the mourning of men was turned into rejoicing, and men began to sing a song of hope and everlasting deliverance. That song still swells and extends itself over the world. New peoples are learning it, and the time hastens when all the world shall join the angels in singing. "Glory to God in the highest! On earth, peace and good will among men!"

What joy fills our hearts at every anniversary of thy coming! We become young again and feel within us something of the vigor of immortality. We look backward and forward, and embrace the ages and their glorious consummation in our view. The vision of the angels becomes our vision and we see the whole earth receiving her King, and the glory of the Lord filling the world, and the will of God done by men as it is done by angels.

The Christmas time, the blessed Christmas time! Let every heart be glad and every soul be joyful because of Immanuel, because God has come and is with us.

Let none think to desecrate the time with unhallowed pleasures or unholy thoughts. Too sacred is the season. Let us rather turn to deeds of charity and to thoughts of unselfish devotion to other souls.

This Christmas of 1911 sees Christ nearer the world's throne than ever before. War is passing away. Oppression is passing away. Injustice is passing away. Sin is passing away because Christ is coming into His own. Let us sing as never before the song the angels taught us, and the new song that the angels cannot learn, because it is peculiarly the song of the redeemed—"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive honor and blessing and dominion and power."

—No paper next week! It is the printers' rest week.

—Rev. S. W. Taylor, publisher of the Conference Minutes, says the copy is in the hands of a printer who promises to have the job done soon.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway and family have moved to a house on Chestnut Street, Greensboro, which is in a sense between his two churches, St. Paul and Brown Summit. But it is near to St. Paul's and also quite near the center of Greensboro, and will be convenient in many ways.

—The "Rev." Frank W. Sanford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us Society in Maine, has been sent to the Atlanta federal penitentiary for ten years for causing death at sea by failing to provide sufficient food.

—President Taft has notified Russia that the United States desires that the treaty of 1832 terminate Jan. 1, 1913. This because of discrimination against American citizens of the Jewish faith. He has asked the Senate to ratify his action.

—Bro. Kennett writes of some important matters this week. One will be for the consideration of our General Conference—that of one or two general organs. The other is for the consideration of all our people in North Carolina—the college question. And we invite earnest and prayerful consideration of this. There is more involved in it than some of us are aware of.

—What stuff dreams are made of! I dreamed recently that one of our young preachers and his wife on their removal to their new charge were in great distress because they found that in traveling on the train they inadvertently exchanged their baby for somebody else's, they didn't know whose!

—Ex-president Roosevelt has some fitting words regarding those who apologize for killing people. "Murder is murder," says he.

—Rev. C. A. Cecil forgot to wind his watch. It promptly ran down, as most watches will. On Sunday morning, he wound it up, but couldn't open the face to set the hands, and it was five hours, 48 minutes and 23 seconds behind time. He had two appointments that day and a funeral besides, and he had to regulate his movements by that tardy watch. But he mentally made the corrections and was on time at his services. But when Monday morning came he could stand it no longer; he came to the city on purpose to find some one that could eliminate that little difference of 5 hrs., 48 mins. and 23 seconds. A watch repairer solved the problem, and relieved the situation.

—Bryan declares that President Taft's recommendation in favor of authorizing the federal government to charter corporations is "centralization gone mad."

